The view that Captain Morton had from the breezy height on which he now stood was in every respect interesting; and if at that moment he was too much engrossed by those affairs which lay so near his heart to fully appreciate the pretty bit of sea and land that the prospect opened to him, he was far from being indifferent to various objects that met his gaze.

So to speak, all the salient points in his present great anxieties presented themselves to him, although he did not recognize them all.

Seaward, there was about six miles out in the offing, the Spray, under her new commander, the lieutenant to whom Admiral Clifford had given her in charge and there was his own yacht, the Nautilus, quietly and as if instinct with life and reason to guide its movements—so accurately did it obey those who had its deck—beating on and off and waiting for him.

Landward, a series of downs as far as the eye could reach presented an undulating surface, that looked as though covered, with exquisite neatness and skill, with the finest green cloth.

There were roads intersecting these breezy downs in numerous directions and it was on two of these roads that Captain Morton saw some objects that deeply interested him.

On one of the roads there was a group of people and several mounted men, appearing as if they had escorted some prisoners, for there was a little throng of persons among them whom the others appeared to keep well surrounded.

This little throng of persons appeared to be about a mile distant and to be moving slowly toward the town.

Then again, on another road, there was a coach which was travelling with speed, and that, too, had an escort, which consisted of mounted men in the police uniform of the county.

This coach was coming by a cross road toward the town likewise and seemed as if it would intersect the road on which the throng of persons proceeded, and probably at the same time that they would reach the point of intersection.

Captain Morton looked on all this, but he did not know how largely he was interested in what he saw, although, in regard to the throng of people and to the coach, he had a strange, undefined feeling of interest that made him keep them for a time steadily in his view.

It was in a sort of reverie that Captain Morton remained for a time, and then he started forward with the intention of reaching the jail as quickly as possible, in which he was told he would find Mrs. Wagner, and as he did so he saw that the coach suddenly turned down some narrow lane, which was hidden by its hedges, and disappear from his sight.

This disappearance, though, was but very partial, as Captain Morton had not proceeded another quarter of a mile when he suddenly heard the tramp of horses' feet and the sound of wheels and from a lane there emerged, almost close upon him, the coach and its mounted police escort.

So close did the vehicle come to him that Captain Morton—seeing the county police uniform which had been pointed out to him before thought it would be a good opportunity to ask it the lane from which the carriage emerged was a near route to the county jail.

"Will this lead me to the county jail?" he asked, loudly. And hardly had the words escaped his lips when there was a scream from the interior of the carriage and no other than Mrs. Wagner put her head out at the window, despite the opposition of a police officer who was inside and called out:

"Stop—stop! It is the gentleman with the little flag. I must speak to him. Stop—stop!"

Captain Morton at once rushed to the window of the carriage, calling out to her, aloud:

"Tell me—oh, tell me at once—where can I seek for my child? Speak to me—tell me at once and your reward shall be none the less."

"The cliff—the cavern."

"What cliff—what cavern?"

"Helloa!" said the sergeant who was with the party of police. "I don't think I ought to allow this. We are taking our prisoner before the magistrates. That is to say, to Sir Thomas Clifford, for she says she has something to tell about the smugglers of the coast."

"I know Sir Thomas Clifford. I am Captain Morton and that is my yacht, the Nautilus, in the roads yonder. This woman can give me information that is to me life itself and I beg you will permit me to question her."

"I will tell all," said Mrs. Wagner. "I will tell all. He is going to tell something, but I will tell all."

"Who is he?"

"Dolan."

"I saw him—I chased him, but he escaped me."

"As he was sure to do. Come, sir, I will tell you all. Give me the little flag that you said I should have till I had the thousand pounds."

"Well, sir," said the sergeant, "if you are a friend of the admiral's, you may as well come with us and he will do as he thinks proper in the matter. You see, sir, we were taking her to the county jail for the present, but when she said that she would tell all about the smugglers, we thought it better to turn her about and take her to the port admiral."

"I will go with you."

"Very well, sir. You dismount, Jennings; you can go off duty for the present. If you don't mind riding one of our troop horses, sir, here is one at your disposal."

"Thank you."

Captain Morton was mounted in a moment.

"My thousand pounds!" screamed Mrs. Wagner—"my thousand pounds. I will tell nothing without my thousand pounds!"

"Be assured that if I recover my daughter through your means," said Captain Morton "you shall have the thousand pounds. I have given my word and it is not one that was ever yet broken."

"Very well—very well. The cliff and the cavern! I will tell all and I will hang him!"

"Forward!" cried the sergeant of police.

"Stay one moment! Tell me," cried Captain Morton—"tell me, woman, can I go at once and get possession of my child?"

"Ha, ha!" laughed Mrs. Wagner. "No, no! you can go and at once sacrifice your life!"

"On, then, in the name of heaven!"

The cavalcade started forward, and then, as the coach toiled up a hill, Captain Morton, who rode in front with the sergeant of police, reached the summit of it, and glancing over the downs, he saw the same throng of persons on foot that had before met his observation.

"Who are those people?" he said.

"Those with some of our men? Oh, yes. I heard of them. The preventives, last night, under Lieutenant Anderson's orders, made a capture of smugglers. They kept them at the station yonder, where you see the flag flying, all night, and then sent to us for an escort."

"They are prisoners, then?"

"Yes, sir, smugglers."

Little did Captain Morton guess that in the midst of that little throng of persons was to be found his own daughter, Grace, whose image so filled his heart, and concerning whom he was at that very moment enduring an amount of anxiety that made it difficult for him to assume even the outward appearance of ordinary composure.

But so it was.

When the preventive galley captured the boat, in which was Mr. Suffles and the little party who had escaped from the cavern, the lieutenant in command had refused to listen to any statements or explanations, but resolved to give the whole of them up to the town authorities.

It was in vain that both Martin and Joseph protested that Captain Mocquet was a French trading captain and had nothing to do with Dolan or the Rift and that his daughter Marie and Grace could not be smugglers.

They both made a strenuous effort, too, to get the lieutenant to set Gerald at liberty.

In reply to all this, the only proposition the lieutenant made was in a few words, when they reached the bench.

"The two girls may go," he said, "where they like. All others I keep."

Grace, on the instant, laid her hand softly on the arm of Gerald, as she said:

"No, no—with you, Gerald!"

Captain Mocquet held his daughter close to his heart.

"Non, non. We shall—what you say in one proverb Anglaise?—always go to one sink and swim there together. Ah?"

Gerald turned upon the face of Grace such a look of perfect affection that, seen as it was by the light of the boat's lanterns by the crew, it softened even their rugged hearts, and one said to Gerald:

"Keep a good heart, youngster. It can't go very hard with you."

"Thank you. What is that?"

Marie had burst into a passion of tears, and was sobbing aloud.

Captain Mocquet looked very pale.

"It is nothing—nothing," he said. "It is nothing."

Marie clung closer to him, and with a look of pride, pale and sad as he was, the Frenchman courteously declined all help, and lifted his Marie tenderly from the boat to the shore.

Then it was as the police sergeant had said, that the captured party, amid the wailings of Mr. Suffles, were for the brief remainder of the night conducted to the preventive station, and in the morning, as Captain Morton saw them, were being escorted to the town.

"It is a good job," said the sergeant, "that something seems to have set the smuggling fraternity by the ears, and they seem anxious one to tell of the other. I fancy the end of it will be the rooting out of the whole of it."

"It's probable," said Captain Morton.

A sharp ride now of about a quarter of an hour brought the coach with Mrs. Wagner and the American captain to the door of Admiral Clifford's house.

But while all this is going on a strange scene was being enacted in the caverns of the cliff.

When Dolan had so mysteriously eluded the pursuit of Captain Morton, he had done so with the double object of getting out of the way of one who, if he had but once got a clutch at him, would have been the least likely man in all the world to let him go again, and with a view of affording no clue to the secret of the cavern in the cliff.

Hence, then, Dolan took advantage of those few moments when he had doubled the headland, and was out of sight of Captain Morton, to scramble on to the rocks after upsetting the boat; and he concealed himself amid such a mass of sea weed that nothing short of actually landing and treading upon him could have enabled any one to find him.

Dolan was a bold and good swimmer, and no sooner had he felt assured that Captain Morton had given up the pursuit of him than he launched himself into the bay and made his way with the tide for the cavern in the cliff.

As he swam Dolan reflected upon the present prospect of his affairs and felt anything but satisfied with them, although he was far from knowing or suspecting the whole of his danger.

It now seemed to strike the villain that no one but himself would or could expose the secret of the cavern in the cliff.

Even Mrs. Wagner, he considered, only intended to sell, so to speak, Grace to her father, the American Captain; and he still cherished the delusion that for him was reserved the prestige of betraying all his companions of the Rift.

In the little chest that he had taken away so secretly in the boat from the cave he had the bulk of the plunder that should have been, by agreement, divided among the crew of the Rift, and that he had buried in the little garden of the cottage, unknown even to Mrs. Wagner.

It was to the cavern, then, that Dolan took his way, still with several beliefs in his mind which the facts themselves by no means warranted.

He fully believed that both Gerald and Grace were in the caverns.

He fully believed that Captain Mocquet was a prisoner in the cabin of the Rift, and he fully believed that when night should come again and he should go to the cottage he would find Mrs. Wagner repentant and ready to make what excuses she could for her conduct, since he was resolved, so soon as he should visit the cavern, to put it out of her power to take Grace away, by securing the young in some of the secret recesses of the cliff.

There were many matters still at the cavern which Dolan wished to settle. There were valuables, too, which he wished to take away with him, and when he reached the canvas covering to the sea cave and disappeared beneath it, he had the conviction on his mind that he still had the power and that he was in no very great danger.

But there was one thing that he had done which he hardly liked to think of to himself.

He had taken the most important step he could in the betrayal of his comrades; he had written to Admiral Clifford, and at the very moment that Dolan was swimming over the cool waters of the little bay the Admiral was reading a letter, of which the following is a transcript:

TO ADMIRAL SIR THOMAS CLIFFORD:

SIR,—It is well known that the captain of a smuggling vessel that has long infested this coast lies very near your heart. You know, sir, that that vessel has been seen under many disguises and that it has got the better by fair means and by foul of all the crafts sent in search of it.

Among the rest, sir, and the last, the Spray has tried in vain to capture this smuggling cutter (for it is but a cutter).

I, sir, intend now to give her up to you; and, if it should ever happen that I get into misfortune, I hope that when I send to you and say to you that it was I who wrote you this letter and enabled you to capture the smuggling cutter you will be my friend.

But this may never happen.

If to-night at just the turn of the tide (the ebb, I mean, which will be somewhere past two), you have the Spray or any other vessel in the offing, by the number four buoy, you will find a cutter with a very large spread of sail making her way out to sea from the bay by the land wind.

Do not speak her—listen to nothing any one on board of her says; but board her at once and take her, and you will be in possession of the much talked of smuggling vessel and all her crew except me.

Among that crew, sir, are some of the most determined rascals on the face of the earth.

There is one in particular, a mere boy whom they name Gerald. It was he who insisted on firing at the Spray, in spite of all I could say to him to the contrary; and as the worst part of the crew were rather mutinous, I could not prevent him. He has committed several murders, and if the gallows is not his portion it will be defrauded.

The expression of this boy (for he is a mere boy, and of very specious and insinuating address,) when he fired at the Spray, was:

"Now, mates, we are smugglers; but we will be by this one shot, pirates!"

Hang him, admiral, and you will get rid of a pest to society!

On this information you may rely.

I was almost forgetting to say that next to this boy, Gerald (who, by-the-by, is none of mine), the two worst men in the cutter are named Martin and Joseph.

Let Gerald, Martin and Joseph be prosecuted and hung. I dare say some of the crew will turn king's evidence against them.

This was the precious epistle which came anonymously to the hands of the admiral; and it was for the purpose of carrying out the details of it that Captain Dolan, so soon as he reached the sea cavern and scrambled on to the deck of the Rift, blew his whistle, to summon about him the smuggler crew.

His intention was, clearly and distinctly, to get them all out of the cavern by the sea opening on board the Rift, leaving him with Grace alone there; and then he intended to take the girl out by the opening into the ravine and make his escape, overland, as quickly as he could, after taking from the cottage the plunder which he had buried.

A flashing idea was in his mind of taking the life of Mrs. Wagner before he left—as he feared she would be a dangerous incumbrance to him.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Reasons for Migration.

By what strange and mysterious psychological mechanism does the swift learn that the period for migration has actually arrived? Simply, I believe, by a natural see-saw, dependent only on the alternation of the seasons. For when the swift is not in Great Britain he is off at his other alternative residence in the Cape Colony. As some people keep up a house in England and a Winter villa at Cannes or Mentone, so the swift has always a Summer nest in Europe and a winter nest in temperate South Africa. Or rather, they are each in their own time Summer nests alike, for, of course, whenever it is Winter here it is sunny midsummer in the southern hemisphere. Unwise admirers of the swift have ventured boldly to assert that he knows when cold weather is coming, and therefore goes away from England in Autumn before it arrives. When men speak so to you believe them not. This is nonsense (with all due deference to its propounders;) the swift knows not when it will be cold, but when it has been cold—a much easier matter—like all the rest of us. The reason why he leaves so much earlier than our other Summer migrants is simply because food fails him. There is nothing miraculous in knowing when you are hungry; the merest infant well knows that much. The cold upper air begins to feel the chilling effect of Autumn long before the basking lowland meadows, and when the supply of flies falls short in the high circles where swifts habitually move, the swifts are prompted by an inner monitor (other than conscience) to flit southward. So then make tracks for Africa in a formed body, devouring the remaining insects as they go, and, in the words of the poet, otherwise applied, "swallow, swallow, flying south." At the same time I do not deny that the swift is a bird of delicate constitution, and that a marked aversion to cold for its own sake is one of his most obvious personal characteristics. A member of an essentially tropical family, he visits the northern and southern temperate regions only during the very height of their Summer season, and probably loiters long on the way, breaking the journey in Morocco and the Soudan, like those wise invalids who leave Egypt or Algeria early in February, and only reach the Admirality Pier at Dover when the English Spring has fairly reached the dangerous summit of May hill. Then in Autumn he is off again about the middle of August, and if by any chance a few stragglers linger on too late in September they are not unfrequently overtaken and numbed by the first frost, in which case they fall helplessly fluttering on the unfamiliar ground and are left to the cruel tender mercies of the village children.

Importance of Reading.

No matter how obscure the position in life of an individual, if he can read, he may, at will, put himself in the best society the world has ever seen. He may converse with the greatest heroes of the past; with all the writers in prose and poetry. He may learn how to live, how to avoid the errors of his predecessors, and to secure blessings, present and future, to himself. He may reside in a desert far away from the habitations of man; in solitude, where no human eye looks upon him with affection or interest, where no human voice cheers him with the animating tones; if he has books to read, he can never be alone. He may choose his company, and the subject of conversation, and thus become contented and happy, intelligent, wise and good. He thus elevates his rank in the world, and becomes independent, in the best sense, of the first in importance, of the department of school education.

The ex-Empress Eugenie approves of the marriage between Princess Letitia and Prince Roland Bonapatte, and she will give the bride a handsome marriage portion and all her jewels. "Plon-Plon," too, nods acquiescence in the mating of his daughter with the son of the despised Prince Pierre and the dressmaker Clemence Ruflin. But Humbert of Italy is unalterably opposed to it, because Prince Roland's income of $150,000 a year consists solely of his dead wife's share of the profits of the Monte Carlo gambling hell.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Publisher.

MARKDALE, FEB. 24. 1887.

Dominion Elections.

Sir. John's Majority Reduced to 45.

THE FOLLOWING RETURNS WE GIVE FROM THE WORLD AN INDEPENDENT PAPER, WHICH IS THE BEST AUTHORITY AVAILABLE.

ONTARIO.

Addington, Bell, Con.
Bothwell, Mills, Ref.
Brant, North, Somerville, Ref.
Brant, South, Patterson, Ref,
Brockville, Wood, Con.
Bruce, West, Blake, Ref.
Bruce, North, McNeill, Con.
Bruce, East, Cargill, Con.
Cardwell, White Con.
Carleton, Macdonald, Con.
Dundas, Hickey, Con.
Durham, West, Blake, Ref.
Durham, East, Ward, Con.
Elgin, East, Wilson. Ref.
Elgin, West, Casey, Ref.
Essex, North, Patterson, Con.
Essex, South. Brien, Ref.
Frontenac, Kirkpatrick, Con.
Glengarry, Purcell, Ref.
Grenville, South, Shanly, Con.
Grey, South, Landerkin, Ref.
Grey, North, Masson, Con.
Grey, East, Sproule, Con.
Haldimand, Colter, Ref.
Halton, Waldie, Ref
Hamilton, Brown, Con,
" Mackay, Con.
Hastings, East, Burdett, Ref.
Hastings, West, Robertson Con.
Hastings, North, Bowell, Con.
Huron, East, McDonald, Ref.
Huron, South, McMillan, Ref.
Huron, West, Porter, Con.
Kent, Campbell, Ref.
Kingston, Macdonald, Con.
Lambton, East. Moncrieff, Con.
Lambton, West, Lister, Ref.
Lanark, North, Jamieson, Con.
Lanark, South. Haggart, Con.
Leeds, South, Taylor Con.
Leeds, and Grenville, North, Ferguson Con.
Lenrox, Wilson, Con.
Lincoln, Rykert, Con.
London, Carling, Con.
Middlesex, East, Marshall. Con.
Middlesex, West, Roome, Con.
Middlesex, North, Shipley, Ref.
Middlesex, South, Armstrong, Ref.
Monck, Bovle, Con.
Muskako, O'Brien, Con.
Norfolk, South, Tisdale, Con.
Norfolk, North, Charlton, Ref.
Northumberland, East, Mallory Ref.
Northumberland, West, Guillet, Con.
Ontario, South, Smith, Con.
Ontario, North, Madill, Con.
Ontario, West, Edgar, Ref.
Ottawa, City, Robillard, Con.
" Perley, Con.
Oxford, North, Sutherland, Ref.
Oxford South, Cartwright, Ref.
Peel, McCulla, Con.
Perth, North, Hesson, Con.
Perth, South, Trow, Ref.
Peterboro, West, Stevenson, Con.
Peterboro, East, Lang, Ref.
Prescott, Labrosse, Con.
Prince Edward, Platt, Ref.
Renfrew, North, White, Con.
Renfrew, South, Campbell, Ref.
Russell, Edwards, Ref.
Simcoe, East, Cook, Ref.
Simcoe, North, McCarthy, Con.
Simcoe, South, Tyrwhitt, Con.
Stormont, Bergin, Con.
Toronto, Centre, Cockburn, Con.
Toronto, East, Small, Con.
Toronto, West, Denison, Con.
Victoria, South, Hudspeth, Con.
Victoria, North, Barron, Ref.
Waterloo, South, Livingston, Ref,
Waterloo, North, Bowman, Ref.
Welland, Ferguson, Con.
Wellington, Centre, Orton, Con.
Wellington, North, McMullin, Ref.
Wellington, South, Innes, Ref.
Wentworth, North, Bain, Ref.
Wentworth, South, Carpenter, Con.
York, West, Wallace, Con.
York, East, Mackenzie Ref.
York, North, Mulock, Ref.

QUEBEC.

Argenteul, Wilson, Con.
Bagot, Dupont, indp't Con.
Beauharnois, Bergeron, Ref.
Bellechasse, Amyot, Nat.
Berthier, Beaucotiel, Ref.
Beauce, Godbout, Ref.
Bonaventure, Riopel, Con.
Brome, Fisher, Ref.
Chambly, Prefontaine, Ref.
Champlain, Montplaisir, Con.
Charlevoix, Trudel, Nat.
Chateauguay, Holton, Ref.
Chicoutimi, Gagne, Con.
Compton, Pope, Con.
Dorchester, Duchesnay, Ref.
Drummond and Athabaska, Lavergne, Ref.
Hochelaga, Desjardins, Con.
Huntingdon, Scriver, Anti-Riel Op.
Iberville, Bechard, Ref. (accl)
Jacques Cartier, Girourard, Con.
Joliette, Guilbault, Con. (accl)
Kamouraska, Dessaint, Ref.
L'Assumption, Gauthier, Ref.
Laprairie, Doyon, Ref.
Laval, Ouimet, Con.
Levis, McGuay, Ref.
Lislet, Casgrain, Ref.
Lotbiniere, Rinfret, Ref.
Maskinonge, Desaulniers, Ind.
Montcalm, Turcotte, Ref.
Mississquoi, Clayes, Ref.
Montmagny, Choquette, Ref.
Montmorency, Valin, Con.
Montreal Centre, Curran Con.
Montreal East, Coursol, Reil, Cons.
Montreal West, Smith, Con.
Napierville, Ste. Marie, Nat.
Nicolet, Gaudet Con.
Ottawa County, Wright, Con.
Pontiac, Bryson, Con.
Port Neuf, St. Georges, Ref.
Quebec Centre, Lancelier, Ref,
Quebec County, Caron, Con.
Quebec East, Laurier, Ref.
Quebec West, McGreevy, Con.
Richmond and Wolfe, Ives, Con.
Richelieu, Labelle, Con.
Rimouski, Fiset Ref.
Rouville, Gigault, Ref. (Accl)
Shefford, Audet, Con.
Sherbrooke, Hall, Con.
St. Hyacinthe, Bernier, Ref.
St. John's, Bourassa, Ref.
St. Mourice, Desaulniers, Con,
Stanstead, Colby, Con.
Soulanges, Lalonde, Con.
Three Rivers, Langevin, Con.
Temiscouata, Grandbois, Con.
Terrebonne, Chaplean, Con.
Two Mountains, Daoust, Con.
Vaudreull, McMillan, Con.
Vercheres, Geoffrion, Ref.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Annapollis, Mills, Con.
Antigonish, Thompson, Con.
Colchester, McLeran, Con.
Cumberland, Tupper, Con.
Cape Briton, McKeen, Con.
Digby, Campbell, Con.
Guysboro, Kirk, Ref.
Halifax, Stairs, Con.
Hants, Putnam, Con.
Inverness, Cameron, Con.
King's, Borden, Ref.
Lunenburg, Eisenhauer, Ref.
Pictou, C. H. Tupper, Con.
McDougall, Con.
Queen's, Freeman, Con.
Richmond, Flinn, Ref.
Shelburne, Robertson, Ref.
Victoria, McDonald, Con.
Yarmouth, Lovitt, Ref.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

Albert, Weldon, Con.
Charleton, Hale, Ref.
Charlotte, Chipman, Con.
Gloucester, Burns, Con.
Kent, Landry, Con.
King's, Foster, Con.
Northumberland, Mitchell, Ref.
Queen's, King. Ref.
Restigouche, Moffat, Con.
St. John City, Ellis, Ref.
St. John City, Skinner, Ref.
" " County, Weldon, Ref.
Sunbury, Wilmot, Con.
Victoria, Costigan. Con.
Westmoreland, Wood, Con.
York, Temple, Con.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.

King's, McDonald, Con.
Robertson, Ref.
Queen's, Davies, Ref.
Welsh, Ref.

MANITOBA.

Lisgar, Ross, Con.
Marquette, Watson, Ref.
Provencher, Royal, Con.
Selkirk, Daily, Con.
Winnipeg, Searth, Con.

BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Yale, Mara, Con.

RECAPITULATION.

	Con.	Lib.
Ontario	58	38
Quebec	34	28
New Brunswick	10	6
Nova Scotia	16	6
Prince Edward Island	1	1
Manitoba	4	1
British Columbia	1	0
	119	82

Conservative majority 37.
15 seats yet to hear from.

Note.—From what we can learn on going to press, the above is about 10 over the correct majority. Ed. S.

THE LAST YEAR. 1886.

After the above year is ended there need be no more suffering from Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Lumbago, or any aches pain, if they only purchase a bottle of Fluid Lightning, as it cures instantly. Pain cannot stay where it is used. The name is Fluid Lightning. Sold by R. L. Stephen, Druggist, Markdale. 2

GREAT

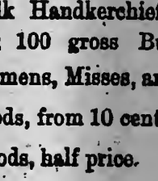
SALE

NOW GOING ON AT

McFarland's,

25,000 dollars worth of goods to be cleared OFF.

NOTE the PRICES:



—Men's $9.00 Over Coats for $6.00 Boy's $6.50 Over Coats for $8.75; Men's $6.00 Genuine Persian Lamb Caps for $3.75; Men's $10 Genuine South Sea Seal Caps for $6.00; 25 good Robes only $3.75; 600 yds. 25 cent Dress Goods for 15 cents; 7 dozen Pairs Men's Fur Top Gloves $1.00 regular price $1.50; 60 Childs; and Misses Wool Padds 50 & 75 cents half price; 200 Childrens Wool Squares 12½ cents; 75 Ladies' Wool Sqares 50 cents, sold everywnere for $1.00; 12 dozen Womens Wool Vests, a great Bargain for 50 cents each; Ladies Linen Collors Handsomly Embroidered 2 for 12½ cents, See them. 50 cent Black Velveteen 30 cents; 75 yards Fancy Ulstering $1.25, goods for 75 cents; One Case Old Ladies' Lined Sewed Buff Boots 90 cents, just half price; 200 Gent's lovely Silk Handkerchiefs from 25 cents up; 100 gross Buttons, half price; Womens, Misses, and Childrens Wool Hoods, from 10 cents up; Millinery Goods, half price.

PLUSHES, SILKS,
VELVETS,
GLOVES,
TIES,
RIBBONS, all reduced.

Come Early Before THE CHOICE LOTS ARE —SOLD—

W. J. McFarland,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE

SASH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly.

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,

MARKDALE.

GROCERY, POVISION

—AND—

LIQUOR STORE.

A fresh stock of groceries just opened at

DAVIS'S

Store, bought for cash thus saving discounts, and will be sold for spot cash at rock bottom prices.

Japan Tea worth 45 cents selling for 35 cents. Japan Tea worth 55 cents for 45. Gunpowder Tea worth 55 cents for 45. 15 lbs. extra granulated sugar $1, other grades accordingly. Agent for the Liquor Tea Co. A valuable prize given with every six ½ lb. packages bought.

PROVISIONS!

Flour Bran, Shorts, Chop, Screenings, Oatmeal, Cornmeal, &c., &c.

LIQUORS!

Rye and Malt, Port and Native Wine, Brandy, Jamaica, Rum, Scotch Whiskey, the best in the market, also a choice lot Bottled Liquors in finest Brandies, Scotch and Irish Whiskeys, Superior Malt and 5 year old Rye. Parties requiring liquors for medicinal purposes will do well to give us a call as they may rely upon getting a good article.

A Call Respectfully Solicited.

W. L. Davis,

MARKDALE.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely lead into Catarrh, when you can be cured for $1 by using Dr. Sage's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cures any case of catarrh; 1 to 3 bottles cures ordinary cases of catarrh; 1 to 5 bottles in the worst and most chronic cases of catarrh. Try it. Only 50c. and your money back if it don't cure. Sold by all druggists.

J. G. ANDERSON'S

GREAT

Clearing Sale

Has been a grand success and will be continued up to the 1st March.

There is yet a splendid selection, and the public may rely on securing Rare Bargains.

J. G. Anderson,

Mammoth House,

—M-A-R-K-D-A-L-E.—

For Sale or to Rent.

A WAGON SHOP, in the Village of Holland Centre, situated on the C. P. R. 16 miles from Owen Sound, a good heavy frame Wagon Shop 24 x 36 ft. with good paint shop and lumber house in connection with it. The above with or without a full stock of good dry lumber will be disposed of on very reasonable terms as the proprietor is giving up business, and leaving this part of the country, for further particulars address or apply to

E. H. NEELANDS, Proprietor,
Holland Centre, Ont. 338-40

WARNING.

ALL persons are hereby warned against purchasing a promisary note for the sum of $40.00 drawn and dated the 15th February by the subscriber and payable (I think) ten months after date, to Wm. Fawcett, Euphrasia, as I did not get value for the same.

JACOB NEELY,
338-40 Euphrasia, February 19th 1887.

Woodstock, May 6th, 1886.

It gives me much pleasure to testify in favor of Dr. Jug's Medicine. It is indeed a wonderful remedy, and to its beneficial effects I believe I owe my life. I have tried dozens of patent medicines, all to no purpose. My constant pain down the back gave me no rest night or day, but Dr. Jug's medicine has nearly restored my dvertisers are very apt to under-mate the value of the local country r. They compare the circulation paper of only one thousand, with metropolitan paper that claims one dred thousand, and considers the ner hardly worth experimenting , But let us see if this kind of oning is not faulty. The paper the circulation of 100,000 will e a territory that covers a good of grond, but only a few sub-bers in each place. If the adver-wishes to reach the farmers of a an community, the metropolitan er will be read by from ten to one dred persons, the local paper by thousand, Now the secret of ertising is to get people to talk ut your goods. The local paper complishes this better than any er agency. Moreover, a country tor has a personal acquaintance th most of his readers, and hence s an influence which is of great lue to his advertisers. It is impossible to keep goods constantly before e notice of one thousand persons a community without deriving a nefit from it. Subscribers, too, e quite apt to have a kindly feeling the advertiser who patronizes their me paper, and they place more con-ence in what appears in its columns an in the flaming announcements at appears in the papers that anate from the large and wicked ties. By a large experience in ad-rtising we have learned to value the cal country paper. The metropoli-n papers are good mediums, but the lue of the advertising is increased en supplemented by a liberal patron-e of the local paper. An army is t completed without both artillery d infantry. and an advertising system not complete that does not take in th the metropolitan and local press. -Ex.

GEORGE SAUNDERS.

Sold by A. Turner & Co.

Word for the Local Paper.

McGREGOR'S SPEEDY CURE.

When we say McGregor's Speedy Cure in e only perfect cure for Dyspepsia, Lives omplaints. Indigestion and Impure lood,r e are telling plain facts, of which hundreds on hundreds can testify who have been re-ored to perfect health by its use. We ould therefore advise you strongly if you re a subject of any of the above troubles to ive McGregor's Speedy Cure a trial and be nvinced. It is sold in 50c. and $1.00 ottles at R. L. Stephen's Drug Store. 2

Annual Meeting—Unanimous Re-election of the old officers.

At the annual meeting of the Loyal Orange County Lodge of North Grey, eld at Owen Sound on 1st inst., all the ld officers were unanimously re-elected or 1887, as follows:—Bros. Capt Jos. orke, M. P. P., C. M., Clarksburg; Thomas Henry: D. C. M.. Meaford: George Follis, Chap., Ashley; Jas. H. Deleree, Sec,, Walters Falls; Robert Hoath, Treas., Owen Sound; James L. Boyd. D. of C., Owen Sound; A. L. Henry, Lec', Desboro. Next meeting of County lodge to be held at Desboro, on he first Saturday in June, at 1 o'clock . m.—Jas H. Deleree, Co. Sec.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truely beautiful world we live in! ature gives us grandeur of Mountains, glens d oceans, and thousands of means of enjoy-ent. We can desire no better when in per-ct health; but how often do the majority of eople feel like giving it up disheartened, iscouraging and worn out with diseases, hen there is no occasion for this feeling, as very sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory roof that Green's August Flower will make em free from disease, as when born, Dis-pepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct uses of seventy five per cent, of such aladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick eadache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, izziness of the head, Palpitation of the eart. and other distressing symptoms. hree doses of August Flower will prove its onderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. y it.

Mass Meeting.

The Mass Meeting held in Haskett's all Saturday evening was well attend-, the hall being packed to the door. remarkable feature was the presence a large number of ladies, who occupied nt seats.

The meeting was orderly for such a ge and varied audience. The akers were Dr. Jamieson, Wm. own, Esq., Dr. Sproule and M. hardson, Esq.

Mr. Thomas Kell occupied the chair.

is is to certify that I have used McGregors edy Cure for Dyspepsia and Liver Com-nt, and do honestly say that if it cost one hundred ($100.00) a bottle I would be without it, as it has done me more d than all the medicines I ever used, and el like a new man.—Yours truly, ALEX. EL, Carleton Place, Ont. This medicine or sale at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle at R. Stephen's Drug Store. 1

Holland Council.

Council met Feb. 17 at Holland Centre, members all present, reeve in the chair.

Minutes of former meeting read and approved.

Shute—Howey—That by-law No. 4 be passed and engrossed on the minutes.

A petition was presented by Joseph Thomas, signed by N. Nigh and twenty others re forming a new school section between Holland and Sydenham.

Howey—Shute—That A McGill be appointed as arbitrator on behalf of this township re above petition.

Galbraith—Murnay—That a by-law be prepared for the raising of money by debentures for U. S. S. No. 2 Holland & Sydenham.

Galbraith—Howey—That by-law No. 5 for the purpose of issuing debentures to raise money to purchase site and build a new school house in U. S S. No. 2 Holland & Sullivan be read 1—2—3 times and engrossed on the minutes, Murray—Howey—That John Burnside be refunded $1.50 being taxes overpaid in 1886.

Howey—Galbraith—That the auditors Report be adopted.

owey—Murray—That the auditor's be paid $2 each for extra trouble in auditing.

Shute—Murray—That McNabb Bros be refunded the amount of their taxes, $22.80 on account of their heavy loss by the burning of their mill.

Howey—Murray—That the clerk notify Stephen Edmunds to remove stones out of fence corners opposite his place, and other obstructions to the water course, before the 1st May next, otherwise legal proceedings will be taken to have them removed at his expense.

Shute—Galbraith—That R. M. Galbraith be assessor at a salary of $65 to cover all the work.

The committee to investigate treasurer security reported favorably, and the report was adopted.

Shute—Murray—That the application of Archibald Campbell for $20 be laid on the table for further consideration.

Shute—Murray—That the account of R. McKnight for registering be paid.

Howey—Galbraith—That Geo. Blyth get the printing at the amount of his tender.

Council adjourned to meet the 24th March.

CARSON PRICE,
Clerk.

IMPORTANT NEWS ITEM.

COOKSTOWN.—Mrs. Campbell had been troubled for a number of years with Indigestion and Constipation, and was induced to try McGregor's Speedy Cure and found it all that was needed, and would recommend its use to any person similarly troubled. This invaluable remedy is sold in every part of Canada at 50c. and $1.00 per bottle. Sold at R. L. Stephen's Drug Store. 4

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR.—I want to give an emphatic denial to a statement of some of the most influential Reformers of the 11th con. Euphrasia, in reference to a meeting called by the supporters of Mr. Robt. Gilray to be held in S. S. No. 15, Euphrasia. They state that the trustees would not give them the school house to speak in; the trustees told them they could have the use of said school house for $8, for the evening.

JOSEPH MYERS, Trustee.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a similar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections also a positive and radical cure for nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Send by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper W. A. NOYES 149 Power's Block Rochester, N. Y. 334-26 E. O. W.

—NEW— HARDWARE.

To builders and those about to build your wants supplied at reasonable rates.

IN STOCK

☞ NAILS, GLASS, PUTTY, HINGES, BUTTS, SCREWS, DOOR HANDLES, TOWER BOLTS, CHAIN BOLTS, HAMMERS, CHISSELS, SAWS, BRACES, BITTS, CUTTERY, LAMPS, LAMP GLOBES, &c.

OILS, LEADS AND COLORS!

—all pure goods—

PAINTS ground and mixed any shade ready for the brush in quantities from one pint up, guaranteed free from all alkalies and other foreign substances.

Full Lines in Tinware at bottom prices.

CALL AND SEE US IT WILL PAY YOU.

Note the place the sign of the cross cutt saw.

E. MABEE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

Auction Sale

—OF—

Valuable Village Property.

In the Village of Markdale, in the County of Grey, there will be sold on Monday the 7th day of March, 1887, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon at the Markdale House, Markdale, in the Village, by virtue of Power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage—which will be produced at the Sale, the following property. Under Mortgage from John Montgomery, lot eight on the South side of Mill Street in the said Village of Markdale having a frontage of three roads by a depth of twelve rods containing one quarter of an acre more or less. The following improvements are said to be on the premises, having erected thereon a rough-cast dwelling, stable, bake shops and sheds.

TERMS:—20 per cent of the purchase money to be paid down on the day of sale. For balance terms will be maid known at the sale.

For further particulars apply to

JONES BROS. & MACKENZIE,
Solicitors, Toronto Street, Toronto

Or to JOHN LYONS, Esq., Markdale, Ont.

Partnership Notice.

DR'S SPROULE & BRODIE, have entered into a partnership for the practice of their profession, Dr. Sproule will be found at his old office Turner's Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his office Mathew's new block. 332-46

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedgree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for further particulars apply to

THOMAS GAWLEY,
Holland Centre P. O.

338-48

"HURRAH"

FOR THE NEW YEAR

AND

Good Bye to the Old One.

'HURRAH' FOR

The New Drug Store,

which is still in Markdale, and the place to get cured of your many ills, in the shape of a little Soothing Syrup, Paregoric, Teething Powders or a Rubber Ring; Should they fail, then resort to a box of

STEPHEN'S

PARNELL DUBLIN DOGERS.

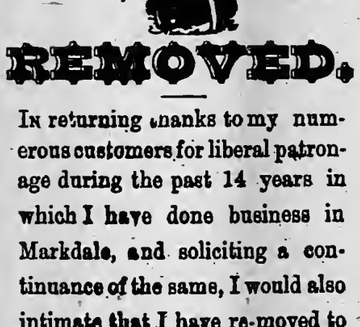
SHOULDER BRACES!
SHOULDER BRACES!
Ladies and Gents,
SHOULDER BRACES!

Pure Cream of Tartar, Fine Baking Soda, Mustard, Ginger, Pepper, Cloves, Allspices, ground and unground of the finest grades.

School Books! School Books! and Stationary at

STEPHEN'S Drug Store.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.



REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

HAMPDEN

WATCHES

DURABLE - - RELIABLE.

—ALSO—

Waltham, Elgin and Colombiers,

—IN STOCK—

American Clocks, Silverware, Wedding Rings.

☞ Watch repairing and fitting Spectacles a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,
A RELIABLE JEWELLER,
MARKDALE.

XMAS GOODS.

NEW GOODS ARRIVING EVERY —WEEK AT—

RUSSELL'S

Noted Jewellry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Consisting of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES, CLOCKS, JEWELRY, SPECTACLES, SILVER-WARE, FORKS, SPOONS, KNIVES, Fancy MIRRORS, ALBUMS, VIOLINS &c.

Any one looking for Xmas presents will do well to call at RUSSELL'S, Flesherton, a fine stock to select from, and prices very low, If your watch or clock wants repairing, RUSSELL'S is the place to take it: A satisfactory job every time, ☞ Remember,

JAS. G. RUSSEL'S

Noted Jewelry Store,
FLESHERTON.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRAITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE,

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 13, CON. 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation, well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY
31-4 Berkley.

Priceville Roller Mill.

THE NEW MILL IS NOW COMPLETED and in full working order. The Roller process is thorough in every respect and a full line of rolls.

THE HIGHEST CASH PRICE will be paid for any quantity of Wheat.

Positively no credit will be given in the Mill.

The Saw Mill is doing splendid work. Bring in your logs and you can get the lumber home with you.

First-Class Planer and Matcher.

Mr. John McLeod manages the Saw Mill which I hope is a sufficient guarantee for good work.

ROBERT McCOWAN

HEALTH.

Enlightenment Versus Ignorance.

Enlightenment concerning the preservation of health and the removal of disease, is a great blessing to all who become partakers of it, but ignorance in the same direction is a great evil.

This truth is self-evident. Every one will acknowledge that health is the greatest blessing of life, and that sickness is an evil from which we ought to flee as soon as possible, if it meets us on our way. This great truth places us all on common ground. It binds us all together with a common cord; it unites us into a natural brotherhood.

In many other respects, men are differently situated, and are separated from each other by different opinions. By far the greater part of mankind are heathens and worship many gods, but the Mohammedans, Jews, and Christians worship only one God who has created all things. The last named are again divided into a great many different sects who entertain a variety of opinions, and oppose each other sharply. That which one calls enlightenment the other condemns as ignorance. But those who are enlightened by the great truths which nature shows to be the foundation of all true treatment of disease, and for the preservation of health, are all united in one opinion.

We are all made of the elements of the air. A little dust, lime, salt, etc., mixed with three-fourths of water, is all there is of us. We all came naked into the world, and even if we all do not depart naked from it, yet we all meet in one common realm of death, where we are disolved and return again to our dust. The different religions separate us, but the great principles of health unite us, and thus they make us more kindly affectioned one to the other.

By this we do not mean to say that religion is not good. No doubt there is something good in all religious denominations, and some of them evidently have more truth, and practice more virtue than others. But considered purely from a natural standpoint, the doctrine of true hygiene is superior, because it unites us on a common foundation. For this reason we may indeed look unto pure hygiene as a preparatory school for all true religion. We have, however, not only the same common elements in our bodies, but also the same common organs. The great pump of the heart works in the breast of the poor as well as in the mighty king, and causes the life-giving stream of the blood to circulate through all the small and great organs of the body. The lungs work night and day, while man is conscious and unconscious, in the poorest laborer and the simple mechanic as well as in the highest lord, the millionaire, and the most renowned artist. The innumerable cells of the brain move in the same manner in the most ignorant school boy as in the learned professor who gains the applause of man by his spirited lectures and fine compositions.

Even if the products of these cells differ according to their natural quality and the amount of pratice they have had, yet they work according to the same natural laws; and, as far as the tissues of the muscles are concerned, it is evident that the organs whereby they are produced, work a great deal better in the poor farmer, who spends most of his time in the fresh air, than in the sage who is mostly occupied in sedentary work in a rich mansion.

Ignorance with reference to practical hygiene which not only represents the theory but but also embraces the practical use of this theory in life, is the rule not only among the heathen but also among the civilized nations of the earth, among the working classes as well as among the higher classes. The heathen and civilized classes who work principally with their hands, do indeed develop their muscles, but neglect sadly the nervous system with its great and important center, the brain, which is the seat for all spiritual development. And the higher classes develop indeed the mind, or the finer organs of the brain, but, with a few exceptions, they neglect to develop their muscles proportionately. Nature demands that all organs of the human body should be developed alike as much as possible, and this is a condition of true happiness in this life. Whoever desires to enjoy the noblest pleasures of life and obtain its highest happiness, will do well to give heed to the teaching of hygiene both the theoretical and the practical.

Cancer.

Cancer is defined to be "an ulcer of the very worst kind, with an uneven surface, and ragged and painful edges, which spreads rapidly." The individual who can relieve this dread disease is the one above all others sought. As to treatment, never use the knife. I have known quite a number of sufferers who submitted to excision, but have never heard of a single cure. One man I knew who submitted to fire operations by knife for scirrhus of cheek, who is now in a dying condition, having, as he says, been made worse by the treatment. He has no confidence in anything now. There are a a great many remedies in use for cancer that have no doubt proved valuable. The extract of sheep sorrel is good. So also is chromic acid. The chlorides of zinc and chromium made into a paste and applied locally until the last vestige of the cancer is taken out, sometimes cures. But these remedies must be used before the lymphatic system has become involved, as, after that occurs, it is doubtful if any treatment will be beneficial.

It matters not what is done the general health of the patient must be attended to. The vegetable alteratives with chloride of gold is the best. White turpentine has an excellent reputation, and I have known cases reported cured by its use. But as I have said, it must be used before the lymphatics become involved. So you see the importance of early treatment.

Cancer is both a local and constitutional disease. The cancer germ may remain in the system a whole lifetime and not make its local appearance; but let a cancerous patient recieve a blow upon the face, lip or head and the disease will then present a local aspect. The pipe stem often provokes it.

Novel Remedy for Asthma.

A story comes to us well authenticated about a man, living at Derby Neck, who has for years been afflicted with asthma so as at times to render life very miserable. For the last two or three months he has been especially under the rod of affliction from this cause. One recent day a lady visitor from an adjacent town told of a friend who had been cured by standing against a board partition and having a hole bored therein at the patient's exact height and into which a portion of the hair of the head was plugged and then cut off. A few days afterward a son of the gentleman referred to, thinking there might be something in it, persuaded his father to take the position against a partition for a trial of the "cure," all the conditions of which were faithfully complied with. That night the old gentleman, who is a prominent member of the Methodist Church, says that he slept quietly for the first time in a long while, and in two days and to date found himself apparently cured.

Corpulency.

Prof. Kisch has recently collected statistics on the frequency of sudden death amongst extremely stout persons. In nineteen cases of this occurrence, acute congestion of the lungs was discovered in twelve, cerebral hemorrhage in six, and rupture of the heart in one. The apoplectic symptoms were traced in most of the cases, to arterial sclerosis a very frequent concomitant of extreme corpulency. Rupture of the heart is due to the overworkings of the walls of the left ventricle, which, being involved in the fatty infiltration and degeneration, can no longer increase in size in proportion to the extra work it has to perform. The failure of heart-power appears always to be the immediate cause of death, which generally follows immediately after violent exertion, or excess in drink or diet.

Treatment of Diphtheria.

Dr. J. M. Harris says: From an experience of more than forty years, I venture to give my favorite remedy for diphtheria; the success of which is highly satisfactory, not having failed with it in a single case.

Every two hours the patient gargles with a solution of iodide of potash, a drachm to the ounce of distilled water; with chloride of sodium Labarraque's solution or bromo-chloralum alternating. Internally I give veratrum or aconite every two hours to arrest fever, and parvules of hydrag. as indicated.

Keep the room at 60°, well ventilated, and chloride of lime constantly on hand. With this treatment and proper nursing you need fear no deaths.

MEN AND WOMEN.

Mrs. Gladstone has consented to become "lady President" of the new Liberal League.

Sir Stafford Northcote's first considerable literary production was a pamphlet most ably and brilliantly vindicating Mr. Gladstone's administration as Colonial Secretary.

Frederick Amerling, the celebrated Austrian painter, died recently in his eighty-sixth year. Among his greater works are "Dido Abandoned by Æneas" and "Moses in the Desert." Amerling was four times married and his youngest child is but twelve years old.

Extensive orders for ladies' clothing have been sent abroad from Tokio, Japan, the maids of honour of the imperial court having decided to dress in European style. As a sign of the European influence now at work in Japan, it is reported that the Buddist priests of the Jodo sect have decided to wear dresses of foregin style.

Mr. Labonchere has been telling the British public, in high-pitched tones of economic reform, that it costs the country $2,500 a year to feed the pheasants in the royal park. But he remembered to forget to add that when shot by royal sportsmen the birds are given for the use of poor patients in the London hospitals.

Mr. Jefferson Davis says that the letters written to him during the war were all lost or stolen, about or soon after the close of it, and that many of the reports made by army commanders were captured by the Northern troops. These and others are being published by the United States government in the official record of the War of the Rebellion.

President Grevy of France was found the other day reading a book of fairy tales. "You are relieving your mind from politics, Monsieur le President?" observed the visitor. "Oh, not at all," was the reply. "I am obliged to read all these books. My grand-daughter says she has had enough of the old stories, and so I must learn some new ones."

A greater than Joseph Cook or Adirondack Murray is entertaining the noble Athenians now. A Boston paper says of Sam Jones: "He seems like a man deluged with ideas and is trying to get on top of them by swimming. Words come in floods, following one another so fast the hearer is startled. It is simply a succession of pictures, some pretty and idyllic in their simple repose, while others are very grand and almost terrifying. It was a fine, brainy, eloquent discourse."

Miss Augusta is one of the hardest working of the young medical assistants in the Paris hospital. She has a thoroughly scientific mind. She has passed all her examinations before the professors of the faculty with marked success, and her theses obtained notes of bien and tres b en, which are very rarely given. She is only twenty-eight years old. Many of her male colleagues are several years older, but Miss Augusta is quite competent to hold her own with them all. Her example will soon be followed by French women, and in two years we may have twenty female internes.

Viceroy Li Hung Chang of China discarded all precedent recently and presided at the inspection of the new railway built by the French engineer Decauville near Tien-Tsin as a model. After the Viceroy and other high officials had ridden on the road, the people lost their fear of the strange conveyance, and crowded the carriages. The manager was forced to run excursion trains over the two miles of complete track, and he charges twenty cents for first, twenty cents for second, ten cents for third and five cents for fourth class. These rates are made to include the family of the purchaser of a ticket, but from a Chinese stand-point were very high, and the fact that the carriages were crowded for days shows the influence of the Viceroy is overcoming the native hostility to the steam engine. After his inspection the Viceroy offered to buy the railroad, which he desired to give as a New-Year's present to the Seventh Prince.

She was Saved

From days of agony and discomfort, not by great interpositions, but by the use of the only sure-pop cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Tender, painful corns are removed by its use in a few days, without the slightest discomfort. Many substitutes in the market make it necessary that only "Putnam's" should be asked for and taken. Sure, safe, harmless.

Courtesy at Home.

Good breeding, like charity, should begin at home. The days are past when children [illegible] ed the room where they were and stand until they had received permission so to sit. But the mistake is now made usually in the other direction, of allowing to small boys and girls too much license to disturb the peace of the household. I think the best way to train children in courtesy would be to observe toward them a scrupulous politeness. I would go so far as to say that we should make it as much a point to listen to children without interrupting them and to answer them sincerely and respectfully, as if they were grown up. And indeed, many of their wise, quaint sayings are far better worth listening to than the stereotyped common-places of the morning caller. Of course, to allow uninterrupted chatter, would be to surrender the repose of the household, but it is very easy, if children are themselves respected, to teach them in turn scrupulously to respect the convenience of others, and to know when to talk and when to be silent.

The best brought up family of children ever knew were educated on the principle of always commencing them when it was possible to do so, and letting silence be the reproof of any wrong-doing which was not really serious. I have heard the children of this household, when their mother had failed to say any word of commendation after some social occasion, ask as anxiously as possible, "What was it mamma. I know something was wrong. Didn't we treat the other children well, or were we too noisy?" In that house reproof was never bestowed unsought—only commendation, of whatever it was possible to commend, was gratuitous.

Be the Powers!

"The most extraordinary demand of an Irish beggar that has come within the range of my experience," writes a correspondent from Kerry, "was that of a woman who begged for a subsidy to replace the funds expended in 'waking' her mother, 'for, if we did, we waked her too soon, for she came to life again.'"

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular. The second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto Canada.

The true glory of a nation is in the living temple of a loyal, industrious and upright people.—E. P. Whipple.

One good act done to-day is worth a thousand in contemplation of some future time.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

It is only married men who want but little ear below.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

Canadian authorities object to American sloops and schooners, but Canadian girls are very friendly to United States smacks.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

California widows stand no nonesense. An Oakland paper stated that a citizen had gone to a happier home, and the widow has sued the paper for libel.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Billiousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A P 321

WORK FOR ALL. $30 A WEEK and expenses paid. Valuable outfit and particulars free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

6 PER CENT. MONEY—INTEREST YEARLY —no commission; Mortgages purchased. R. H. TEMPLE, 23 Toronto Street.

100,000 SHEETS OF 5 & 10c. MUSIC; '30,000 Plays,' Brass Inst's, 'Violins,' 'Flutes,' 'Fifes,' and Musical Inst. Trimmings, at reduced prices. R. B. BUTLAND, 37 King-s. W., Toronto.

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the U.S. and all foreign countries. Engineers, Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Causes. Established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

SONGS 100 new and popular songs sent free to all who send 4 cents to pay postage. 100 pieces choice music 60c. Catalogue free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

ILLUSTRATED CIRCULARS FREE. CANADIAN BUSINESS UNIVERSITY and Shorthand Institute, Public Library Building, Toronto. Specialties: Book-keeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, etc. Write for particulars. THOMAS BENGOUGH, Official Reporter York Co. Courts, President. CHARLES H. BROOKS, Sec'y and Manager.

CLOTHES WRINGERS, 10 Kinds; MANGLES, three Kinds; Washing Machines, two kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. Our Sunbeam Wringer retails for $3.00. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS Co., Hamilton, Canada. Send for articles wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue

SAUSAGE CASINGS.

New shipment from England, Ex-Steamship "Norwegian." Lowest prices to the trade. We are sole agents in Canada for McBride's Celebrated Sheep Casings. Write for quotations.

JAMES PARK & SON Toronto.

SEEDS TESTED RELIABEL. CATALOGUES MAILED FREE THE FINEST IN CANADA. Send for it. IT WILL PAY YOU. Address STEELE BROS & CO., TORONTO, ONT. Ask your dealer for our Seeds, and ensure the best

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont., Began the Third Year Sept. 1st, having already received patronage from Ten States and Provinces. Young men and boys thoroughly prepared for business; special courses in Shorthand, French and German; ladies admitted. Enter any time. Address M. MACCORMICK, Principal.

Wall Paper MANUFACTURERS. M. STAUNTON & CO., Samples on application. TORONTO, ONT.

PILES! Blind, Bleeding, and Itching effectually cured by the Medical File Remedy. Thousands of sufferers can testify to the permanent relief from these internal and external Remedies. $1.00 per package. Ask your druggist for it, or will be sent by Mail postage paid. HUGH MILLER & CO, 167 King St. East, Toronto. PILES!

Seeds! FRESH, AND SURE to grow—Of all the Choicest Flowers. Select stock of Fruit Trees, Grapevines, Spruce Hedge Plants, Ornamental Trees, Choicest New Roses, Bulbs, Decorative Plants, and English Holly. Cut Flowers, Wedding Bouquets, of superior quality, on short notice. H. SLIGHT NURSERYMAN, TORONTO.

FILES! R. SPENCE & CO. RASPS! Consumers will find it to their advantage to ask the trade for our make of Files and Rasps. Re-Cutting a Specialty. Send for price list and terms. HAMILTON - ONT.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED Dr. Withrow's latest and popular "History of Canada," from the discovery of America to the late North-West Rebellion, including a full and correct account of the same, 670 pages, and prices lower than any other book of the same size and quality published in the States or Canada. Another remarkably low price book is Sam. P. Jones' "Living Words," with autobiography, Illustrations, etc., 595 pages; also, J. B. Gough's "Platform Echoes," beautifully illustrated, full of anecdotes, etc., and sells at sight. Our Family Bibles are cheap, and superior to others. Terms Liberal, circulars on application. WM BRIGGS, 78 & 80 King St. E, Toronto, Ont.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships. Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly. For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A Allan Portland, Boston Montreal

SEEDS RENNIE'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST. Illustrated Catalogue for 1887 Containing description and prices of the choicest FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS Mailed free. Every Farmer and Gardener should have a copy before ordering seeds for the coming season. Handsomest catalogue published in Canada Wm RENNIE, TORONTO.

I CURE FITS! When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto

J. L. JONES WOOD ENGRAVER 10 KING ST EAST TORONTO.

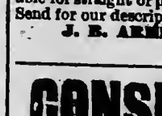
SPANISH BLACKING THE KING OF BLACKING · SOLD EVERYWHERE ·

SNOW DRIFT THERE IS NO BETTER! BAKING POWDER The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM. The Mutual Reserve Fund LIFE ASSOCIATION. The largest and most prosperous open Assessment Association in the world, desires active representatives in every section of Canada. Liberal inducements. It has full Government deposit, and is under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa. Correspondence solicited. Address, J. D. WELLS, General Manager, 65 King Street East, Toronto.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO. MANUFACTURE ONLY FINEST Silver Plated Ware Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish HAMILTON, ONT.

CANADA PERMANENT LOAN & SAVINGS COMPANY. INCORPORATED, A.D. 1855.



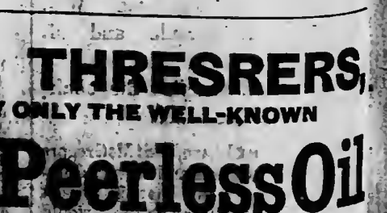
Subscribed Capital,	$3,500,000
Paid-up Capital,	2,300,000
Reserve Fund,	1,180,000
Total Assets,	9,300,000

OFFICE: Company's Buildings, Toronto St., Toronto.

SAVINGS BANK BRANCH. Sums of $4 and upwards received at Current rates of interest, paid or compounded half-yearly.

DEBENTURES. Money received on deposit for a fixed term of years for which Debentures are issued, with half-yearly interest coupons attached. Executors and Trustees are authorized by law to invest in the Debentures of this Company. The Capital and Assets of the Company are pledged for money thus received, depositors may at all times assured of perfect safety. Advances made on Real Estate, at current rates and on favorable conditions as to re-payment. Mortgages and Municipal Debentures purchased. J. HERBERT MASON, Managing Director.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY. A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother, with much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.



Hamilton Scale Co. All Styles of Improved STANDARD SCALES We make a Specialty of Hay, Stock, and Portable Platform Scales. BEST IN THE MARKET. Every one Guaranteed. All Styles of Trucks. Send for Illustrated Price List.

OSBORNE & CO, - - - HAMILTON, ONT.

THE National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO. 23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO. All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

ARMSTRONG'S BUGGY AND CARRIAGE GEARS

THE BOSS SIDE-SPRING GEAR. Has many advantages over any other side spring gear, and will undoubtedly be a great favorite. The bent tempered steel plate perches allow the body to set very low, IT TURNS SHORT, rides very easy and has no SWINGING or UNDUE MOTION. Suitable for straight or phaeton bodies. PRICES RIGHT. Send for our descriptive circular. J. E. ARMSTRONG M'F'G CO. (Ld.), GUELPH, Canada.

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

BRICK MACHINES. —WITH ALL THE— LATEST IMPROVEMENTS. SPRING PRESS BOX, - WHITE OAK POSTS, - AND IRON BRACES. Over 200 of our Machines now in use and no complaints. Prices and Terms to suit buyers. Send for circular. The E. & C. GURNEY CO., TORONTO, ONT.

FARMERS & THRESHERS, USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN

Peerless Oil NINE GOLD MEDALS Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE for your Wagons and Horse Powers. Manufactured by QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS by SAMUEL ROGERS & CO., TORONTO.

YOUNG FOLKS.

THE SLEIGHING-PARTY.

BY MAUDE L. RADFORD.

"Oh, mother!"

"Yes, Edie"

"Is Anna going?"

"Where, dear?"

"Oh, you know, to that sleighing party by moonlight that Mrs. Leslie is going to give."

"Yes, Edie."

"Well, can't I go, mother?"

"My dear child," said her mother; "you are too small."

"I am nine years old," said Miss Edie, drawing herself up to her full height.

Her mother smiled. "But Anna is fifteen," she answered.

"Oh, mother, do let me go. There's a girl that's only twelve who's going."

"Edie! you cannot go."

"Oh, mother!" It was a very different "Oh, mother!" to the first one she had uttered. The blue eyes were full of tears, and the little mouth was curved in an unbecoming pout.

Mrs. Haydon drew the child towards her. "Listen to me, daughter," she said; "listen to me. You do not seem to understand that the few years between the ages of you and Anna make a great deal of difference in some things. You would not enjoy yourself among a number of girls older than yourself, any more than Anna would find amusement in playing dolls, etc., with children of your age. In some things, of course, you would be treated alike; but I want you to see, dear, that it is for your own sake I wish you to remain at home."

No answer from Edie.

"Now, dear, run away and play, and try and forget all about this party which seems to trouble you so much."

Edie left the room, but she was still thinking of the party.

"I would enjoy myself," she thought. "Well, if I can't go with them, I'll go out now, and get Ellis White to draw me on his sleigh."

So, wrapping herself up warmly, she sallied out into the street. She met Ellis at the door. "Oh, say," he exclaimed, "you're the one I want to see. Come with me a message, will you?"

"Where to?"

"Ted Flannigan's." I have to go and see if we can hire his big van, and get him to drive it."

"What for? When?" asked Edie, confusedly.

"Oh, for the party to-morrow night. Your sister is going, isn't she?"

"You mean Mrs. Leslie's party? Yes, Anna is going, is your sister?"

"Yes. I wish I was going."

Upon this, Edie poured forth all her grievance, and the two sympathized with each other, until they reached the home of Teddy, to whom they gave the order.

"And phat's de matter wid ye?" he enquired, noticing their doleful faces.

Then Ellis graphically described their woes.

"Faix," said Teddy, his round face relaxing into a broad grin, "Faix, now, what's to hinder ye, if ye want to go?"

"Hinder?" said Ellis.

"I say, phy can't ye go? Now, listen to me. Under the sates av me van there's two boondles av robes which I carry in case the paple want ter muffle thimsilves up. Now, if I lave some av thim robes behind, and strap ache av ye inside, so ivery wan will take ye for a boondle, what thin?"

"What then?" repeated Ellis. "Why then you're a daisy. I mean a fine fellow."

"But won't we get smothered?" asked Edie.

"Not a bit av it. Ye see the robe will be put around yer neck, and yer head i'll be free an' ye'll be coomfurtooble, too."

"Are you sure they won't see us though?" said Ellis.

"Sartin sure; av coorse they won't think of lookin' under the sate!"

"But we won't stay there all the time, will we?"

"Av coorse not, as soon as we are started, jist give a bit av a call, and they'll look for ye, and get ye out, and have a laugh. And ye'll have a good ride and lots av fun, for av coorse they won't take ye back."

"That'll be splendid!"

"Yis. Now rin home and don't let on to a livin' sowl."

The children ran home, and as they reached Edie's abode, Ellis whispered, "I'll be over to your place to-morrow morning to settle what to do, you know, good-bye!"

Edie entered the house, and was so gay all the evening that her mother hoped she had forgotten all about the party. But it was not so; indeed, Edie did not realize what she was doing. She looked upon it as a joke, not as an act of direct disobedience to her mother's commands.

Next morning Ellis appeared at Mrs. Haydon's door, and asked to see Edie.

The two went upstairs to Edie's playroom, and began to talk, and Anna, happening to drop her handkerchief, as she passed the play-room door, while picking it up, heard some words which aroused her suspicions, and decided her to listen. This is what she heard: "We are in luck. They are going to stop for refreshments at Mrs. Leslie's after, and we'll get lots to eat. Yum! yum!" exclaimed Ellis.

"I'm real glad we're going!"

"I guess you ought to be. But mind and don't let any one know of it."

"Very well. Now what are we to do?

"Firstly, wrap up warmly; secondly, slip out of the house and go to Teddie's; and thirdly, get under the seat!"

"But won't we be missed from home?"

"Oh, it makes no difference as long as we can get away unseen. Now don't let's talk of it any more, or we will get so tired of it that we won't want to go." And so the talk drifted to other matters.

Anna, having heard all, walked down stairs and told Mrs. Haydon.

"Will we tell them we know all?" she inquired.

"No, dear, we will let them go, but punish them in this way. After you are fairly started of course they will call out. But take no notice of them. Tell the others of their intended plan, and let the children stay under the seat."

"But, mother, that's a little hard."

"I think not."

"Well, I shall tell the others to-night then."

That evening two small figures stole out of two houses, and hurrying together down the street, reached Teddie's, and were safely stowed "under the sates." Then the van drove swiftly up to Mrs. Leslie's, where the party had met, and after all there started off again.

After they were safely started Ellis gave a squeak. No notice was taken. Then he said "Hi, there." Still no notice. Then Ellis called, then Edie, but no one answered them. At last they gave up in despair. Teddie could not help them. He was on the driver's seat, and they supposed that their voices were lost among the noise of talking, and laughter.

It began to grow wearisome for the two under the seat. But they could not get free, and so were obliged to stay there for two hours. At the end of that time the party returned to the house of Mrs. Leslie. Teddie was paid and dismissed, and Ellis and Edie were released and driven home by the kind Irish man.

"Faix an' its sorry I am that ye lost the fun," he said.

"It doesn't matter," said Ellis dolefully. "Say Edie," he continued, "we should not have done this."

"An' 'twas me own fault," said Teddy, "I put ye up to it. Never mind, ye're at home now, jump down an' good-bye," and he drove away. Two small figures stole into two houses, and went to two mothers, and told all about it, and the two children were kissed and forgiven, but were not told that their mothers already knew what had happened.

And two children as they went to bed that night resolved that they would never do such a thing again.

Simple Life Best for Children.

Happiness is the natural condition of every normal child, and if the small boy or girl has a peculiar facility for any one thing it is for self-entertainment; with certain granted conditions, of course. One of these is physical freedom and a few rude and simple playthings. Agreeable occupation is as great a necessity for children as for adults, and beyond this almost nothing can be contributed to the real happiness of a child.

"I try so hard to make my children happy!" said a mother, with a sigh one day, in despair at her efforts.

"Stop trying," exclaimed a practical friend at her elbow, "and do as a neighbor of mine does."

"And how is that?" she asked, dolefully.

"Why, she simply lets her children grow and develop naturally, only directing their growth properly. She has always thrown them, as far as practical, upon their own resources, taught them to wait upon themselves—no matter how many servants she had—and to construct their own playthings. When she returns home from an absence they await but one thing—their mother's kiss. Whatever has been brought for them is bestowed when the needed time comes. Nothing exciting is allowed to them at night, and they go to bed and to sleep in a wholesome mental state that insures restful slumber. They are taught to love nature, and to feel that there is nothing arrayed so finely as the lily of the field, the bees and the butterflies; that there is nothing so mean as a lie, nor anything so miserable as disobedience; that it is a disgrace to be sick and that good health, good teeth and good temper come from plain food, plenty of sleep and being good."

In order to thrive, children require a certain amount of "letting alone." Supreme faith in the mother, few toys, no finery, plain food, no drugs and early to bed are the best things for making them happy,

The Changing Stars.

In concluding his article on "The Stars," in the Century, Professor Langley uses the following illustration: "When primitive man learned that with lapsing years the oak withered and the very rock decayed, more slowly but as surely as himself, he looked up to the stars as the very types of contrast to the change he shared, and fondly deemed them eternal; but now we have found change there, and that probably the star clusters and the nebulæ, even if clouds of suns and worlds, are fixed only by comparison with our own brief years, and, tried by the terms of their own long existence, are fleeting like ourselves . . . . I have read somewhere a story about a race of ephemeral insects who live but an hour. To those who are born in the early morning the sunrise is the time of youth. They die of old age while his beams are yet gathering force, and only their descendants live on to midday; while it is another race which sees the sun decline, from that which saw him rise. Imagine the sun about to set, and the whole nation of mites gathered under the shadow of some mushroom (to them ancient as the sun itself) to hear what their wisest philosopher has to say of the gloomy prospect. If I remember aright, he first told them that, incredible as it might seem, there was not only a time in the world's youth when the mushroom itself was young, but that the sun in those early ages was in the eastern, not in the western sky. Since then, he explained, the eyes of scientific ephemera had followed it, and established by induction from vast experience the great law of nature, that it moved only westward; and he showed that since it was now nearing the western horizon, science herself pointed to the conclusion that it was about to disappear forever, together with the great race of ephemera for whom it was created.

"What his hearers thought of this discourse I do not remember, but I have heard that the sun rose again the next morning."

Awkward Joking.

It is better to be foolishly prudent than to run any risks through mere carelessness. No more innocent pastime than writing one's own name can well be conceived, and yet the man who leaves his signature floating about, on blank paper, may come to grief.

A gentleman of wealth, while practising penmanship one day wrote his name upon a blank slip of paper and allowed it to lie on his desk. It attracted the attention of a neighbour who for a joke filled the space above the signature in the form of a promissory note, and a few days afterward the joking neighbour presented the paper with an offer to allow considerable discount if the apparent drawer would cash it at the time.

The gentleman perceived the joke, and the holder of the document, placing it in his pocket, departed, and nothing more was said about it. Subsequently the holder was stricken with paralysis, and died, and his executors, finding the note, and having no knowledge of the joke attached to it, brought suit, and and recovered the sum for which it was drawn.

The joker had meant no harm, but he as well as his freind, had been careless, and some one had to pay the penalty.

LATE EDITION ITEMS.

Paris is about to experience a marriage epidemic.

The new Lindsay council is more kindly disposed toward the Salvation Army.

Hockley reports a visitor with a pocket full of bogus twenty-five cent pieces.

A woman at St. Thomas has been arrested for stealing a dead woman's clothes.

A young lad at Rideau has been fined $10 and costs for disturbing the Salvation Army service.

The Simcoe County Council has refused to recommend the introduction of the Torrens system of land transfer.

An old man named Scramlin, 95 years of age, fell at St. Thomas the other day and broke his left hip joint.

Mr. Geo Baird, of Stanley township, Huron county, has entered on the 27th year of teaching in the same school.

At Black River during one week two men in five days made the extraordinary number of seven hundred and ten logs, averaging 18 inches.

At Medicine Hat recently the Indians drove a band of antelope into a coulee, and slaughtered thirty of them before they could escape.

The three young women arrested at Chatham on suspicion of having been instrumental in causing the death of a child have been discharged.

A Simcoe constable is very anxious that a man whom he handcuffed at Lorette the other day and has not seen since should return the handcuffs.

The devotions of a young man attending a prayer meeting in one of the churches in St. Mary's the other night were disturbed by a mouse running up the leg of his pants while he was kneeling.

A reward of $50 is offered by the Township of West Gwillimbury for the apprehension and conviction of the parties that have been committing thefts in the municipality within the last twelve months.

In township 24, range 3, Elbow River, N. W. T., on Friday Jan. 21st, the wife of James Young, late of Oxford County, gave birth to a son, the first white child born in the township.

One morning recently a little girl named Mary Andrus, while crossing the mill dam at Orono, on her way to school, broke through the ice, and before assistance could reach her she was drowned.

The trustees of the school in section No. 9, Township of Kitley, were summoned before a magistrate recently to answer the charge of refusing to fulfil the office of trustees, but the difficulty was settled before the magistrate arrived, to the satisfaction of all parties.

At Springhill, N. S., recently, shortly after work had commenced in the mines, a large piece of coal, about aeven feet long and three feet wide, fell upon William McDonald. The coal rolled over him, fearfully mangling the lower portion of the body and thighs. He lived four hours in great agony.

The other day Miles Dempsey, living near Demorestville, Prince Edward County, was instantly killed by the kick of a colt. The unfortunate man was breaking in the animal when it kicked, one foot striking him in the chin and the other in the chest. When picked up he was quite dead. The deceased with a brother, was working the farm on shares, near Demorestville. He formerly lived at Rossmore. He was about 35 years of age and married.

At Port Hawkesbury N. S., recently, a man by the name of Boudrot fell in the channel at Lennox Passage and was three-quarters of an hour in the water. About twenty persons observed him, but none ventured to the rescue until a young man named Joseph Catherine got a piece of rope and an axe and crept on the ice until he got where the man was (the ice bending under him all the time) and tied the rope round the waist of the drowning man and then hauled him out.

Dr. Whayman, veterinary surgeon, of Port Stanley, while giving a pill to a stallion owned by Mr. Mitchell, of Brantford, at Ordish's stable, had his right hand badly bitten. The doctor took hold of the animal's tongue with his left hand and stuck his right hand and arm in its mouth and shot the pill down its throat. The horse closed its jaws firmly, so firmly that it almost bit its tongue in two, and a crowbar had to be used to open its mouth. The hand was badly bitten.

A correspondent, writing from Donald, B. C., says:—The weather is mild and pleasant, the thermometer seldom registering below 25° at the summit of the Selkirks. The fall of snow for the season is 19 feet, or 5½ feet more than at this date last year. We certainly have snow and ice in abundance along the line, but at the same time we have men who fight successfully with these elements for the right of way, and the track is kept clear, so that on the Mountain division the trains are not delayed.

A reporter was recently permitted to visit the cell in the Brantford County gaol occupied by Llewellyn E. Evans, the young man who went crazy a short time ago, all for love. Evans is in a most pitiable condition, and tore every shred of clothing off himself, until it was necessary to bind his arms behind him. Evans recognises prominent citizens readily, and wanted the reporter to give him his necktie for a keepsake. The gaol authorities are exceedingly anxious that Evans should be removed to an asylum, as he is a most difficult patient to deal with.

Messrs. Lamal Jarmin, of Chapeau, and John Tucker, of Pembroke, who are in the employ of J. R. Booth, Black River, while portaging from the depot to the shanty discovered a moose behind one of the sheds. They had not the least implement which they could use to kill him, but they had enough presence of mind to use their only means to obtain the prize. They took the rope off the sleigh and succeeded in lassoing him, when a battle ensued, but finally they got him behind the load and he was led with very little trouble to the shanty, about one mile. The moose is a fine one and said to be at least two years old.

Mr. George McDonald, student dentist of Arnprior, who is now attending a medical college in Toronto, has inherited a handsome legacy, amounting to $21,600, by the will of his grand-aunt, who died a short time ago. The executors of the deceased lady's estate have for some time past been engaged in winding up the provisions of the will, and the barrister has written to Mr.

[illegible] fallen [illegible]. [illegible] Catherine McDonald, [illegible] was the widow of Colonel Donald [illegible] of St. John, N. B., and, during the war of 1812, commanded the 104th regiment.

HOUSEHOLD.

Emergency Bag and Medicine Chest.

Every housekeeper should possess an "emergency bag" and a medicine chest, and both may be ornamental as she pleases without in any way detracting from their usefulness. The former it will be well to make of some gay, conspicuous material, such as Turkey red, to be suspended in full view, say in the housekeepers' bed-chamber so that every member of the household will know where to find it in time of need. The bag should be large enough to hold several wide and narrow bandages neatly rolled and ready for use, the former for cuts or hurts on the body or limbs, and the latter for wounded hands or fingers. There should also be in this bag a packet of court-plaster, a roll of diachylon or adhesive plaster, pieces of old linen, lint, surgeons' cotton wool, a small bottle of collodion for cuts, old muslin for mustard plasters, pins, scissors, and some of the other necessaries known to good housekeepers.

There should be on hand to supplemant the "Emergency bag" a home medicine chest or case; these are now made very prettily to appear like locked wall-cabinets. A handy person can get up one of domestic manufacture out of ordinary pine wood, staining it to resemble cherry, and furnishing its doors with handsome mediæval hinges and escutcheons of brass, which may be purchased at moderate rates at depots for brass supplies.

This chest, whether plain or ornamental, will be invaluable to the housewife if on its shelves and in its drawers may be found the following simple remedies, namely; essence of peppermint, Jamaica ginger, spirits of camphor, camphorated oil, arnica, aromatic spirits of ammonia, spirits of hartshorn, syrup of ipecac, sweet spirits of nitre and a small bottle of brandy and a box of mustard

Brandy and aromatic spirits of ammonia should be kept in every house where there are aged persons, as they are subject to sudden attacks of faintness, and both these agents afford relief and help restore the circulation of the blood. Ipecac and mustard are invaluable nauseants, the former in cases of croup, and the latter in cases of suspected, accidental, or other poisoning. It may here be added that copious draughts of tepid or vomiting ensues, and thereafter reapeatedly until the poison is supposed to be thrown off, is a good remedy to use until the help of a physician can be procured. If pains are felt in the bowels, give copious injections of tepid water also, and rid the system in both ways of the poison.

How to Have Good Steak.

We like good steak, and I will tell you how to manage to get it in about twenty minutes after the fire is lighted on a cold winter's morning.

We burn wood. If we didn't we would burn enough to have steak. The fire is lighted in the cook stove, and as soon as the first few sticks of wood burn well down and the kettle is simmering, two or three shovelfuls of charcoal are thrown in, and in five minutes we have the nicest bed of live coals one could wish for. The steak is thrown directly on the coals and is turned rapidly with a couple of long toasting forks till done to suit. It is very little cost and less trouble. Charcoal costs only fifteen to twenty-five cents per bushel, and a bushel lasts a long time for this purpose.

One who has always eaten steak fried in lard in a skillet has yet to learn what really good beef is. The average boarding house cook has a peculiar rule for cooking steak. When she gets up in the morning she puts a "lump of lard the size of a walnut in a cold skillet, puts the steak in on top of that and another lump on the steak, puts the skillet on the stove, and then lights the fire."

If the fire were lighted first it would break the charm. If you would cook steak in a skillet have it (the skillet) smoking hot, put in the steak without any grease, turn it five times the first ten seconds, and after that turn it often, and you will have a good, fair steak; but not as good as broiled on the coals.

Tested Receipts.

BACHELOR'S PUDDING.—Four ounces of bread-crumbs, two ounces of currants, four ounces of chopped apples, two ounces of sugar, two eggs; boil three hours. Sifted sugar to be strewn over.

BUCKWHEAT CAKES.—Set a batter the night before according to the size of the family. Use one-half cake compressed yeast and one tablespoonful molasses and one teaspoonful salt. Set them in an earthen dish. Leave a little batter every time, and that will be sufficient to rise them with one-half teaspoonful soda in the batter every morning just as you are going to fry them.

LAMB RAGOUT.—Chop cold mutton or veal very fine, season with pepper, salt and half cupful milk. Chop an onion also very fine, brown with a spoonful lard and stir into the mince. Boil potatoes in proportion to the quantity of meat you have; mash them smooth and season with butter, pepper and salt. Line your dish with potatoes, put in the mince and cover with potatoes except a place in the middle as large as a saucer. Beat the yelk of an egg and pour over the potatoes. Bake for half an hour.

BEEF LOAF.—Chop very fine or have your butcher mince two pounds of coarse, lean beaf. Season spicily with pepper, salt, nutmeg, summer savory or sweet marjoram, and a cautious sprinkling of minced onion. Beat two eggs light and work up with the mass. Press hard into a bowl, fit the saucer or plate (inverted) upon the meat and set a dripping pan of boiling water to cook slowly for an hour and a quarter. Lay a weight on the surface when it is done and let it get perfectly cold before turning out. Cut in perpendicular slices.

RIBBON CAKE.—White part: Whites of eight eggs, one cup of butter, two cupfuls sugar four cupfuls flour, one cupful sweet milk, one teaspoonful soda, two teaspoonfuls cream tartar. Dark part: Yelks eight eggs, two cupfuls sugar, three cupfuls flour, one cupful sweet milk, two teaspoonfuls soda, four teaspoonfuls cream tartar, half teaspoonful each of cloves, nutmeg and cinnamon, one pound citron, one pound raisins. Bake in layers, and put the following icing between: Whites of six eggs, two pounds sugar and one grated cocoanut.

SNOW CAKE.—Three fourths cupful butter, two cupfuls white sugar, beaten to a cream; two cupfuls of milk, two cupfuls cornstarch, two cupfuls of flour, two heaping teaspoonfuls baking powder; mix cornstarch, flour and baking powder together, add to the butter and sugar alternately with the milk; lastly add whites of seven eggs beaten stiff. Flavor with almond. Icing: Boil two cupfuls sugar in one-half cupful water until it becomes a thick syrup; pour this while hot over the whites of two eggs beaten stiff, beat together until thick and cold; flavor with vanilla. Wet a broad knife in water and smooth the icing on cake.

Journalistic Item.

Intruder—"Excuse me, I'd like to speak to you on business."

Editor—"What do you want?"

"I'd like to get a position as literary editor."

"Can you read and write?"

"Of course I can."

"Then how is it that you didn't read that sign on the door: 'Peddlers and beggars not allowed in this building?'"

Rough on Brown.

Snobberly—"Miss Clamwhooper, will you allow me to introduce you to Mr. Brown?"

Miss Clamwhooper—"No, I thank you. I might stand another White or Black, but I've soured on Brown. I know all the Browns I have any use for."

He Wanted an 'orse.

An English visitor stopping at a prominent New York hotel, sauntered up to the genial clerk during the recent cold snap, and adjusting his eye-glasses, said:

"My deah fellah, cawn't you let me have a sledge?"

"A sledge?"

"Yas."

"John," said the clerk to the porter," "go to a blacksmith's shop and get a sledge-hammer for this gentleman."

"No, my deah fellah, I don't want a sledge-hammer. I want one of those vehicles you know."

"O, you mean a sleigh. Why, certainly. John, go around to the stables and get a sleigh. Put in a couple of buffaloes."

"Buffaloes! But, me deah fellah, I cawn't drive a buffalo, ye know. Cawn't ye let me 'ave an 'orse?"

Another Boodle Case.

Mistress—"Here is a silver spoon under your pillow. What does this mean, Bridget?"

Bridget—"Shure mum, night before last I dreamt for the second toime that I was sick and to take a tayspoonful of medicine, and I didn't have any spoon, and to save mesilt gettin' up in the noight and disturbin' iverybody in the house, I put the spoon under me pellow, mum, for me convainance, mum."

A Stem-Winder.

Stiggins was passing a watchmaker's establishment, and looking in the window he noticed a very pretty girl at the counter.

"Ha!" he soliloquised, "I'll go in and take a look at her under some pretext or other."

He entered, and was waited on by the young lady's father.

"What can I do for you?"

"I want to get a key for my watch," he stammered, feasting his eyes on the young lady.

"Let me see your watch," said the watchmaker.

As if in a dream, he took out his watch. The watchmaker examined it, and said with surprise:

"Why your watch is a stem-winder."

He don't remember how he got out, but he does remember that the young lady snorted audibly.

Vain Regrets.

"How is your son Jacob coming on?" asked Washington Jones of a Toronto Israelite.

"Only so so, Mishter Jones."

"Ain't he married yet?"

"No, not yet. My son Shacob was very particular."

"Can't he find a girl to suit him?"

"Vell I dells you. He could have married dot Repecca Blumethal mit fifty thousand tollars more dan den years ago, and he vent pack on her."

"That was unfortunate."

"I should schmile. Choost calculate how much interest alone hash gone dot spout up dat fifty dousand tollars on in den years at shay only six per shent."

It Was Too Horrible a Thought.

They were out sleigh-riding together, and their thoughts and conversation turned on the subject which usually agitates the minds of young people under those circumstances.

"George, dear," she murmured, "will you always love me?"

"Yes, indeed, I will," he replied; "even after we're married. And will you always retain your present feelings toward me?"

"Always, George."

"Ah! there are so many things that might happen which would make your affection less warm. Suppose I should meet with some accident—one which would leave me disfigured for life?"

"It would never make the slightest difference."

"But suppose I should meet with a railroad accident (which, being a traveling man, I am very likely to do), and lose a leg or an arm; would—"

"An arm, George! an arm! Oh, dearest! let us talk of something else."

And Georgo dropped the subject, and proceeded to demonstrate that up to date his arms were just as good as any to be found.

Such Lamentable Ignorance.

Sir Astley Cooper relates the following anecdote of an Irish candidate before the examining board of the London College of Surgeons—"What is a simple and what is a compound fracture?" asked the examiner. The reply was, "A simple fracture is when a bone is broke, and a compound fracture when it's all broke." Sir Astley asked him what he meant by "all broke." "I mean," he replied, "broke into smithereens." I ventured to ask him what was smithereens." He turned upon me with an intense expression of sympathy upon his countenance, "You don't know what 'smithereens' is? Then I give you up."

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curity.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J.P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE.
The subscriber begs to inform the travelling public generally, that he has leased the above premises for a term of years, and hopes by catering to their comfort to merit a share of public patronage. Bar and Larder well supplied. Good stabling and attentive hostler.
D. McLEAN, Proprieto .

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
1241y

WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

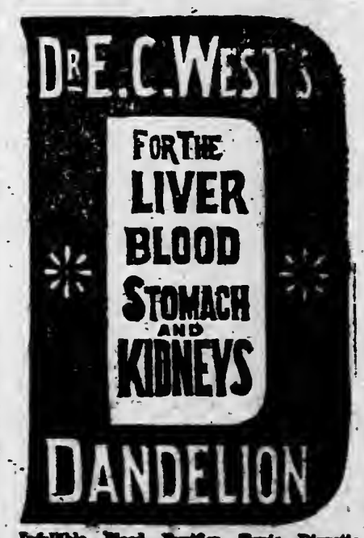
6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.
500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (34 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.
TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
S. EDMANSON & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

$500.00
REWARD!
WE will pay the above Reward for any case of Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Sick Headache, Indigestion or Costiveness we cannot Cure with WEST'S LIVER PILLS, when the Directions are strictly complied with. Large Boxes, containing 30 Pills, 25 Cents; 5 Boxes $1.00. Sold by all Druggists.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calcomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.



MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment. for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Wanted Immediately!
CANVASSERS IN THIS COUNTY
FOR THE
"OUR NORTH LAND,"
A PURELY CANADIAN,
describing the wonders of our own country, with thrilling incidents of travel and adventure. This is by far the most saleable subscription book ever published in Canada. not a book of scraps and clippings, but an original copyright work, richly and profusely illustrated.
To energetic men who will promise to canvass at least one township, we will offer the most liberal inducements. As we manufacture the book ourselves, upon our own premises, we can afford to place it in the hands of canvassers at a very low figure, while the retail prices place the work within the reach of all classes. Application for Territory received at once. We want at least one man in every county in Canada.
Also the "NEW HOME PARALLEL BIBLES," and Photogrrph Albums in over 300 varieties.
C. Blackett Robinson,
5 JORDAN ST., TORONTO Publisher.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.
First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

Infallible Blood Purifier, Tonic, Diuretic Loss of Appetite, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Biliousness, Jaundice, Liver Complaint, Rheumatism, all Kidney Diseases, Scrofula, Diseases peculiar to Females, Sick Headache, Rashes and all Skin Diseases, Clears the Complexion of the Worst Blotches, Pimples and Sores. Purely Vegetable.
Joseph E. West & Co., Toronto, Ont.
All druggists.

Markdale Roller Mill.
FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.
Flour always on Hand
To give in exchange.
'Baker's Patent' and best family flour for sale. Retail price per bbl. $4.50. Three barrels or more, $4.10 to $4.25.
SHORTS, per ton - $13.00
BRAN, " - 10.00
The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.
Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

THE Association Can't Stop Us.
HAVING PURCHASED
A
FIRST-CLASS HEARSE.
Built by B. J. Mash, London, also having a large stock of Coffins, Caskets and funeral furnishings, we are prepared to supply the public in the undertaking line on the shortest notice.
A large stock of furniture always on hand at lowest living prices.
Having a first-class cabinet maker, we are prepared to make all kinds of furniture to order, also repairing done promptly.
COLEMAN & HAMILTON,
Next door to Knapp's store,
MARKDALE.

NEW HARNESS SHOP.
R. CARNAHAN would respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of the surrounding country that he has opened a general harness shop on King street in the village of
HOLLAND CENTRE,
where he intends to manufacture and keep on hand a large stock of LIGHT and HEAVY HARNESS, long and short tugs, STRAW COLLARS, WHIPS, COMBS, BRUSHES, HARNESS OIL &c.
I will use only first class material and those requiring anything in the harness line will find it to their interest to call at the new harness shop and get prices before going elsewhere. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. Soliciting a share of public patronage. I am respectfully yours.
R. CARNAHAN.

A WONDERFUL ORGAN.—The largest organ and one that plays a controlling part on the health of the body is the liver. If torpid or inactive the whole system becomes diseased. Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is made specially for Liver and Kidney diseases, and is guaranteed to cure. Recipe book and medicine $1. Sold by all Druggists.

Wonderful is the effect of West's World's Wonder, &c. Family Liniment. One bottle will relieve three times than four times the quantity of any other liniment. 25 and 50c. All druggists.

The Markdale Standard
Is issued every Thursday, by
C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.
TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.
Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.
Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.
Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1
No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.
THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Society Directory.
Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78. meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, McDougall's block. Visiting brethren welcome.
Markdale A. O. U. W, No 141 meets in their Hall, McDougall's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.
MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.
Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Monthly Fairs.
Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

Markdale Church Directory.
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.
CHRIST CHURCH.
Services for January, 2nd 7. 9th 7, 16th 10:30 and 7, 23 7. 30th 10:30 and 7. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.
METHODIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9. Rev. Geo. H. Cornish. Pastor; G. S. Bowes, S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection; Mrs. T. Hill, Secretary.

Post-Office Directory.
MARKDALE.
The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.
Mails closed as follows, viz:
G. P. R. going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m
TRAVERSTON.
Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.
HARKAWAY.
Friday, 12:30 noon.
For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.
W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

Directory.
MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.
Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and B. J. Coleman.
Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.
COUNTY OFFICIALS.
Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace, W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N, Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson. Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, B. Allan, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. J. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.
DIVISION COURT CLERKS
No. 1, John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5, J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6, John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Why will you suffer with a bad cold when a few doses of West's Cough Syrup will cure you. Invaluable for all throat and lung troubles. Consumptives try it. Small size 25c., large bottles $1.00. All druggists.

A MYSTERIOUS MURDER.
A report of the mysterious disappearance of the body of C. A. Schofield, bookkeeper in McMillan's mill, Winnipeg, in the daily papers last week was read with interest by many.
He was seen at work by the watchman at 12.30 the night of the mysterious balansing his books for the week, it being Saturday night. and at 1 o'clock the lights were out, and he was supposed to have retired to his home. As he did not turn up the following morning a search was made. There was found in his office, where he was seen at 12 the previous night, a pool of blood on the floor, and evidence of a hard struggle also a trail of blood to a hole in the ice on the river fifty yards distant, where it was supposed the body was thrown in. The safe was rifled of about one hundred dollars. The night watchman was arrested, he having marks of blood on his clothes, which he said was caused by cutting a dog's ears a few days previous. A large gang of men set to work and cut the ice in order to dredge for the body.
LATER
Winnipeg, February 14.—All efforts to find the body of Schofield, who was supposed to have been murdered in McMillan's mill on Saturday night, having proved unsuccessful, the police came to the conclusion the whole thing was a hoax put up by Schofield to get away from his wife. Acting upon the idea Chief McRae telegraphed to Minneapolis, giving a description of the man and the facts of the case. He received a reply to the effect that a man, who said his name was Schofield, had been arrested on the train at Minneapolis. He acknowledge he was the man supposed to have been murdered in Winnipeg and says he killed two chickens and scattered the blood about the dead and office, then took them to the river and threw them in. He did this to escape domestic trouble. Efforts will be made to bring Schofield back to Winnipeg.

AMONG THE INDIANS.—"While my husband was trading in furs he came across an Indian who was taken to his lodge to die. He had inward pains and pains in all his limbs. He gave some Yellow Oil internally and applied it externally, and cured him. It also cured my husband of rheumatism, and I find it valuable for coughs and colds, sore throat etc." Mrs. A. Bosaw, Cook's Mills, Serpent River, Ont.

The Law Concerning Newspapers.
1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed in his name, or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment
2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.
2. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted in the place where the paper is published, although the subscriber may reside hundreds of miles away.
4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post-office or removing and leaving them uncalled for. while unpaid, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH
TIME TABLE.
Taking effect Monday, July 28th, 1886.
GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.		Mail.	Exp.
Toronto	Leave	7 45am	4 50pm
Cardwell Junction		9 25 "	6 30 "
Orangeville	Arrive	10 05 "	7 03
	Leave	10 20 "	7 22
Orangeville Jun		10 32 "	7 34
Shelburne		10 58 "	8 04
Dundalk		11 22 "	8 30
Flesherton		11 47 "	8 55
Markdale		12 02pm	9 10
Berkeley		12 14 "	9 22 "
Holland Centre		12 23 "	9 32 "
Chatsworth		12 38 "	9 49 "
Owen Sound		1 05 "	10 20 "

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.
Owen Sound	5 40am	2 40pm
Chatsworth	6 10 "	3 07 "
Holland Centre	6 25 "	3 30 "
Berkeley	6 34 "	3 40 "
Markdale	6 47 "	3 52 "
Flesherton	7 02 "	4 06 "
Dundalk	7 26 "	4 31 "
Shelburne	7 51 "	4 57 "
Orangeville Jun	8 22 "	5 23 "
Orangeville Arrive	8 30 "	5 35 "
Orangeville Leave	8 45 "	5 55 "
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 30 "
Toronto Arrive	10 35 "	8 10

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 339. MARKDALE, ONT., MARCH 3, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Publisher.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

Splendid farm to rent near Flesherton. See adv.

Cheap and strong are Mabee's sap pails. Buy them.

Slaughter prices at the Toronto House, see Mr. Brown's adv.

QUEEN'S Jubilee note paper and Envelopes 25c. per box, A. Turner & Co.

50 acre farm, all cleared, to rent. Apply to Wm. Brown, Markdale.

Don't forget Richardson & Co's annual clearing sale all next week.

Rev. Sam Jones will preach twice next Sunday in Carlton St. Church, Toronto.

The "Ahead of Any" milk cooler to be had only at the sign of the cross-cut saw.

DR. ARMSTRONG is expected to visit his father J. W. Armstrong Esq., of Flesherton this week.

W. G. RICHARDS moved this week into one of G. S. Bowes new brick residences on Elizabeth St.

Miss Jessie Burns of Toronto is spending her hollidays with the Misses Douglas of this village.

CHEAPEST place in the county for picture framing is at the Markdale Photo Gallery.

Oil Cake, the champion cattle food for sale at Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

MR. and Mrs. William Currie of Mt. Forest spent a few days with their brother R. B. of this place last week.

BAKERY and dwelling to sell or rent in the Incorporated Village of Dundalk, (at a bargain,) apply to A. G. Hunter.

JUST SPLENDID.--Those Cabinet Photo's Jackson is turning out; Come and see and be convinced.

IT will pay to leave your watch for repairs with me. Work warranted—Prices right. W. A. Brown, Jeweller.

The barn of Wm. Wilson, 3rd line, Euphrasia, was destroyed by fire last week.

A bill to admit women to the franchise was defeated in the British Columbia Legislature by a vote of 17 to 5.

Smith the barber will be in Flesherton next Monday, fair day, to attend to all requiring his service.

M. RICHARDSON & Co's annual sale commences Saturday March 5th to be continued through following week.

We had a pleasant call from Mr. Gimby, a former teacher in our school. Mr. G. is now studying medicine.

WANTED.—Any quantity of maple, rock and soft elm, birch and baswood for which cash will be paid J. H. Bliss Traverston. tf

THE result of the elections in Grey County as far as known is as follows—Sproule's majority 744, Masson 57, Landerkin 129.

HAMPDEN WATCHES.—My own name on—just received; Key and stem wind, will be sold close, cash or time. W. A. Brown, Jeweller.

A bill for the incorporation of Thornbury as a town is before the Legislative Parliament. Markdale ought to incorporate as a city.

M. RICHARDSON & Co's annual sale is an event looked for with considerable interest by all who are on outlook for bargains—it commences Saturday.

For Fleury and Wilkinson Plows go to Jackson's; price to suit hard times.

A large and select stock of prints, gents furnishing &c., is being opened at J. G. Anderson's, adv. next week.

The foundation of this country is the home, and the foundation of the home is pure men and women, pure boys and and girls.—Dr. Thomas.

Mr. Wm. Kough of Owen Sound will hold an auction sale of thoroughbred stock on the 16th March. See adv in this paper.

A Tea meeting will be held in the Methodist church New England on Tuesday evening the 8th inst.; when a grand program is expected.

The complete returns for East Grey are not in on going to press, else we would give them in townships as in South and North.

FARM FOR SALE.—A splendid farm 80 acres cleared, on ninth con. Euphrasia, for $2.200; on good terms, apply to A. G. Hunter, Dundalk, P. O.

I have now on hand a full stock of Brandies, Gins. Rum, Wines &c., of the finest quality which I feel satisfied will meet the demand of the trade, W. L. Davis.

WANTED AT ONCE.—Fifty thousand feet soft Elm Logs, to be delivered at Armstrong's Mill, Markdale, for particulars apply to W L. Young, at Lucas & Co's Bank.

MARKDALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 73 to 74 cents; spring wheat 73 to 74; barley 30 to 50; peas 46; oats 28; butter 15 to 17; eggs 16; potatoes 50 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

The Beeton World alleges that a girl at Uxbridge who was vaccinated from the arm of her lover has taken to swearing, chewing tobacco, sitting cross-legged. and hankers to smoke a cob pipe.

NOTICE.—All parties indebted to the undersigned are requested to pay the same to P. McCullough, Markdale, who will also pay those whom I owe. Will Taylor.

THE Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church held their first social for the season at the parsonage last Wednesday. There was a good turnout and a pleasent evening spent.

Wanted at once.—500 Rock Elm Logs, from 12 ft. to 18 ft. in length, will pay high price for the same. Terms Spot Cash, apply to W. J. Rowe, Barrhead Mills.

THE VERY BEST.—Kliens pat'd self submerging milk cooler is beyond doubt the best and cheapest article of the kind ever offered. Call at Haskett Bros and see them before purchasing any other make. 2 w.

CREDIT SALE.—On Thursday March the 10th W. J. Shepherdson will sell for Mr. Luke Francis, lot 30 con. 8 Euphrasia a large stock together with implements &c. Terms 11 months on sums over $5. Sale to commence at 1 o'clock.

THE blizzard of last Sunday was the most severe for twenty-four hours that we remember of. The roads were seriously obstructed in places, but the trains were on time as usual on the following day.

One of the greatest revivals known in Canada has just been carried on at Picton where the converts are said to have numbered 1000. The services were conducted by the evangelists, Crossley and Hunter.

Look out for a Treat. Rev. Dr. Talmage's celebrated Lecture on "Ingersolism," will be delivered in the Methodist Church here, on Wednesday evening 16th., by Rev. David Rogers.

The best specimen of a clear grit we ever heard of was the voter who brought his own book with him, for fear that he might be sworn at the poll on the same book that the tories used.—Herald.

WHY EMPLOY DOCTORS.—Consult a doctor and in 9 cases out of ten he pronounces your disease Liver Complaint and charges you $1 for a small bottle. Consult your druggists and for $1 he will give Dr. Chase's Liver Cure, guaranteed to cure, and a valuable receipt book free.

ARE you made miserable by indegestion, constipitation, dizziness, loss of appetite: take Rejuvenator Bitters sold by Smith the barber.

Saw mill men, Flour mill proprietors, Wool-factory owners and all who run steam or other machinery should call at Mabee's and examine his machine oil which is the best in the market,

MORE THAN CLAIMED:—"For the past four or five years," says Mrs. Emery, of Cottam, Ont., "I have been subject to kidney troubles. I was adviced to take Burdock Blood Bitters. It has done me more good than what was claimed for it. I can recommend it to all sufferers from their diseases."

WHAT IS ALABASTINE.—It is a preparation of plaster-paris and other ingredients used for decorating and whitening walls and ceilings, is easily applied, will not scale nor rub off, and is cheaper and better than calcimine. You can get it at Haskett Bros.

J. C. JOYCE, late of Hill Bros. left on Saturday for Toronto, and will shortly proceed to Kansas City, where he has accepted a situation. He has made many friends in Markdale during his short stay and carries with him our best wishes.

The revival meetings that have been conducted on the town line three miles from Markdale by Rev. R. I. Hosking have proved a grand success. During these services about forty persons presented themselves for salvation many of whom found Christ and are now going on their way rejoicing in Him.

DON'T DO IT.—Don't rack and ruin your lungs with a tiget, harrowing distressing cough, when a few doses of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam will loosen the phlegm, soothe the irritation, and heal the sore throat and bronchial pipes and may avert the destructive disease, consumption.

Mr. Thos. Hanbury's horse (of Dundalk) ran away on Wednesday from half a mile east of Markdale right through the village and was stopped half a mile west. No serious damage was done. A child was left holding the animal, but was unable to manage him.

DOUBLY BENEFITED.—There is no one remedy known that has more curative power over dyspepsia and liver complaint than Burdock Blood Bitters. "I had liver complaint and my husband was so bad with dyspepsia that he could not labor. One dozen bottles of B. B. B. has enabled both of us to attend to our usual work," reports Mrs. John A. Campbell, of Brighton, N. B.

MISS TENA, daughter of Rev. A. Wilson of this village, who has been attending the Shorthand Academy in Toronto, since last September, has just passed her examination at Osgoode Hall, and is now taking a situation as Shorthand Writer in one of the Law Offices in the City. The principal at the Academy says "Miss Wilson deserves all the praise that can be awarded to her, for the able manner in which she has performed the orduous duties devolving upon her."

On Friday afternoon Mr A. G. Hunter visited the Dundalk Public School for the purpose of allowing the scholars to take a shock of electricity from his battery. He permitted each one to take hold of the instrument seperately, and finally formed a ring, all joining hands, and the way some of the youngsters danced around was extremely amusing. He gave a short address on the power and use of electricity.—[Dundalk Herald

WORTHY OF CONFIDENCE.—The preparation sold by druggists known as Hagyard's Yellow Oil is worthy of all confidence as a household remedy for pain. It has been over a quarter of a century in the market, and never fails to cure or relieve rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, quinsy, deafness, burns scalds, bruises, frost bites and internal or externals pains and injuries.

Iron Harrows "spring tooth Harrows" Drills and seeders from the best manufactures in Ontario, at Jackson's

Over 50 carriages were in the procession of the late R. H. Whitby's funeral.

Wanted at once, a large quantity of rock elm poles 22 ft long and 6 or 8 inches at top end. W. J. Rowe, Barr Head Mills.

THE Toronto World says:—"The Globe's majority of one is not swelling visibly. It might be a good idea to feed the poor thing beans and buttermilk."

SIXTY.—Sixty farmers toed the mark at the Police Court last week at Hamilton for refusing to pay toll at York street gate. Forty three of them were fined $5 and costs or ten days. Three cases were allowed to stand, and the remainder were dismissed. Shortly afterwards a mob gathered and completely demolished the gate, which was considered an imposition and a nuisance.

HUMORS.—The most humorous man is not always the happiest; the man who has scrofulous humor or any obstinate humor of the blood, dose not feel very lively, at least not until he is cured, which, by the way, Burdock Blood Bitters will do in the most troublesome of blood humors.

CENTRE GREY FAREERS' INSTITUTE.—A public meeting of above will be held, at Rocklyn on Thursday next, 10 March, commencing at 1 o'clock, and at Flesherton the following day, 11th March, same hour. Professors Robertson and Moyre will give addresses, and a number of local men will also read papers on subjects of interest. These meetings have been largely attended in the past, and very interesting. There should be a lively interest taken in the above meetings.

IMPORTANT.—It is of the utmost importance that some good household remedy should be kept within handy reach in case of pain and accidential injury. The most useful remedy of this kind is undoubtedly Hagyard's Yellow Oil, for internal and external use in all painful complaints.

MONTHLY AUCTION SALE.—W. J. Shepherdson is establishing a monthly auction sale at Walter's Falls for the convenience of those wishing to dispose of stock, implements or real estate, and invites such persons to confer with him at his residence, Walter's Falls: A commission of two per cent will be charged for all amounts up to $50, over that amount one per cent. His first sale is announced for Friday, March 4th, when a large quantity of horses, cows and other stock together with implements &c., will be sold. See posters for full particulars.

Reward of Industry.—Mr. Geo. M. Haskett, hardware merchant of this place, moved this week into his new brick residence which he erected the past year. This model structure is beautifully situated in the north-east suburbs of the town on a handsome site, next to the palatial residence of Dr. Sproule, M. P. The design throughout combines beauty with comfort and convenience while the workmanship reflects credit on the contractor, Mr. W. G. Richards, It is without doubt one of the most complete, comfortable and handsome residences in the county, and cost about $3000. We heartly wish our respected citizen and his amiable wife and family all happiness and prosperity in their new residence.

STILL CAPTURED.—On Tuesday last a detective from Barrie found and illicite still on the face of the hill between Glen Huron and Dunedin. The whole of the apparatus with a quantity of the manufactured article was found on the premises. The still was brought to town and shipped to Barrie, and then the detective returned to seek the owner. Whether succeeded or not we have not learned. The still is said to have been in operation for a couple of years past and was owned by a person named MaFadzen.—[Collingwood Bulletin.

Go to Jackson for land Rollers. Cheapest and best in the market. Call and be convinced.

DEATH OF R. H. WHITBY.

It becomes our painful duty this week to record the death of our young friend, Harry Whitby, who passed peacefully away on Monday evening last at the age of 31 years.

Death is an unwelcome messenger at best, but when it claims for its victim, one in the vigor of youth, amiable in disposition and full of promise for a successful and useful life it becomes all the more sad and repulsive.

Harry was in delicate health the past two years, and had to retire from the active duties of life early last summer, since which time he has gradually grown weaker, and on Monday last passed away as above.

THE FUNNERAL.

Deceased having been a member of Orangeville lodge I. O. O. F. the pall bearers were members of that and Flesherton lodges. The funneral was a large one, and after an impressive sermon by Rev. Geo. H. Cornish, the remains were interred in the Methodist Cemetry.

A. O. U. W. Grand Lodge.

The Grand Dodge of the A. O. U. W. held their annual session in Toronto, commencing on Tuesday evening week. The reports of the Grand Officers state that a great increase has taken place in the order during the past year, the membership numbering 11,883 members. The total number of lodges in Ontario. at present is 271. Seventy-nine deaths occurred during the year, on which $158,000 was paid. The amount paid by each member during the year was $14. The total cash from all sources amounted to $173,510, an increase of $35,343. Nineteen new lodges were instituted during the year. Considerable business was done at this session.

Thursday was taken up with the election of officers and an address by Supreme Grand Master, Workman G. W. Badgerow. The following are the officers:

Grand Master Workman, H. B. Tailor, Whitby, re-elected by acclamation.

Grand Foreman, Daniel Spry, Barrie.

Grand Overseer, Rev. E. P. Crawford, Brockville, re-elected.

Grand Recorder, M. D. Carder, St. Thomas re-elected.

Grand Receiver, H. Rushton, Ridgetown, re-elected.

Grand Guide, John C. Walker, Guelph, re-elected.

Grand Watchman, J. J Ulley, Montreal, re-elected.

Grand Trustees, R. G. Wright, Napanee; John Kent, Toronto; M. A. James, Bowmanville.

Supreme Lodge Representatives, Past Grand Masters Col. Dawson, London; Warren Totten, Woodstock; H. B. Tailor, Whitby.

J. B. Nixon and F. J. Inwood, of Toronto, were appointed to fill vacancies on the Executive Committee.

Hamilton was selected as the next place for holding the Grand Lodge session.

Motrimonial Logging.

"Full forty years I've lived," quoth Rose,
"Alone, alone, alone;
Love's feast has been to me, God knows,
A bone, a bone, a bone.

"I long to drink the cup of life
In full, in full, in full;
In double harness as a wife,
To pull, to pull, to pull

The woods are full of men, I hear,
Enough, enough, enough;
From saplings green to hickories sere
And tough, and tough, and tough.

"To get, then," quoth the doughty Rose.
"A bean, a bean, a bean.
Where matrimonial timber grows
I'll go, I'll go, I'll go."

Then up she got and hunted wide.
O'er hill and plain and log.
And when the time come to decide.
She chose a thes—log.

THE BLUE SPECTACLES.

BY FRANK WATERS.

PROLOGUE.

We all know the terrible consequences to which a fixed idea, a ruling passion indulged without control, may lead; is it not surmised that Eugene Aram was drawn into murder by his unregulated appetite for study? Therefore, however fantastic the following frightful confession may at first sight appear, it is not, in reality, at all so improbable as it seems. But this is a question which the reader must decide for himself; my part is to lay the melancholy and fearful tale, without comment, before him. Here it is.

THE M. S.

My hours are numbered; my race is run. You raven croaking on the housetops, you owl that whoops from the blasted elm-tree out there by the stagnant pool, would tell me so, even if I had not myself already determined it should be thus. What? You do not believe in omens? Ha, ha! Neither did I, two little weeks ago. Yet I believe now, and so will you when you have read this, my confession, which necessity—pshaw! Why not say it at once?—which he compels me to make before I go. I am mad—true; yet I am quite capable of fulfilling his commands; for mine is, so to speak, a sane madness—an orderly and methodical madness—a madness which makes no interference in the ordinary things of life. And therefore you, to whom these pages are addressed, may credit every word of them; what I tell you is the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Of my own feelings I say nothing; I confine myself strictly to facts. Let what is hidden remain hidden. Oh! that awful word! that avenging Name. O GOD! O GOD! O long-forgotten, fearfully-remembered God!

You will know at once who I am when I say that my name is John Mayfern, son of Hon. Senator Mayfern, of the city of Toronto, the radiating point of the culture and education of these confederated Provinces. You will know why I speak of myself, as of an only son; for, indeed, ever since that marriage of Robert—ha, ha! of poor unfortunate Robert—have I not been practically so? That is some twenty years ago now; but you will not have forgotten how he, the eldest son, was disinherited and cast off, and all left to me. Of course you will not believe me: why should you? You will laugh at my protestations, if you can laugh on reading this. And yet I tell you I was genuinely sorry for Robert; for I had always liked him and his frank bold ways, and I possessed none of our father's overweening pride. To me, Robert's choice always seemed an eminently wise one, seeing that his wife was young and beautiful, though very poor; but I could do nothing, even after our father's speedy death; for you have heard how jealously the property was tied up and guarded. I mention these things as being necessary. Now hear the story of my life since I came into possession of the family estate in the suburbs of the city.

From my early youth I had been passionately devoted to science. This for years was a general devotion. At the university of my native city, where I studied, my fellow-students envied me my faculty to retain and put in practice the results of my scientific readings. I loved and studied the sciences at large, without feeling a marked preference for any one in particular. But afterwards, with me as with most others, the circle of study contracted; until my attention was directed, at last, wholly to that grandest of all among the natural sciences—chemistry. After my father's death I gave myself up entirely to this favored pursuit, and gradually became altogether absorbed in it.

Who loves his chosen calling with so devoted and entire a love as the professed scientist? Talk of the artist's devotion to art, the lover's devotion to love! What are these to the scientist's devotion to science? His love is madness;* for it he forgets all else—he forgets the world, he forgets himself, he forgets his soul, he forgets his God. And so it was with me—all the more easily that I had nothing to hold me back from this fearful madness. My religious education had been of the poorest and vaguest—O curse of curses! I never loved, never felt the beauty and the goodness of woman. I had no kindred, Robert, my only surviving relative, having disappeared, no one knew whither. And so my disease—yes! I know it now—my damnable and hellish disease grew upon me, and I prospered in it, and in desolation. True, my conscience did prick me sometimes, at first, about my selfish mode of life. True, the voice of God would for a time cry aloud in my heart with awful warning. But I stifled both, until the one died, and I ceased to believe in or regard the other, and the world, to me, was conscienceless and Godless. A materialist, an agnostic—that was what I proudly called myself, I was one of those wise practical men, who believe in what they are and touch—and in nothing more. God? Where was he? A hereafter? Prove it! But what, then, are your ideas of right! There is no wrong! Such was the proud position I took; unlike those degenerate soi-disant philosophers who first—ha, ha!—tell you there is no God, and with the same breath begin a sermon on morality. I had one merit at least—and only one: I was consistent! But let me on; time presses.

I made many wonderful discoveries; I made great advances in my chosen science; but I shared nothing with the public—I kept all for myself. I was one of your misers in knowledge, who cannot bear to part with a fraction of what he has acquired, and who, withal, counts himself the only true philosopher—the only real lover of wisdom for wisdom's sake. And so the world knew nothing of me, and I cared nothing for the world.

I think it was the failing of my means which first suggested the accursed idea. True, the property was tied up; but I anticipated its resources by loans, &c., until I became seriously embarrassed. For my experiments were often of a most costly nature, and my expenditure, frequently, beyond my income; but I passionately loved science, and cared nothing for money in itself, I spent freely until I had little more to spend. Then the idea struck me; its inception aided by the nature of some experiments on which I had been lately engaged. Suddenly I saw open before me a possible way by which I might escape all difficulties, and be able to pursue my one chosen calling, absolutely without check, to the end of my days. And then? why, then I should die like the brutes—I was no better than they; a higher evolution of matter whose particles would fall asunder at a certain time, and pass on into other forms. The idea was not pleasing—of course not: annihilation cannot be a pleasure. But then there was no help for it; and it was only to enjoy while one could.

You will know now what my idea was; suffice it just now to say that its accomplishment depended entirely on my possible success in making a certain chemical discovery; and for two years more, amid ever-increasing embarrassments, I worked night and day at my self-appointed task; worked doubly hard, as having a double incentive to labor—one the indirect pecuniary interest; the other—and, directly, by far the stronger—the scientific interest of the end in quest; for this latter was very great. At the end of two years I had sold house and lands, and retired to this blasted and accursed dwelling-place, as being at once the quietest and cheapest I could find. People said their was some curse on the old house, and no one would live there; but this only pleased me, as it made the rent a mere nominal one, suited to my reduced circumstances. I was poor—oh! so poor—and unable any longer to pursue my researches; and yet, one more link supplied in the chain of reasoning, one step forward in the path of knowledge, and I could grasp such riches as mortal man never yet called his own. But—and I cursed in my heart while I thought it; cursed bitterly and terribly; forgetting that I believed not in that which I cursed by—that link could never be forged, that step could never be taken; for what I needed was utterly and hopelessly beyond my reach, ay! though I had back all my squandered wealth and wasted substance.

It is now exactly fourteen days ago since I sat alone, at dead of night, here in this very room, brooding darkly over my misfortunes. It was a dull, heavy, starless night, and a storm seemed to be silently gathering. Through the curtainless window I could see not a gleam anywhere along the hollow blackness without, save where, along the low horizon, ran a belt of livid and preternatural light, which was that of neither moon nor stars. Within, the dim flame of my solitary candle rose, at times, erect into the breathless air; then wavered and shook with a ghostly swaying, as a low and mourning wind came up and onward from the skyline, swelled groaning around the house for a moment, and then passed on into the eyeless darkness. And then, as now, I remember, the owl hooted, and the raven croaked, from blasted elm-tree and housetops.

Was it that the lonely desolation of the place and hour increased the inward desolation to frenzy? Or did indeed that personal devil in whom I now so awfully believe—and whom for years I had served, in my blindness, unknowingly—then enter in and take complete possession of my heart, to prompt me to my final and irrevocable destruction? However it may have been, whatever the cause, I only know that all the evil which I had nursed so long and obstinately in my soul, found voice and vent for itself in that accursed hour. What if I was an agnostic? What if I did believe in nothing but what I saw and felt? An agnostic, and unbeliever, may relieve himself by cursing, as well and bitterly as another man. Blasphemy? How could I blaspheme against what was not? Still, there might be a God. So much the better; in that case, He would hear my blasphemy and tremble; the relief, the devilish joy, would be to me all the greater. You shrink, you tremble at my fearful words. Ay! they are fearful! yet be content: verily I have had my consolation. And now, it is God's turn; and I have not even the relief of thinking that He deals unjustly by me. It is I, not He, who have damned myself. Say so to the fools who talk of the injustice of eternal torment.

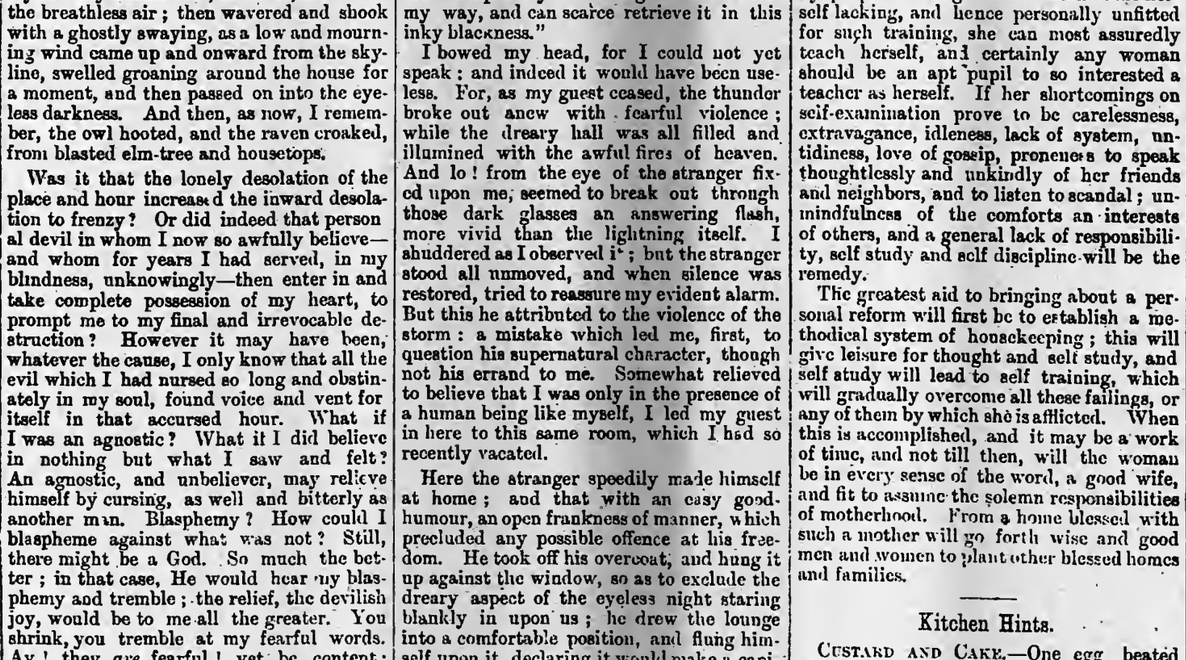
That night I cursed fearfully—I blasphemed most terribly. The wonder is that He did not strike me dead then and there, for I gave myself up wholly to the devil; I spoke all he prompted; and I ended by calling on him to appear and help me, if indeed, he did haply exist, as some would have it. The last word had but just left my lips, when the deeps of night were rent asunder; far and fiery yawned a livid hell amid the blackness; the thunder bellowed and a million fiends roaring exultation from their infernal abyss; and the lightning of heaven descending, smote my evil dwelling, and shook it from roof to basement. Then the rain came down like another deluge.

Amid the lull which succeeded, and whilst I stood entranced and confounded by that dread answer to my summons—for as such I knew it from the first—I was suddenly startled back to conscious being, by a loud, long knocking at the door. My flesh crept, my hair rose bristling on my head, a cold shudder convulsed my whole being, and my soul swooned within me; for I felt that this could be none but one—and that, he whom I had called on. It was now, however, too late to repent—I neither could nor would do so: the door must and should be opened to him who knocketh. Quelling, then, my shuddering limbs, and gulping down, so to speak, the heart which throbbed in my throat, and all but stifled me, I seized the candle, and staggered from the room. I would have given millions at that moment for the presence of the meanest human being beside me; but I had not even a servant in the house: I must face the ordeal alone.

With trembling hands, and quivering lips, I undid the bolt, turned the key in the lock, and, stepping backward, threw the door open. A smothered shriek rose to my lips, and died there voiceless, as he stepped quickly in, and slammed the door to behind him. Then, turning, he faced me. Was it indeed he? If so, I did not, in my first wild glance, perceive anything characteristic about him. A rather low sized, broad shouldered, strongly-built man, alert and vigorous, with bushy black hair, beard and whiskers, and a swarthy, sun-burned face by no means unpleasing in its aspect—such was the appearance of him who stood before me. He was dressed, comfortably, though rather outlandishly, and had a general air at once contradictorily rough-and-ready and gentlemanlike about him. And, in fine, and most undemoniac of all, he wore a pair of large and intensely dark blue spectacles. Yet I never for a moment doubted that this was the infernal one in person, or at least an emissary sent by him; I even tried to shape the question with my bloodless lips, but could not.

The new-comer surveyed me in silence, and apparently with some surprise at my disordered aspect, for some moments: Then, speaking in a rich, cheery, mellow voice, he accosted me:

"Excuse me, sir," he said, "for the readiness with which I have ventured to thrust myself into a stranger's dwelling. But necessity knows no law; and, though a traveller of wide experience, I have never observed a more tremendous electric display than that of a moment ago. May I venture to crave hospitality for the night? I have lost my way, and can scarce retrieve it in this inky blackness."



I bowed my head, for I could not yet speak; and indeed it would have been useless. For, as my guest ceased, the thunder broke out anew with fearful violence; while the dreary hall was all filled and illumined with the awful fires of heaven. And lo! from the eye of the stranger fixed upon me, seemed to break out through those dark glasses an answering flash, more vivid than the lightning itself. I shuddered as I observed it; but the stranger stood all unmoved, and when silence was restored, tried to reassure my evident alarm. But this he attributed to the violence of the storm: a mistake which led me, first, to question his supernatural character, though not his errand to me. Somewhat relieved to believe that I was only in the presence of a human being like myself, I led my guest in here to this same room, which I had so recently vacated.

Here the stranger speedily made himself at home; and that with an easy good-humour, an open frankness of manner, which precluded any possible offence at his freedom. He took off his overcoat, and hung it up against the window, so as to exclude the dreary aspect of the eyeless night staring blankly in upon us; he drew the lounge into a comfortable position, and flung himself upon it, declaring it would make a capital bed for the night, if I had no other to offer him; and, in fine, he ended by asking me, with an apology for his boldness, if I had nothing to drink in the house. To this I replied, abstractedly, that I had not, unless he might care to test the purity and strength of some absolute alcohol, which I kept with me for scientific purposes. In no wise taken aback, he replied cheerily that nothing could be better; that alcohol was the soul of all good drink—the spirit of wine, as it had been finely and appropriately named; and that he would thank me sincerely if I would produce of my store, provided it were not too much trouble.

"I am no great drinker," he said; "but indeed this is a night on which one requires something to keep him in heart. A friendly glass or two will do us no harm; I have always been an upholder of moderate enjoyment."

(CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.)

*Notes by Mark Lover.—It must be remembered that these are the words of a self-confessed madman. Wholly inapplicable in some cases, and but little in others, it is for the reader to determine what truth they may contain.—M.L.

A DISTINCTION.

Lucy: UNCLE FRED, IS HAMILTON A HIGH LATITUDE?

Uncle Fred: NO, I SHOULD SAY NOT, ALTHOUGH IT IS A HIGH OLD PLACE, AND THERE'S LOTS OF LATITUDE THERE.

HOUSEHOLD.

Responsibility.

There are two ways of training children in vogue, and a third way of letting them grow up without any training whatever. The two ways are training by precept, and training by example; the former is good in its kind, the latter better, but the best is by both combined. Training by precept is, of course, far better than no training at all, but the reason it usually fails is that children generally do just as mother does, or father, too, for that matter. Therefore, a careless, slovenly housekeeper, and one who gives no evidence of a sense of responsibility to God or her neighbor, can hardly expect to see her sons or her daughters grow up into careful, wise and noble manhood and womanhood.

If a newly married woman knows her education in these matters has been neglected, it is her solemn duty to make up at once for that lack of training, so that when she becomes the mother of children, and because she is a wife and much of her husband's prosperity will depend on her co-operation, she shall not make others suffer for her shortcomings, but will be able both by precept and example to train up her children in the way they should go.

On reflection, a sensible, newly-married woman will realize the importance of the position she has assumed, and of its probable, or at least possible, future solemn responsibilities, the rearing of young children and the moulding of their lives temporal and spiritual. There is hardly a sadder sight than that of a family of little children growing up without moral or mental training, and consequently devoid of any special sense of duty toward God or man.

The woman who is satisfied with simply giving her children good food, good clothing, and sleeping accommodations, and has no other anxiety for her offspring, is scarcely a good and wise mother; indeed, to use plain language, she is on but a little higher plane than the brute mother, who bestows as much care on her young as this implies, and who even goes further, for that matter, for she will most certainly instruct them in the best methods of food getting and shelter and defense of their lives, taking visible pains to do her best in thus equipping them for their future battle of life.

No, the good and the wise mother is she who, beside caring for their physical needs, insures their mental and moral well-being by proper training. If a woman finds herself lacking, and hence personally unfitted for such training, she can most assuredly teach herself, and certainly any woman should be an apt pupil to so interested a teacher as herself. If her shortcomings on self-examination prove to be carelessness, extravagance, idleness, lack of system, untidiness, love of gossip, proneness to speak thoughtlessly and unkindly of her friends and neighbors, and to listen to scandal; unmindfulness of the comforts an interests of others, and a general lack of responsibility, self study and self discipline will be the remedy.

The greatest aid to bringing about a personal reform will first be to establish a methodical system of housekeeping; this will give leisure for thought and self study, and self study will lead to self training, which will gradually overcome all these failings, or any of them by which she is afflicted. When this is accomplished, and it may be a work of time, and not till then, will the woman be in every sense of the word, a good wife, and fit to assume the solemn responsibilities of motherhood. From a home blessed with such a mother will go forth wise and good men and women to plant other blessed homes and families.

Kitchen Hints.

CUSTARD AND CAKE.—One egg beated separately, two tablespoonfuls powdere, sugar, one pound of almonds chopped fine, one cup sweet cream whipped.

ALMOND CAKE.—One and one-half cups sugar, 4 eggs, one-half cup sweet milk, two tablespoons of butter, one teaspoon cream tartar, one half teaspoon soda, two cups of flour.

PUFF PUDDING.—Batter of one pint flour two teaspoons of baking powder, salt, and milk to make a soft batter; grease cups and put in them a spoonful of batter, then a few of berries. Steam twenty minutes.

CLOVE CAKE.—One coffee cup of sugar, one teacup of butter, 2 teacups of flour, ½ teacup of milk, 2 eggs, 1 teaspoon of soda, 1 teaspoon of cinnamon, 1 tablespoon of cloves, 1 cup of chopped raisins, ½ nutmeg.

FEATHER CAKE.—Take two cups of sugar, half a cup of butter, two-thirds of a cup of milk, three cups of flour, three eggs and three tablespoonfuls of baking powder. Flavor with lemon or vanilla. This is a very nice plain cake.

DROP GINGER COOKIES.—One cup each of molasses and sour cream, one-half cup of sugar, one egg, one teaspoonful each of soda, ginger and cinnamon, and three heaping cups of flour. Drop in spoonfuls on a dripping pan. Bake quick.

TORONTO MUFFINS.—Two cups flour, two heaping teaspoonfuls baking powder, two tablespoons lard or less if not desired as short, 1 egg, a little salt. Beat the egg and shortening together, then add the flour and lastly the wetting of milk or water.

STEAMED BROWN BREAD.—Two cups of corn meal, 3 cups Graham meal, one cup of molasses, 2 tablespoonfuls of yeast. Mix soft with warm water over night. In the morning add 1 teaspoonful of soda and steam for 3 or 4 hours, then put in the oven for 15 or 20 minutes.

APPLE PUDDING.—Make a crust as for biscuit, about half an inch thick. First fill a tin basin with apples sliced fine. Then cook slightly on the stove. Put the crust on and bake. Cut slits in the crust to let out the air. This is best eaten with sugar and milk.

FISH GEMS.—Take any remnant of boiled fish, chop it fine and add the same amount of bread crumbs soaked in milk; also two eggs beaten and a spoonful of butter; season with salt, pepper and chopped parsley. Bake in a buttered pan 20 minutes.

PLUM PUDDING.—One cup of molasses, one cup of suet chopped, 2 cups of raisins chopped, 4 cups of flour, 1 cup of milk, 1 teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoon of soda, one small teaspoonful of cloves, 1 small teaspoon of cinnamon, 1 nutmeg, 1 egg. Boil or steam 3 hours.

COCOANUT CAKE.—Three cups of sugar, one cup of butter, 4½ cups of flour, 1 cup of sweet milk, the whites of 7 eggs, 2 teaspoons of cream tartar, 1 teaspoonful of soda. One grated cocoanut is sufficient for both cake and frosting. The frosting first and cocoanut after.

CHILI SAUCE.—Thirty large tomatoes, 6 large or 10 small onions, 8 green peppers, 12 tablespoonfuls of sugar, 10 tablespoonfuls of salt, 8 cups of vinegar. Chop the onions and pepper very fine; boil all three together for 3 hours; when nearly boiling put in the vinegar.

BAKED INDIAN-MEAL PUDDING.—Two quarts of milk, one pint of Indian meal, half a teaspoonful of salt, two-thirds of a cup of molasses; season with cinnamon; 1 or 2 eggs. Scald the milk; then stir in the meal. Heat to the boiling point; then add the other ingredients and bake. Nice with maple syrup.

NICKEL POISON.—An order has been issued in lower Austria forbidding manufacturers and tradesmen to sell nickel-plated cooking vessels. It is stated that vinegar and other acid substances dissolve nickel, and that this, in portions of one-seventh of a grain, causes vomiting, and is even more poisonous than copper.

Saved by a Joke.

An English mob, full of mischief, is as easily turned by a jest, as a French one is by a bit of spouted sentiment. Years ago there was a noted place of public resort at Barnsbury called White Conduit House, the gardens of which were after the style of Rosherville, variety entertainment being carried on therein.

At one time they were respectably frequented; during the last century they were a favorite resort of Oliver Goldsmith, but in the latter years of their existence—they were finally closed in 1849—the company was very mixed. About 1820, when balloon ascents were not so common as they are now, one of the aeronautic machines was advertised to ascend from this place, and among those drawn to witness the feat was Sir George Wombwell, the noted sportsman, accompanied by a party of male and female friends.

A large concourse of people assembled, but when the time for the ascent came, it was found that the whole thing was a swindle; there was no balloon, and the projector, a Frenchman, had bolted with the gate-money.

Wild with rage, the mob knew not against whom to turn their wrath, until, spying the swells in a kind of private box, one of the roughs remarked that Sir George looked very like one of them "furriners," and suggested that it was "werry likely they are some o' the gang that's cheated us."

That was quite enough; hoots and howls, and showers of missiles, began to assail the party. It was in vain Sir George expostulated, saying that he had been as much a victim of the swindler as they. A cabbage was hurled at his head by way of reply. Taking up the leguminous vegetable, he said, good-humoredly, "Perhaps the gentleman that threw that will chuck a bit of bacon after it; cabbage isn't good without a bit of pig." A roar of laughter followed this sally, and the tide was turned in a moment.

There was no further attempt to molest the party, and, as they passed out, their assailants of the moment before raised a cheer, and the one who led the attack slapped Sir George upon the back and pronounced him to be "the right sort."

Hadn't Read Them.

Jones—"I see Robinson is becoming quite a poet."

Brown (icily)—"Indeed?"

Jones—"Yes, he's doing some very creditable work. I've always thought highly of Robbie's abilities, and have more than once made the prediction that he would make his mark in literature some day."

Brown—"H'm!"

Jones—"Haven't you seen any of his poems?"

Brown—"O, yes; I've seen his name in the papers occasionally."

Jones—"Well, what do you think of his poems?"

Brown—"I haven't read any of them."

Jones—"You haven't?"

Brown—"Certainly not. Good gracious, man, don't you know that I write poetry myself?"

YOUNG FOLKS.

The Boy Who Set A Snare For The Sun.

AN INDIAN FAIRY STORY.

At the time when the animals reigned in the earth, they had killed all the people but a girl and her little brother, and these two were living in fear, in an out-of-the-way place.

The boy was a perfect little pigmy, and never grew beyond the size of a mere infant; but the girl increased with her years, so that the task of providing food and shelter fell wholly upon her. She went out daily to get wood for the lodge-fire, and she took her little brother with her, that no mishap might befall him, for he was too little to leave alone. A big bird of mischievous disposition might have flown away with him. She made him a bow and arrows, and said to him one day:

"My little brother, I will leave you behind where I have been gathering the wood; you must hide yourself, and you will soon see the snow-birds come and pick the worms out of the logs which I have piled up. Shoot one of them, and bring it home."

He obeyed her, and tried his best to kill one, but he came home unsuccessful. His sister told him he must not despair, but try again the next day.

She accordingly left him at the gathering-place of the wood, and returned to the lodge. Toward nightfall she heard his little footsteps crackling through the snow, and he hurried in and threw down, with an air of triumph, one of the little birds he had killed.

"My sister," said he, "I wish you to skin it and stretch the skin, and when I have killed more I will have a coat made out of them."

"But what shall we do with the body?" she said, for they had always up to that time lived upon greens and berries.

"Cut it in two," he answered, "and season our pottage with one-half of it at a time."

It was their first dish of game, and they relished it greatly. The boy kept on in his efforts, and in the course of time he killed ten birds, out of the skins of which his sister made him a little coat, and a bird-skin to spare.

"Sister," said he one day, as he paraded up and down before the lodge, enjoying his new coat, and fancying himself the greatest little fellow in the world—as he was, for there was no other beside him—"My sister, are we really alone in the world, or are we playing at it? Is there nobody else living? And, tell me, was all this great broad earth and this huge big sky made for a little boy and girl like you and me?"

She told him by no means, there were many folks very unlike a harmless girl and boy, such as they were, who lived in a certain other quarter of the earth, who had killed off all their kinsfolk, and that if he would live blameless and not endanger his life, he must never go where they were. This only served to inflame the boy's curiosity, and he soon after took his bow and arrows, and went in that direction. After walking a long time and meeting no one, he became tired, and stretched himself upon a high green knoll, where the day's warmth had melted off the snow.

It was a charming place to lie upon, and he fell asleep; and while sleeping the sun beat so hot upon him that it not only singed his bird-skin coat, but it so shrivelled and shrunk and tightened it upon the little boy's body as to wake him up.

When he felt how the sun had seared and the mischief its fiery beams had played with the coat he felt so proud of, he flew into a great passion, and bebrated the sun in a terrible way for a little boy no higher than a man's knee, and he vowed fearful things against it.

"Do not think you are too high," said he; "I shall revenge myself. Oh, sun! I will have you for a plaything yet."

On coming home he gave an account of his misfortune to his sister, and bitterly bewailed the spoiling of his new coat. He would not eat—not so much as a single berry. He lay down as one that fasts; nor did he move, nor change his manner of lying for ten days, though his sister strove to prevail on him to rise. At the end of ten days he turned over, and then he lay full ten days on the other side.

When he got up he was very pale, but very resolute, too. He bade his sister make a snare, for he informed her that he meant to catch the sun. She said she had nothing; but after awhile she brought forward a deer's sinew which the father left, and which she soon made into a string suitable for a noose. The moment she showed it to him he was quite wroth, and told her that would not do, and directed her to find something else. She said she had nothing—nothing at all. At last she thought of the bird-skin that was left over when the coat was made, and this she wrought into a string. With this the little boy was more vexed than before.

"The sun has had enough of my bird-skins," he said; "find something else."

She went out of the lodge, saying to herself. "Was there ever so obstinate a boy?" She did not dare to answer this time that she had nothing. Luckily, she thought of her own beautiful hair, and pulling some of it from among her locks, she quickly braided it into a cord, and, returning, she handed it to her brother. The moment his eye fell upon this jet-black braid he was delighted.

"This will do," he said, and he immediately began to run it back and forth through his hands as swiftly as he could; and as he drew it forth he tried its strength. He said again, "This will do," and, winding it in a glossy coil about his shoulders, he set out a little after midnight. His object was to catch the sun before he arose. He fixed his snare firmly on a spot just where the sun must strike the land as it rose above the earth, and sure enough he caught the sun, so that it was held fast in the cord and did not rise.

The animals who ruled the earth were immediately put into great commotion. They had no light, and they ran to and fro, calling out to each other and inquiring what had happened. They summoned a council to debate upon the matter, and an old dormouse, suspecting where the trouble lay, proposed that some one should be appointed to go and cut the cord. This was a bold thing to undertake, as the rays of the sun would not fail to burn whoever should venture so near to them.

At last the venerable dormouse himself undertook it, for the very good reason that no one else would. At this time the dormouse was the largest animal in the world. When he stood up he looked like a mountain. It made haste to the place where the sun lay ensnared, and, as it came nearer and with the heat, and the whole top of its huge bulk was furnished in a very short time to enormous heaps of ashes. It succeeded, however, in cutting the cord with its teeth and freeing the sun, which rolled up again, as round and beautiful as ever, into the wide, blue sky. But the dormouse, or blind woman, as it is called, was shrunk away to a very small size, and that is the reason why it is now one of the tiniest creatures upon the earth.

The little boy returned home when he discovered that the sun had escaped his snare, and devoted himself entirely to hunting.

"If the beautiful hair of my sister would not hold the sun fast, nothing in the world could," he said. He was not born, a little fellow like himself, to look after the sun. It required one greater and wiser than he was to regulate that. And he went out and shot ten more snow-birds, for in this business he was very expert, and he had a new bird-skin coat made, which was prettier than the one he had worn before.

The Farmers' Song.

BY ARCHIE MACK.

We are the jolly farmers,
We till the teeming earth,
We gather in our harvest
With jollity and mirth.
We feed the poor mechanic
Who toils the whole day long,
And, when the evening cometh,
We sing the Farmers' song.

CHORUS.—Ah, happy are we farmers,
In winter and in spring,
In summer and in autumn
The self-same song we sing!

To us the city merchant
Looks for his daily bread,
The titled lord and lady
By us are also fed.
The lawyer and the statesman,
And all the motley throng,
Depend upon us wholly,
Then raise the Farmers' song;

CHORUS.—Ah, happy are we, etc:

The doctors and their patients,
The monarchs on their throne,
All look to us for sustenance,—
What power the farmer owns!
We feed the poor and needy,
We feed the weak and strong,
And while we toil and labor,
We sing the Farmers' song.

CHORUS.—Ah, happy are we, etc:

Who would not be a farmer,
And cultivate the soil?
How happy in our freedom
Are we, despite our toil!
'Tis we who guard the nation
From tyranny and wrong,—
Then join us in singing
The sturdy Farmers' song.

CHORUS.—Ah, happy are we, etc:

Winter, the King of Fair Canada's Year.

BY NORA LAUGHER.

TUNE.—"Ye Warwickshire lads and ye lasses."

Canadian brave lads and fair lasses
Gaily welcome each season that passes;
They're proud of the charms of their picturesque land
Where nature has lavished with bountiful hand;
But proudest of all,
Spring, Summer or Fall,
Are they of the drear
Winter, the King of fair Canada's year.

When snowflakes silver the bare maple trees,
Happy voices float on the icy breeze
As merrily down the steep toboggan slide
Many stalwart lads and pretty maidens glide;
For foremost of all,
Spring, Summer, or Fall,
Stands winter the drear,
Winter, the King of fair Canada's year.

Nay! who will deny that winter is King?
List to the sleigh-bells that merrily ring
As they sweetly tinkle thro' the frosty air
Seems each merry tinkle to firmly declare
That foremost of all,
Spring, Summer or Fall,
Stands winter the drear,
Winter the King of fair Canada's year.

The Sunny Side.

True it is that cloud and mist
Blot the clear blue weather;
True that lips that once have kissed
Come no more together.

True that I have lived alone
With my pale dejections
True that I have learned to moan
Over crushed affections.

True I loved with right good will,
Mourned my hopes departed,
Dreamed my golden dream, and still
Am not quite broken-hearted.

Evil comes and evil goes,
But it moves me never,
For the good—the good it grows,
Buds and blossoms ever.

What has been can be again,
Love to love returning,
Sunshine always follows rain!
Bright my hopes keep burning.

Vain regret to mourn the past!
Be hopeful, never falter.
To-day your lot 'mid sorrow cast,
To-morrow things may alter.

The sunny side of life should be
Our first consideration,
And if it is, our lot shall be Content's continuation.

An Earthly Heaven.

BY JACINTA JAQES.

Love is more boundless than the sea or sky,
Deeper than depths of ocean or air;
Freer than all the wings of birds which fly,
Than moon or stars more beautiful and fair.

Love sweetens labor. At the close of day
The weary ploughman to his home retires,
The laughing children meet him on the way,
And cheery glow their humble hearthstone fires.

Cares come, and sorrows with their blighting breath
Sickness and famine spread their fearfull pall;
Strong men bear down before the reaper Death,
And one by one home's cherished idols fall.

But love sustains the heart and strengthens to endure;
Bends o'er the couch of grief with words of cheer,
Soothes with its tone the pain it cannot cure,
And on its breast the dying feel no fear.

It dignifies the lowly heart and softens pride;
Brings comfort to the soul by sorrow riven.
With love a daily dweller at the fireside,
Your cottage walls bind in an earthly heaven.

Time Present.

Day after day our span is shortened and our powers are lessened; but those who desire to do good have always time wherein to effect it, and love and virtue do not perish. Example and the good we do in life are our truest immortality. For one life that we have redeemed by our own, one impetus that we have given to the ball of progress, we may well give years of personal sorrow; and no time is lost that shows a brave front to pain, that bears disappointment with equanimity, or that does one hair's-breadth of actual good.

Eligible young bachelor (making a call)—Well, Master Fred, you don't know who I am. Candid young hopeful—Oh! but I do; though. You're the chap ma says would be such a good catch for our Mary.

Poultices.

A poultice rightly used, is a sovereign remedy for many ills, especially local inflammations and swellings. Here are a few of their appropriate uses:—

Always poultice a boil as soon as its character is detected. Change poultice often enough to keep hot until the boil is softened. Then have the boil opened, and continue the poulticing, changing less frequently unless discharge is free.

Poultice a felon in the same way, but do not wait for the swelling to soften. Open as soon as convinced of its character. Waiting often causes death of bone.

Apply a poultice to any angry looking, hard swelling, if grateful to the feelings of the patient. A joint swollen and painful from a sprain, is often wonderfully relieved by a poultice changed every hour or two.

In pneumonia and pleurisy, after the acute onset of the disease has passed, nothing gives the patient more relief than a hot poultice changed often.

Other deep seated inflammations, as inflammation of the liver, chronic gastritis, and inflammation of the bladder and other pelvic organs, are often relieved by poultices thoroughly applied.

In some cases of chronic dyspepsia of long standing, relief is most speedily obtained by the use of poultices applied over the stomach almost continuously for several days or weeks in succession.

The efficacy of the poultice is due to its warmth, moisture, and emollient properties. There is little special virtue in the particular article used. Bread, linseed, and slippery elm, are the most useful in the majority of cases.

It is seldom necessary to apply the material of the poultice, directly to the affected part. It is much cleaner and more convenient to put the poultice in a bag of thin muslin or cheese-cloth.

Poultices should never be applied to the eye.

How to Cure a Cough.

First of all, stop coughing. Three-fourths of the coughing is from sheer force of habit. There are thousands of people who spend an hour every morning of their lives in unnecessary coughing. A little irritation is felt in the throat. A cough is set up, and habit keeps it going until the irritation provoked by the cough, produces a really serious disease. Coughs are sometimes contagious. Some old lady who has a pet cough which she has nursed for twenty years or more, sets the ball rolling in church just when the minister begins to read the hymn. Another auditor takes up the tune, another and another from all quarters of the house, until they fairly make the arches ring with chin music. The minister continually raises his voice in his effort to drown the noise, but he is no match for a hundred people, hemming and hawking and interjecting chest coughs and throat coughs, and chin coughs, and every variety of this sort of vocal exercise; for the higher he raises his voice, the louder grows the din. Bye and bye, he gives up the contest in sheer despair and stops reading. Now observe what a change,—a silence like the "stilly night" begins as soon as the last cougher has time to get breath and clear his throat. No sooner does the speaker open his mouth again, than the coughers take up their dismal refrain. Is not this fact as good evidence as one needs, that coughing is an act under control of the will in a very large number of cases, and that a little application of the "mind-cure" is appropriate? The writer has cured many chronic coughs by simply ordering them stopped. Try it.

A Winter Tonic.

People who shut themselves up in a stove or furnace-heated houses during cold weather depriving themselves of the delicious, crisp, winter air, with its dense, pure, life-giving oxygen, are preparing themselves for a not mysterious "dispensation of Providence" in the spring in the form of a spring fever, or "biliousness," or some other well deserved punishment for their cowardly fear of one of nature's most efficient tonics.

Nothing is more really invigorating than a walk in a keen, frosty atmosphere. How the cold air makes the nose and the cheeks tingle! How sharply the air cuts as it is drawn into the lungs in panting breaths! and how the cheeks glow, and the eyes sparkle! and with what increased energy does the mind apply itself to its tasks! and how the clouds clear away from the mental horizon, under the exhilarating influence of pure, cold air, when one returns to his study or his desk after a half hour's vigorous tramp through the snow of a winter's morning with the temperature away down below nothing!

Artificial Digestion.

The modern craze for predigested foods, has created a new and immense industry. Scores of firms are competing with each other in the production of novelties in the line of digested foods. By the delusive descriptions of the merits of these preparations, many people are deceived into the belief that the digestive process to which these foods are subjected, is a real substitute for the natural process of digestion within the body. That this is not true was shown by the experiments of Sir Wm. Roberts. This eminent physiologist made an experiment with two healthy kittens. One he fed by digested food, the other upon milk. The first named soon fell behind the other in weight, showing the superiority of food in a natural state as an ordinary diet.

Hardening Against Colds.

According to Dr. Brown Sequard's experiments, colds generally result from exposure of the soles of the feet or the back of the neck, which are the most sensitive parts of the body. He advises as a preventative, that the feet and neck be hardened by exposure to cold. The feet are daily placed in cold water, for a few minutes, and cold air is blown upon the back of the neck with a bellows. The same effect may be obtained in the old fashioned way of bathing the neck with cold water every morning, on rising.

Fainting.

If you feel faint, get into a horizontal position as soon as possible. If possible, get the head lower than the rest of the body. Apply hot water, if it can be at once obtained, to the top and back of the head. Hot water is much to be preferred to cold water over the heart as well, by means of a sponge.

If faintness occurs while taking a hot bath, immerse the head in the water for a few minutes, instead of getting out of the bath, as is usually directed. The latter method generally sends one headlong to the floor.

Run-Rounds.

This disease of the finger nails, technically known as "paronychia," is now definitely shown to be a contagious disease. According to a recent report, an epidemic of the disease which broke out in a school in southern France, originated from a single case. Children suffering with this affection should be kept out of school, and not be allowed to mingle with other children until cured. Carbolic ointment or a solution of sulphite of soda is a good remedy.

For a Felon.

Don't waste time with plasters and poultices, dipping in lye and "smart-weed tea." If you have a felon, go at once to a good surgeon and have it lanced deep. The knife should go down to the bone, then healing will be prompt and much mischief may be averted.

He Always Lost His Load.

Waggish Clerk—"I see you've hired Tim Dolan to drive one of the wagons."

Express Manager—"Yes. Isn't he all right?"

Waggish Clerk—"Well, that's for you to find out. Where he was employed before he was all the time losing his load."

Express Manager—"Why, he came well recommended. What did he haul?"

Waggish Clerk—"He drove a sprinkling cart."

Do You See?

"Is it not a pity that Watson's arms are so short?" said Walker to his friend. "He is so handsome, and well-formed in other respects."

"Oh, it does not make any difference," returned his friend, "he always chooses a girl with a very slender waist, see?"

Walker saw.

Do You?

Miss Chillingly: So, Mr. Robinson, you kept a diary for four whole years and then gave it up!

Mr. Featherstone Robinson: Ya-as. And it's weally quite interwesting to look it ovah and see what a fool I was then.

Miss Chillingly: It's a pity you gave it up. Only think! In ten years you might read it over and see what a fool you are now!

The Good Things of Life.

"That's what I call a good dinner," remarked Bobby as he leaned back in his chair with an air of repletion. "Bobby," said his mother, "I am ashamed of you." The minister of the chapel, who was dining with the family, laughed heartily. "Bobby appreciates the good things of life," he said, "like all the rest of us." "Don't you think it was a good dinner?" Bobby asked of the minister. "Yes, indeed," he said; "I enjoyed it very much." "Ma said she thought you would, because she didn't suppose you got very much at home," remarked Bobby.

The Rule for Determining Time.

Mr. Skane—"Why compare your watch with that time, Miss Coco? One can never get an idea of the time from the clock's in a watchmaker's window. You must have noticed that."

Miss Coco—"Oh, of course. I was only going through the calculation the watchmaker goes through to determine the time."

Mr. Skane—"Indeed! Do you know it, Miss Coco?"

Miss Coco—"Certainly. Add up the time of all the timepieces, and divide by the number of clocks."

She Ought to Know.

Mrs. H.: "Great heavens, Cranston! Don't deny it; I saw you kiss her!"

Mr. H. (stiffly): "You are mistaken. She kissed me."

Mrs. H.: "But why did you let her?"

Mr. H.: "I couldn't be rude to a lady."

Mrs. H.: "But why did she want to kiss you?"

Mr. H.: "I can't imagine. You ought to know."

Classical Item.

"Have you got a copy of 'Milton's Paradise Lost?'" asked Gilhooly of Hostteter McGinnis, one of our aristocrats.

"What in the world is that?" replied McGinnis.

"It's a book," responded Gilhooly.

"No, sir, I have not got such a book. Whenever I find anything that is lost I return it to the owner. When did Mr. Milton lose his book? What reward is he offering for its return?"

He Knew Them All.

District School Examiner: "So, my little man, you are quite a student, eh? Well, tell me what you have learned?"

Young Canada: "Learned my letters."

District School Examiner: "Very good, and now tell me what letters you have learned."

Young Canada: "Letter "a," letter "b," and letter go Gallagher!"

Dr. Johnson once, speaking of a quarrelsome fellow, said:—"If he had two ideas in his head they would fall out with each other."

A correspondent asks how to serve a dinner. If it is a good dinner, and you are hungry, just eat it. That's the way we would serve a dinner.

Edith—Ma, that new maid is dreadfully stupid. Mamma—What is the matter? Edith—I wanted to practice a little, so I sent her to the music room for "The Lost Chord." Mamma—Well? Edith—She brought me the clothes line.

The fasting men are grumbling at the small amount of money their exhibition brings them. We should like to know what they want with money. The whole essence of their business is to prove to us that we can live without it.

Remarkable Ruins Found Among Beehive Huts of Natives.

The author of Mr. Rider Haggard's new story "She," will remember that when his little party of adventurers passed in their boat from the sea into an East African river, they found on the bank a wall of stone that had evidently been a solidly constructed wharf in some remote period. In a foot note he justifies this conceit by alluding to the ruins of a very ancient city on the coast of Kilwa, south of Zanzibar. It happens that 500 miles nearer the region in which he has placed his story their are evidences of a past civilization that are incomparably greater than those he mentions.

Some way south of the Zambesi river there is a large region extending from the sea nearly 400 miles inland, and 300 to 400 miles toward the south, in which ruins are constantly being discovered, proving that in prehistoric times the country was inhabited by a civilized people. To-day only the rudest black tribes inhabit this land, save in a few places where the Portuguese have established stations. The little beehive huts of the natives are seen among massive ruins betokening a degree of architectural skill which rivals that of the ancient Aztecs. Our knowledge of these ruins is still far from perfect. Our earliest records of travel and trade on the East African coast, extending back to the beginning of the Christian era, do not mention them. Only in recent years have the travels of Selous, Erskine, Mauch Baines, Mohr and O'Neil revealed to us the monumental evidence this country contains.

The coast town Solala is shown on all maps of East Africa. Near that town Carl Mauch found extensive ruins, remarkable for their endurable nature and strange shapes. There are partly ruined walls, still 30 feet high and 12 feet wide at the base, built of small hewn blocks of granite. In these walls sometimes 15 to 20 feet from the ground, are embedded one end of blocks of stone 18 to 20 feet long, which were evidently used to support galleries. Here and there, built in the walls or standing by themselves, are round stone towers which evidently rose to heights of 30 to 50 feet. Similar masses of masonry are found as far as 350 miles inland and a little north near the coast.

It is not positively known yet who built these ancient structures. No trained archæologist has visited them and no search has yet been made for inscriptions, though O'Neil says he has no doubt from what he has recently heard that there are numerous inscriptions on the ruins about Manica. All the ruins are surrounded by surface gold mines. It is believed that all this country was occupied some time before the Christian era by a great Colony, probably of Phœnician origin, and that its chief occupation was gold mining.

Mr. O'Neil says that these numerous ruins are nearly as well preserved as those of ancient Egypt, and better than those of Assyria. Some day, no doubt, they will be systematically studied. Their existence shows conclusively that a large region in inner Africa, now given up to savage men and wild beasts, was subject many centuries ago to the control of a people who were considerably advanced in the art of civilization.

Trees and Blizzards.

Prof. Chas. E. Bessey Writes as Follows:—The blizzard in its purity and perfection is a native of the plains of the North-West. The name is now applied to severe storms in the East, but the genuine blizzard never leaves the treeless region of the Far West. When a snow-storm sets in, with the wind from the northwest blowing at the rate of twenty, thirty, forty and even fifty miles an hour, with a lowering temperature which rapidly approaches zero, with the snowflakes filling and driving horizontally through the nipping air—that is a blizzard. On the plains the blizzard demon finds every crack in the weather-boarding and every loose joint in window and door, and through these the snowflakes drive with a persistence which soon piles up great masses of snow within the house or barn. The cold blast drives along the surface of the earth and actually scours it as with a monstrous sand-blast. I have seen plowed fields from which the snow and fine earth had been blown, until they were left as clean as if they had been swept by some giant's besom. The horizontal blast of freezing air filled with frosty flakes, sweeping the face of the earth, is characteristic of the genuine blizzard.

I have been much interested in watching the effect of tree-planting upon the blizzards. The blizzard drives along the surface of the ground, and it has for ages upon ages found no tree to halt or veer it. The settlers on the plains planted trees, however, and these trees now stand as obstacles to the full sweep of the ice-laden wind. A few days ago, as a blizzard swept over the country, I passed through a loosely-planted grove of trees, cotton-woods, silver maples, green ashes, etc., and noted with pleasure that among the trees the violence of the wind was greatly reduced, and the flakes of snow dropped lazily to the ground, where they rested as contentedly as if they had fallen upon the tree-covered hills of Ontario. As soon as I passed out of the grove I had to face again the furious flakes, driving horizontally in their mad career over the earth. As often as I passed through a little grove of trees, I found that I left the blizzard; but as soon as I emerged from the sheltering trees, the blast struck me again in all its fury. This bit of experience is duplicated thousands of times every day upon the plains. The tree-planter has routed the blizzard wherever he has set his little army trees. Wherever a grove has come into existence there the blizzard's scepter has been broken. True, he rules as fiercely as ever outside of the groves, but as these enlarge his dominion contracts. When once the groves are approximately continuous, and when once they have grown to greater heights, the blizzard will be a thing of the past. The settlers upon the plains need not fear the blizzard for more than a half dozen years, if he calls to his aid the friendly cotton-wood, maple, ash, and elm. They alone can vanish this terror of the Western winter. Let every prairie settler's motto be: "Trees rather than blizzards."

"Well, goodby, old friend, you will never see me again." "What! never?" "Ach, then, Gustavus, would you mind lending me another sovereign?"

It is not an unfair sarcasm that is embodied in the story of an organist who was asked:—"Are you not a regular attendant of the church?" "Oh, yes," said he. "And are you a Christian?" Oh, no" was the reply, "I'm the organist."

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Publisher.

MARKDALE, MAR. 3., 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—J. J. C. Abbott was elected on Tuesday as Mayor of Montreal by 1,700 majority.

—The war cloud in the east is decidedly darker. An outbreak may be looked for at an early date.

—The Kingston re-count has increased Sir John's majority to 17.

—D. F. Jones, Esq., of Gananoque, ex-M. P. for Souths Leeds, died last Sunday.

The Ontario Legislature met on Tuesday for the despatch of business.

How Editors view it.

We give below the views as expressed by leading papers on both sides as well as independent so that our readers may have a little of the cream pro and con re the late election.

From the Toronto News (Labor.)

Parties being so closely balanced, it appears altogether probable that the new parliament will in any event be a short-living one. Out of the elementsreturnedit will hardly be possible either to secure a satisfactory working majority for the present Ministry, or for any other government that may succeed them. Another general election may be looked for at no distant date.

If the Grits had gone to the country with a well defined policy they would in all likelihood have carried everything before them. But the party's hesitancy and non committalism, and the lack of clearly drawn issues between the old parties, have given the Ministry, for the time at least, the victory. The result proves that the substantial advantages of the possession of power and patronage are not to be offset by a policy of criticism and scandal.

From the Globe (Liberal.)

The returns give assurance that the conflict in Canada will soon terminate successfully, though it appears possible that the restoration of power to men freely chosen by an unbribed electorate may not occur till the task of holding the present winners together has passed to a man even worse that Sir. John Macdonald.

With the prospects of Sir. Charles Tupper's accession to the Premiership at an early day it is quite within probability that the country will be delivered from corruptionist rule long before the expiry of the term of the new Parliament. We say to the Liberals of Canada that there is little reason to be cast down when we consider how much better is the position of the party than in the last Parliament, and how much improved its power to work for the public good.

The Mail (Independent Conservative.)

Surveying the whole field, it is tolerably safe to conclude that another general election is not far off. Sir John, whose resources are great, may remain in power for a session, perhaps for two; but it would be impossible for any politician to carry on the affairs of Canada for a full Parliamentary term with so small and so heterogeneous a majority as he has at his command. The smaller provinces, including Quebec, are each fighting for its own hand—this for better terms, that for larger approbriations, a third for both; and we know from experience how easy it is for combinations, formed for purposes of plunder, to shake the strongest of Cabinets. For this season, and taking into consideration the fact that the two parties are no longer fighting for principles but merely for office, the only issue which has divided them of late years having been buried at Malvern' we see nothing but instability in the immediate future, and look for another general election before this day twelvemonth.

Toronto World (Independent.)

It may be unpalatable to Reformers but we must remind them of a fact that is becoming plainer daily, namely, that the Conservative party is steadily trying to improve itself, that Sir John Macdonald has been making his record cleaner and more respectable as he growes older, and that there is an honest effort to get better men into the ranks of the party and to drop the boodle and rowdy elements. The policy of the Conservatives has been patriotic in a pronounced degree of late years.

Can we say the same of the Liberal party? Mr. Blake, is personally, above the breath of suspicion. But the policy of his party has been unpatriotic in the extreme. They have sought power at the expense of breaking up confederation and bidding for the support of all the elements of disaffection. And look at his organ, the Globe. It has of late been the most mendacious political newspaper ever seen in Canadian politics. It is nothing but a party hack in hands of the party machinists. It hasn't one spark of independence or political manliness. And men respect manliness even in politicians and newspaper organs. The Reform party must get a policy and it must get rid of the barnacles. Moreover it must inaugurate a patriotic policy and become itself a patriotic opposition. A disloyal opposition is a curse to the country. Reformers must show faith in the country and not seek party advantages by employing dishonorable and disloyal methods.

Let us have a patriotic opposition to watch the party in power. They need watching. But let it be done decently,

The Montreal Witness (Ind. Liberal.)

There can be no doubt that the National Policy saved the Government from the wrath of the people, who were really roused against corruption, but who had not got to the point of condemning it and of trusting in industry instead of in pivrilege for theibread and butter. Thousands and thousands of voters yesterday cast their ballots in favor of what they know to be a corrupt and extravagant Government for the simple reason that they considered that their own or their relatives' living or prosperity depended upon the maintenance of a Government which was willing to tax other people for their benefit. The large funds subscribed by the manufactures no doubt had a great influence upon the result in many close contests. The final returns when received from the North-West and British Columbia will probably bring the Governments majorits up to 40,

The Montrea lStar (Ind. Conservative,)

The Conservative party may be both encouraged and warned by the election campaign which closed yesterday. Its members can now see that the Government which unswerveingly and unflinchingly oursues a course which is believed to be for thepublic good is sure to get a firm hold of the country. The people believe in principle and they admire and place faith in the men who courageously and consistently stand by what they regard as right. But the Conservatives may also learn that the advantages which a government and a party gain by successfully carrying out a good policy may be lost if they weakly permit a few trading politicians to use their public position for their own private gain, and if they wink at a transaction on the part of public servants which honest men cannot justify. The unjustifiable conduct of individual members of Parliament and others gave rise to the cry of "boodle" which has done the Conservative party so much harm throughout the country, and which made the fight just ended a hard one to win. The Conservative party had to bear the weight of the boodlers' sins, and were it not supported by the Government's railway policy. and particularly by its trade policy. it must have sunk under the burden.

Mr. Blake's equivocal position on the trade question, together with the negative nature of his policy generally, was, in our opinion, the cause of his defeat.

An Independent View.

The Montreal Star (Independent). feb. 24.

There is some difficulty in classifying the members returned for Quebec. They are divided into straight Liberls, straight Conservatives and Nationalists. These last again are divided into Liberal Nationalists and Conservative-Nationalists. The party papers in making out their lists, naturally divide that nu certain element in the way that best suits their own purposes, but as neither party can depend upon their support with certainty, we think it best to set it all down as Independent. According to that classifcation Quebec has returned

Liberal	25
Conservavties	31
In dependents	8

If the Nationalists are counted with the Opposition the Government will have a clear majority of 16. If they vote with the Government then its majority will be 33. If the four Nationalists, Messrs. Coursol, Desjardins Girouard and Dupont rejoin the ranks of the Conseruatives, as in all probability they will Sir John Macdonald's majority out of these already elected will be 24.

NORTH GREY.

	Allen.	Masson.
Owen Sound,		90
Keppple.		14
Holland,		49
Sydenham,	177
Sullivan,		50
Derby,		10
Sarawak,		21

Majority for Masson 57.

SOUTH GREY.

	Landerkin.	Jamieson.
Artemesia'		147
Bentinck,	231
Durham,		74
Egrement,	128
Glenelg,		77
Normanby'	67

Total Majority for Landerkin 189.

FOR SALE.

For sale or to rent for a term of years—50 acres—all cleared well watered, good buildings, 40 acres free from stumps and stones, over which all kinds of machinery can be run 1½ miles from Markdale.

338-41 WM. BROWN.

THE

LATEST!

New Carpets

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Lace Curtains

—AT—

McFarland's.

NewTweeds

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Boots & Shoes

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Ties & Hatf

—AT—

McFarland's.

NEW JUBILEE HANDKERCHIEFS

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Black & Colored Silks at

McFarland's.

My European buyer advises large purchases in New Dress Goods, Muslins, Gloves, Laces, Silks, Parisols, Plushes, &c., &c. Which will exceed all former efforts in style price or quality.

TEA! TEA! TEA!

Two extensive Shipments of pure Japan Tea's received direct from Japan over the C. P. Railway, via British Columbia. Is it not to your interest to purchase your Tea from Headquarters rather than through Peddlers who get their supplies from 3rd class Houses in Toronto or elsewhere, and charge an exhorbitant price to cover expenses in travelling around from house to house. Save your money and come direct to McFarland's the largest Tea Dealer in Grey County.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE SASH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly.

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,

MARKDALE.

GROCERY, POVISION

—AND—

LIQUOR STORE.

A fresh stock of groceries just opened at

DAVIS'S

Store, bought for cash thus saving discounts, and will be sold for spot cash at rock bottom prices.

Japan Tea worth 45 cents selling for 35 cents. Japan Tea worth 55 cents for 45. Gunpowder Tea worth 55 cents for 45. 15 lbs. extra granulated sugar $1, other grades accordingly. Agent for the Liquor Tea Co. A valuable prize given with every six ½ lb. packages bought.

PROVISIONS!

Flour Bran, Shorts, Chop, Screenings, Oatmeal, Cornmeal, &c., &c.

LIQUORS!

Rye and Malt, Port and Native Wine, Brandy, Jamaica, Rum, Scotch Whiskey, the best in the market, also a choice lot Bottled Liquors in finest Brandies, Scotch and Irish Whiskeys, Superior Malt and 5 year old Rye. Parties requiring liquors for medicinal purposes will do well to give us a call as they may rely upon getting a good article.

A. Call Respectfully Solicited,

W. L. Davis,

MARKDALE.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure inspient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh; 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 338-8w.

The Law Concerning Newspapers.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed in his name, or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

2. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted in the place where the paper is published, although the subscriber may reside hundreds of miles away.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post-office or removing and leaving them uncalled for. while unpaid, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

For Sale or to Rent.

A WAGON SHOP, in the Village of Holland Centre, situated on the C. P. R. 16 miles from Owen Sound, a good heavy frame Wagon Shop 24 x 36 ft. with good paint shop and lumber house in connection with it. The above with or without a full stock of good dry lumber will be disposed of on very reasonable terms as the proprietor is giving up business. and leaving this part of the country, for further particulars address or apply to

E. H. NEELANDS, Proprietor,

Holland Centre, Ont. 338-40

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.

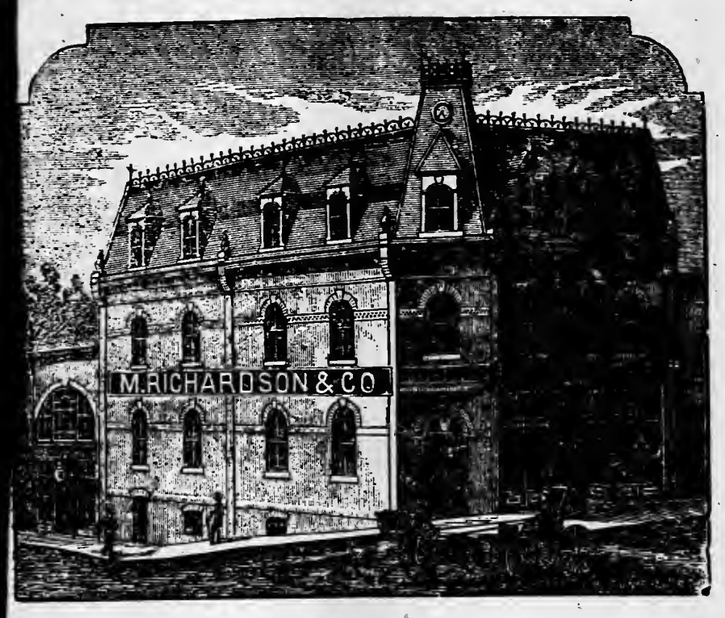
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults

BIRTHS.

FAWCETT.—In Flesherton on Sunday, Feb. 20th 1887, the wife of Mr. A. R. Fawcett, Editor and Proprietor of the ADVANCE, of a daughter.

DEATHS.

WHITBY.—In Artemesia, on the twenty-eighth February, Richard Henry Whitby, aged 31 years.



WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

M. Richardson & Co's.

Annual Clearing Sale

COMMENCING

SATURDAY MARCH 5th,

continuing through the following week.

Come early for choice Bargains in Clothing, Boots, Tweeds, Dress Goods, Mantles, Furs, &c., &c.

ABSTRACT STATEMENT

—OF THE—

Treasurer's Receipts and Expenditure

—FOR THE—

TOWNSHIP OF GLENELG,

For the Year Ending 31 Dec., 1886.

RECEIPTS.		EXPENDITURES.
To Ballance on hand	$ 2392 05	By Salaries & Commissions	$ 527 11
Assessments	10404 05	County Rates	6159 19
J. P. Fines	11 40	School Monies	4682 99
Interest Durham Debenture	24 00	Election Expenses	48 50
N. R. Taxes	427 85	Board of Health	20 00
License fund	269 01	Refund Taxes	4 09
Land Improvement Fund	2536 26	Road Bridge & Surveys	813 50
Clergy Reserve Fund	8 80	Charities	122 64
Miscellaneous	33 31	Printing, Postage & Stationery	115 19
		Sinking Fund & Interest By-law 171	3248 00
		Miscellaneous	116 00
		Balance in Treasurers hands	249 52
	$16106 73		$16106 73

Sinking Fund Account By-law 171.

Dec. 31st, 1886.
To Amount Debentures	$20000 00	By Durham Debenture	$ 400 00
		Amount deposited in Bank, 31st Dec. 1885 as per last audit	8445 48
		Deposit	2000 00
		Interest on bank account	434 50
		Interest on Durham Debenture	24 00
		Amount unpaid	8696 02
	$20000 00		$20000 00

Collectors' Rolls.

No. 1

Amount on Roll	$2528 53	Collected in 1886	$1123 99
		Ballance uncollected	1404 54
	$2528 53		$2528 53

No. 2.

Amount on Roll	$2177 66	Collected	$2094 17
		Ballance uncollected	83 49
	$2177 66		$2177 66

No. 3.

Amount on Roll	$3305 02	Collected	$2350 50
		Ballance uncollected	954 52
	$3305 02		$3305 02

No. 4.

Amount on Roll	$2293 79	Collected	$1501 00
		Ballance uncollected	792 79
	$2293 79		$2293 79

We the undersigned Auditors have examined the Books, Accounts and Vouchers of the Treasurer of the Municipality of the Township of Glenelg, for the year 1886, and find them correct with a cash ballance on hand of $249.52 as shown in detailed statement. We also give a statement of Sinking Fund Account and of Collectors' Rolls, all of which is hereto apoended. We have much pleasure in testifying to the clear intelligent and satisfactory manner in which the Treasurer keeps the books.

ADAM TURNER,
JOHN NICHOL, } Auditors.

—NEW—

Harware.

To builders and those about to build your wants supplied at reasonable rates.

IN STOCK

☞ NAILS, GLASS, PUTTY, HINGES, BUTTS, SCREWS, DOOR HANDLES, TOWER BOLTS, CHAIN BOLTS, HAMMERS, CHISSELS, SAWS, BRACES, BITTS, CUTTERY, LAMPS, LAMP GLOBES, &c.

OILS, LEADS AND COLORS!

—all pure goods—

PAINTS ground and mixed any shade ready for the brush in quantities from one pint up, guaranteed free from all alkalies and other foreign substances.

Full Lines in Tinwore at bottom prices.

CALL AND SEE US IT WILL PAY YOU.

Note the place the sign of the cross cutt saw.

E. MABEE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to bnsiness and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confdence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

Auction Sale

—OF—

Valuable Village Property.

In the Village of Markdale, in the County of Grey, there will be sold on Monday the 7th day of March, 1887, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon at the Markdale House, Markdale, in the Village, by virtue of Power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage—which will be produced at the Sale, the following property. Under Mortgage from John Montgomery, lot eight on the South side of Mill Street in the said Village of Markdale having a frontage of three roads by a depth of twelve rods containing one quarter of an acre more or less. The following improvements are said to be on the premises, having erected thereon a rough-cast dwelling, stable, bake shops and sheds.

TERMS:—20 per cent of the purchase money to be paid down on the day of sale. For balance terms will be maid known at the sale.

For further particulars apply to

JONES BROS. & MACKENZIE,

Solicitors, Toronto Street, Toronto

Or to JOHN LYONS, Esq., Markdale, Ont.

Partnership Notice.

DR'S SPROULE & BRODIE, have entered into a partnership for the practice of their profession. Dr. Sproule will be found at his old office Turner's Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his office Mathew's new block. 333-48

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for further particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
Holland Centre P. O.

338-48

"HURRAH"

FOR THE NEW YEAR

AND

Good Bye to the Old One.

'HURRAH'

FOR

The New Drug Store,

which is still in Markdale, and the place to get cured of your many ills, in the shape of a little Soothing Syrup, Paregoric, Teething Powders or a Rubber Ring; Should they fail, then resort to a box of

STEPHEN'S

PARNELL DUBLIN DOGERS.

SHOULDER BRACES!
SHOULDER BRACES!
Ladies and Gents,
SHOULDER BRACES!

Pure Cream of Tartar, Fine Baking Soda, Mustard, Ginger, Pepper, Cloves, Allspices, ground and unground of the finest grades.

School Books! School Books! and Stationary at

STEPHEN'S Drug Store.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have re-moved to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,

R. S. RAE,

Markdale

HAMPDEN

WATCHES

DURABLE-:-RELIABLE.

—ALSO—

Waltham, Elgin and Colombiers,

—IN STOCK—

American Clocks, Silverware, Wedding Rings.

☞ Watch repairing and fitting Spectacles a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,

A RELIABLE JEWELLER,

MARKDALE

XMAS GOODS.

NEW GOODS ARRIVING EVERY

—WEEK AT—

RUSSELL'S

Noted Jewellry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Consisting of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES, CLOCKS, JEWELRY, SPECTACLES, SILVER-WARE, FORKS, SPOONS, KNIVES, Fancy MIRRORS, ALBUMS, VIOLINS &c.

Any one looking for Xmas presents will do well to call at RUSSELL'S, Flesherton, a fine stock to select from, and prices very low, It your watch or clock wants repairing, RUSSELL'S is the place to take it: A satisfactory job every time, ☞ Remember,

JAS. G. RUSSEL'S

Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRAITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monnments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE,

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 13, CON., 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation, well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY
Berkley.

31-t

Priceville Roller Mill.

THE NEW MILL IS NOW COMPLETED and in full working order. The roller process is thorough in every respect and a full line of rolls.

THE HIGHEST CASH PRICE will be paid for any quantity of Wheat.

Positively no credit will be given in the Mill.

The Saw Mill is doing splendid work. Bring in your logs and you can get the lumber home with you.

First-Class Planer and Matcher.

Mr. John McLeod manages the Saw Mill which I hope is a sufficient guarantee for good work.

ROBERT McGOWAN.

LOST IN A BLIZZARD.

Terrible Suffering of Travellers in a Stage Coach.

The Benton stage the other night brought in the three passengers who were on the belated stage that was storm-bound eighteen miles south of Benton from Thursday until Friday evening. They were J. W. Montgomery, from the Judith, and I. Edenholm and Wm. Morgan, two discharged soldiers from Fort Assinaboine. From a member of the party your correspondent gathers the following story of their terrible experience :

They left Benton at 7 o'clock Thursday morning in a blinding snowstorm. It was not then, however, very cold, but rapidly grew colder. They lost the road several times, and made slow progress until nearly nightfall, when the horses became too much exhuasted to proceed further with the conveyance. The driver, Charles S. Fox, thought they were within five miles of Twenty-eight Mile Spring, one of the stage stations. It was here decided to send the two soldiers to the station with the horses for relief. They accordingly started, but after making about five miles one of the horses gave out entirely and the other was too badly used up to be of service. They then tied the animals to a telegraph pole and started off on foot. They had not gone far when one of them sank powerless to the ground. His companion, however, recognizing that certain death would be his fate if left behind, literally dragged him the remaining distance to the station which proved to be five miles. Upon arrival at the Spring they endeavored to organize a party to return to the abandoned stage, but the storm was raging with such fury that no one could be found who would volunteer to make the attempt until the afternoon of the next day. In the meantime the driver and Montgomery, becoming alarmed at the non-arrival of assistance, determined to set out to the Spring on foot. They were th oroughly benumbed, and it was only with the greatest exertion that they travelled a distance of about five miles, when they became bewildered and nearly exhausted.

Realizing that they had lost their reckoning, they concluded to return to the stage. When within a mile of their starting point, Fox declared he would go no further and his companion left him staggering around a telegraph pole and feebly beating it with his hands to keep up circulation. Montgomery struggled on and finally reached the stage and fell over it utterly helpless. The sun came out brightly soon afterwards and he revived sufficiently to pull the robes about him. When a rescuing party found Fox he was still at the telegraph pole and eating snow. Montgomery was found at the stage eating oats.

They had no food nor drink for thirty-six hours, and the horrors of hunger and thirst added to the terrors of the situation. The benighted wanderers were taken to the station, where they found that beyond the serious frosting of there extremities they were apparently in a condition to proceed on their journey, except Fox, the driver, who was taken back to Benton for medical assistance on account of the critical condition of his arms and limbs, which were badly frozen. As soon as the storm had abated the others resumed their journey, all suffering severely from the terrible adventure, and at noon Montgomery's mind began to waver under the strain of his terrible experience and suffering. By night he was totally insane and had to be tied to his seat. He was taken to the hospital and medical assistance summoned. His condition is very serious, but nothing definite can yet be said of his ultimate recovery. The other two men are not suffering greatly and are out on the streets.

Valentines.

When asked "Who was St. Valentine, and why should this day be celebrated by sending love messages and pictures?" one is puzzled to answer. There are several saints of the name on the calendar, but there is no evidence that any of them ever had anything to do with the modern customs of celebrating Feb. 14. Nor is it minutely certain how these customs grew up; but their basis was pretty certainly one of those dark and foul primeval ceremonies whose shadows still survive in so many pretty graceful customs, full of fragrance and their origin forgotten. February in the Old world was always reckoned the mating time of birds; and in ages of communism and nature-worship, a savage semi religious custom grew up of "pairing off" males and females of the human species for the ensuing year in the middle of this month. This was done by lot, the young people of a neighborhood meeting and the names of the girls being placed in a box, from which the young men drew them: the girl whose name was drawn was the "valentine" for the year to the young man who drew it—that is he possessed her for that period. This was gradually softened into paying her attentions as to a betrothed wife, giving her presents, etc.,—these mock engagements of course often leading to real ones, and also of course leading to a good deal of mischief. The early Christian bishops, unable to suppress this lecherous pagan festival, made a Christian holiday of it as of the "Saturnalia" and others, connected it with religious observances and expurgated its grossness as much as possible; and it is largely due to their influence that even the quasi betrothals, themselves an innocent shell of the past, gave place to sending messages and love tokens. A St. Valentine may have been istrumental in this reform; but it is most probable that the connection with his day is purely accidental. The "Valentine" used to be a pleasant letter, ornamented with cut paper and other devices by the sender, the chief point being to keep from the one who received it the name of the giver. Of late years, they are made for sale; some of them being marvels of cut and embossed paper, and pictures, grading all the way down to vile and insulting caricatures, which no decent person would look at much less purchase. While the young people made their own valentines the custom was a pretty one, and in a country neighborhood often gave rise to much pleasant guessing, since they are made by machinery, the sending of them has lost its charm, the kind sent being governed by the length of the sender,s purse.

A man having fallen down in a fit in a tailor's shop, an envious rival said :—"That's the only fit ever seen in that establishment."

Accepted Lover—My life is in your hands; dispose of me. I will do everything you wish me to do. Maiden of His Choice—Ah! well then, bring me to-morrow sixpenny worth of gray worsted as you pass the shop.

A Curiosity of Commerce.

Along the northeast coast of Africa, south of Cape Guardafui, there are no towns worth mentioning for some hundreds of miles. The Somali natives who live along the coast have had scarcely any dealings with white traders. A little while ago a smart fire in Aden made up their minds that by maintaining regular communications with this coast they would be able to build up a good trade. They therefore bought a little steam vessel and sent their agents along the coast to tell the natives that at certain times, if they would look out on the sea, they would see a steamer coming, laden with beautiful goods, to give them in exchange for hides, palm oil, and the other products of the Somali region.

The little vessel has now made several trips, and the experiment has proved a great success. Knowing that they may expect the steamer at the date fixed, the natives for many miles in the interior flock to the shore at the different points where the vessel stops. A large crowd well burdened with objects of exchange waits the steamer, which anchors off the coast while trading-boats put ashore, and a lively market is soon in progress where a few hours before nothing could be seen but the wide-stretching sands that border this coast.

The goods that are most in demand among these new customers of the whites are Venetian glass-ware and American cotton shirtings. They drive very fair bargains, and it is noteworthy that the poor stuffs they bought at first they now discard for better goods. The same keenness has been observed among other African natives. The Congo tribes, for instance, will not touch now the poor jack-knives and flimsy cottons they were greedy for a few years ago. The grades of goods that the Congo State now takes to Africa for bartering purposes along the river coast is on an average, from 60 to 100 per cent. more than the goods that were sold to the natives six or seven years ago.

The Towers of Silence.

When the hour of death is at hand the dying Parsee is carried down to the cellar, or the lowest room in the house—with what notion I failed to learn. Afterward the body is borne to a great burial tower, there to be exposed to the winds of heaven, the burning sun, the beating rain, and all the host of foul carrion birds. Some rich families have a private tower of their own, a sort of family mausoleum. The public burial towers, of which there are five, stand on Malabar Hill, in a garden of flowering shrubs over-looking the sea. Here, amid fragrant bowers of roses and jessamine, stand these towers of Silence, as they are called, ghastly receptacles for the dead. They are about 30 feet high and 60 feet wide. On the top of each is an open grating on which the bodies are laid in three circles; children in the centre, then the women and men at the outer edge. Innumerable birds of prey are forever hovering with their sharp hungry cries round these towers, or sitting perched on them, solemnly waiting for the grateful feast that is never long delayed—a feast which daily averages three Parsees, besides women and children, for it is estimated that each day three of these prosperous, intelligent, well-to-do-looking merchants find their last resting place in the voracious maws of these ravenous birds. And when the birds have done their part, and winds and sun and rain have all combined to whiten the skeleton to a thing like polished ivory, gradually the bones separate and fall through the open grating into a well below the tower, whence, it is said, they are taken by a subterranean passage and cast into the sea, and so the space is left clear for the next comers.

British India.

The territories of the Indian Government comprise an area of 853,000 square miles, with a population of 184,000,000. Besides, they hold in trust for native Governments, and rule as British territory, two States—Mysore and Berar—which contain an additional area of 47,000 square miles and a population of about 7,000,000. In addition, indirect control is exercised over a large number of native states, in some instances through the immediate superintendence of the Government of India, in others by that of the local Government to which they are contiguous. The area thus superintended is about 575,000 square miles, with a population estimated at 49,000,000. Of these the Government of India has under its immediate superintendence states with an aggregate population of 29,500,000; the states superintended by the Punjab Government have a population of 5,500,000; those attached to Bombay and Madras 7,750,000 respectively. Bengal superintends native states with populations aggregating 2,500,000.

Pussy's Labor-Saving Methods.

Mrs. T. J. Hammond, of Brunswick, Mo., owns what she is pleased to term a very knowing cat and the feline certainly exhibits very rare intelligence. It is a large and beautiful Maltese, less than a year old, and has been taught to perform a number of tricks very unusual for a cat, one of which is to ring a chestnut bell, and it frequently turns the laugh on Mrs. Hammond by making the bell tinkle when she is recounting some freak of its intelligence. When the cat feels that a mouse would be an addition to its bill of fare it brings the trap to Mrs. Hammond to be set and then goes frequently to see if the desired mouse has been caught. When such is the case the trap is again taken to some one by Puss, who will remove the mouse for it. It makes no effort to catch mice in the ordinary way, preferring, apparently, the invention of man as an easier way to obtain a sweet morsel.

Let The World Know It.

You can purchase a bottle of Polson's Nerviline, the greatest pain remedy in the world. Nerviline cures headache, neuralgia, toothache, pains in the side or back, rheumatism, &c. As an internal remedy, Nerviline is prompt, effective and pleasant to take. Nerviline has no equal as a pain-subduing remedy, and a test bottle costs only 10 cents. Call on your druggist and invest 10 cents. Nerviline, Nerviline, nerve pain cure.

She—Why, Charles, how can you call Miss James plain? I wish I were half as good looking as she is. He—You are, Hattie, and you know it. At last advices Hattie was endeavoring to decide whether she ought to be pleased or offended at the compliment.

[illegible]

Men Look Once More on Conrad, de Sternberg, Who Died in 1154.

An interesting account is given in some German papers of the discovery a little time ago, in the Cathedral of Worms, of the body of a mediæval Bishop who has been identified as Conrad de Sternberg, who died in 1154, being a cotemporary of our Henry II., and of the great German Emperor, Frederick Barbarossa. During the progress of some restorations which are being carried out in the Cathedral, a stone coffin was found deep under the floor of the choir. It was closely cemented, and on its being opened in presence of a special commission, the body was found in perfect preservation, and arrayed in vestments denoting Episcopal rank. On the head is a low miter, the lower border of which is formed by a band of thick gold embroidery, of a lozenge-shaped pattern; the fillets of the miter are composed of the same sort of work, with deep, heavy gold fringes. The peaks of the miter have their edges adorned by similar embroidery.

The alb and amice are made of thin linen, very openly woven. The chasuble, of the old bell shape, is made of a very thick twilled silk, and falls in long folds around the body, forming sort of pad round the neck. In the usual way, a richly embroidered band runs perpendicularly down the front; it has no special design. The edges of the chasuble are simply hemmed. The tunics under the chasuble are also of silk. The upper one is of lighter texture; it shows a pattern consisting of lozenges connected by rays. The under tunic shows a very fine interlacing pattern of geometrical design. The stole is worn crossed on the breast, the lower portions being broader than the upper. Its ornamentation is a pattern of scale-like design, which shows alternately figures of lions and birds set in a pattern of fine traced leaves. The girdle is of silk, but only long and untwisted strands remain. The feet and legs up to the knees are covered with silk stockings which seem to be of a fine network texture. Three broad parallel bands and as many smaller ones are wound round in spiral fashion and fasten them.

The shoes, which come up above the ankle, and have two deep slits, are made of gold brocade; they are ornamented by circular embroideries sewed on. The soles of the shoes are of leather. The pastoral staff lies in the arms from the right shoulder to left foot. It is of soft wood, ending with a ferule and spike; at the top there is a spherical ball of hammered bronze, out of which issues a crook of soft wood, which ends in a bronze lily set in a square socker. At the feet stands the chalice, also of soft wood, very finely turned; the cup is a hemisphere, and on it rests the patina.

Pointers for Advertisers.

Don't expect an advertisement to bear fruit in one night. You can't eat enough in a week to last you a year, and you can't advertise on that plan either.

People who advertise only once in three months, forget that most folks can not remember anything longer then about seven days.

If you can arouse curiosity by an advertisement, it is a great point gained. The fair sex don't hold all the curiosity in the world.

Baby Must be a Hard Drinker.

A new baby had arrived at little Johnny's residence, and the youngster was admitted to take his first look at the little stranger.

He surveyed it calmly for a moment, and then, looking up, exclaimed enthusiastically:

"His face is just the color of Uncle George's. Gosh, but he must be a hard drinker!"

A holiday was once offered to the boys at Eton on condition that they could discover an English word containing all the vowels in regular order. In a very little while one of them shouted out, "Abstemiously," and another, Facetioeusly," amid the shouts of their companions.

Tommy was a little rogue, whom his mother had hard work to manage. Their house in the country was raised a few feet from the ground, and Tommy to escape a well deserved whipping, ran from his mother and crept under the house. Presently the father came home, and hearing where the boy had taken refuge, crept under to bring him out. As he approached on his hands and knees, Tommy asked, "Is she after you, too?"

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular. The second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto Canada.

Economy is of itself a great revenue.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

Let the Bible be thy standard classic.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

All the way to heaven is heaven,

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

Our sorrow is the inverted image of our nobleness.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A. P. 322.

SAUSAGE CASINGS.

New shipment from England, Ex-Steamship "Norwegian." Lowest prices to the trade. We are sole agents in Canada for McBride's Celebrated Sheep Casings. Write for quotations.

JAMES PARK & SON Toronto.

SNOW DRIFT THERE'S FAVORITE! THERE IS NO BAKING POWDER BETTER!

The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford, Ont

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Antique Bronze, Natural Wood, and other Picture and Room, Mouldings, Frames, Etc Paintings, Engravings, Etchings, Artotypes, Artists' Materials, Mirrors, etc. Wholesale and Retail. Trade Catalogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO., Toronto.

MANGLES, 3 kinds; Clothes Wringers, 10 kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries.

HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO

MANUFACTURE ONLY

FINEST

Silver Plated Ware.

Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish.

HAMILTON, ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly

For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A Allan Portland, Boston Montreal

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties.

J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING ST EAST
TORONTO

SEEDS

RENNIE'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST.

Illustrated Catalogue for 1887

Containing description and prices of the choicest

FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS

Mailed free. Every Farmer and Gardener should have a copy before ordering seeds for the coming season. Handsomest catalogue published in Canada

Wm RENNIE, TORONTO

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address: DR. H. G. ROOT,

Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

6 PER CENT. MONEY—INTEREST YEARLY. —no commission; Mortgages purchased. R. H. TEMPLE, 23 Toronto Street.

NORFOLK COUNTY—75 ACRES, CLAY LOAM. For sale—one mile south of Simcoe; about 4 acres wood; living spring; (no house), barn 50 x 8. GEO. STANTON, Simcoe, Ont.

100,000 SHEETS OF 5 & 10c. MUSIC; 'Songs Without Words,' 'Dance Music,' 'Songs and Dances,' 'Operatic Selections,' 'Gems of Ballads,' 'Popular Songs,' 'Comic Songs,' 'Irish Songs,' 'Scotch Songs,' 'Sacred Songs,' 'Christy Minstrel Songs,' 'Banjo Songs,' 'Guitar Songs,' 'Violin Songs,' 'Flute Songs,' 'Cornet Songs,' 'Flageolet Songs,' 'Concertina Songs,' 'Accordeon Songs,' 'Flute and Violin Songs,' 'Violin and Guitar Songs,' 'Violin and Flageolet Songs,' 'Violin and Concertina Songs,' 'Violin and Accordeon Songs,' 'Flute and Guitar Songs,' 'Flute and Flageolet Songs,' 'Flute and Concertina Songs,' 'Flute and Accordeon Songs,' 'Guitar and Flageolet Songs,' 'Guitar and Concertina Songs,' 'Guitar and Accordeon Songs,' 'Flageolet and Concertina Songs,' 'Flageolet and Accordeon Songs,' 'Concertina and Accordeon Songs,' 'Violin, Guitar and Flageolet Songs,' 'Violin, Guitar and Concertina Songs,' 'Violin, Guitar and Accordeon Songs,' 'Violin, Flageolet and Concertina Songs,' 'Violin, Flageolet and Accordeon Songs,' 'Violin, Concertina and Accordeon Songs,' 'Guitar, Flageolet and Concertina Songs,' 'Guitar, Flageolet and Accordeon Songs,' 'Guitar, Concertina and Accordeon Songs,' 'Flageolet, Concertina and Accordeon Songs,' 'Violin, Guitar, Flageolet and Concertina Songs,' 'Violin, Guitar, Flageolet and Accordeon Songs,' 'Violin, Guitar, Concertina and Accordeon Songs,' 'Violin, Flageolet, Concertina and Accordeon Songs,' 'Guitar, Flageolet, Concertina and Accordeon Songs,' 'Violin, Guitar, Flageolet, Concertina and Accordeon Songs.'

SONGS 100 new and popular songs sent free to all who send 4 cents to pay postage. 100 pieces choice music 6c. Catalogue free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont. Began the Third Year Sept. 1st, having already received patronage from Ten States and Provinces. Young men and boys thoroughly prepared for business pursuits; graduates eminently successful; special courses in Shorthand, French and German; ladies admitted. For terms, etc., address

A. MacCORMICK Principal.

THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD), OF LONDON, ENG.

Capital, £260,000. Dominion Government Deposit £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St. East, Toronto. Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts.

A. T. McCORD,
Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

Seeds! FRESH, AND SURE to grow—Of all the Choicest Flowers.

Select stock of Fruit Trees, Grapevines, Spruce Hedge Plants, Ornamental Trees, Choicest New Roses, Bulbs, Decorative Plants, and English Holly. Cut Flowers, Wedding Bouquets, of superior quality, on short notice.

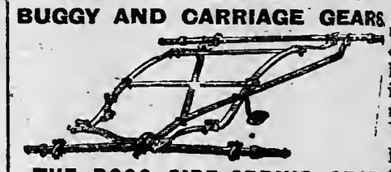
H. SLIGHT NURSERYMAN, TORONTO

R. SPENCE & CO.

Consumers will find it to their advantage to ask the trade for our make of Files and Rasps. Re-Cutting a Specialty. Send for price list and terms.

HAMILTON - ONT.

CONBOY'S IMPROVED



CARRIAGE TOPS are famous for their style, convenience, durability and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. All the leading Carriage Builders sell them.

Factory: 407 King St. W., TORONTO

ARMSTRONG'S

BUGGY AND CARRIAGE GEARS

THE BOSS SIDE-SPRING GEAR

Has many advantages over any other side spring gear, and will undoubtedly be a great favorite. The bent tempered steel plate perches allow the body to set very low, IT TURNS SHORT, rides very easy and has no SWINGING or UNDUE MOTION. Suitable for straight or phaeton bodies. PRICES RIGHT. Send for our descriptive circular.

J. B. ARMSTRONG M'F'G CO. (Ld.), GUELPH, Canada

FOR ONE CENT

TENANT FARMERS, SMALL FARMERS, MECHANICS, and business men or capitalists, who wish to make a change for health or profit, can get valuable information FREE, by sending your address on postal card to

J. M. HUCKINS,
26 King St. West,
Toronto.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.

Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

The National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE

23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.

All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

CONSUMPTION.

I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.

DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

Confederation LIFE ASSOCIATION

GUARANTEE CAPITAL, $1,000 000.

HEAD OFFICE, TORONTO, ONT. - - - A HOME COMPANY.

President.—HON. SIR W. P. HOWLAND, C.B., K.C.M.G.
Vice-Presidents.—HON. WM. McMASTER, WM. ELLIOT, ESQ.

Directors.
HON. CHIEF JUSTICE MACDONALD,
W. H. BEATTY, ESQ.,
EDWARD HOOPER, ESQ.,
J. HERBERT MASON, ESQ.,
HON. JAMES YOUNG,
M. P. RYAN, ESQ.,
S. NORDHEIMER, ESQ.,
W. H. GIBBS, ESQ.,
A. McLEAN HOWARD, ESQ.,
J. D. EDGAR, ESQ.,
WALTER S. LEE, ESQ.,
A. L. GOODERHAM, ESQ.,

Managing Director—J. K. MACDONALD.

The Association has been fifteen years in operation, during which time $915,000 has been returned to the Policy Holders

This year (1886) closes the third Quinquennial Period. It is expected there will be a surplus of over $350,000. The surplus at December 31st, 1885, being $282,199.

Guarantee Capital and Assets now over $2,800,000. Policies in force over $14,000,000.

Policies Non-Forfeitable after two years, and after three years Indefeasible.

BRICK MACHINES.

—WITH ALL THE—
LATEST IMPROVEMENTS.

SPRING PRESS BOX, - WHITE OAK POSTS, - AND IRON BRACES.

Over 500 of our Machines now in use and no complaints. Prices and Terms to suit buyers. Send for circulars.

The E. & C. GURNEY CO.,
TORONTO, ONT.

RIFT AND SPRAY,

OR,

LOVE AND VENGEANCE AMONG THE SMUGGLERS.

THE MOST FASCINATING OCEAN ROMANCE SINCE THE DAYS OF COOPER AND MARYATT.

CHAPTER XXX.—THE PORT ADMIRAL RECEIVES PRISONERS AND VISITORS.

It was considerably in advance of the little party, which comprised his daughter, Grace, in its members, that Captain Morton arrived at the house of Admiral Sir Thomas Clifford, with Mrs. Wagner.

Sir Thomas was, in fact, pondering over the letter he had received from Dolan, and wondered what he had better do in the matter—for he feared it was a snare altogether—when Captain Morton was announced to him.

The welcome of Sir Thomas Clifford was warm and friendly, and in reply to Morton's apologetic expressions for leaving him so abruptly, he said:

"My dear friend, say not a word about it. You were quite right and quite justified, and I am in hope that you have something of a satisfactory nature to tell me."

"But little. I am as one in possession of a sealed book, within which may be all the information he seeks, but which he lacks the means of opening."

"How so, Captain?" said the admiral.

Thereupon, Captain Morton told Sir Thomas Clifford all that had passed since he had seen him, and of the capture and presence of Mrs. Wagner.

The admiral listened with the greatest interest and then he said:

"It was through the information, Captain Morton, you have brought me, and which you had got from that dying man, Hutchins, that we have been enabled to do what we have done against this Dolan and his gang. Read this letter and it will let us into another phase of this transaction, and one which may possibly be productive of important results."

Captain Morton read the letter with the most absorbing interest, and then he said:

"This is from Dolan?"

"Doubtless, although it is anonymous. There is abundance of evidence on that head. What do you think of it?'

"That the rascal intends to make his escape, and leave all his companions to the law."

"Yes, and the probability is, that he is gone already."

"It is more than likely. But now, admiral, I am a father—my heart is riven with distress. I have suffered so many shocks of late, that I am getting weak-hearted. I implore you to assist me in the recovery of my child, at once. I think this woman, Wagner, knows where she is. Will you procure her safety and indemnity, if she discloses the secret to me?"

"I will do my utmost; for, as I have before told you, I, too, am a bereaved father."

"You have hinted as much."

"Yes, my boy—my poor boy! Stolen from me, years and years ago, by whom I know not—hardly in fact know how, so confused and heart-stricken am I at times about it. Believe me, Captain Morton, although I have long since given up all hope of ever finding my own child, I will use every possible energy and power I possess to restore her to yours."

Captain Morton thanked the admiral by the pressure of the hand, which said much more than words could do; and then the admiral rang the bell, and the sailor-servant made his appearance.

"Where have the police placed the prisoner they brought with them?"

"North by east."

"Oh! the red room, you mean!"

"Ay, ay, sir! She came in under convoy, sir, and now that Mr. Tickley has come to port."

"What, Mr. Tickley, the magistrate?"

"Yes, admiral, you see sir, the master-at-arms."

"The who?"

"Lord, don't mind me! Whenever I sees a policeman, I think o' the master-at-arms; but you see, admiral, that's the sort of policemen on board ship; and commonly speaking, more sneaking, shore-going lubberly rascal there isn't between the planks than that same master-at-arms. Lord love you, gentlemen, there was a fellow—who was master-at-arms on board of our ship, once, and more murdering rogue couldn't be."

"Well, well, that will do. Say to Mr. Tickley that I should be glad to see him here."

"Ay, ay, sir."

In a few moments a little sharp visaged man was shown into the room; and having a peculiarity of bowing sideways, it imparted a oddity to his address that very much enlisted the attention of strangers.

"Glad to see you, admiral. Your servant, sir. In the commission of peace, sir, I—"

"No, Mr. Tickley. This is an American gentleman. Mr. Tickley—Captain Morton."

"Glad to see you, sir; very glad to see you, sir, indeed. Well, admiral, the sergeant sent for me, I suppose, to make a report with you on some matters?"

"Yes—no doubt. As we are both magistrates, we can act together. There is a woman in custody charged with complicity in a case of smuggling. She is in possession of information that this gentleman wants, and I want, as the price of that information, to set her go."

"Hem!"

"You know, Mr. Tickley, we always have, where women and men were jointly concerned in smuggling affairs, let the woman go."

"Yes, but—ahem! This woman is alone—"

A rap came at the door of the room.

"Come in."

The sergeant of police approached and saluted the admiral.

"More prisoners, sir, sent in by Lieutenant Anderson, who took them in a boat in the bay last night. The lieutenant will be here, sir, in about half an hour."

"Men? Men among them?"

"Yes, admiral."

"Very good. That will do. Mr. Tickley, that disposes of your little objection." The admiral placed a stress on the word "little," which Captain Morton thanked him by a look.

"Well, well, admiral, I have no particular objection—none in the world—only one don't like dangerous precedents, but I'm willing to oblige this gentleman (here Mr. Tickley made one of his odd side bows,) I would do much—much. Suppose you see her here, admiral, and she may say at once what this gentleman (here came another of the oblique bows) requires."

The admiral and Captain Morton both willingly acceded to this suggestion, and Mrs. Wagner, between two of the police, was ushered into the room. The moment she saw Captain Morton she called out:

"My thousand pounds—give me my thousand pounds, sir—I want my thousand pounds!"

"What does she mean?" said Mr. Tickley.

"Simply, said Captain Morton, "that I told her I would give her a thousand pounds if she brought me my daughter, of whose place of retreat or concealment I believe her to be aware."

"Give me my money!" cried Mrs. Wagner, "my thousand pounds. Give me my money and let me go."

"Silence, woman," said the admiral, sternly. "What you are brought here for is to be committed to prison by myself and brother magistrate here for your ascertained complicity in the smuggling transactions of Dolan."

"Dolan? Dolan? Who said Dolan?"

"I did. But if you at once state where Captain Morton's daughter is to be found I will not make out the order of your committal, and if she be restored to the captain in safety through your information I will let you go free. Eh, Mr. Tickley?"

"Hem! ah, yes!"

"And my thousand pounds?" said Mrs. Wagner.

"You shall have them!" said Captain Morton.

"Nay, nay!" cried the admiral. "That is too bad!"

"Permit me," added Captain Morton. "Permit me. I have said that I would give this woman a thousand pounds upon the restoration of my child through her means. And my word having been given she will have the money."

"My dear sir," said Mr. Tickley, "will you allow me to shake hands with you? I will honor you my dear sir—ahem! for you must be very well off, indeed."

Mrs. Wagner looked eagerly from one to the other of the party, and then she said:

"Let me fetch the child. I will bring her here in two hours. Let me go for her?"

"The captain will be content if you tell him where to go for her," said the admiral.

"Yes," cried Captain Morton.

"No," said Mrs. Wagner, "you would not get her—you could not get her. I only can get her."

There was a pause of doubt.

"You failed before," said Captain Morton.

"Dolan stopped me; he overheard me promise you and he stopped me. That was how it was. And even now—oh, if you could but catch him! Then all would be well. Let me go, though, and I will bring you the girl."

"Where is she?"

Mrs. Wagner was silent for a moment.

"You said the cavern in the cliff?"

"No. Well, if I did, and if you think there is a cavern in the cliff go and try and get into it."

"She is there—my child is there."

"She is. Promise me the thousand pounds and I will tell you all. Shall I have the money?"

"My daughter?"

"I will tell all and I will restore the child, too. Dolan has a thousand pounds of powder in the caverns. No one knows where it is but me. If he should find himself in danger all will perish. Your daughter, sir, is in the caverns. I will find her and bring her to you if you will let me go, for the more I think the more I feel sure that he will rather kill her than let you take her from him by force. But I will tell you all. I will explain it all to you and then you will give me the money if I go and fetch the girl. Her name is Grace. She used to think herself the daughter of Dolan, but his ill-usage of her——"

"Good God!" cried Captain Morton, as he sprang to his feet. "Has the villain dared to lay a hand on my child?"

"I have seen him strike her against the rock."

"No—no! Oh, spare me! Do not tell me—you will kill me! Do not tell me that—oh, that I could meet him face to face, the villain—the more than villain!"

"Listen," said Mrs. Wagner, in a solemn tone of voice; "Listen and I will tell you all. There is a sea-cave in the cliff, where now the cutter Rift rides at anchor. The whole cliff is full of caverns and passages in the chalk, and there is but one entrance from the sea; and another, a small hole among the weeds and shrubs, in the narrow road that leads from the beach to the top of the cliff. There are holes in the face of the cliff high up, which they use as lookout stations; but those can't be got at in any way except from within the cliff."

"But you speak nonsense," said the admiral. "How can the cutter lie in a sea-cave and we not know it?"

"Over the entrance to the cave there is drawn a mass of old sails, all soaked in chalk, and discolored with sea-weed and sea-water. You might sail past them in a boat within fifty feet, and not know the difference between them and the rock itself."

"Can this be possible?"

"It is so. You may know the place, for it is exactly under the old flag-staff on the cliff-top."

"The old staff that has stood so long, because nobody will risk their lives by going to take it down—the portion of cliff on which it stands is so undercut?"

"Yes, that is it. Immediately beneath that, springing from the water's edge, is the covered entrance to the sea-cave where Dolan and the Rift and all his crew are now, and where she took refuge from the Spray."

"It must be so."

"It is so, sir."

"And that," added the admiral, "then at once accounts for the disappearance of the cutter amid the smoke of her own guns and those of the Spray. Well, it is not altogether so very absurd of Captain Gray to think he has sunk her—she slipped into her sea-cave."

"She did. She lies there now; and there Captain Morton, is your child Grace. And there, too—ha!"

Mrs. Wagner smiled.

"What would you say?"

"We shall see—one at a time. There are other fish in the sea besides one worth a thousand pounds. It's well to have two strings to one's bow, and I've the second one—ha! ha! I feel quite safe now I think of it."

"Come, sweet woman, what say you, Mr. Tickley?"

"No levity here, if you please."

"You hold your tongue, sir," said Mrs. Wagner—who appeared to feel herself mistress of the situation—"your hold your tongue, sir, and go and cheat the poor men in your chalk-pits, by making them take bad soap and bad flour—mouldy, sir—and bad candles and bad cheese, as a good part of their wages. Go along, do."

"Good gracious!" cried Mr. Tickley.

"What do I hear? Hem! O Lord! I appeal to you, Captain—a—a—Horton—"

"Morton."

"I beg your pardon. Morton I appeal to you, sir, as a man evidently with means, if this is to be borne?"

"I know nothing about it, sir," said Captain Morton.

"There, woman, you hear, Captain Morton knows nothing about it—Captain Morton, a gentleman of extensive means, knows nothing about it."

"This is all irrelevant," said the Admiral. "Come in."

A tap had come to the door of the room. The sergeant of Police appeared with a slip of paper in his hands.

"Beg pardon, gentlemen, but this is the list of prisoners Lieutenant Andersen has brought in, and he is in the dining-room below."

"Are the prisoners there?"

"Yes, sir."

"Ask Lieutenant Anderson to do me the favor of stepping this way. Let me see the list."

"Yes, Admiral."

CHAPTER XXXI.—GRACE MORTON FINDS HER FATHER.

Admiral Sir Thomas Clifford took the list in his hand, and as he did so a strange faint flutter—he knew not why—came over the heart of Captain Morton.

"You don't look well, sir," said Mr. Tickley; "you, sir, a man of means. Really, I often think, do you know, sir, that men of means ought never to be ill—never? Common people, sir—low people without means—"

"One moment, if you please," said the admiral.

Captain Morton sat down and placed his hand upon his heart, he knew not why.

The admiral commenced reading:

Nominal list of persons arrested in a boat on the high seas by Lieutenant Anderson, R. N., and commanding the C. G. at Falmouth station.

SIMON MARTIN, seaman.

JOSEPH RATLIN, seaman.

CHARLES OLYMPUS DEFRAIN SUFFLES, attorney-at-law.

CAPTAIN EDQUARDE DE MOCQUET, French merchant service.

GERALD (this person refuses to give his surname, on the plea that he does not know it.) He is believed to be a son of Captain Dolan (so-called), the smuggler.

The admiral looked up.

"That, Captain Morton, is the young ruffian who is spoken of in Dolan's letter, and now it appears he likewise repudiates him as a son."

"Yes, admiral."

Captain Morton spoke faintly and looked very pale:

"You are not well, my dear friend."

"I don't know how it is, but the air feels thick about me and there is a strange sensation about my heart, as though something were about to happen in which I should be so largely interested, that it would almost suffice to stop the current of my blood. Only once before I felt like this."

"Once before?"

"Yes, and by the most careful calculations and inquiries I can make, it must have been as nearly as possible about the precise time when the vessel was wrecked that had my daughter on board."

"That is very singular," said the admiral as he placed the "nominal list of names" on the table, but kept his hand upon it carelessly.

"Very," said Mr. Tickley—"very; and for a man of means, too, to feel so queer, it is really—really a—quite a—I mean, it don't seem right."

"Go on," said Captain Morton.

"Stop," said Mrs. Wagner.

"What would you say?"

"That boy, Gerald; he is a bad boy; oh! a most wicked boy; and if any one ought to be sent to prison he ought. He is the worst of the lot."

"Everybody seems to concur in that," said the admiral. "You may depend upon it, justice shall be done. I think, Mr. Tickley, we had better go down and sit magisterially upon all this. O, Mr. Anderson, how are you?"

"I hope you are quite well, admiral, said Lieutenant Anderson, as he entered the room. "I never in all my experience made so strange a capture as that of last night; and I think we have got hold of a worse man than any smuggler."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, the receiver of the smuggled goods, Mr. Suffles, a respectable (?) attorney of the town. Upon my word, it's past all belief, almost, and we should not now have had him, but for his own imprudence."

"I wish to heaven," said the admiral, rising, "that this was a free port. I do detest the constant trouble that these smuggling cases give us."

"So do I, sir, but what would you? Duty is duty, you know, admiral."

"O yes, Mr. Anderson, you are right. I think, Mr. Tickley, our shortest way will be to commit them all to the assizes."

"Very good, admiral, and those who have done worse than smuggle—"

"Are there any?"

"Lord bless you yes. They have fired on the Spray—a king's ship. That's piracy."

"It is. Well, we shall see."

"I think, though, admiral," said the lieutenant, "with deference to you, sir, that the two girls might be let go."

"Two girls?"

"Yes, sir, and the Frenchman. He seems a harmless man enough, and was in port a prisoner of the smugglers."

"What two girls?"

"On the beat, sir."

"Oh! I overlooked them. Let me see. Oh! yes. Dear me, I omitted their names. Ah—hem. Marie Mocquet, daughter of Captain Mocquet."

"A [illegible]"

"Oh! very well. Let her go."

[illegible] the smuggler."

With a cry that drew unusual attention [illegible] chair, and a bright flush spread itself over [illegible] in a voice that the [illegible] feelings:

"Again! again! or do I dream! That name and description again, admiral!"

"Grace."

"Enough! Oh! now and ever—my heart speaks to me—my child—my own—my beautiful! It was the voice of Nature that spoke to me in the air she breathed. I have felt as if her little hand rested on my heart. She is here—my own little one—my child—long lost—Oh, God, how long lost! how long mourned, Grace, Grace! Your father—your own father calls you—my child—my dear one! Oh, heaven, have mercy upon me, and save me from the cold chill of hope deferred, now Grace—Grace, my child—my child. To your own fond father's heart!"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Earthquakes.

It is manifest that the initial impulse of an earthquake must be due to some sudden and violent origin. Various causes may be conceived as possibly producing the shock. For example when the roof of a subterranean cavity collapses a concussion must be produced which may have the effect of an earthquake at the surface. In limestone countries, such as Carniola, the ground is honeycombed with grottoes and passages, and slight shocks of earthquake are of frequent occurrence, due, no doubt, to the falling in of some of these underground caverns. More violent effects might arise from the collapse of large emptied volcanic reservoirs, as perhaps has occurred at the extinct volcano of Ischia. Again rocks of the crust are in a state of continuous strain due to various causes, and especially to the gradual contraction that arises from the slow cooling of the planet. From time to time there probably come moments when consequently they snap asunder and read just themselves in a new position of equilibrium. A slight dislocation of this kind would undoubtedly set in motion a series of earthquake waves that might devastate the country far and wide, while a more extensive fracture might produce such a catastrophe as man has never yet witnessed. Such sudden ruptures of rocks are not impossibly the sources of the earthquake shocks so frequently experienced in mountainous countries. Along the range of Alps, for instance, subterranean disturbances are of common occurrence, varying in force from hardly perceptible tremors up to smart and more or less destructive shocks. That mountain chain has a long and most interesting history, which takes us back to the European continent. Instead of having been produced by one primeval uplift, the Alps have been upheaved again and again, and during intervals of repose their crests and declivities have been slowly worn down as they still are to-day by frost and rain, springs and brooks, rivers and glaciers. Yet the repose has only been comparative. That intense crumpling and contortion, the proofs of which the tourist gazes at with wonder along the mountain sides that plunge down into the Lake of the Four Cantons has left the rocks below in a state of strain from which relief is at intervals obtained by a sudden snap or crack. Whether or not any logical change of level may be appreciable, either in the way of elevation or subsidence, these subterranean tremors, "growing pains" we might call them, must be regarded as evidence that the building of the Alps is not yet a complete process. Again, along the oceanic borders of the continent, earthquakes are of frequent occurrence. Continents are areas that have been upraised; oceans lie in basins that have subsided. The tracts between these two regions of opposite movement may not improbably be specially liable to be affected by stresses, the sudden relief from which will generate earthquakes.

The Truth About Money.

A large income will purchase for a man the comfort, the tangible and intangible good which a small income will not. Nothing will controvert this bald fact. Not all the preaching and philosophy in the world can persuade a rational man that money is not a good thing, which will enable him to educate his children, to give them their choice of work in life, to procure skilled physicians, luxuries and change of air for his wife when death threatens her, to help the poor, to forward the cause of Christianity, and, for himself, to rest for a brief space before he leaves this beautiful world, to find out what is in it beyond drudgery. There are high spiritual blessings, no doubt, which come to us through poverty; but the extremely small number of persons who voluntarily become hermits or paupers in these later days in order to obtain them show how uncertain the popular faith in them has grown. Money is of value to a man just in proportion as it buys for him these assured benefits, or anything else which he esteems a benefit.

Canadian Pacific Railway Statistics.

The first sod was turned by the company on the 2nd May, 1881. The last spike was driven November 7th, 1885. Time occupied in building the road, four years six months; or on an average rate per day of 2.6 miles. Total length of main line between Quebec and Vancouver, 3,065 miles. Eastern division, 2,114 miles; Western division, 1,845 miles; Pacific division, 447 miles; total mileage, 4,306. Comparative distances c Canadian Pacific railway, Montreal to Vancouver, 2,906 miles; Canadian Pacific railway, New York to Vancouver, via Brockville, 3,296 miles; Northern Pacific railway, New York to Portland, Ore., and shortest connections, 3,235 miles; Union and Central Pacific railway, New York to San Francisco, and shortest connections, 3,271 miles. The Canadian Pacific railway is thus the shortest line between ocean and ocean by 345 miles.

A Pointer for Sausage.

"How did it happen that you made such fine sausage yesterday?" asked a customer of his butcher.

"Well, you see," explained the butcher, "a sporting man gave me a pointer, and—"

"Say no more," said the customer, turning pale and turning quickly to go home.

Two students of a noted professor's [illegible] midnight. He puts his head out of the window and wants to know what's up. "One of your windows is wide open," [illegible] "The one you are looking out of."

LATE DOMINION NEWS.

Vancouver, B.C., is to have a theatre.

There are now 40 telephones in use in Paris.

Calgary has narrowly escaped a coal famine.

Mr. Alexander Cambie, Commissioner of Patents at Ottawa, is dead.

For driving without bells three persons have been fined $2 and costs each at Paris.

Twelve hundred tons of coal have been mined at Edmonton during the year past.

Application to have Windsor erected into a city will be made at the approaching session of the Legislature.

British Columbia squatters are agitating for Government recognition of their titles to the lands on which they are settled.

Joseph Matayes, a married man with a family, was instantly killed on the Pettewawa a few days ago by a tree falling upon him.

Mr. Samuel Watson, of Amherst Island, fell from a load of hay one day last week, struck on the back of his neck, and was instantly killed.

A coal famine threatens Halifax, unless the strike of the Pictou miners soon ends. The cotton factory closed down last week for want of fuel.

A man in Seymour Township has deserted a wife and sixteen children and eloped with a woman who left behind her a husband and four children.

Maud Williams, a forty-year-old colored woman, was found in a filthy room at Halifax recently, destitute of furniture, fuel or clothing, frozen to death.

Antelope are getting pretty numerous in the river bottoms in the vicinity of Leithbridge, N.W.T., and herds of 30 to 40 may be seen almost any day.

It is reported that 65 deaths from measles have occurred among a band of Indians of 25 lodges living at the Marshy Lake, 100 miles north of Lac la Biche.

An Indian woman at Fort Rupert, B. C., was much disappointed last week when she found she could not prosecute her husband for pawning the blankets.

The bakers of Vancouver, B. C., have advanced the price of bread to ten cents per loaf or three loaves for twenty-five cents, and the loaves are to be 1½ pounds in weight.

At Calgary recently a man had his feet badly frozen through two pairs of socks, a pair of moccasins and a pair of overshoes, and it is believed amputation will be necessary. The tightness of the moccasins interfered with the circulation of the blood. Hence the freezing.

A man took a keg of whiskey to an Indian camp at False Creek, B. C., in the hope of being able to dispose of it. The Indians did not feel complimented by the visit, however, and they took the man and forced him to sit upon the keg for three days and three nights. Then the end of the keg was knocked out and the liquor spilt.

John Albertson, 105 years of age, died at Norton, Kings County, N.S., a short time ago He was an old British soldier, who was present at the battle of the Nile and Trafalgar, and subsequently at the battle of Waterloo and other memorable engagements. He was probably the last survivor of the battle of the Nile, fought 90 years ago.

A Cornwall constable made an important discovery recently. For some time past he has been on the track of smugglers of coal oil, and during his tour he made up his mind to follow a certain sleigh track which led him to a barn in the old Gordon French property, about one mile north of Maple Grove. Here he found concealed 26 barrels of American coal oil, which he had conveyed at once to Cornwall.

A sad accident occurred at one of the Emery Lumbering Company's camps, four miles from Wahnapeta, a few days ago, causing the death of William Kenan, teamster. He had got on part of the load and was going to another roll way to finish his load, when the binder got lose and swinging round it struck him back of the neck, throwing him in front of the sleigh which passed over him, killing him instantly. He came from the village of Carp, where he has a brother. He was a single man.

Mixed Up Baby and Turkey.

"Oh, you good-for-nothing, drunken wretch," exclaimed a youthful matron as she reached her hand out from under the bed clothes to feel in the cradle if the baby was covered.

"Washer masher?" murmured her husband, rousing from a drunken doze.

"Matter enough," she indignantly shrieked. "Wake up and go down stairs and bring baby up here this minute."

"Did bring him up; he'sh in er cradle."

"You did no such thing, you drunken brute. You wrapped the turkey I dressed for Sunday's dinner in baby's blankets and rocked it in the cradle for an hour, you wretch, while bahy is freezing to death down stairs on the sofa."

Epithet and Application.

A certain Dublin jarvey was driving a very stout citizen whose trade was that of a furrier; and, when he set him down, his fare offered him only sixpence. "Is that all ye're giving me?" said the jarvey. "Yes," said the furrier; "that's your legal fare, my man, and it's all you'll get from me; so take it and go." The jarvey, seeing it was hopeless to expect anything more, was determind to have it out of him somehow; so, concentrating all the scorn and contempt he could into his voice and facial expression, he said, "Ah, go lang out o' that, ye ould boa-constructor!"

Used Glasses Both Ways.

"I want to see one of the editors," said a lady, coming into the office.

"Which one?" inquired the horse reporter.

"The one that wears glasses."

"On his nose or under his nose?"

"Both, I think," she replied hesitatingly, and was at once directed by the startled horse reporter to the religious editor's room.

No Subtraction in Johnny's Family.

Teacher to boy whose father is an egg-merchant: "Johnny, if your father had one hundred eggs, and twenty of them were bad, how many would he lose?" Johnny: "He wouldn't lose any, of them. He sells the bad ones to a restaurant-keeper to make omelettes of."

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J.P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE.
The subscriber begs to inform the travelling public generally, that he has leased the above premises for a term of years, and hopes by catering to their comfort to merit a share of public patronage. Bar and Larder well supplied. Good stabling and attentive hostler.
D. McLEAN, Proprieto .

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
124ly

WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

WARNING.
ALL persons are hereby warned against purchasing a promisary note for the sum of $40.00 drawn and dated the 15th February by the subscriber and payable I think) ten months after date, to Wm. Fawcett, Euphrasia, as I did not get value for the same.
JACOB NEELY,
338-40 Euphrasia, February 19th 1887.

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.

500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

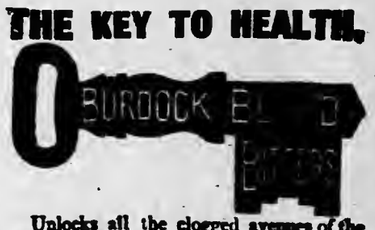
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
A. CHAMBERS & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P, O.



FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Wanted Immediately!
CANVASSERS IN THIS COUNTY
FOR THE
"OUR NORTH LAND,"
A PURELY CANADIAN,
describing the wonders of our own country, with thrilling incidents of travel and adventure. This is by far the most saleable subscription book ever published in Canada. not a book of scraps and clippings, but an original copyright work, richly and profusely illustrated.
To energetic men who will promise to canvass at least one township, we will offer the most liberal inducements. As we manufacture the book ourselves, upon our own premises, we can afford to place it in the hands of canvassers at a very low figure, while the retail prices place the work within the reach of all classes. Application for Territory received at once. We want at least one man in every county in Canada.
Also the "NEW HOME PARALLEL BIBLES," and Photogrrph Albums in over 300 varieties.
C. Blackett Robinson,
5 JORDAN ST., TORONTO Publisher.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling. Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool.
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.
Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.
For sale by all dealers.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto

Markdale Roller Mill.
FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand
To give in exchange.
'Baker's Patent' and best family flour for sale. Retail price per bbl. $4.50. Three barrels or more, $4.10 to $4.25.
SHORTS, per ton $13.00
BRAN, " 10.00
The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.
Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

THE Association Can't Stop Us.
HAVING PURCHASED A FIRST-CLASS HEARSE.
Built by B. J. Mash, London. also having a large stock of Coffins, Caskets and funeral furnishings, we are prepared to supply the public in the undertaking line on the shortest notice.
A large stock of furniture always on hand at lowest living prices.
Having a first-class cabinet maker, we are prepared to make all kinds of furniture to order, also repairing done promptly.
COLEMAN & HAMILTON,
Next door to Knapp's store.
MARKDALE.

NEW HARNESS SHOP.
R. CARNAHAN would respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of the surrounding country that he has opened a general harness shop on King street in the village of
HOLLAND CENTRE,
where he intends to manufacture and keep on hand a large stock of LIGHT and HEAVY HARNESS, long and short tugs, STRAW COLLARS, WHIPS, COMBS, BRUSHES, HARNESS OIL &c.
I will use only first class material and those requiring anything in the harness line will find it to their interest to call at the new harness shop and get prices before going elsewhere. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. Soliciting a share of public patronage. I am respectfully yours.
R. CARNAHAN.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH
TIME TABLE.
Taking effect Monday, July 28th, 1886.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.
Toronto....Leave	7 45am	4 50pm
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 30 "
Orangeville Arrive	10 05 "	7 03
Orangeville Leave	10 20 "	7 22
Orangeville Jun	10 32 "	7 34
Shelburne	10 58 "	8 04
Dundalk	11 22 "	8 30
Flesherton	11 47 "	8 55
Markdale	12 02pm	9 10
Berkeley	12 14 "	9 22 "
Holland Centre	12 23 "	9 32 "
Chatsworth	12 38 "	9 49 "
Owen Sound	1 05 "	10 20 "

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.
Owen Sound	5 40am	2 40pm
Chatsworth	6 10 "	3 07 "
Holland Centre	6 25 "	3 30 "
Berkeley	6 34 "	3 40 "
Markdale	6 47 "	3 52 "
Flesherton	7 02 "	4 06 "
Dundalk	7 26 "	4 31 "
Shelburne	7 51 "	4 57 "
Orangeville Jun	8 22 "	5 25 "
Orangeville Arrive	8 30 "	6 35 "
Orangeville Leave	8 45 "	5 55 "
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 30 "
Toronto....Arrive	10 55 "	8 10

The Markdale Standard
Is issued every Thursday, by
C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,
TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.
Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.
Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.
Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1
No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.
THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Society Directory.
Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78, meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, McDougall's block. Visiting brethren welcome.
Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, McDougall's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.
MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.
Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Monthly Fairs.
Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

Markdale Church Directory.
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.
CHRIST CHURCH.
Services for January, 2nd 7. 9th 7, 16th 10:30 and 7, 23 7. 30th 10:30 and 7. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.
METHODIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9. Rev. Geo. H. Cornish, Pastor; G. S. Bowes, S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection; Mrs. T Hill, Secretary.

Post-Office Directory.
MARKDALE.
The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.
Mails closed as follows, viz:
C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m
TRAVERSTON.
Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.
HARKAWAY.
Friday, 12:30 noon.
For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.
W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

Directory.
MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.
Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.
Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.
COUNTY OFFICIALS.
Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace, W. Armstrong, O. Sound,
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N, Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., B. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, B. Allan, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. J. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.
DIVISION COURT CLERKS
No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6, John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Subscribe now for the STANDARD: there is good times acoming.

Lost, Strayed or Stolen,
$500 REWARD.
On the morning of Feb 22nd [illegible] Strayed from their own premises, [illegible] Isaac Elder, 6 feet high, light complexion, red chin whiskers and mustache [illegible] back, a pink wart on his nose and dog called "Bummer," also one [illegible] Tuohy, 5 feet 8 in, in moggasins, brown hair and mustache, right eye grey [illegible] left eye black, dude pants and coat hair parted in the middle, one white foot, black mane and star in forehead one ear lopped, whito shirt and neck bottle rasdberry jam in one pocket Jamiesons vote in the other, both red hot Jamieson men.
It is supposed that the above described politicians have been massacred by blood thirsty grits, or have taken much "jam" under the intoxicating effects of which their patriotism was aroused and they are now on a pilgrimage to Kingston to pay their respects to Sir. John; or, as they are both very young and innocent kids, they may be lost in some of the back streets of Durham.
Should any person find them please TREAT them (kindly) feed them, guide them to the blacksmith shop in Traverston and receive the reward.
By order of the committee Traverton Feb. 24th 1887.

ASTGNISHING SUCCESS.
It is the duty of every person who has used Broschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualitise be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 60,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widly known. Ask your druggists about it. Sample bottles to try sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in the United States and Canada.

Important Unreserved
AUCTION SALE,
—OF—
DOMINION PEDIGREED SHORT HORN AND OTHER CATTLE.
Will be held on Wednesday, 16th March, 1887, at the stock farm of W. Kough, Brook, one mile from Owen Sound, consisting of 6 short horn Bulls, 1 short horn Cow all fashionably bred—Dominion Herd Book Pedigrees will be given to purchasers at time of sale. 3 of the short horn Bulls are the property of Mr. John Harrison, of Owen Sound; 2 of the short horn Bulls are the property of R. J. Doyle, of Owen Sound. The following are the property of Wm Kough, viz: 1 short horn Bull and one short horn Cow 7 crosses, 1 Red Poll Cow, 1 Yoke Working Oxen, 3 Galloway Cross Bulls calved 1886, 2 Galloway Cross Heifers calved 1886. All sired by Galloway Silver Medal Bull Close Burn [6‡.]
Lunch at noon. Sale to commence at one. Terms approved joint notes payable 1st January, 1888. For further particulars with extended pedigrees write for and see Sale Bills to W. Kough, Owen Sound.
WM. BEATON, Auctioneer.
Owen Sound, 28 Feb. 1887.

TO RENT.
THE old and well known Pickell farm adjoining Flesherton, consisting of 100 acres, eighty-five cleared, twenty fall ploughed. Splendid bank barn with spacious horse stable. stone cow stable, and never failing well, all underneath barn. Fine young orchard of 100 trees bearing well a good variety of fruit. Comfortable log house.
For terms apply to Wm. Brown, Esq Markdale. or on the premises to
W. G. PICKELL.

Stock Taking SALE
At the Toronto House
Markdale.
SLAUGHTER PRICES FOR CASH.
Wm. Brown

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 340. MARKDALE, ONT., MARCH 10, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Publisher.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

The feather floats, the pearls lie low.

Choose not a friend from outward show:

Cheap and strong are Mabee's sap pails. Buy them.

Clover Seed at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

To restore gilt frames rub with a sponge moistened in turpentine.

THE days are growing longer, and the sun is beaming stronger.

AN Orange Soiree will be held at Eugenia on Tuesday the 15th inst.

MR. SYMINGTON of Dundalk had a cow killed by a train last week.

Miss Millie Lyons of Tara is visiting her parents in Markdale.

Lovely weather this week but the sleighing is getting shakey.

J. G. Anderson will sell goods on small profits for cash.

The "Ahead of Any" milk cooler to be had only at the sign of the cross-cut saw.

Honor and fame from no condition rise. Act well your part; there all the honor lies.

ARCHIE HILL, of Meaford; and Andrew Hill, of Orangeville; visited Markdale last week.

W. J. Benson, our noted Irish Comic is to take part in a concert in Thornbury this week.

Embroderies, Embroderies the latest and most beautifull lot ever offered to the public at J. G. Anderson's.

Crockery and Glassware in great abundance at botton prices at J. G. Anderson's.

BOOTS THAT ARE BOOTS.—A select stock of boots and shoes for spring trade just opened at W. McLeod's.

Oil Cake, the champion cattle food for sale at Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

IT will pay to leave your watch for repairs with me. Work warranted—Prices right. W. A. Brown, Jeweller.

GENTS hand made boots a specialty at W. McLeod's; A good variety made up to select from.

ARE you made miserable by indegestion, constipitation, dizziness, loss of appetite: take Rejuvenator Bitters sold by Smith the barber.

LADIES should call and examine W. McLeod's new stock of boots, something select, and sure to please in quality style and price.

MR. ANDREW FOGERTY is preparing to erect a commodious brick residence in this village for himself. He is now Hauling brick and other material.

For Fleury and Wilkinson Plows go to Jackson's, price to suit hard times.

WE have now a larger stock of boots and shoes than on any former occasion —All genuine goods, no shoddy. A call respectfully solicited.

HAMPDEN WATCHES.—My own name on—just received; Key and stem wind, will be sold close, cash or time. W. A. Brown, Jeweller.

ALL parties indebted to W. McLeod by overdue accounts are requested to settle without further delay or he will be compelled to place the same in court.

Every person should see those lovely prints at J. G. Anderson's, over one hundred different patterns to boose from.

When does a horse enjoy his food most? When he hasen't a bit in his mouth.

Jonathin Hickling of Artemesia is seriously indisposed, we regret to learn.

When is a little boy like a razor? when the little shaver gets a strapping.

J. G. Anderson Mammoth House has now received a large portion of his spring goods. Call and see them.

MRS. MONTGOMERY spent Sunday in Markdale: The old lady looks hale and hearty.

WE are glad to see Thos. Mathews about again, after seven weeks confinment with a broken leg.

Miss Bremner is, we understand, reengaged in McFarland's millinery for the coming season.

NEW prints, new dress goods, new cottonades, new shirting, just opened cheap for cash, at J. G. Anderson's.

Mr. Legate, a former implement Agent of this place, was in town this week.

J. G. Anderson expects to have his spring and summer stock fully complete in every department dy 20th March.

Mrs. Elliott of Chatsworth and Mrs. MacRae of Durham spent part of the week in town as visitors of Mrs. Turner.

MAGGIE MILLER, of this place, returned from Sunderland Monday night, where she has been visiting friends for the past six months.

Go to Jackson for land Rollers. Cheapest and best in the market. Call and be convinced.

HANDSOME GLASSWARE.—A large and very handsome stock of glassware just opened at Benson's "Wiandotte pattern," the prettiest out. See them.

WALTER TURNER left on Monday morning for Toronto to attend session of Ontario College of Pharmacy. We wish him success and hope to see him with us again about midsummer.

"TORONTO BY GAS LIGHT" is a book published by the Toronto News and has been read by many; "Markdale by Moonlight" has been the topic the past week.

Miss Love is at present in one of the wholesale Millinery establishments in Toronto and will resume her situation in Hill Bros Markdale in the spring.

A WHOPPER.—Last Mondays' Globe stated that nearly 50,000 votes were polled in East Grey at the last election, while the correct number is 4,279.

WM. BREADNER, carpenter and builder is prepared to do work in his line in the village or country. See his card in another column. Residence on George St. near the Presbyterian church.

MARKDALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 73 to 74 cents; spring wheat 73 to 74; barley 30 to 50; peas 46; oats 28; butter 15 to 17; eggs 16; potatoes 50 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

W. G. GUTHRIE, plain and ornamental plasterer of this village, is getting the material for a residence on the ground, and will build the coming summer.

Iron Harrows "spring tooth Harrows" Drills and seeders from the best manufactures in Ontario, at Jackson's.

WANTED AT ONCE.—Fifty thousand feet soft Elm Logs, to be delivered at Armstrong's Mill, Markdale, for particulars apply to W. L. Young, at Lucas & Co's Bank.

Saw mill men, Flour mill proprietors, Wool-factory owners and all who run steam or other machinery should call at Mabee's and examine his machine oil which is the best in the market.

A long felt wanted supplied.—Prepared Paints ready for use—any quantity or shade—quaranteed pure; See them at Haskett Bros.

Owing to sickness and death in the family Mr. John Whitby was obliged to resign the Assessorship of Artemesia, and we understand Wm. McLoughry has been appointed in his plac.

IMPORTANT.—It is of the utmost importance that some good household remedy should be kept within handy reach in case of pain and accidential injury. The most useful remedy of this kind is undoubtedly Hagyard's Yellow Oil, for internal and external use in all painful complaints.

WANTED YET.—A large quantity of Rock Elm poles, from 7 (not less) to 10 inches at small end, 22 ft long, also Rock Elm saw logs 15 inches and up at small end, 16 and 18 ft long, also Maple, Birch and Soft elm logs Cash paid. M. & W. Armstrong.

DON'T DO IT.—Don't rack and ruin your lungs with a tiget, harrowing distressing cough, when a few doses of Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam will loosen the phlegm, soothe the irritation, and heal the sore throat and bronchial pipes and may avert the destructive disease, consumption.

Life is too short for it to be constantly filled with sadness. Let people laugh when they can. A man should not go about with a face long enough to make the world believe he has money deposited in a saving bank.

DOUBLY BENEFITED.—There is no one remedy known that has more curative power over dyspepsia and liver complaint than Burdock Blood Bitters. "I had liver complaint and my husband was so bad with dyspepsia that he could not labor. One dozen bottles of B. B. B. has enabled both of us to attend to our usual work," reports Mrs. John A. Campbell, of Brighton, N. B.

CAPSIZED.—On Wednesday last a wedding party was driving through this village towards the railway station to catch the noon train, and overtaking a loaded team opposite the Revere Hotel the jolly party hauled off to pass, and struck a hard snow drift upsetting the rig containing the bride and groom with some half dozen of the most important of the weddeners. It must have been humiliating to get such an unceremonious spill before so many spectators, but there was no serious damage reported. They didn't miss the train either.

HUMORS.—The most humorous man is not always the happiest; the man who has scrofulous humor or any obstinate humor of the blood, dose not feel very lively, at least not until he is cured, which, by the way, Burdock Blood Bitters will do in the most troublesome of blood humors.

THE Creemore Advertiser was a year old last week. It has been to us a welcome exchange, always frank and cheery and without malace in its composition. Tho people of Creemore may well be proud of their bouncing year-old boy called "Tiser." Mr. Ball the editor is thankful for past favors and hopeful for future success; He has our best wishes.

WHAT IS ALABASTINE.—It is a preparation of plaster-paris and other ingredients used for decorating and whitening walls and ceilings, is easily applied, will not scale nor rub off, and is cheaper and better than calcimine. You can get it at Haskett Bros.

THE statement that the Queen is to create an order for the recognition of editorial merit on the occasion of her jubilee, will not, it is to be hoped, lessen the offerings of wood and potatoes which are the earthly symbols of appreciation of the country editors labors.

MORE THAN CLAIMED.—"For the past four or five years," says Mrs. Emery, of Cottam, Ont., "I have been subject to kidney troubles. I was adviced to take Burdock Blood Bitters. It has done me more good than what was claimed for it. I can recommend it to all sufferers from their diseases."

Look out for a Treat. Rev. Dr. Talmage's celebrated Lecture on "Ingersolism," will be delivered in the Methodist Church here, on Wednesday evening 16th., by Rev. David Rogers.

TURNED OVER AGAIN.—W. L. Young has sold the Livery business after running it one month. Thos. Mathews is again the proprietor after being but one year out of the business, The public may rely on being well served now as in the past. This livery is perhaps second to none in the county.

ORANGE SOIREE.—The annual Soiree of L. O. L. No. 1383 was held on the 25th Feb. in the hall, Kells corners and was as usual a grand success. The good things provided by the ladies were of a high order and thoroughly appreciated after which a good program was rendered, the following taking part. Thos. Kells in the chair, Dr. Sproule, M. P. Rev's Corcoran, Wilson and Cornish, also two recitations by W, J. Benson and an address by W. A. Brown. A pleasant and profitable evening was thus spent. Proceeds $39.50.

THE Chatsworth News is two years old, and we are pleased to note a decided improvement in its appearance on commencing its third volume: A new heading and new type together with increased space appropriated to local and other news, giyes it quite an improved appearance. May it go on and prosper is our worst wish for friend J. G. Blyth.

MR. MCNALLY'S CARRIAGE FYCTORY.—Mr. McNally has his large building completed with the exceptions of plastering the varnishing room and some chimney building. This is now one of the most complete carriage buildings in the country. The building is 40 x 80 feet two story high. Dan. McFarlane already occupies the blacksmith department and the balance will be occupied at once by Mr. McN.

THE Markdale Presbyterian Sabbath School will (D. V.) hold their anniversary on Thursday evening next, 17th inst. Refreshments will be served at the Church from 7 to 8 o'clock. A rich program has been prepared. Parents and friends are cordially invited. Admission 15 cents, Children (not of the school) 0 cents.

Mr. John McAleer formerly of Markdale and recently of Eugenia moved this week to his farm in St. Vincent where he has decided te retire to private life. He takes with him a valuable stock and will pay special attention to stock farming. Mr. McA. is one of the most honorable men we have come in contact with in business, and we sincerely wish him and his estimable wife, and family, comfort and happiness on the homestead.

REMOVED.—Having secured for a term of years the blacksmithshop in Mr. McNally's new carriage establishment, and moved into it, I wish to return thanks to my numerous customers for their very liberal patronage in the past, and by close attention to business and honest dealing I hope to merit a continuance of your liberal support.

D. MCFARLANE.

P. S.—As business must be conducted on business principles, all over-dew accounts must be settled by cash or note on or before the 19th inst.

D. McF.

ODDFELLOWS CONCERT.—Cascade Lodge C. O. O. F. held their annual concert at Walter's Falls on Friday svening last. The weather was deligtful and a large attendance was the result. Mr. P. McCullough, barrister of Markdale occupied the chair very acceptably. Messrs. Porter, J. R. Anderson, and W. J. Benson of Markdale took part in the program, the two latter being heartily and repeatedly enchored. W. J. Shepherdson spoke on the benefits of the order. Miss Aggie Lemon of Thornbury delighted the audience in song and was heartily enchored. The Bognor String Band gave selections of music to the delight of those present, and altogether it was a very pleasant and successful concert. Proceeds about $75. About 15 couple came from Markdale whom we were much pleased to have with us. Cor.

WHY EMPLOY DOCTORS.—Consult a doctor and in 9 cases out of ten he pronounces your disease Liver Complaint and charges you $1 for a small bottle. Consult your druggists and for $1 he will give Dr. Chase's Liver Cure, guaranteed to cure, and a valuable receipt book free.

Rev. Dr. Talmage's celebrated lecture on "Ingersolism," to be delivered in the Methodist Church here next Wednesday by Rev. David Rogers will be a rare treat. Those who have heard it from both the above says the latter is preferable. Mr. Rogers is a great imitator, clever, comic and bristles with mirth.

WHAT IS SAID OF HIM.

"The great American was ably reproduced and able critics says that it was a fac-simile of Talmage in language, style and words."—Mitchell Advertiser.

"Mr. Rogers succeeded admirably in portraying the original lecturer's personal peculiarities.—Acton Free Press.

"Bro. Rogers electrified our people in Stratford."—Rev. G. Richardson.

THE annual tea-meeting at Town-line appointment, Methodist Church was held last Thursday evening and was an entire success. The weather was delightful and roads good, and as a consequence the church filled to the door. Tea was served in an adjoining dwelling, after which all adjourned to the church where a good program was rendered. Mr. H. Hamilton was voted to the chair, and Rev. Mr. Cornish, gave an address on the progress of civilization followed by a profitable practicable advice from Rev. Mr Hosking; then came Mr. Hawkin's speech Mr. H. is a genuine whole-souled veteran who has the respect and esteem of all who know him. In the course of his remarks he gave the following—which to us is as yet an unsolved conundrum, viz—He visited this winter his great-grand-daughter in western Ontario, and said child has three great-grand-fathers all now living; we have no doubt the old gentleman can explain it satisfactorily. Then followed C. W. Rutledge who never speaks but he says something, and W. A. Brown who gave THE speech of the evening, subject—matrimony, and the great importance of a wise choice. The choir did their part admirably and thus an enjoyable evening was brought to a close. Proceeds $33.

EXPLANATION to "Lost Strayed or Stolen." In your issue of March 3rd, an article appeared under the above heading which might, if un-explained, reflect upon the character of the parties named viz.—Messrs. Isaac and John Tuohy. The article or notice was not intended for publication, but only designed as a practical joke upon Elder and Tuohy and strictly confined to them and some half dozen of their intimate friends. The writing of the notice came about in this way. The next day but one after the late elections Sweeny was in Markdale and made the remark in a jokular way, that "Elder & Tuohy were lost." The writer of the notice said "how is that? Sweeny says well, they went to Durham election day and havn't got back yet. If that is so we had better get out some notices and offer a reward for their return, so the writer picked up a piece of brown paper and began scribbling, the result of which was the burlesque notice referred too. There was one or two friends of all the gentlemen present and some one suggested that Sweeny put it up on Mr. Elders shop door. The writer most emphatically said no, that would be too public, simply take it along and when you see the boys together give it to them and lead them to understand that you found it posted up along the road, said alright that will do. But instead of confining the joke within the intended limits when it would have injured no one, not even their tender feelings, I thoughtlessly handed it to the printer not thinking it would cause ill-feelings or injury as that was farthest from the intention of any of the parties to the joke. If their feelings have been wounded or any harm done, we are sorry and we shall refain from practical jokes in the future.

[By Order by Committee.]

THE BLUE SPECTACLES.

BY FRANK WATERS.

(Concluded.)

Assuring him that I was quite at his service, I left the room; and presently returned with a small jar of alcohol, some water, and a couple of glasses. The storm still raged with an awful fury; but my horror had by this time worn away, to be succeeded by a wild recklessness, a spiritual intoxication, such as I had never before experienced. A kind of diabolical gladness had seized me—a fiendish sportiveness which made me feel as though I could dabble my fingers in the blood of murder, and laugh for very glee of its wickedness. As to my companion, I was by now fully convinced that I entertained in him no prince of darkness, but a mere mortal like myself. The one point yet to be solved—for this I never questioned—was why the evil one had sent this most unlikely-looking messenger at my call. But this I felt I would find out, all in good time.

He had left his couch, and seated himself at yonder table there, in the centre of the room. Taking a chair, I seated myself opposite him, and filled my glass in tune to his. Hitherto, I had been—from choice, not from principle—a total abstainer from all spirituous liquors so that, now, the potent alcohol flew to my brain and heart like so much liquid fire. Yet it did not intoxicate me. No! no! I cannot plead even that wretched excuse. It simply drove me to madness, but to a madness all in keeping with my character—a madness cold, intellectual, and utterly devoid of heart. Little guessed the man before me, as he heard my commonplace remarks, my polite replies, what a human tiger confronted him, what a human devil looked him, laughing, in the eyes.

In the eyes? Yes! that was it! Oh! that—that was it! Save in one single particular, there was nothing in the least strange about my guest. There seemed nothing mysterious about him; all—to use a nautical metaphor—was open and above board. He spoke freely of himself and gave me to understand that he had been a great traveller; that he was just come back from the far East; and that he had a wife and child living with some friends up at——, on the Georgian Bay, whither he was now bound, after an absence of three years. As to his intrusion on me, he explained it very simply, as the result of a broken carriage whose mishap had forced him to seek his way on foot to D—— (the neighbouring village, some miles off), and had ended in causing him to lose his way, and so, as he said, in compelling him to inflict himself on me for the night. So far, all was clear and simple, and there was nothing in his appearance to make me doubt the entire truth of his account. But, as I have already said, there was one thing curious about him—a something very curious, an inexplicable property possessed by one of his eyes. Indeed, it appeared that he had but one, or so I understood him to say in some chance allusion to his remarkable spectacles. But surely one such eye was enough; or was it my frenzy which invested its glance with a lustre so preternatural and stupendous? For, at every flash of the electric fluid, the eye of the stranger shot forth an answering gleam; and when the storm, gradually subsiding, rolled sullenly away, still did I fancy that I could detect an orb of fire glowing furtively upon me from behind those dark glasses. Indeed, so vivid was this feeling as to be even awful, until my rising frenzy rendered me incapable of fear, and I should have mocked at the Supreme Being Himself, had He appeared before me.

Then the devil spoke. Oh! he knows his time, and can abide it! "How the man's eye gleams! Gleams like the lightning! Gleams like—!" Ah! dog of hell! now thou hast said it! Now I grasp and understand all! This—this is why you sent him! I strove to nip the thought in the bud, as it formed itself in my brain; because, for one moment, even then, I shrank from its dimly-seen consequences. But, an instant more, and the thought was fully blown, and all revealed to me. I never asked myself if I might not be mistaken: I knew I was not. The evil one had heard me. His part was done; what remained was all my own.

How should I do it? By violence? No! no! That was a brutish and savage method from which my whole nature—all my trained and scientific modes of thought—revolted for its stupidity. Besides, this man was tall and strong—stronger, certainly, than I, the lean and withered student. Should I, then, drug his drink, and stab or suffocate him quietly, while he slept? If I stabbed him, he would bleed, and the blood might possibly betray me; at least it would disfigure the room, and give me the trouble of washing out its traces. Suffocating would be better—indeed, excellent. But still, some clinging trace of human ideas—some mere mechanical habit of thought, not any faintest remorse in me—made me dislike the idea of killing a sleeping man. No! I had a better and swifter method; that I would employ. Turning, with a bland smile to my guest, I spoke:—

"You seem to enjoy my scientific fare," I said; "I am truly glad it pleases you. But do you not think our beverage were all the better for a little flavouring? To my palate, at least, it is tasteless."

"I believe you are right, my host," he replied; "I never complain of good liquor; but if the means were forthcoming, an added zest would be an added pleasure."

"Rest content," answered I; "you shall have such a flavour to your cup as few taste. I shall be with you again in a moment."

With this I left the room; and repairing to my laboratory, close by, took thence a bottle of concentrated prussic acid and returned to my companion. My smile was of the blandest as I shook the deadly vial before him, and said with truly hellish duplicity:—

"This, my guest, is an essence which I have never yet given mortal to taste—an essence of rare and wondrous powers. When you have tasted it, you will enter an entirely new field of sensation. But it is volatile and swift; therefore you must drink quickly. The moment I say 'now' seize the glass and drain it, and you will feel—what you shall feel."

He, all unsuspecting, laughed and nodded, looked with an amused curiosity on the wonder-working vial, and with a cheery "all-right, my generous host," prepared to obey me. Not for a moment did I waver. His glass was already full, so, with a steady hand and smiling face, I loosed the stopper, and, carefully avoiding to inhale the deadly fumes, poured several drops quickly into the liquor. Then I gave the word of doom:

"Now!"

It pealed from my lips like the blast of a trumpet—the trumpet, say, of the Angel of the Dead—startling me, the speaker, and him who heard me, too. I knew it by the nervous force of his gesture, as he snatched the glass, and raised it to his lips. Shoving home the stopper, and grounding the vial on the table, I fixed my eyes on his, just as, throwing back his head, he gulped down death at a mouthful. The effect was as magic. Springing from his chair, and overturning it in the action, the glass fell from his hand, and shattered to a thousand pieces; his frame stiffened suddenly, from head to heel; his hands clenched until the nails dug up the flesh; his blue spectacles, like great, blank, sightless eyes, glared horribly upon me; a smothered, hideous shriek—or rather its abortive attempt—rose to his lips; and then he fell as one thunder smitten—stone dead.

I knew it would be sudden; but indeed, its complete suddenness took even me by surprise, for a moment. Then I laughed aloud—shrieked with insane and devilish merriment—as I thought how the withered hermit of the laboratory had out-witted this mighty traveller, this sapient and experienced man of the world, entrapping him even to his destruction. Had I not cause for merriment? and then the great prize at stake! the mighty—Ha! what was I doing here, wasting my time in laughter, instead of seizing the demon's granted boon? Not for an instant did I dread a disappointment; I knew my work had been priced with a price. Flinging myself like a famished tiger on the dead body, I tore off the blue spectacles, which hid its treasure, and there—yes! there, as the devil had for once truly asserted, burned and blazed the gorgeous jewel, the rich reward of a paltry crime: a peerless diamond, such as never shone in the starry treasure rooms of Golcondo, nor blazed from mortal monarch's crown. It was cunningly fastened into the socket, where one eye was in truth wanting; and it quite filled the cavity with its orb of liquid light. With frenzied fingers, with digging nails, I tore it out, held it up to the light for a moment, and gloated over it; then, shrieking anew with hideous laughter, I fell, in strong convulsions, on the body of my victim.

When I came to myself it was near morning, and I bethought me of disposing of the corpse. I felt no uneasiness; detection was impossible. The man's friends knew nothing of his arrival in Canada—he had wished to surprise them, he said; the roadside accident had occurred some miles away; and my welcome guest had reached my house alone, and on a night so intensely black that no human eye could have seen him. But, indeed, the lonely position of my dwelling, and its evil reputation, were security enough in themselves. Therefore, I spent little time in thought, but proceeded to my laboratory—just outside here, on the ground-floor—I removed some of the boarding. Then I dug a deep pit, and threw in certain chemicals, such as would speedily resolve the man to his ultimate elements. (Or, as I thought then; now I know that there was one element—the element of God—in him which no chemical could touch.) Finally, I tossed in the body, covered it up, replaced the boarding, and washed the floor. Then all was done, and I sat down over the buried man—or body—and laughed once more. It would be pleasant to have him here underfoot, I thought, as a constant reminder of my cleverness and good fortune. I felt no further interest than this in him. I had made no attempt to identify him: why should I? I kept nothing belonging to him, except the stone. And one thing else. In lifting the body from where it had first fallen, a small memorandum book slipped from the breast pocket of the coat, on to the floor. This I had mechanically and thoughtlessly thrown into a drawer of the table, and left there, forgetting all about it. Little did I dream that the great and most outraged God had there written for me my sentence of doom.

But in truth I dismissed my new-born belief in God or devil, the moment I resumed work. Old habits of thought at once reasserted themselves; again I was the scientist, again the agnostic. And for seven days I worked, heart and soul, at my task. Then on the seventh day—it chanced, too, to be the Sabbath—with a blasphemous jest I rested. My work, also, was done—my creation completed. My object had been to manufacture diamonds. Some chance discoveries had prepared the way to this, in the first instance; then, as stated, I had worked out the whole chain of reasoning, with the exception of one missing link, which I could not possibly supply, without a large stone to experiment on; such a one as I had just sacrificed. I had not hesitated so to use it. In itself it was a fortune, but to attempt its sale might be to invite detection and ruin. Then, too, there was the scientific interest at stake—a thing not to be lightly foregone. And, in fine, I was so perfectly sure of success, and success meant such absolutely illimitable wealth, that to falter would have been sheer moon-madness. And now, on this still Sabbath evening—it was awful in its stillness—all my efforts were crowned. There, from the bottom of the crucible, gleamed several of the brilliant gems; and as, trembling, I lifted them out and weighed them, it was with a feeling of surprise that I noted their exact coincidence in weight, with the original stone. Ha! ha! where now was God? Where was the devil of the theologians? I was God! I was devil! I—and I alone—ruled and was master! Now, let me sit down, and dream dreams, and—Stay! my wild gladness of seven nights ago was coming back on me. Let me repair to the scene of my late triumph; let me reproduce, as nearly as may be, all its features—let me—me, the hermit; me the ascetic philosopher, ha, ha!—let me drink once more, and once more make merry! I acted at once on the happy thought. I produced the alcohol, water, and prussic acid. I set my own chair and that of my late guest in their respective places, and I filled our glasses. Then, in the cordiality of my completed triumph, I was about to invoke him to bear me company, when suddenly, and for the first time it struck me that I did not know his name. To be sure what did that matter? And yet, at a high festival like the present, it was a sad omission and breach of ceremony. Ha! well thought of!—the book! There, most likely, I should find the name of my guest. This is the drawer—yes! And this is the book. And here—here—O God of Justice! this is the name:—

"ROBERT MAYFERN!"

The book fell from my hand; the room leaped from its place, and spun dizzily round and round me; a mortal sickness seized upon my heart; an icy numbness congealed me; and then I grew oblivious of all things.

When the gray twilight of returning consciousness stole back upon me, a nameless horror, an unutterable dread made my blood to chill, my flesh to creep, and the hair to rise in bristles on my head. Vaguely, as in a dream, I had just heard the clock there strike three—the very hour, as I remembered, at which, on this day a week gone by, I had foully murdered my—my—him! Him? ha!—God! what was that? Can men shriek in their graves? shriek, when the very tongue has melted from the fleshless head? Raising my blanched face—or, rather, lifted up as by some awful unseen power—I looked toward the vacant chair opposite. O, wrath of Heaven!—it was vacant no longer! There he sat—there he sat—then as now; convulsed, ghostly, avenging; like as when I slew him. Only that the rigid right arm extended, pointed, with an index finger from which the flesh hung ragged and mouldering, at the vial which I in my hellish carnival of blaspheming joy, had placed before me on the table. And he has never left me since—never left me! Where I go, he goes; day and night he is with me! I have fought, I have struggled madly, against the unutterable horror of his presence. In vain! in vain! Spectral illusion, disease of the nerves, an overwrought brain—all these, and a thousand other explanations, have I repeated over and over to myself, till they have lost all meaning, and seemed like the mere gibberish, I knew them, in my case, to be. Day and night, day and night, that fatal finger has pointed, until it has made clear the path of hell and doom to me. See! the glass is full, the poison poured; I only wait the signal ere I drink. When, once more, he arises, as he arose then—when, once more, that smothered shriek, awful, horrible, but now articulate, rises rushing to his lips, and dies there in a single word—then my hour is come, and his word shall be my word—"Now!"

There is but one thing more to be fulfilled; and then—Hell and Eternity! Hell and Eternity! Hell and Eternity! You, his wife, to whom these pages are addressed, will receive with them the accompanying packet. It contains that vile trash, those worthless jewels, for which I bartered my soul and God—the infinitely great, the infinitely good, the infinitely terrible God! This is the extreme torture of all—to have rejected Him, yet be forced to praise and confess Him. But he wrings the truth from me; yea, and He compels me again to admit that I myself have damned myself. One thing more. Think not that any desire of reparation has prompted me in writing these lines, in sealing this packet. No! no! what do the damned care for reparation? Still is it He who forces me; He, and you, most fearful guest, dread instrument of His just vengeance.

O hand of Fate! O guest of Death! See! see! he rises! ah!—he stiffens, and, with inexorable finger, points to the draught of doom—to Hell! and now that shriek!—It gathers in his breast!—it swells upward to his lips!—a moment more, and I shall hear it! But still the pen speeds!—still I write, I write!—driven onward, onward, even to the crack of doom! Hark! hark! the lips open, the air vibrates, the earth trembles, Hell roars!—God! God!

"Now!"

* * * * * *

EPILOGUE.

Here ends this most fearful MS., discovered by me, Mark Lovel, in a secret drawer of yon old writing desk, which I found in a garret of this, my new home—none other than the old abode of the Mayferns. They are all dead now; and let us hope, for their sake, for the sake of humanity, and, above all, for the sake of God, that this dreadful confession is but the ghostly freak of a powerful but diseased imagination.

Yet, as I have said, it may be true; seeing that there is no evil of which man, when wholly given over to himself and his bad passions, is not capable. Supposing it to be genuine, there is nothing but conjecture to guide us, as to some points left obscure by the fearful document.

How the unhappy elder brother, travelling in the East, may have become possessed of that which indirectly caused his death; and why should he have chosen such a strange mode of concealment for it—these are things we have, so far, no means of determining. Otherwise, all is plain enough. The chance meeting; the non-recognition of the brothers, due to the changes wrought by time, misfortune, travel; the secret revealed, by the flashing lightning, to one whose bent of thought predisposed him to its discovery; and then, (that discovery once made) all which follows:—all these matters are plain enough. I need say no more. Such as I have found the horrible story, I give it, reader, to you; with one last remark—that, whatever the horror of the tale, it is, after all, compensated for by the unconscious and most solemn moral it conveys.

M. L.

[THE END.]

PEARLS OF TRUTH.

Since Time is not a person we can overtake when he is past, let us honour him with mirth and cheerfulness of heart while he is passing.

If there is one lesson that experience teaches surely it is this—to make plans that are strictly limited, and to arrange our work in a practical way within the limits that we must accept.

Women accomplish their best work in the quiet seclusion of the home and family by sustained effort and patient perseverance in the path of duty. The influence they exercise, even though it be unrecorded, lives after them, and in its consequences for ever.

The silent pressure of the hand is often of more vital good than a whole volume of good counsel; and one tear, one kiss, one bright encouraging smile, can help the broken heart, the sinking spirit, where words of advice would fall unheeded, or be an aggravation to present pain.

The good man who is reflective will find that as his views on various points change with increasing knowledge, his standard of action changes also, Some things which he once regarded with the utmost leniency he now looks upon as grave wrongs, and as fast as he discovers the best path in any direction it becomes for him the path of duty.

Every breach of faith, every mean advantage taken, however small and trifling each may appear, helps to build up the dishonesty which at some time, and by some one, wrecks the happiness of multitudes and drags down the sinning one to degradation and ruin. The honor of the country and the integrity of the nation are in the hands of every citizen; each is responsible for his share in making or in marring them.

A Mystery.

Pa—"Tommy, what are you thinking about?"

Tommy—"Something that puzzles me very much, pa."

"Perhaps I can enlightened you. What is it, my son?"

"You know what a big fuss is made when a great man dies."

"Yes."

"How they put his picture in the paper, fire minute guns during his funeral, and all that sort of thing."

"Certainly."

"Why don't they do something of that sort of thing when he is born instead of waiting until he dies?"

THE WANING OF THE HONEYMOON.

Alfred, who came home very late last night from a bachelor's dinner, and has been "catching it" this morning: "I HAD A MOST HORRIBLE DREAM LAST NIGHT."

Arabella (sarcastically): DID YOU, INDEED? HOW SURPRISING!

Alfred: DID I WAKE UP WITH A SCREAM, OR ANYTHING OF THAT SORT?

Arabella: NO; PERHAPS YOU HAD EATEN SO MUCH YOU COULDN'T. WHAT WAS YOUR NIGHTMARE?

Alfred: I DREAMED I WAS A BACHELOR AGAIN.

HOUSEHOLD.

Washing Day.

There is no day in the whole calendar universally dreaded by housekeepers every condition as washing day, with its tedious operations, involving so much hard labor and discomfort. This dread is not confined to homes where the housewife does her own washing, but is felt equally in the house of wealth, because of the need of oversight to secure even partially satisfactory results, and because of that same general discomfort which is its concomitant in even the best regulated families. From early morning, sometimes till fall of night, there is a gloom in the domestic atmosphere, accentuated by a smell of soap suds, a dampness of steam, and a general sense of impending disaster. The head of the house is disturbed and anxious, the children are "out of sorts," the cook is cross, and the dinner, a washing day "pick up," is served as if it were a great obligation rendered by a condescending superior under aggravating circumstances, as indeed they are. And the family patiently endures, knowing that on the morrow the atmosphere will be cleared, the dampness gone and everything go pleasantly under the more cheerful influences of ironing day.

But general discomfort is not the only evil attending the processes of washing by the ordinary, long established methods; there is one more lamentable, and I might say fatal, evil, and that is the early breaking down of the health of the person on whom this labor devolves. And taking into consideration the exposure to sudden changes involved in leaving the steaming hot kitchen to go out into the wintry out-door air to hang up clothes, the fatigue of rubbing, rubbing, rubbing on the wash board for hours at a stretch, also the constant inhaling of foul soapy vapors, the alternate soaking of the hands and arms in hot water and cold water, is it to be wondered that even the strongest constitution gives out?

It has long seemed strange to me that the many advantages arising from inventive genius should have been so largely on the side of kinds of labor allotted to men. Is it because men are readier to appreciate and hence readier to adopt these improvements which are the result of so much thought and ingenuity on the part of man? It is well known that the efficiency of these improvements is worth many millions of dollars annually to the farming interests of this country, to say nothing of the saving of labor. Where a man formerly plodded his weary way after a rude plow drawn by oxen, working almost as hard as they, he now may sit jauntily on a cushioned seat driving his horse or horses, who with the improved machines accomplish the necessary labor. And so it is with nearly every process connected with sowing and hoeing, and weeding, cultivation and harvesting, man is helped, while in the majority of households the woman's work goes on by the simple and crude processes of our ancestors. I say majority advisedly, but not all, for there are households in which invention is allowed to do its part in helping the wives and daughters as well as the husbands and sons.

I have in mind such a household, in striking contrast to the households where matters are conducted on old fashioned principles. To these also, however, I hope the day of enlightenment is speedily coming. In this household both husband and wife, clear headed, intelligent people, are quick to grasp an idea and utilize it. Consequently the farming and domestic operations, aided by the best mechanical devices, go on as by clockwork. Especially remarkable is the absence of all wash day dread and litter, this house being as sweet and agreeable on Monday as on any day in the week.

Household Notes.

Put freshly baked cakes away as soon as cold in a closely covered cake box.

A soapy dish-cloth should never be put inside a teapot or a coffeepot.

Set a dish of water in the oven with cake when baking, and it will seldom scorch.

Do not put salt into soup until you are done skimming it, as salt will stop the rising of the scum.

Wash ironware outside as well as inside in hot soapy water, then rinse in clear hot water and wipe dry with a dry crash towel.

Tins should be washed in clean, hot, soapy water, and rubbed freely with mineral soap. This will keep them as bright as new.

Two apples kept in the cake box will keep moderately rich cake moist for a great length of time, if the apples are renewed when withered.

Never put a good knife into hot grease, as it destroys its sharpness. Have always at hand a kitchen-fork for turning meat or frying potatoes.

Granite dishes, browned by use, may be cleaned by simply letting them remain about half an hour in boiling soda-water, then rubbing with a stiff brush or iron cloth.

Never put pots and kettles on the stove half filled with water for the purpose of soaking loose whatever may be adhered to them, as it has a contrary effect. Put plenty of cold water in them, and keep them away from the stove.

Plush goods, and all articles dyed with aniline colors faded from exposure to light, will look bright as ever after being sponged with chloroform. The commercial chloroform will answer the purpose very, well, and is less expensive than the purified.

To Keep the Floor Polished.—The cleanest and most perfectly polished floors have no water used on them. They are simply rubbed off every morning with a large flannel cloth, which is soaked in kerosene oil once in two or three weeks. Shake the dust out of the cloth, and with a rubbing brush or stubby broom go rapidly up and down the planks (not across them). After a few rubbings the floor will assume a polished appearance that is not easily defaced by dirt or footprints.

A Hamilton girl sang, "Darling I am Growing Old," with an expression so pertinent and truthful that her procrastinating lover left her for good.

"Ah, yes," sighed a Toronto lady, "John has been a good husband to me!" "I thought you separated years ago?" "We did, but he is always prompt with the alimony."

"If there is anything I like better than classical music," said Major Brannigan in a high voice, as he moved with the throng out of the concert room, "it's lemons. They both set my teeth on edge."

HEALTH.

The Sick Room.

The sick room, if possible, should be large, high ceiled and tinted or papered in a soft uniform color, such as olive, drab, sage green or dull blue, all of which are restful to the eye, especially if not too light, but of medium depth of shade. There are inexpensive wall papers with unobtrusive patterns in the same color as the ground, only a trifle deeper in shade, that will answer the purpose delightfully, especially in the colors named. The ceiling also should be tinted in a shade of the same quiet color as the wall, as nothing is more distressing to the eyes of an invalid than the glare of a dead white ceiling or an intricate pattern of many colors on the wall.

There should be ample convenience for ventilation; this can be secured by a window opposite a doorway, there being no objection to a temporary draught, provided the patient is well covered and protected from chill of the surface, the writer having seen the room of a paying patient in one of the finest hospitals in New York thus ventilated. A tall three-fold screen is a useful addition to sick room furnishing, to place around the bed during the process of airing the room, also to stand around the sick chair when occasion demands it. At the windows should be thick opaque shades of a soft dark olive color to exclude too great a glare of sunshine, especially when sleep is desirable, the outside or inner blinds to be drawn to if the shades do not darken sufficiently.

A low table with a leaf that can come over the bed is suggested for use in early convalescence, when the patient must still take meals in bed; also one or two low, easy chairs for the watchers who are sometimes needed to sit up through the night.

A painted floor that can be easily cleaned by wiping off with cloths is preferable to any carpet, but to insure quiet, there may be laid down one or two strips, say near the bed and running across to the closet or table where the medicines may be kept. An attendant upon the sick should also insure quiet by wearing list or felt slippers.

An important subject also is that of lighting and warming the sick room. On no account burn a gas jet where it will annoy the patient by its flame, have the light whether of gas or lamp come from a wall bracket over the table where the medicines stand, and keep that, too, out of sight of the patient.

An open grate fire will be the best means of heating the room, and if this cannot be attained, and a stove must be used, let it be one of the old-fashioned open grate style, which is the next best mode of heating to the chimney grate.

The room need not necessarily be bare of ornament, but it must be free from ornament that would be a trouble and weariness to the eye. A few engravings of pleasant subjects, for example, heads or full length figures framed in oak are desirable; also a potted plant or two of freshly green foliage, say a rose geranium in a clean red pot, standing on a window shelf where the sunshine may emphasize its beauty, and a glass of bulbs throwing up their bright green blades to the sun; these will be interesting and cheering.

The remaining necessities for the sick room, such as a soft hair mattress on springs, a rubber sheet, and light but warm coverings, a nightingale to throw over the sick one's shoulders, and other articles, need not now be enumerated, as almost every one is familiar with the ordinary requisites. It remains to be that the air of the room must be made wholesome by systematic ventilation, the patient at such times being enveloped with coverings and screened from the draught.

Health Hints.

Tea that stands a long time steeping, and tea that boils, develops tannic acid, and is consequently powerfully astringent, and unwholesome.

To prevent the usual discoloration attending a bruise, apply a cloth wrung out of very hot water, and renew frequently until the pain ceases.

It is said that the worst case of toothache or neuralgia coming from the teeth may be cured speedily and delightfully by the application of a bit of clean cotton saturated in a solution of ammonia.

Barley water makes a refreshing drink for feverish patients. Put a large teaspoonful of well-washed pearl barley into a pitcher; pour over it boiling water, cover it and let it remain till cold; then drain off the water, add the juice of a lemon, and sugar to the taste.

Fresh hot bread made with yeast is a must unwholesome and even dangerous food for the weakly and dyspeptic. It becomes a doughy, insoluble mass in even the healthiest stomach and cannot be permeated by the gastric fluid, and then passes in this state into the intestines.

Baked milk is said to be good for consumptives and invalids, and is prepared as follows: Put half a gallon of milk in a jar and tie it down with writing paper. Let it stand in a moderate oven for eight or ten hours, when it will be found to have the consistence of cream.

"Cooked Gluten' is an invaluable breakfast dish for nervous dyspeptics with irritable stomachs. It is a steam cooked preparation of the most life-sustaining element of wheat, rich in nitrates and phosphates. It needs no cooking, but simply to be stirred in boiling water or milk. It is eaten with milk simply seasoned with a little salt.

Flaxseed lemonade is excellent in the commencement of a cold, and is made as follows: Steep three hours in a covered pitcher four teaspoonfuls of flaxseed in a quart of boiling water, to which is added the juice of two lemons and sugar to taste. If it proves too thick for drinking, stir in cold water with the lemon juice and sugar.

A good bath for aching and inflamed feet is made by putting one pint of wheat bran and one ounce of saleratus into a foot bath adding one gallon of hot water. As soon as the water has cooled enough for the feet to bear it, put them in and soak them for about fifteen minutes, and the relief will be almost immediate. Repeat every night for a week.

Many housekeepers object to the open grate fire that imparts such a cheerful air to the sitting room on a wintry night, on the score of dust and coal dirt. Nevertheless, a grate fire is one of the healthiest means of heating a room, and, introducing a free circulation of air, keeps the room well ventilated. Steam heat would be excellent did it not, by its excessive dryness, frequently produce unpleasant headaches.

Much ill health may be avoided by paying attention to little things. Every man, woman and child should be careful to get well wrapped up in the damp weather impending. Overshoes are an article that, though unpleasant to wear, are indispensible in wet weather. The ears and neck should be well protected, and heavy clothing worn next to the skin. Avoid taking cold above all things.

Dandruff is a common complaint of late, and one that it seems troublesome to eradicate. The mixture given below has been known to remove the persistent trouble when other means have failed: Take one-half ounce of carbonate of potash, and one ounce of alcohol; add sufficient water to bring the mixture up to eight ounces, and use a little at a time, rubbing well into the scalp until it forms a lather.

At this time of year chilblains begin to trouble nearly all who have to be out of doors, the poor children especially suffering torments from the burning itching sensations. Keep a cloth over the frost bite saturated with a mixture of one drachm of laudanum, one drachm of spirits of rosemary and one ounce of diluted lead water. The unpleasant sensations soon disappear under the influence of this simple remedy.

Signs of the Tongue.

The tongue is the indicator of the system. A white coated tongue indicates febrile disturbance; a brown, moist tongue indicates disordered digestion; a brown, dry tongue indicates depressed vitality, as in typhoid conditions and blood poisoning; a red, moist tongue indicates debility, as from exhausting discharges; a red, dry tongue indicates pyrexia, or any inflammatory fever; a "strawberry" tongue, with prominent papillæ, indicates scarlet fever or rothelm; a red, glazed tongue indicates debility, with want of assimilative power of digestion; a tremulous, flabby tongue indicates delirium tremens; hesitancy in protruding the tongue indicates concussion of the brain; protrusion at one side indicates paralysis of the muscles on that side.

In Case of War.

The Brooklyn Eagle has been studying the possible effects of a bombardment in case of war between Great Britain and the United States. The following facts which it gives concerning the ranges of the great guns of the present day are interesting:—"The 119-ton Krupp at an elevation of 45 degrees has a range of 10.184 miles, and at 35 degrees elevation of 9.779 miles. The 110-ton Armstrong has, with an elevation of 45 degrees, a range of 10.331 miles, and of 9.929 miles with an elevation of 35 degrees. The new 63-ton Woolwich gun, with an elevation of 45 degrees, has a range of 10.404 miles, and at 35 degrees 10.003. At 20 degrees elevation the same gun carries a shot eight miles. Either of these guns with an elevation of 35 degrees could send a shot from deep water off Coney Island right into the navy yard. The 19-ton wire guns which the new British belted cruisers carry have a still greater range than the 63-ton guns, and with an elevation of 20 degrees could probably send a 400-pound shell a distance of ten miles." The point at which ships would lie off Coney Island would be six miles from Fort Hamilton and at least three miles from any army point where a land battery could be erected. The Eagle, therefore, wants the Government either to take the navy yard away from Brooklyn, or to build ships capable of driving away an enemy's ironclads.

WILKINS' STAR PROVERBS.

Song is prayer on the wing.

Prejudice is charity's greatest foe.

It is a wise tramp who eats his own pap.

The child of slander is never born toothless.

In selecting a wife, choose one that will wash.

Infancy is the preface of man, old age the errata.

Tears sprinkled across life's highway, settle the dust of sorrow.

Many act as if they believed the horn of plenty was a glass of whisky.

Men seldom conceal their virtues, nor do their faults conceal them.

A train of pure thought will only run on the track of a well-graded mind.

The man who never committed a folly never appreciated wisdom.

Nature never builded so perfect, but that Fashion tried to improve her work.

Men often rise so high on the wave of success, as to lose sight of earthly joys.

What people often denominate a sea of trouble, is frequently a notion of dyspeptic ideas.

Tired Lives.

"There are persons who get a fixed and permanent feeling of tiredness of life. And so they ought," says Dr. J. Clifford. "They live for themselves—exist to gratify their sensual selves. They are an animated frivolity, an empty and irritating giggle, capable of little more than vacuous mirth, of loving blue china, of going to the races, or ceaselessly spinning round on the whirligig of fashion. Their own essential littleness is the cause of their weariness; their frivolity is the mother of their exhaustion. 'Man,' said the ancient, 'is the measure of the universe;' therefore the less the man, the less his universe—the greater the man, the greater his universe."

Aggravating Enough.

Miss Doolittle (who is deaf, but won't acknowledge it to Mr. Browne): "How is your family, Mr. Browne?"

Mr. Browne: All quite well, thank you, with the exception of my wife. She was out in the rain the other day, and got quite wet; the result was a severe cold on her lungs, which we feared would end in congestion, but she is convalescent now.

Miss Doolittle: Indeed! So glad. And how is Mrs. Browne?

The Rebellion

In the North-West has been suppressed and our citizens can now devote reasonable attention to their corns. The only sure, safe, and painless remedy is Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It never fails; never makes sore spots worse than the original discomfort. See that you get "Putnam's," and take none other.

STATISTICS.

It has been computed that in Scotland 1 in every 75 of the population is a fisherman; in the Isle of Man, 1 in 19; in Ireland, 1 in every 200.

The importation of Madeira wine, which was 750,000 gallons in the year 1819, fell to a little over 100,000 gallons in 1885, when the population of England had nearly doubled.

There are now remaining only 131,952 Redmen throughout the whole of the Dominion of Canada. Of this number 33,959 belong to the tribes of the North-West Territories. A large proportion of the Indians in the eastern provinces are more or less civilized.

The number of Irish-born persons in the United Kingdom in the year 1886 has been estimated by the Irish Registrar-General at 5,589,252. The number of those in Great Britain is estimated at 784,519. The rate of increase in the latter—that is to say, the Irish emigration to Great Britain—is about 680 per annum.

The collective aggregate of the Army and Navy estimates of Europe's five Great Powers amounted in 1885 to £150,000,000. At the head of the list stood Russia, with £47,000,000 charged to her credit, while France stood second with £34,000,000. Great Britain came next with £32,000,000, for which she got a much smaller return than an expenditure £23,000,000 conferred upon Germany and of £14,000,000 upon the Austrian Empire.

The consumption of paper and the volume of its manufacture are sometimes taken as standards of civilization. The United States has 884 paper-mills and 1,106 paper-machines; Germany has 809 mills and 891 machines; France, 420 mills and 425 machines; England, 361 mills, 541 machines; Scotland, 69 mills, 98 machines; Ireland, 13 mills, 13 machines; Russia, 133 mills, 137 machines; and Austria, 220 mills, 270 machines. The average annual production of paper in all countries is estimated at 2,800,000 tons.

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular." The second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto Canada.

When a man knows one thing well he is likely to find out other things.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

You need not wait to ask a man to make a profession, for you can tell him by his acts.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

Formerly the foolish virgins had no oil; now the foolish virgins are too free with the kerosene.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

He is a great conqueror who can conquer himself.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

He—"Would you like to go to the opera to-night?" She—"Indeed I would, but I haven't any clothes." He—"Oh, that won't matter nowadays."

A. P. 323.

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the U.S. and all foreign countries. Engineers, Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Causes. Established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

6 PER CENT. MONEY—INTEREST YEARLY —no commission; Mortgages purchased. R. H. TEMPLE, 23 Toronto Street.

100,000 SHEETS OF 5 & 10c. MUSIC; '80,000 Plays,' Brass Inst's, 'Violins,' 'Flutes,' 'Fifes,' and Musical Inst. Trimmings, at reduced prices. R. B. BUTLAND, 37 King-s. W., Toronto.

MANGLES, 3 kinds; Clothes Wringers, 10 kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

ILLUSTRATED CIRCULARS FREE. CANADIAN BUSINESS UNIVERSITY and Shorthand Institute, Public Library Building, Toronto. Specialties: Book-keeping, Penmanship Shorthand, Typewriting, etc. Write for particulars. THOMAS BENGOUGH, Official Reporter York Co. Court, President. CHARLES H. BROOKS, Sec'y and Manager.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont. Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

R. SPENCE & CO. Consumers will find it to their advantage to ask the trade for our make of Files and Rasps. Re-Cutting a Specialty. Send for price list and terms. HAMILTON - ONT. SMITH FACE

Marvellous Memory DISCOVERY. Wholly unlike Artificial Systems—Cure of Mind Wandering—Any book learned in one reading. Heavy reductions for postal classes. Prospectus, with opinions of Mr. PROCTOR, the Astronomer, Hons. W. W. ASTOR, JUDAH P. BENJAMIN, Drs. MINOR, WOOD and others, sent post FREE, by PROF. LOISETTE, 237 Fifth Avenue. New York.

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO. Manufacturers of the highest grade of SILVER PLATED WARES. Steel Knives, Spoons, Forks, Etc., A SPECIALTY. ALL GOODS GUARANTEED. TORONTO, CANADA.

SAUSAGE CASINGS. New shipment from England, Ex-Steamship "Norwegian." Lowest prices to the trade. We are sole agents in Canada for McBride's Celebrated Sheep Casings. Write for quotations. JAMES PARE & SON Toronto.

Wall Paper MANUFACTURERS. M. STAUNTON & CO., Samples on application. TORONTO, ONT.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM. The Mutual Reserve Fund LIFE ASSOCIATION. The largest and most prosperous open Assessment Association in the world, desires active representatives in every section of Canada. Liberal inducements. It has full Government deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa. Correspondence solicited. Address, J. D. WELLS, General Manager, 65 King Street East, Toronto

Hamilton Scale Co. All Styles of Improved STANDARD SCALES. We make a Specialty of Hay, Stock, and Portable Platform Scales. BEST IN THE MARKET. Every one Guaranteed. All Styles of Trucks. Send for Illustrated Price List.

OSBORNE & CO, - - - HAMILTON, ONT.

SEEDS. RENNIE'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST. Illustrated Catalogue for 1887. Containing description and prices of the choicest FIELD AND GARDEN SEEDS. Mailed free. Every Farmer and Gardener should have a copy before ordering seeds for the coming season. Handsomest catalogue published in Canada. WM. RENNIE, TORONTO.

SNOW DRIFT THE FAVORITE! THERE IS NO BETTER! BAKING POWDER. The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford, On

BOOK AGENTS WANTED. Dr. Withrow's latest and popular "History of Canada," from the discovery of America to the late North-West Rebellion, including a full and correct account of the same, 670 pages, and prices lower than any other book of the same size and quality published in the States or Canada. Another remarkably low price book is Sam. P. Jones' "Living Words," with autobiography, illustrations, etc., 595 pages; also, J. B. Gough's "Platform Echoes," beautifully illustrated, full of anecdotes, etc., and sells at sight. Our Family Bibles are cheap, and superior to others. Terms Liberal, circulars on application. WM. BRIGGS, 78 & 80 King St. E., Toronto, Ont.

Ontario Pump Co'y, TORONTO, ONTARIO.

Geared Wind Mills For Driving Machinery, Pumping Water, etc. From 1 to 40 horse power.

Tanks—Round or Square. Capacity from 12 to 2,855 barrels.

17 Sizes. PUMPING WINDMILLS from 8 to 30 ft. diameter.

I X L FEED MILL. The cheapest, most durable and perfect Iron Feed Mill ever invented.

PUMPS. Both Iron and Wood, Force and lift. We will guarantee our Deep Well Pumps to beat any other pump in the market.

We manufacture the most complete line of HAY NG TOOLS, —SUCH AS— Hay Carriers, Horse Hay Forks, Palleys, Floor Hooks, Etc., in Canada. We stand ready to GUARANTEE OUR STANDARD HAYING TOOLS the best in the market.

SEEDS. RENNIE'S GREAT DOLLAR COLLECTION OF GARDEN SEEDS. $1.00. RENNIE'S SEEDS ARE THE BEST. And in order to induce hundreds of new customers to give them a trial, I am offering this Complete Collection of the very choicest Vegetable Seeds, including many novelties, FREE by MAIL for $1.00, packages of the Improved Half-Long Blood Beet; Rennie's Selected Nonpariel Lettuce, the best in cultivation; the Montreal Nutmeg Musk Melon, the finest flavored Melon ever introduced; Henderson's White Celery, and standard varieties of Cabbage, Carrot, Corn, Cucumber, Water Melon, Onion (two best kinds), Parsnip, Radish, Spinach, Tomato, Turnip and Herbs; also a pound of the best Wax Beans, and a pound of the new Pea, Bliss' Everbearing, which is the finest Garden variety in cultivation. The entire collection amounting, at Catalogue rates and postage, to $1.50, will be sent free by mail to any address in Canada for $1.00. Order at once, and induce your friends to send with you. I will supply Five of the above Collections for $4.00. My Annual Descriptive Catalogue now ready. Free to all applicants. Send for it at once. ADDRESS, WILLIAM RENNIE, SEED GROWER, TORONTO, ONTARIO.

Farmers and Threshers! USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN

Peerless Oil. NINE GOLD MEDALS Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE, for your Wagons and Horse Powers. Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO.

BRICK MACHINES. —WITH ALL THE— LATEST IMPROVEMENTS. SPRING PRESS BOX, - WHITE OAK POSTS, - AND IRON BRACES. Over 500 of our Machines now in use and no complaints. Prices and Terms to suit buyers. Send for circular. The E. & C. GURNEY CO., TORONTO, ONT.

THRESHERS, SAW-MILLERS, OWNERS OF LIGHT POWER, KEEP YOUR POWER AT WORK BY PURCHASING Shingle Machine, Chopper or Veneer Machine. SMALL INVESTMENT. EASILY MANAGED. Good profits, quick returns. BRANCH WORKS ST. PAUL, MINN., U. S. A.

This Cut represents our Patent Shingle Machine and Jointer. Special Catalogues for each department. When writing state wants. New Saw-Mill Catalogue just finished. WATEROUS ENGINE WORKS CO., BRANTFORD, ONT.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Publisher.

MARKDALE, MAR. 10, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—The Montreal Carnival Committee have a deficit of $800 to face.

Henry Warden Beecher was stricken on Sunday last with an attack of apoplexy, from which he did not rally. He died on Tuesday morning at 9.30.

—In the Algoma elections, the latest report give Dawson the Conservative 50 ahead with six places to hear from.

—Sir John says he will have a majority of about 45.

EAST GREY.

Below are the official returns by townships:

	Sproule.	Gilray.
Collingwood	480	331
Euphrasia	439	158
Proton	272	361
Melancthon	295	224
St. Vincent	301	298
Osprey	287	249
Meaford	199	154
Shelburne	127	70
	2400	1845

Total majority for Sproule, 555.

Number of voters on the list, 6291; number of ballots cast, 4279; rejected ballots, 17; spoiled ballots, 17.

OFFICIAL RETURNS.

Owen sound, March 5.—The returning officer for North Grey to-day declared Mr. James Masson, Conservative, elected by a maiority of 57.

Durham, March 5.—The offical court for South Grey gives Mr. Landerkin, Reform a total of 2,292 votes, against 2,195 for Mr. Jamieson, the Conservative condidate; Mr. Landerkin being elected by a majority of 97.

The Origin of the Banjo.

"Dar's gwine to be an oberflow, said Noah, lookin' solemn,
For Noah took de Herald, and he r d de ribber column,
An' so he sot his hands to work a-cl'arin' timber patches.
An' 'lowed he's gwine to build a boat to beat the steamer "Natchez."

Now Noah had done kotched a lot of ebery sort o' beas'es.
Ob all de shows a-trabblin', it beat 'em all to pieces!
He had a Morgan colt and seberal head o Jersey cattle,
An' druv 'em 'board de Ark as soon's he heard de thunder rattle.

Now Ham, de only nigger whut wuz runnin' on de packet,
Sot lonesome in de barber shop an' c'u'dn't stan' de racket;
An' so, for to amuse hisself, he steamed some wood and bent it,
An' soon he had a banjo made. de fust dat wuz inyented.

He wet de ledder, stretched it on; made bridge an' screws an' apron,
An' fitted in a proper neck—'twuz berry long an' tap'rin';
He tuk some tin, and twisted him a thimble for to ring it,
An' den de mighty question riz: how wuz he gwing to string it?

De 'possum had as fine a tail as dis dat I'se a-singin',
De ha'r's so long, an' thick an' strong,—jest fit for banjo stringin';
Dis nigger shaved 'em off so short as wash-day dinner graces,
An' sorted ob 'em by de size. from little E's to basses.

He strung her, tuned her, struck a jig,—'twuz "Nebber min' de wedder"—
She soun' like forty-lebben bands a playin all togedder;
Some went to pattin'; some to dancein'; Noah called de figgers,
An' Ham he sot an' knocked de tunes—de happiest ob niggers.

An' curi's. too—dat nigger's ways; his people nebber lose 'em;
For whar you find de nigger, dar's de banjo an' de 'possum.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a similar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections also a positive and radical cure for nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases. has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Send by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper W. A. NOYES 149 Power's Block Rochester, N. Y. 294-26 E. O. W.

Strawberry Cultivation.

The different varieties often require a different mode of culture, in order to obtain the largest yield and the largest berries. The large, course-growing varieties of the Chili species, or the hybrids between these and the Virginia Strawberry, succeed best when grown in hills or single rows, and they are usually quite unproductive, if the plants are permitted to run together and become in the least crowded; while others will yield well either in narrow rows or wide beds, and where the plants become matted.

In the "hill system" the plants are usually set out in rows about three feet apart, and the plants eighteen inches to two feet apart in the row. The ground is kept thoroughly cultivated among the plants during the entire season, and all runners removed as soon as they appear, or at least once a week. This treatment will ensue very large and strong plants, with numerous crowns or buds, from which fruit-stalks will push up the following spring.

When grown in single rows, the plants may be set about twelve inches apart in the rows, and for garden culture the rows should be about three feet apart, but for field culture I prefer to allow a little more space between the rows, or four feet; but the distance may be varied according to the habit of the plants.

In the bed or matted system, two or three rows are planted in beds four feet wide, and the plants allowed to cover the entire surface until they form a close mat or bed; hence the name. One or two crops are taken, and then the plants are plowed up as usual when cultivated in rows. But by thinning out occasionally, the beds may be kept in a moderately productive condition for several years, especially with some of the more slender growing of our native varieties. Some cultivators, who raise strawberies for market, adopt what may be called an annual system, setting out plants in spring either in single rows or narrow beds, giving them extra care during the first season; then, after the fruit is gathered up the next, the beds are ploughed up.—A. S. FULLER, in American Agriculturist for March.

Cheese Factory Meeting.

Town Hall Flesherton Feb. 26th 1887.

A meeting of patrons was held for the purpose of reorganizing for the running of the cheese factory for another term of three years under the management of M. G. Stewart.

It was resolved to elect officers for the current year:—The following were duly elected;

President, George Stewart.
Vice President, Wm. Wilcock.
Secretary, Jas. Brodie.

DIRECTORS,

Route No. 1 Wm. Wright,
" " 2 Jacob Holly.
" " 3 A. Johnston.
" " 4 A. Stewart,
" " 5 T. Wright.
" " 6 S, Pedlar.
" " 7 C. Bellamy.
" " 8 T. McArthur.

The meeting then adjourned to Saturday March the 19th at 2 o'clock p. m. when the routes will be finally laid out and the hauling of the milk to the factory over the several roads let.

Jas. Brodie, Sec.

MARRIED.

In Crangeville on the 24th of February, by the Rev. Mr. Henderson, Mr. A. L. Morrow, of Chatsworth, to Miss Mary Elizabeth Noble, of Markdale.

TO RENT.

THE old and well known Pickell farm adjoining Flesherton, consisting of 100 acres, eighty-five cleared, twenty fall ploughed. Splendid bank barn with spacious horse stable, stone cow stable, and never-failing well, all underneath barn. Fine young orchard of 100 trees bearing well a good variety of fruit. Comfortable log house.

For terms apply to Wm. Brown, Esq., Markdale, or on the premises to

W. G. PICKELL.

WORTHY OF CONFIDENCE.—The preparation sold by druggists known as Hagyard's Yellow Oil is worthy of all confidence as a household remedy for pain. It has been over a quarter of a century in the market, and never fails to cure or relieve rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, quinsy, deafness, burns, scalds, druises, frost bites and internal or externals pains and injuries.

NOTICE.

All persons having accounts against the undersigned are hereby requested to hand the same in to G. S. Bowes, Markdale on or before the 26 March, and the same if correct will be paid by Minnie and Emma Williams,

ROBERT WILLIAMS,

340] Glenelg March 8th 1887

THE LATEST!

New Carpets
—AT—
McFarland's.

New Lace Curtains
—AT—
McFarland's.

New Tweeds
—AT—
McFarland's.

New Boots & Shoes
—AT—
McFarland's.

New Ties & Hats
—TA—
McFarland's.

NEW JUBILEE HANDKERCHIEFS
—AT—
McFarland's.

New Black & Colored Silks at
McFarland's.

My European buyer advises large purchases in New Dress Goods, Muslins, Gloves, Laces, Silks, Parisols, Plushes, &c., &c. Which will exceed all former efforts in style price or quality.

TEA! TEA! TEA!

Two extensive Shipments of pure Japan Tea's received direct from Japan over the C. P. Railway, via British Columbia. Is it not to your interest to purchase your Tea from Headquarters rather than through Peddlers who get their supplies from 3rd class Houses in Toronto or elsewhere, and charge an exhorbitant price to cover expenses in travelling around from house to house. Save your money and come direct to McFarland's the largest Tea Dealer in Grey County.

W. J. McFARLAND,
Direct Importer.

MARKDALE SASH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly.

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,
MARKDALE.

GROCERY, POVISION
—AND—
LIQUOR STORE.

A fresh stock of groceries just opened at

DAVIS'S

Store, bought for cash thus saving discounts, and will be sold for spot cash at rock bottom prices.

Japan Tea worth 45 cents selling for 35 cents. Japan Tea worth 55 cents for 45. Gunpowder Tea worth 55 cents for 45. 15 lbs. extra granulated sugar $1, other grades accordingly. Agent for the Liquor Tea Co. A valuable prize given with every six ½ lb. packages bought.

PROVISIONS!

Flour Bran, Shorts, Chop, Screenings, Oatmeal, Cornmeal, &c., &c.

LIQUORS!

Rye and Malt, Port and Native Wine, Brandy, Jamaica, Rum, Scotch Whiskey, the best in the market, also a choice lot Bottled Liquors in finest Brandies, Scotch and Irish Whiskeys, Superior Malt and 5 year old Rye. Parties requiring liquors for medicinal purposes will do well to give us a call as they may rely upon getting a good article.

A Call Respectfully Solicited,

W. L. Davis,
MARKDALE.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh; 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333-8o

The Law Concerning Newspapers.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed in his name, or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

2. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted in the place where the paper is published, although the subscriber may reside hundreds of miles away.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post-office or removing and leaving them uncalled for. while unpaid, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

For Sale or to Rent.

A WAGON SHOP, in the Village of Holland Centre, situated on the C. P. R. 16 miles from Owen Sound, a good heavy frame Wagon Shop 24 x 36 ft. with good paint shop and lumber house in connection with it. The above with or without a full stock of good dry lumber will be disposed of on very reasonable terms as the proprietor is giving up business. and leaving this part of the country, for further particulars address or apply to

E. H. NEELANDS, Proprietor,
Holland Centre, Ont. 333-40

Partnership Notice.

DR'S SPROULE & BRODIE, have entered into a partnership for the practice of their profession. Dr. Sproule will be found at his old office Turner's Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his office Mathew's new block. 333-40

FOR SALE.

For sale or to rent for a term of years—50 acres—all cleared well watered, good buildings, 40 acres free from stumps and stones, over which all kinds of machinery can be run 1½ miles from Markdale.

338-41 WM. BROWN.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE St., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

DISTRICT DOINGS.

CONDENSED FROM OUR EXCHANGES.

A daily mail is to be opened between Chatsworth and Durham.

Thornbury is to have a cheese factory next summer with T. Malbot president.

Rev. E. R, Young of Meaford received unanimous invitation to remain the 3rd year.

Last week Thornbury News bristled with newsy paragraphs.

Chatsworth Presbyterian Church, is reported by the News, as in excellent financial circumstances, and a subscription list for the erection of a new church is being liberaly signed.

Mr. Wm. McComb of Holland was presented and treated to a fine fur coat recently on the occasion of his moving to the North-west.

A family in Chatsworth is said to dwell in the same house with their cattle (a cow and calf.)

Meaford is to vote the 29th inst., on a by-law to raise $2,500 to build a fire-proof firehall.

B. Allen ex-M. P. was recently serenaded by Chatsworth brass band while in that village.

W. E. McAllister of Durham has rented his hotel to Joseph Black of Shelburne.

Brampton has lost three valuable and prominent citizens the past three months by the hand of death, viz.—Mr. John Haggert of the firm of "Haggert manufacturing Co.," Mr. Thos. Milner, Mayor, and Mr. Alexander Dick, Registrar of Peel Co.

McNabb Bros., late of the Chatsworth flour mill, which was recently destroyed by fire, have leased the mill at Holland Centre, Mr. Moses Smith the former tenant. has gone to Tilsonburg.

An Indian named William Trap—a band master at Cape Croker—was frozen to death two weeks ago while on the way from Oxenden to Cape Croker.

OWEN SOUND roller rink is closed, and is to be turned into a billiard parlor and bowling alley.

MR. J. C. REID has disposed of the site, where stood the Queen's Hotel, to Messrs. McLean & Walters, of Markdale, for $900. It is the intention of the purchaser to build a hotel in the spring.—[Dundalk Herald

MR. ALLEN MORROW returned to Chatsworth on Friday last with his young bride. We wish the happy couple much joy and prosperity. The band turned out and serenaded them the evening after their return, and were handsomely entertained and presented with a V.—[Chatsworth News.

SEES SNAKES.—While L. A. Bodie, of Sydenham, was walking over one of his fields on the 10th of February he came across a snake of considerable proportions, and thinking it quite a curiosity at this time of the year he carried it a considerable distance to show it to some others. They speak of it being quite lively and able to run at a good pace. It was found a long distance from any buildings and was crawling through the snow.—[O. S. Advertiser.

A MAIL CARRIER'S MISTAKE.—A very amusing incident took place at Glammis last week. A drouthy gentleman from that neighborhood sent with the stage driver for a jug of whiskey from the vendor at Pinkerton. The stage driver having imbibed rather freely before returning when he reached Glammis, instead of taking the mail bag into the post office he carried the one containing the jug of whiskey and took the other with him. The good people of Glimmis no koubt appreciated their mail that evening, but it is said that the vendor will have to pay for the joke.—Pasley Advocate.

On Saturday last Mr. Jenkins of the Durham Chronicle was driving a spirited team to a dog cart from Durham to Flesherton when the horses shied at some wood about a mile west of Flesherton Station, throwing out all the occupants Mrs. Jenkins, sr., an old lady of about 70 years, was severely bruised, but Mrs. Jenkins, jr., and her little daughter escaped without serious injuries. Mr. Spint who had accepted an invitation for a drive got his face badly scratched and bruised, but Mr. Jenkins, who hung on to the lines, was dragged over the hard snow and struck a pile of hardwood with his head, sustaining two serious gashes in the scalp. The vehicle was righted and driven rapidly to the station where Dr, Christoe of Flesherton was soon in attendance.—[World.

Don't

Don't go to bed with cold feet. Don't sleep in the same under-garments that are worn during the day. Don't sleep in a room that is not well ventilated. Don't sit or sleep in draught. Don't lie on the left side too much. Don't lie on the back to keep from snoring. Don't try to get along with six or seven hours sleep out of twenty-four. Don't jump out of bed immediately on awakening in the morning. Don't forget to rub yourself all over with a crash towel or hands before dressing. Don't forget to take a drink of pure water before breakfast. Don't take long walks when the stomach is entirely empty. Don't start to do a day's work without eating a good breakfast. Don't eat anything but well cooked and nutritious foods. Don't eat what you don't want, just to save it. Don't stand over hot air registers. Don't inhale hot air, or fumers of any acids. Don't strain your eyes by reading on an empty stomach, or when ill, Don't ruin your eyes by reading or sewing at dusk, by a dim light, or flickering candle when very tired.

Honor Roll.

Honor Roll S. S. No. 7, Holland, for the month of Febauary.

Fourth Class—Mattie Bailey, Wray Jackson, Bertie Thibadeau.

Sr. Third Class—Hannah Freeborn, Ada Roulston, Willie Doyle.

Jr. Third Class—Albert Roulston, Thomas Freeborn, Thomas Irwin.

Second Class—Wm. Crowther, Francis Freeborn, Thomas Speers.

Part Second—Alfred Newman, Chas. Doyle, Joseph Fee.

Part First—Louisa Doyle, Ralph Roulston.

LIZZIE MOORE, Teacher.

Trade With China.

THREE STEAMERS CHARTERED BY THE CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY.

MONTREAL, March 4th.—The arrangements of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to have through connections with China has been completed, the Company having chartered three steamships. The first of these is expected to leave Hong Kong early in May. The last sailing vessel, the George, for this season, conveying teas and fancy goods, will leave Yokohama, Japan, about March 7, for Vancouver, B. C.

Honor Roll.

The Honor Roll for S. S. No. 4, Holland, for Feb. is as follows:

IV Class—M. Farlie, Thos. Troughton, E. Troughton.

Good Conduct—M. Farley, M. Price, E. Troughton.

III Class—Carson Price, F. Silverlock, Thos. Farley.

Good Conduct—Minnie Shute.

II Class—Maggie Shute, J. Hannah, B. Mathews.

Good Conduct—B. Mathews.

I Class (Pt. II)—Joe Wise, J. McLellan, Joe O'Brine.

Good Conduct—Jas. Givens.

I Class—Emma Price, Jas. Shute, George Shute.

Good Conduct—Emma Price.

A. U. HORTON, Teacher.

Wedding Anniversaries.

1st Anniversary, Cotton Wedding.
2nd Anniversary, Paper Wedding.
3rd Anniversary, Leather Wedding.
5th Anniversary, Wooden Wedding.
7th Anniversary, Woolen Wedding.
10th Anniversary, Tin Wedding.
12th Anniversary, Silk and Fine Linen Wedding.
15th Anniversary, Crystal Wedding.
20th Anniversary, China Wedding.
25th Anniversary, Silver Wedding.
30th Anniversary, Pearl Wedding.
40th Anniversary, Ruby Wedding.
50th Anniversary, Golden Wedding.
75th Anniversary, Diamond Wedding.

Honor Roll.

Honor Roll S. No. 5, Glenelg, for January and February.

4th Class—David Simmes, Mary Simmes, Lizzie White.

3rd Class—Cathrine Norris, Lizzie McCarty, Alphens Murry.

2nd Class—Robbie White, Johnnie Symmes, Newton Bell.

1st Class (Pt. II)—Mary E. Norris, George Symmes, Eddie Burnett.

1st Class—Lizzie Symmes, Sydney Crowe, Jessie Duncan.

AGGIE WHITE, Teacher.

—NEW—

Hardware.

To builders and those about to build your wants supplied at reasonable rates.

IN STOCK

☞ NAILS, GLASS, PUTTY, HINGES, BUTTS, SCREWS, DOOR HANDLES, TOWER BOLTS, CHAIN BOLTS, HAMMERS, CHISSELS, SAWS, BRACES, BITTS, CUTTERY, LAMPS, LAMP GLOBES, &c.

OILS, LEADS AND COLORS!

—all pure goods—

PAINTS ground and mixed any shade ready for the brush in quantities from one pint up, guaranteed free from all alkalies and other foreign substances.

Full Lines in Tinware at bottom prices.

CALL AND SEE US IT WILL PAY YOU.

Note the place the sign of the cross cutt saw.

E. MABEE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confdence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

NOTICE.

ALL persons are hereby warned against giving goods of any kind whatsoever on my account after this date without my written order, as I will not be responsible for the payment of the same.

JESSE DOWDING.

Enphrasia, March 4th, 1887.

FOR SALE.

A Thoroughbred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for further particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
338-48 Holland Centre P. O.

Stock Taking

SALE

At the Toronto House,

Markdale.

SLAUGHTER PRICES FOR CASH.

Wm. Brown.

"HURRAH"

FOR THE NEW YEAR

AND

Good Bye to the Old One.

'HURRAH'

FOR

The New Drug Store,

which is still in Markdale, and the place to get cured of your many ills, in the shape of a little Soothing Syrup, Paregoric, Teething Powders or a Rubber Ring; Should they fail, then resort to a box of

STEPHEN'S

PARNELL DUBLIN DOGERS.

SHOULDER BRACES!
SHOULDER BRACES!
Ladies and Gents,
SHOULDER BRACES!

Pure Cream of Tartar, Fine Baking Soda, Mustard, Ginger, Pepper, Cloves, Allspices, ground and unground of the finest grades.

School Books! School Books! and Stationary at

STEPHEN'S Drug Store.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

IN returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have re-moved to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

HAMPDEN

WATCHES

DURABLE-:-RELIABLE.

—ALSO—

Waltham, Elgin and Colombiers,

—IN STOCK—

American Clocks, Silverware, Wedding Rings.

☞ Watch repairing and fitting Spectacles a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,

RELIABLE JEWELLER,
MARKDALE

XMAS GOODS.

NEW GOODS ARRIVING EVERY

—WEEK AT—

RUSSELL'S

Noted Jewellry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Consisting of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES, CLOCKS, JEWELRY, SPECTACLES, SILVER-WARE, FORKS, SPOONS, KNIVES, Fancy MIRRORS, ALBUMS, VIOLINS &c.

Any one looking for Xmas presents will do well to call at RUSSELL'S, Flesherton, a fine stock to select from, and prices very low. If your watch or clock wants repairing, RUSSELL'S is the place to take it: A satisfactory job every time, ☞ Remember,

JAS. G. RUSSEL'S

Noted Jewelry Store,
FLESHERTON.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRAITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE,

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 13, CON., 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation, well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY
31-t Berkley.

Priceville Roller Mill.

THE NEW MILL IS NOW COMeted and in full working order. The oller process is thorough in every respect and a full line of rolls.

THE HIGHEST CASH PRICE will be paid for any quantity of Wheat.

ositively no redi t will be givenin the Mill.

The Saw Mill is doing splendid work. Bring in your logs and you can get the lumber home with you.

First-Class Planer and Matcher.

Mr. John McLeod manages the Saw Mill which I hope is a sufficient guarantee for good work.

ROBERT McGOWAN.

YOUNG FOLKS.

Peanuts.

One day, when Trixie Baker's mamma had gone out calling, and left Trixie with Uncle Nate, Delly Nickerson came over. Two little girls made a good deal more noise than one, and Uncle Nate knew it.

"Now be good and don't bother," said he. "And here's five cents apiece for you."

"Well, we will," said Trixie.

"Because," said Delly, wisely, "we'd be good anyway; and it'll be real nice to have five cents."

"What will we do with it?" asked Trixie.

"Buy peanuts," said Delly.

"And make peanut-candy, Delly, won't we? I'll ask Uncle Nate."

Uncle Nate said yes, with his nose in a book. Trixie rather thought it would have been just the same if she had asked to go to the Sandwich Islands.

"Isn't Uncle Nate a splendid man to take care of folks?" she asked Delly.

Then they put on their hoods and cloaks and mittens, and away they ran to the candy-shop as fast as they could go.

A pint of peanuts, with a few thrown in, makes a pretty big budget.

"We ought to shell 'em before we boil the molasses," said Trixie.

So when their mittens and cloaks and hoods were tumbled in a little heap on the hall-table, they divided the peanuts and sat down by the fire as comfortable as could be.

"When you eat one, I will," said Trixie.

"Yes," said Delly, "and when you do, I will, too."

"And put the meats in that cup on the table," said Trixie. "Look what a lovely brown one, Delly."

"See this one, too," said Delly.

And both those peanuts went—where do you guess?

Then they chattered and worked away—Trixie and Delly—like two merry, busy squirrels, for a long time—maybe it was half-an-hour. At last Delly said, brushing down her apron,—

"Mine are done, Trixie."

"So are mine," said Trixie. "Why, why-ee Delly Nickerson, what a little few we've got in the cup!"

"Why—I only took one when you did," said Delly.

"So did I," said Trixie. "Let's eat the rest of 'em, Delly; there's such a two or three."

And there wasn't any peanut-candy, after all.

"Down He Run."

On the railway in Italy they have an electrical apparatus at the station which rings whenever a train leaves, six strokes upon a gong in the next station. One day the station master at Carpi heard his gong ring just three strokes and then stop. He could not understand this, and thought something must be wrong on the line, so he ordered the warning signals to be given along the road, and the train which had been started was brought to a dead stop.

Then the train men and the station-master began to telegraph back and forth and ask questions, and all the passengers became anxious and wanted to know what had happened, but after a good deal of inquiry everything along the line seemed to be all right and the train ordered to go ahead after a good deal of delay.

The station-master, about this time, thought it might be well to look into his gong, and there he found stuck fast between the cogs of the electrical apparatus, a poor little mouse.

The unhappy animal had happened to be in the interior of the clock when it "struck one," and down he attempted to run, but was caught between the murderous wheels. His little body was big enough to stop the whole apparatus, and consequently the train as well.

An Instructive Experiment.

A boy can learn something of one of the important forces of nature by means of a simple apparatus. Let him find a bottle that has been cast aside as of no use. Having fitted a cork to the neck, let him fill the bottle with water, drive in the cork and tie it down. Set the bottle where it will be cool enough to freeze the water. When the water freezes the bottle will break. If a stone bottle, such as ink is often imported in, be used, or a hollow iron shell with a stopper to screw into it, the result will be the same. After the American war a dealer in old iron wished some large shells broken up, but the work was too expensive in the ordinary way. A young man who understood the forces of nature, agreed to break them open for a few cents apiece. He did so by filling the shells with water, and then exposing them to freezing. What causes the bottle to break? Water when cooled contracts in common with most other substances—contracts until it is cooled to thirty-nine degrees. When it reaches that point it stops contracting and begins to expand, and when frozen it expands one-eleventh its former volume. In expanding, water exercies great force, as seen in the breaking of the bottle in the experiment. This expansion of water in freezing is an important agent in nature. It breakes the rocks apart, and when water enters the minute crevices of the rock and freezes it throws off minute particles, and aids in converting the rock into soil. It is not always the great forces of nature that accomplish so much. This quiet taking up of water by the minute crevices of the rock, the freezing of this water in a cold, still night, exercises a power of which we have no conception, yet is constantly at work wearing down the hard rock into fertile soil.

To Boys Commencing Business.

Be on hand promptly in the morning at your place of business, and make it a point never to be late, and perform cheerfully every duty. Be respectful to your employers, and to all in authority over you, and be polite to every one; politeness costs nothing, and it will help you wonderfully in getting on in the world. And above all, be honest and truthful. The boy who starts in life with a sound mind in a sound body, who falls into no bad habits, who is honest, truthful, and industrious, who remembers with grateful love his father and mother, and who does not grow away from his church and Sunday-school, has qualities of mind and heart that will insure him success to a remarkable degree, even though he is endowed with only ordinary mental capacity; for honor truth and industry, are more than genius.

Don't be foppish in your dress, and don't buy anything before you have the money to pay for it. Shun billiard saloons, and be careful how you spend the evenings. Cultivate a taste for reading, and read only good books. With a love for reading, you will find in books friends ever true, and full of cheer in time of gloom, and sweet companionship for lonely hours. Other friends may grow cold and forsake you, but books are always the same. And in closing, boys, I would say again, that with truth, honesty, and industry, and a living faith in God, you will succeed.

"Honor and shame from no condition rise;
Act well your part; there all your honor lies."

Proud of His Sister.

The Chicago Tribune relates the case of a young man who was regarded as a phenomenon, because he took his sister to all the best entertainments, and actually devoted himself to her during the lecture and opera season. Being praised for his unusual attention to his sister, the young man promptly and proudly replied:

"No, there is nothing wonderful or extraordinary about it. She is the only woman I know in whom I have the most thorough confidence. She is always the same, always pleased and affectionate, and to tell you the candid truth I'm afraid she'll go and marry some of these imitation men around here and be unhappy all her life.

"She has nobody else to look to, and I'll take care she does not have to look to anybody else. I suppose some day a genuine man will come along. If he's a genuine man, I won't object. Until he does come, she's good enough for me; and if ever I find as good a girl I'll marry her."

The example is most commendable. A young man would do well to seek his sister's society until he finds another lady as good as his sister.

Ode to Glasgow, Scotland.

BY JOHN IMRIE, TORONTO.

Dear Glasca! aft I think o' thee,
An' happy days lang syne;
Though distant, thou art dear tae me
By memory's sacred shrine.
Aft hae I climb'd Balmanno's steep,
An' ran doon Portlan' brae,
An' gather'd "gushes" in a heap,
Wi' mony a gled "hurra!"

In summer time, whan schule was out,
An' we had got "the play!"
I've wannert mony a mile about
The bale lang simmer's day;
A favourite place was Glasca Green,
By bonnie banks o' Clyde,
Where Nelson's monument is seen,—
Our hero an' our pride!

An' aft we went by Broomielaw,
Tae Renfrew's cosy toon;
There mony a noisy luckless craw
We managed tae shoot doon!
Then ower the Clyde, tae Kelvinside,
We took our hameward way,
Weel pleased tae ride tae whaur we'd bide,
Sae tired were we that day!

Oh, Glasca, dear! I've drapt a tear
O' happiness an' joy,
At a' thy memories sae dear
Whan I was bit a boy!
Three thoosan' miles are stretched atween
My new hame an' my auld,
Yet in my heart sweet memories green
Shall bide till I'm deed cauld!

The Golden Threads of Life.

BY MAUDE L. RADFORD, AGED 14.

The golden threads of life, are formed
By little, kindly deeds,
In helping a poorer brother
Or caring for his needs.

In speaking pleasant, hopeful words,
Though few they can be bright,
They may cheer another's pathway,
Or make a burden light.

They may make him feel that this earth
Contains some hearts still kind,
That, though most things look gloomy, yet
Some sympathy he'll find.

If nought else a smile may be given,
It will no effort cost,
It may make a heart feel lighter,
Be sure 'twill not be lost.

And these frail, golden, threads unite,
Until a cord they make,
A cord firm, strong, and beautiful,
A cord that will not break.

A cord which draws us closer, to
Our happy home above,
A cord which brings us nearer, to
Our Heav'nly Father's love.

Love the Victor.

BY NORA LAUGHER.

"It is astonishing how little one feels poverty when one loves."—Bulwer Lytton.

. . . . . .

The wind blows chill upon the frozen pane
Summer is gone and winter here again!

Oh! wondrous love, stronger far than death,
Bite, bitter frost, we care not for thy breath!
Warmer than sunshine, sweeter than wild birds' song,
Love alone can laugh, keen frost, at thy sharp tongue.
Robbed, rude Boreas, art thou of thy sting
While loving hearts together fondly cling;
Softened is thy wail by winning words of gold,
Vanquished thou art by love, the ever bold.

Awaiting by the Bars.

When the slow sinking sun
Disappears o'er the mountain
And the twilight steals down
With its few twinkling stars,
I spring from my haunt
By the old rustic fountain
To meet little Susie,
Who waits at the bars.

So lightly I leap o'er
The dew dampened grasses,
As away to the trysting
I joyously bound:
I scarce heed the distance,
So quickly it passes,
And plunge down the hillside
Where she's to be found,

What a joy fills my heart
When I see her there standing,
Awaiting my coming,
Demurely and shy,
But no welcome smile
To her beauty is lending,
And no look of love
Lights her large hazel eye.

Then I fling down the bars,
And, light as a zephyr,
She gallops away
Across hillock and down,
For Susie's a cow—
A young Jersey heifer—
And I—well, I am
A young Jersey clown.

Old Age.

As old age creeps over a person, the conditions of the animal organism changes, and they possess less elasticity to meet and overcome such strains as can be invited with impunity in youth. Exposure to inclement weather, the sudden shock of good or bad news, are frequently sufficient to terminate a life which with care would be able to endure many more years of active usefulness. It is therefore highly desirable that persons of advancing years should make their personal habits the subject of careful study, and with the help of some wise counsellor regulate their daily living in accordance with the changed conditions of their animal economy.

FARM.

FROM HAY TO GRASS.

BY STEPHEN POWERS.

The importance of turning the sheep afield frequently during the winter, at least when the ground is bare, is recognized by every good shepherd. But as soon as the grass begins to grow, even a little, upon the approach of spring, it will be necessary to exercise caution. The old grass which they had during the winter, the long tufts of rowen mixed about equally with dead grass and lurking under bushes or briars on some north hill-side, which the sheep neglected during the summer, has a different effect on them from that of the young growth. The latter is washy and scours them, and "takes away their appetites," as the old farmers say. During the winter I frequently let my sheep out twice a week, if the weather is favorable; and I find no injurious result from it, even though they remain on the grass all day and fill themselves. In fact, I generally give them only their grain rations on these days, and no coarse feed at all. Nor do I find their appetites, the following morning anywise dulled for their hay and fodder. But after the grass starts a little this will not answer. If they are left on it even half an hour, the next day they will mince over their dry feed and not consume a quarter of it. They are purged, and they stand with hollow bellies and look through the gate all day long. They must now be restrained in their run on the grass; it must be greatly curtailed. The last two or three weeks, or month, before turning them out to pasture, I do not suffer them to run on the grass more than a quarter as much as they do through the winter. Fifteen or twenty minutes a day, or, say, while you are putting a fresh feed into the racks, are long enough; and, with this restriction, the privilege may be granted them every day. I do not lengthen the time at all up to the very last day of feeding them on dry feed. Then catch and tag the flock, and shorten the long hoofs. It is well to attend to both these matters several days beforehand, on rainy days, or at any other convenient time, and let all go.

DEPASTURING WHEAT WITH SHEEP.

It is when spring has fully set in that the uses of depasturing appear. The ground is then seamed with frost cracks, puffy; the wheat tufts are more or less thrown up; the earth needs to be compressed and packed about the roots. Cattle make deep foot tracks, with the wheat thrust down to the bottom of them; but the sheep pack the surface gently, an inch and a half or two inches deep, with their innumerable tracks, covering it all over; even when they run on naked ground during a winter thaw, they do not pack it over two inches.

Sheep are very peculiar and capricious in their way of grazing growing grain. They do not fancy it much at best, and avoid all long stalks, seeking to bite close to the ground. I have seen them depasture a field of rye in a singular, patchy way—here a spot a rod or so square, eaten in the very ground, while close at hand another, with the rye heading out three feet in the air, never having been touched. This happens when they have too much, or are allowed to stay on the field too long at a time. If permitted to graze wheat in this fashion, it would work mischief. When it is seen that they are inclined to do so, they must be broken up, herded, pushed about, not allowed to settle down on their favorite spots and gnaw them down to the earth. The rank patches, which need depasturing most, they will graze least, if they are not some-what controlled. They ought not to be turned into a wheat field in the spring until it is dry and settled enough to be fit for harrowing—dry enough to be a little crumbly. If there comes a sudden March freeze, followed by a thaw, I do not allow them to return to it for a few days. It is not a good practice to allow a large flock of sheep to run into and out of a wheat field a number of days at the same place. If a flock of young sheep can be turned on at the proper time and kept in the field day and night until their work is done, or turned in at a different place every day, better results will be accomplished. I turn them off before the wheat begins to joint. The effects of depasturing wheat are: The amount of foliage is reduced; the tufts are rendered lower and more stocky; the whole field a cleaner, more open and more even appearance; there is a freer circulation of air through the growing grain, and a reduced tendency to rust. A judicious depasturing hardens and toughens it up.

The Duty of Teachers and School Boards.

The habit of smoking, so prevalent among young men, has for some time claimed attention from boards of education and trustees. In many schools supported by government, both in our own country and abroad, the use of tobacco in any form has been strictly prohibited. We notice with pleasure that the faculty of Denison University, Grandville, Ohio, has recently made an earnest appeal to the students of that superior institution to discontinue the use of tobacco, and assign the following just reasons for so doing.

1. Its use involves an expense which neither you or your parents can afford.

2. It is harmful to your physical organization, especially to the brain and nervous system; peculiarly so during the growing period of life, and most of all, when used in the form of a cigarette saturated with poisonous drugs.

3. Its use renders the person and clothing of those who use it offensive and often disgusting to persons of unperverted sensibilities, while it so blunts the perceptive faculties of those habituated to its use as to render them unconscious of their offensiveness, and thus unfits them for good society.

4. By its narcotic effects on the brain and nervous system it prevents the best results of study and the highest attainments in intellectual development.

5. It tends to draw those who use it into the companionship of persons of low and vulgar tastes and vicious habits.

6. It will be a bar to the best success in honorable pursuits in mature life and to the highest usefulness.

7. The habit in a short time acquires such strength that it is one of the most despotic, holding its victims with a relentless grasp.

The Candid Anarchist.

Anarchist—"Don't shake me so mooch, for I vas your best friend."

Policeman—"You my best friend?"

'Certainly, ven der was no griminal elements dere vould pe no policemens, and den you have to vork for a living."

THE USE OF WORDS.

The word "toboggan" should be pronounced with the second o long, as in open.

The word "polyg" is in constant use among the people of Utah in conversation and in print to designate a Mormon.

Citizens of Depere, Wis., are about to take a vote to determine whether the name of their city shall be spelled with a small or with a capital P.

A student of Indian tongues declares that the word "Chicago" was used by the Pottawatomine Indians long ago to designate a place where wild onions abounded—literally an onion patch.

The term "pigeon English," used to designate the lingua franca which passes current between English-speaking people and the Chinese, is said to be a corruption of "business English," the word "pigeon" being the nearest approach that a Chinaman can make to the pronunciation of the English word "business."

Miss Fortescue, the actress, told a reporter the other day that the ajective "elegant" is never used in London in cultivated conversation. "In America it is rightly and I notice frequently used," said she; "but in England we use it but for one thing in the whole world, and what do you think that is? In advertisements of flats, 'elegant new flats to let,' you know."

It is the proper thing in St. Paul and Minneapolis now to call a dude of a certain class a "fade." To come strictly under this designation a dude must be not too old nor too stout, and his most prominent characteristics must be a melancholy mien and a habit of profound silence where speech is not absolutely necessary. He should smile only rarely, and in taking leave of a person should vanish gently as if fading away.

VARIETIES.

Crescent-shaped iron knives are used as currency by many African tribes south of the Soudan.

As a rule, a rough diamond loses seventy-five per cent. of its weight in cutting and polishing, if it is to be turned out in the most effective manner.

The common cabbage and common turnip belongs to the same family, and are, so to speak, first cousins. The wild cabbage grows all over Europe—in great plenty about Mount Athos, in Turkey.

On New Year's Day, at Hastings, apples, nuts, oranges, et-cetera, as well as money, are thrown out of the windows to be scrambled for by the fisher boys and men. The custom appears to be ancient.

The Irish poplin trade is in the hands of three firms, all of them being in Dublin. The industry employs about four hundred persons. Poplin costs about the same as ordinary silk; but it will outwear three silk dresses. Poplin makes remarkably good "silk" for barristers and judges.

The salt that is contained in solution in the Dead Sea is a government monopoly. If Arabs or the natives of the country are found getting salt from the shores of the Dead Sea, they are arrested at once. Most of the salt used in Hebron, Jerusalem, and elsewhere in this part of Palestine comes from these sources, but it is gathered under the direction of government officers and the revenue is supposed to go to the government.

M. Volkens describes a remarkable adaptation of means to an end in the case of some Egptian desert plants, such as reaumurea, tamarix, &c. In these plants a number of glandular hairs are produced in little basin-like depressions on the leaves. These glandular hairs secrete a bitter crystalline substance which exudes and covers the whole surface of the leaf. During the night this saline matter attracts the dew and moisture from the atmosphere, and the plant becomes saturated with moisture.

The Test of a Man's Character.

The sharpest test of a man's character is in his treatment of what is in his power and wholly below him. Motives of self-interest are sufficiently strong and numerous to produce irreproachable conduct toward superiors or equals in strength or knowledge. They have it in their power to defend themselves from attack, to bring persons to account for misdoings, to resist injuries. Much of what renders life valuable is in their hands to bestow or withhold. When therefore we so order our conduct as to conciliate and please those who can thus control our happiness and welfare, it may be a token of intelligence, but it does not indicate nobility of character. When, however, we come into relations with those who have no such power, who must accept without appeal what we choose to give them, who have no more substantial reward to bestow than gratitude or affection, and no severer penalty then secret and impotent wrath, we show something of our true selves by the way in which we treat them.

Where the Buttons Came From.

The minister's wife sat on the front porch mending the clothes of one of her numerous progeny. A neighbor passing that way stopped in for a friendly chat. A large work basket half full of buttons sat on the floor of the porch. After various remarks of a gossipy nature the visitor said:

"You seem to be well supplied with buttons, Mrs. Goodwin."

"Yes, very well, indeed."

"My gracious! if there ain't two of the same buttons that my husband had last Winter on a suit! I'd know 'em anywhere."

"Indeed?" said the minister's wife, calmly. "I am surprised to hear it, as all these bottons were found in the contribution box. I thought I might as well put them to some use, so I—what, must you go? Well, be sure and call again."

The Highest Pleasures.

The highest, the best, the most permanent pleasures are those which are not sought, but which come from the faithful fulfilment of life's duties and obligations. Indeed, eager search after pleasure in any direction is always fruitless, because it implies a condition of mind to which enduring happiness is a stranger. Selfishness and enjoyment may dwell together for a brief season; but the latter will soon wither away under the scorching influence of the former.

"If you want to look for line marks," said the boy to the palm reader, "you needn't examine my hand, for that's the wrong place. You want to look at the spot where the old man larruped me with the clothes line."

SCIENTIFIC AND USEFUL.

Hydraulic mortar: One part of Portland cement, two parts of sand.

Wood steeped in a solution of iron sulphate or copperas becomes very hard and almost indestructible.

Dry pease, on keeping, become, pale, shrivelled and hard; but they keep better thus than as meal, which is very liable to become mouldy. Whole or in meal, peas are susceptible to the attacks of insects.

A very capital ointment for unbroken chilblains in Castile soap melted with a little rum and rubbed in at night by the fire. But, if they persist in breaking, a very old remedy is "Turner's Cerate," which may be bought at any chemist's. It heals and dries the wound, and is very comforting.

A submarine cable is by no means of uniform strength, the thickness depending to a large extent on the depth of water. For instance, a shore end in the shallowest water and subject to the greatest danger from the anchors of vessels will be the heaviest portion, sometimes going as high as twenty-seven to a knot.

A botanist of Pondicherry is said to have discovered what he considers will prove a new and economical source of alcohol or brandy. It appears that the pulp which covers the poppy-seed contains saccharine matter which, after due fermentation and distillation, produces a kind of brandy of an agreeable flavour. As this pulp has hitherto been thrown away, the discovery, it is stated, affords poppy-planters an opportunity of realising more profit from their crops without a very great expenditure of capital.

No Boudoir for Mrs. O'Flaherty.

"Good morning, Mrs. O'Flaherty."

"The same to ye, Mrs. O'Raherty. An' phwat was the carpenter doin' in yer house awhoile ago?"

"Och! don't ax me! 'Pon me wurrud its crazy I do believe that Mary Ann's gettin'. She wants to be havin' the parlor made into a boodoor or some sich a thing, I dunno phwat."

"Faith an' I niver heard av a door loike that messilf, Mrs. O'Raherty."

"An the expinse! Fifty dollars! Only think! An' there's not enough in the house now to buy an ixtra pint of Irish whuskey. Arrah, sure an' if we'd agree to havin' a boodoor, me an' me owld mon moight as well be dead, for phwat would loife be worth if we couldn't ind our owld days in comfort! If Mary Ann must be puttin' on so much shtoyle as to have a boodoor, she must get married to one of her shtoylish boodoor gintlemen dudes, an' not be robbin her parints av the only thing that's worth livin' for."

Kind Friends.

Friend—"I have brought you a few slices of ham."

Poor Neighbor—"Ah! How kind you are."

"Don't mention it. It is really a pleasure for me to show you any little attention."

"Well, I appreciate your kindness. I can assure you of that."

"As I said before, I am only too glad to be able to accommodate you. The slices are cut from a ham that was given us. By the way, if you discover any symptoms of trichina in your family, after you have tried the ham, you will let us know, please. We are not going to eat of it until we hear from you."

A Society Conversation.

"Millie, dear, what is the name of your affianced?"

"Why, Clara, don't you know? It's Herbert Montague."

"Oh, how sweet! Is he rich?"

"Well off."

"And keeps a carriage?"

"Several of them."

"How nice! and fine horses, I suppose?"

"Yes."

"And what is his business, dear?"

"He keeps a livery stable."

"Oh!"

It Will be Red Next Year.

"Did you hear that Tom May was married last week?"

"No! Is that so? He didn't marry that red-headed widow on Chestnut street, did he?"

"That's what he did; only he doesn't put it just that way."

"What shade does he make her out?"

"Well, I met Tom to-day, and inquired what he had been up to, and his answer was that he had been 'ringing the chestnut belle.'"

She Wanted too Much.

"Darling," he whispered, "when we are married we must live economically, you know. I cannot afford to keep a servant for some years yet."

"I know," she answered! "but!"

"But what, beloved star?"

"When we are married will you light the fire every morning?"

"Great Scott!"

With a smile she watched him disappear and the echo came back to her, "Never!"

He Was Posted.

"What is the leading branch in your school?" asked a lady of a teacher.

Before the teacher could vouchsafe a reply, a little boy interrupted the conversation with:

"I know!"

"And what is it, little boy?" asked the lady.

"That switch in the corner, ma'am."

Dollars and Scents.

Clara—Oh, John! what lovely flowers! They look as if they had just been gathered. Why, there's a little dew upon them!

John (somewhat embarrassed)—Due upon them! Not a cent, Clara, I assure you, not a cent!

The boys always take the girls out and the girls often take them in. Such is life.

"Yes," remarked a Massachusetts man with a cold in his head, "we will codfishcate every Cadadiad vessel we can get our hads on."

Customer (to book clerk)—"Do you have 'Night Thoughts?'" Salesman—"No, marm. I have to work so hard daytimes, I sleep powerful sound."

RIFT AND SPRAY,

OR,

LOVE AND VENGEANCE AMONG THE SMUGGLERS.

THE MOST FASCINATING OCEAN ROMANCE SINCE THE DAYS OF COOPER AND MARYATT.

CHAPTER XXXI.—(CONTINUED).

Captain Morton had dashed from the room, and they heard him crying still to Grace, as they all tumultuously followed him to the great dining hall of the admiral's mansion.

It was a spacious and magnificent apartment. The superb hangings and old family portraits gave it a regal air, and strange was the aspect it now presented.

In a little group at one end were the prisoners who had been taken by Lieutenant Anderson, and several of the constabulary were between them and the door—that door which was now flung open, and through which with tears of joy and expectation in his eyes, and his arms outstretched, rushed Captain Morton.

"Grace! Grace! my child—my own dear child—your father—your—your own father."

A mist of tears were before him, and then he heard a cry, and in a moment his child was clasped to his heart; and with hysterical sobs and little screams, Grace felt that indeed she was in her father's arms.

Then there was a deep stillness in the room, for all were affected by the exquisite pathos of that meeting between the father and daughter, as they stood clasped in each other's embrace."

Captain Morton bent over her, and his tears fell fast, as he kissed her tenderly.

"My Grace—my own dear—my darling girl—joy of this poor, lone heart—my own—my beautiful!"

"Father—father! And have I, indeed, a father?"

"A fond, dear father, my child. God's blessing on you. Ah, I can see your poor mother's eyes—my own little one. Oh! this is joy—joy beyond all price."

The admiral then spoke very gently:

"From my inmost heart, my dear sir, I congratulate you."

"And I, too, sir," said Lieutenant Anderson.

"Dear me," said Mr. Tickley, "its quite affecting. The feelings of respectable people, and men of means should always be respected."

Hem! always.

Then a light hand was placed on the arm of Grace, and a soft voice said:

"Here is the little parcel that you brought from the cave, Gracie, dear."

"Gerald," she shrieked, as she heard that voice. "Gerald! and did I for one moment forget you my own dear—dear Gerald!"

She disengaged one arm from her father's embrace, and flung it round Gerald's neck, and drew him toward her, and kissed his forehead."

Then Marie started forward, and with two little screams, she stood before Grace and stamped her feet upon the floor; and then after a struggle to say something, she burst into tears.

"What is all this?" said the admiral.

"Gerald, did you say, my dear? Is this the Gerald—the bad Gerald?"

"The young pirate," said Lieutenant Anderson.

"The one that fired on the Spray," said Mr. Tickley.

"The worst of the whole lot," added the sergeant of police.

Poor Gerald looked from one to the other like a person in a dream.

"No—no. Oh, God; no!" he gasped.

"What is all this?"

"My Gerald," said Grace.

"Your Gerald, my dear?" said Captain Morton.

"Yes, father, dear ever—dearer now—God bless him!"

Marie flung herself into her father's arms and sobbed tumultuously.

"There must be some mistake here," said the admiral.

"No—no," said Grace. "Oh, father, you do not know. One moment. Let me show you that I am indeed your daughter, or let me hear you say that it is not so and that I have still a father to seek. Oh! no—no, my heart tells me."

"And mine too, my darling child."

"Yes, see, father. In this little parcel there are things that Mrs. Hutchins told me always to preserve; and so, when I came away from the cavern, I brought them with me; see, father, some child's clothes and little ornaments of gold and coral."

The few well saved things strayed on to the floor from the parcel, and then Grace looked up into the eyes of Captain Morton into which fresh tears had come.

"There needed not this evidence," he said. "And yet so well do I know all these things—my own dear, lost child!"

Grace again nestled close to her father's heart.

"Oh! how weak I am," said Captain Morton. Pray pardon me all here present but it is not often that the more deeply-hidden feelings of nature are thus stirred. You should have all suffered what I have and then you should feel the joy that I feel and you would pardon these tears."

"They are very honest tears," said the admiral. "There is only one thing, my dear Captain Morton, that would give me the pleasure that this recovery of your long lost child has given me, and that is what will never happen."

"Never, admiral?"

"Never. The recovery of my own boy."

The admiral turned aside and shrouded his eyes with his hands, and then Gerald said:

"Ah, sir do not despair. Heaven is so good!"

The admiral started.

"Who spoke?"

"I, sir."

The admiral looked gently at him.

"I am sorry for you."

"No," said Grace. "No—no."

"No, my dear? But indeed I am."

"Then, sir, you should not, for one should only be sorry for the wicked. Gerald is too good to be sorry for. Father, I know Gerald well. He has been my companion—my friend—my brother. He shall be all that still."

"My dear child—"

"No—no. Oh, no, father? Do not you condemn him. Do not break my heart by condemning Gerald. He is innocent. He is most innocent. You do not know him, father—you cannot know him. He is innocent."

There was an ominous silence for a few moments and then Lieutenant Anderson said in a low, anxious voice:

"I do not place much reliance upon what is called king's evidence; but we have a man here who is called Thomas Wright, who offers to tell all."

"Thomas Wright!" exclaimed Martin, who had hitherto been a silent and wondering spectator of all that had taken place, "Why, he was one of the worst of Dolan's crew!"

"One of the very worst," said Joseph.

CHAPTER XXXII.

GERALD'S DANGER AND GRACE'S RESOLUTION.

The party now in the great dining-hall of the port admiral's mansion presented some of the most singular aspects that could well be imagined.

There was the admiral himself, by some mysterious influences keeping close to Gerald, and even resting his hand upon his shoulder; and there were Grace and her newly found father, she with one arm round her father's left arm and the other hand clasped in one of Gerald's.

Then there was Lieutenant Anderson with rather a puzzled look upon his face; and close to him stood the sergeant of police, with one hand upon the lock of a door and an inquiring look about his eyes to the lieutenant.

At some distance off stood Captain Mocquet, with Marie clasped against his breast, and her face hidden.

And a little further still were Martin and Joseph and Mr. Suffles—the latter looking very rueful indeed, and striving to catch the eye of Mr. Tickley, who, whenever it did happen that their eyes met, shook his head with great indignation; but whether it was at the real, smuggling guilt (as it was construed to be) of Mr. Suffles, or at his allowing himself to be found out, it is hard to say.

Probably it was the latter.

When Martin and Joseph spoke in this way Grace looked gratefully at them, and tightened for a moment her hold of Gerald's hand as though she would say:

"Never fear; the right will yet prevail. Be of good heart, Gerald!"

And Gerald quite understood the sentiment implied by that gentle pressure of the hand, and something like a disdainful as well as loving smile lit up his face. It was disdainful to his foes; it was loving as heaven to his dear Grace.

"Then," said the admiral to Martin and Joseph, "you both exonerate this lad?"

"We do, admiral. He had nothing to do with us or with the smuggling."

"Very well: I don't think, Mr. Tickley, that we need press hardly on a mere boy."

"My dear sir! You forget—lieutenant, did you not say—sergeant eh? Who was it? Somebody said there was a witness—a man who had turned king's evidence, eh?"

"I was bound to maintain it," said the lieutenant, in apologetic tone, as if he would very much rather have left it alone.

"Very good."

"Shall I bring him in, sir?" said the sergeant.

"To be sure!"

"Thomas Wright!" added the sergeant. Then he pushed into the hall a ruffianly looking fellow in the dress of a sailor, and who looked downcast and suspiciously about him.

Well, now," said Mr. Tickley, at once assuming the office of examining magistrate—"well, now. Hum! Who are you, eh? Come, now, speak up; who are you?"

"Tummas Wright."

"Tummas? Thomas, you mean?"

"It's all the same."

"Very well. Put him down, clerk: 'Thomas alias Tummas.' Oh! there is no clerk here?"

"I'll put it down, sir," said the sergeant of police.

"Very good. That will do. Hum! Who and what are you!"

"A willin!"

"A what?"

"A willin and a smuggler. I may as well call myself a willin; cos I knows you'll call me one when I says as how I runs goods, blow high, blow low, to you all!"

"What do you mean by that, you rascal? Some abuse, of course. Come, now, what brings you here?"

"Fifty pounds!—no; I mean to turn king's evidence and get off myself. I'll tell all as I knows."

"Well, go on."

"The smugglin cutter, Rift, will be at sea to-night, and about ebb tide, and you may take her and all in, and the worst of the gang, that boy Gerald! That's all."

"That is Dolan's tale," whispered the admiral to Captain Morton, "That is what he says in the letter."

"The same."

"Well, that's conclusive," said Mr. Tickley.

"Not quite," said the admiral. "Answer me, Thomas Wright."

"Bowl on, sir."

"Why is this lad, Gerald, the worst of all?"

"Lord bless you, sir! cos, you see, we would all of us have given in to the Spray, but he wouldn't; and he loaded a twelve-pound carronade as we had on deck and fired it at the king's ship."

"That is false!" cried Gerald.

"Oh, you know you did. And Captain Dolan, just to purwent you from doin' it ag'in, shut you in the main cabin, o' mounseer, the Frenchman there. You know he did."

"Very conclusive," said Mr. Tickley.

"No!" said Martin.

"No!" said Joseph.

"Silence! silence! Upon my life, when a magistarte of the county says something, is a prisoner to say no? What's the use, I ask—what's the use of being a man of property if one is to be treated in this way? I ask what's the use? And I pause for a reply. I pause—I pause."

No reply came.

"Very good," added Mr. Tickley, as if the whole of society had tacitly agreed with him.

"Very good."

"I deny the whole of this," said Gerald. "I deny—"

"Si-lence!"

"But, Mr. Tickley," said the admiral, "as this lad is accused of what may affect his life" (Grace tightened her hold of Gerald), "as this lad is accused of what may affect his life, I say, it seems but fair that [illegible] defense if he please."

"Oh, very well—you will have rope—[illegible]."

"Now speak," said Grace.

Marie looked up.

"My answer," said Gerald, "is simply this: I was by actual force taken on board the Rift on her last voyage. I now know the object of that proceeding; it was to commit me, if possible, to the general criminality of Dolan and his crew. By force I was brought upon deck and by force it was endeavored to make me fire a gun. Even that did not succeed and I was consigned to the cabin again; but during the whole time I was with Dolan I was his prisoner—not his associate or comrade or taking part with him on board the Rift. I was trying to escape from him last night"

"Yes," said Grace, and he helped me to escape."

"Et moi!" said Mocquet, placing his hand upon his heart and making a graceful bow.

"That is conclusive," said the admiral, in imitation of the phrase that Mr. Tickley had used.

"Oh, dear, no!" said Mr. Tickley; "and as we are divided in opinion, you know, admiral, the prisoner is committed to the Assizes; that is always the rule."

"But this is no court," said Lieutenant Anderson. "All this is irregular."

"So it is," said the admiral; "so it is. We can do nothing with the boy."

"Then we will make a court," said Mr. Tickley; "and I call upon you, Admiral Sir Thomas Clifford, as a respectable man of undoubted means, to act with me. Sergeant, make a court."

"Father! father!" said Grace, "you speak—you speak for Gerald. I tell you he is innocent."

"I think so, my dear child. Admiral, I fancy you are of the same opinion as myself respecting this lad's innocence, are you not?"

"Indeed, I am."

"But I am not, and I protest," said Mr. Tickley; "I protest against his being let go."

"Then," said the admiral, "let the case stand adjourned until to-morrow, when we may be in possession of the whole of the smugglers and when a full bench of magistrates can be got together."

"Very good. Commit the prisoner—that is, remand him, I mean."

"And these gentlemen?" said the sergeant indicating Martin and Joseph and Captain Mocquet and Marie.

"Remand them all."

"Very well," added the admiral. "Until to-morrow at one o'clock be it."

"Come, young fellow," said a policeman, laying his hand on the shoulder of Gerald.

"No—no! Oh, no!" cried Grace.

"Oh, yes, miss! He must go."

"Then I go likewise."

"My dear," remonstrated Captain Morton, "you know not what you say. You cannot be taken to prison."

"Prison—prison! Gerald to prison! Oh, father, you do not know him—indeed you do not! My poor Gerald!"

"Be assured, my dear child, that he shall suffer no wrong. The admiral and I will take care of that."

"That we will," said Admiral Clifford. "Let him go now, my dear, and we will see to him."

Grace looked from one to the other, and then to Gerald, who said with a forced smile:

"Let it be so, dear. All will yet be well. Good-bye, Gracie; we shall soon meet again."

Grace could not speak, but she said faintly:

"To heaven—to heaven trust all! Good-bye, Gerald."

"Good-bye, dear!"

Marie said something hurriedly to her father, and he pointed to Gerald and to the police, and said a few words in reply. Then he stepped forward and making a kind of circular bow, he said:

"Messieurs, one grand mistake. Monsieur Gerald is one innocent. I shall depose and swear at him and his innocence toujours. You have one maxim in de law Angleterre: 'Better was it to hang up ten innocent men than one guilty.' I have heard him said in one court Anglaise by one great judge—what you call him?—baron-in-chief. Bah! Oui, you will let Monsieur Gerald go, for he is innocent!"

"Si-lence!" cried Mr. Tickley.

"Sare?"

"Si-lence!"

"Sare, I am one Capitaine Francaise, and I cartel you—what you call challenge you in mortal combat. Bah!"

"Boo—bah! Get away. Me mortal combat, indeed! A man of my means—absurd!"

Then Marie stepped forward, and with a slow and proud looking movement she went up to Grace and took one of her hands in both of hers. Then she bowed her head a little and said:

"Pardon. C'est fini."

There was a gush of tears to her eyes, but she took the hand of Gerald then and placed it with one of Grace's upon her own heart, and then she tried to smile, but it was too much for her and she placed their hands one in the other and kissed Grace gently and tenderly, and then she turned away, but Grace flung her arms about her, saying:

"Dear, dear sister—for such you shall ever be to me—do not weep that Gerald loves me. We will all, in fond attachment, be dear to each other."

Marie did not understand the words, but the look was one of affection and she returned the caress of Grace, and Gerald then stepped forward and took her hand, saying:

"Good-bye, dear Marie; next to my dear, dear Grace, you with a love of a brother will I ever cherish."

"Boo—bah!" cried Mr. Tickley. "To hear poor people go on in this way is dreadful. This is is too bad—too bad!"

"My daughter, sir, is not poor," said Captain Morton.

"Oh, no—no! Hum! I beg pardon."

"I, sare, am proprietaire Francaise," said Captain Mooquet. "I have at Havre deux millions francs."

"What the deuce is doo millions? Million is million, but doo— Is it all a doo? Ha! ha!"

"He means," said the admiral, "that he is worth two millions."

"What—eh? Two millions—two! Bless me! what a very—ahem!—respectable man, to be sure. Permit me, my dear sir, to shake hands with you. Two millions! Do you think it true, admiral?"

"I have no doubt of it."

"Then admiral, in my opinion a man who has two millions—gracious, what! means!—a man, admiral, who has two millions cannot be remanded in any civilized country. Eh, admiral? Eh, lieutenant?"

The admiral smiled and so did Gerald, [illegible] these two men and this lad [illegible] until to-morrow as well as [illegible] Wagner?"

"Where is she?"

Here, I fancy. No, up stairs! Where is she?"

There was a rush and bustle among the police, then it was found that Mrs. Wagner, in the excitement and confusion occasioned by the discovery of Captain Morton's long-lost daughter, had made her escape.

The admiral smiled.

"Let her go."

"But I won't let her go," said Mr Tickley. "After her, sergeant—scour the town after her. Catch her if you can, sergeant."

"Yes sir."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS.

Calgary school district proposes to borrow $3,000.

North Clarendon school boys play baseball on the ice.

Many brutal assaults on Chinese are reported from Victoria, B.C.

A brood mare belonging to Francis Morrison, McKillop, gave birth to three colts one day last week.

An eagle was shot at Sydney Island, B.C., recently, which measured seven feet from tip to tip of the wings.

Mr. Napoleon Laviolette recently trapped a beaver which weighed 48 lbs. at Messrs. Gillies Bros. limits on the Coulouge.

The body of Patrick Madigan, an Oakville sailor, who was drowned last November in Lake Superior, has just been recovered.

Duncan McIntyre, the young horse thief who escaped from gaol at Brantford a few days since, was re-captured at Essex Centre.

A two-year-old child of Mr. John Byrne, of Guelph, fell out of the bed and broke the right arm between the elbow and the wrist.

The constituency of Alberta is about 600 miles in length by about 250 in width, embracing in the neighborhood of 150,000 square miles, and containing 35 polling divisions.

Mr. John Terry, aged 84 years, attended service in the Methodist church at Clarenceville, Que., on Sunday week; in the evening he ate a good supper and retired in his usual health. Next morning he was found placidly in his bed, dead.

A correspondent writes that this has been a hard winter on fishermen along the east shore of Lake Huron. The ice has come and gone so often with the changes of the wind that many have had their nets torn into shreds and others have lost their nets altogether.

Reports from Battle River, N.W.T., are not satisfactory. On account of the deep snow the Indians and white hunters have met with little success so far. The coyotes are very numerous, and trapping has been greatly interfered with through their coming in ahead of the trapper and carrying off the captured animals.

A gentleman from North Bay says there is a large influx of settlers from Western Canada going to take up and settle lands around Lake Nipissing in the spring. The fame of the excellent lands to be found in the district has gone abroad, and many will embrace the opportunity of having first choice. The building of the Northern Railway has opened up some fine stretches of agricultural lands.

Frank Modeste was found partly frozen west of Lone Pine, N.W.T., two weeks ago and was taken to Calgary Hospital by the police. Parts of both feet and hands were badly frozen, and as it was about nine days from the time he was frozen until he reached the hospital, he will probably lose at least the frozen parts. When found by an Indian he was crawling on his hands and knees and had done so for twelve miles.

The Theresa Fish and Game Club visited the St. Lawrence fish hatchery at Clayton a few days ago. The members were highly pleased with the inspection There is a good prospect of a fine fish crop in that section. Two more hatchings will be had next summer, and it is calculated that muscalonge will be propagated if spawn are obtainable. The plan which many seem to entertain is to induce the State to buy the hatchery and increase its facilities.

It is rumored that a treaty of alliance has been established between Italy, Germany and Austria, by which they mutually guarantee to each other their present possessions. If this is so, both Italy and Austra would require to join Germany in case the latter were at war with France, should the French undertake to repossess themselves of Alsace and Lorraine. It is not improbable that such an alliance has been formed as an outcome of the rumored alliance between Russia and France.

Few of the opposition leaders have yet returned to Berlin, but it is believed they agree with conservatives that the present danger of war is past. Prince Bismark controls the speech of his followers, so that until he announces his policy to the other government leaders they refuse to permit the publication of their opinions over their names. I hear on excellent authority that Prince Bismarck will make early next session a speech as pacific as his last great speech was warlike.

The British Government, in granting a subsidy to the White Star line of steamers, have insisted that the vessels shall be built in accordance with admiralty designs so that in case of war they may be utilized should the necessity arise. This will have the effect of building a much stronger class of vessels than those usually employed in the commerce of the two continents. The disaster which happened to the Oregon in sight of New York harbor is of itself sufficient to show that many of the ocean steamers are not of the most substantial construction, and if the effect of admiralty superintendence and stipulations is to secure vessels more strongly built and better suited to survive the storms and accidents of voyaging across the Atlantic, it will be all the better for the travelling public in time of peace.

Economy.

Engineer—"Say, Jimmy, why don't we get more steam? Your boiler's full."

Fireman—"It is that. But I was towld to be aisy wid the coal h'avin', an', sure, two paices ivery h'ave makes it aisy for the coal an' the h'avin', don't it?"

PILES! Blind, Bleeding, and Rubber effectually cured by the Medical Pile Remedy. Thousands of sufferers can testify to its merits. Internal and external Remedies. $1.00 per package. Ask your druggist for it, or will be sent by Mail—Price paid. HUGH MILLER & CO. 186 King St. East, Toronto. PILES!

CANADA PERMANENT
Loan & Savings Co'y.
INCORPORATED, A.D. 1855

Subscribed Capital,	$3,500,000
Paid-up Capital,	2,000,000
Reserve Fund,	1,100,000
Total Assets,	9,261,615

OFFICE:
COMPANY'S BUILDINGS, TORONTO-ST., TORONTO.

SAVINGS BANK BRANCH

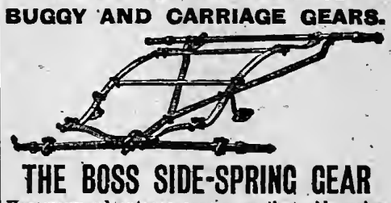
Sums of $4 and upwards received at current rates of interest, paid or compounded half-yearly.

DEBENTURES.

Money received on deposit for a fixed term of years, for which Debentures are issued, with half-yearly interest coupons attached. Executors and Trustees are authorized by law to invest in the Debentures of this Company. The Capital and Assets of the Company being pledged for money thus received, depositors are at all times assured of perfect safety.

Advances made on Real Estate, at current rates, and on favorable conditions as to re-payment. Mortgages and Municipal Debentures purchased.

J. HERBERT MASON, Managing Director.



Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.

Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly

For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated Ware.
Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish.
HAMILTON, ONT.

ARMSTRONG'S
BUGGY AND CARRIAGE GEARS.

THE BOSS SIDE-SPRING GEAR
Has many advantages over any other side spring gear, and will undoubtedly be a great favorite. The bent tempered steel plate perches allow the body to set very low, IT TURNS SHORT, rides very easy, and has no SWINGING or UNDUE MOTION. Suitable for straight or phaeton bodies. PRICES RIGHT. Send for our descriptive circular.
J. B. ARMSTRONG M'F'G CO. (Ld.), GUELPH, Canada.

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING ST. EAST
TORONTO.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

THE National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

DALLEY'S FINE GOLD
EXTRACTS.

ABSOLUTELY PURE
FROM SELECT FRUIT
SOLD EVERYWHERE

FOR ONE CENT

TENANT FARMERS, SMALL FARMERS, MECHANICS, and business men or capitalists, all who wish to make a change for health or profit, can get valuable information FREE, by sending your address on postal card to
J. M. HUCKINS,
95 King St. West,
Toronto.

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties.
J. M. HADDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q.C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profesaion.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE.
The subscriber begs to inform the travelling public generally, that he has leased the above premises for a term of years, and hopes by catering to their comfort to merit a share of public patronage. Bar and Larder well supplied. Good stabling and attentive hostler.
D. McLEAN, Proprieto .

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT. Markdale.
1241y

WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Lesses and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster, Flesherton.

WARNING.
ALL persons are hereby warned against purchasing a promisary note for the sum of $40.00 drawn and dated the 15th February by the subscriber and payable I think) ten months after date, to Wm. Fawcett, Enphrasia, as I did not get value for the same.
JACOB NEELY,
338-40 Enphrasia, February 19th 1887.

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

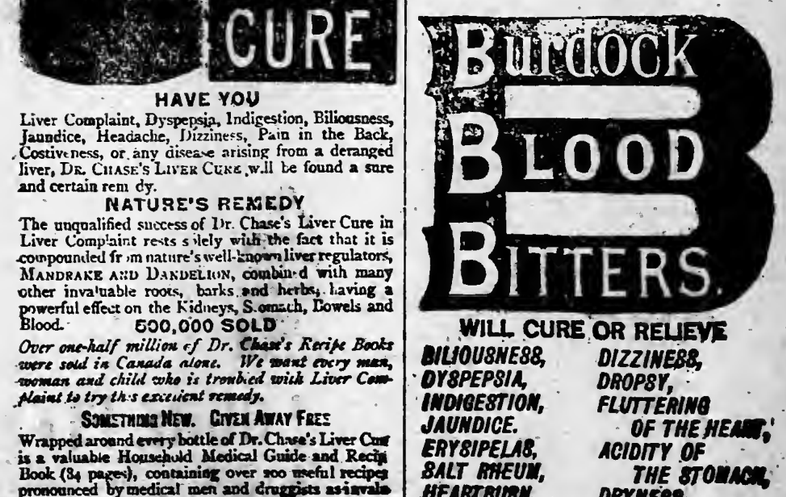
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.

500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invalu-

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.



MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P, O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Wanted Immediately!
CANVASSERS IN THIS COUNTY
FOR THE
"OUR NORTH LAND,"
A PURELY CANADIAN,
describing the wonders of our own country, with thrilling incidents of travel and adventure. This is by far the most saleable subscription book ever published in Canada. not a book of scraps and clippings, but an original copyright work, richly and profusely illustrated.
To energetic men who will promise to canvass at least one township, we will offer the most liberal inducements. As we manufacture the book ourselves, upon our own premises, we can afford to place it in the hands of canvassers at a very low figure, while the retail prices place the work within the reach of all classes. Application for Territory received at once. We want at least one man in every county in Canada.
Also the "NEW HOME PARALLEL BIBLES," and Photogrrph Albums in over 300 varieties.
C. Blackett Robinson,
JORDAN ST., TORONTO Publisher.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.
First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool.
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEART BURN, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS

Markdale Roller Mill.
FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.
Flour always on Hand
To give in exchange.
'Baker's Patent' and best family flour for sale. Retail price per bbl. $4.50. Three barrels or more, $4.10 to $4.25.

SHORTS, per ton -	$13.00
BRAN, " -	10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.
Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

THE Association Can't Stop Us.
HAVING PURCHASED A FIRST-CLASS HEARSE.
Built by B. J. Mash, London. also having a large stock of Coffins, Caskets and funeral furnishings, we are prepared to supply the public in the undertaking line on the shortest notice.
A large stock of furniture always on hand at lowest living prices.
Having a first-class cabinet maker, we are prepared to make all kinds of furniture to order, also repairing done promptly.
COLEMAN & HAMILTON,
Next door to Knapp's store,
MARKDALE.

NEW HARNESS SHOP.
R. CARNAHAN would respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of the surrounding country that he has opened a general harness shop on King street in the village of
HOLLAND CENTRE,
where he intends to manufacture and keep on hand a large stock of LIGHT and HEAVY HARNESS, long and short tugs, STRAW COLLARS, WHIPS, COMBS, BRUSHES, HARNESS OIL &c.
I will use only first class material and those requiring anything in the harness line will find it to their interest to call at the new harness shop and get prices before going elsewhere. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. Soliciting a share of public patronage. I am respectfully yours.
R. CARNAHAN.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH
TIME TABLE.
Taking effect Monday, July 28th, 1886.
GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.
Toronto....Leave.....	7 45am	4 50pm
Cardwell Junction.....	9 25 "	6 30 "
Orangeville. Arrive.....	10 05 "	7 03
Orangeville. Leave.....	10 20 "	7 22
Orangeville Jun.....	10 32 "	7 34
Shelburne.....	10 58 "	8 04
Dundalk	11 22 "	8 30
Flesherton,.....	11 47 "	8 55
Markdale.....	12 02pm	9 10
Berkeley.....	12 14 "	9 22 "
Holland Centre.....	12 23 "	9 32 "
Chatsworth	12 38 "	9 49 "
Owen Sound.....	1 05 "	10 20 "

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.
Owen Sound.....	5 40am	2 40pm
Chatsworth.....	6 10 "	3 07 "
Holland Centre	6 25 "	3 30 "
Berkeley	6 34 "	3 40 "
Markdale.....	6 47 "	3 52 "
Flesherton	7 02 "	4 06 "
Dundalk	7 26 "	4 31 "
Shelburne	7 51 "	4 57 "
Orangeville Jun.....	8 22 "	5 23 "
Orangeville. Arrive.....	8 30 "	5 35 "
Orangeville. Leave.....	8 45 "	5 55 "
Cardwell Junction.....	9 25 "	6 30 "
Toronto.....Arrive.....	10 55 "	8 10

The Markdale Standard
Is issued every Thursday, by
C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,
TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.
Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column.....	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column.....	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space.....	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.
Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.
Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1
No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.
THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Society Directory.
Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78, meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, McDougall's block. Visiting brethren welcome.
Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, McDougall's block, every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.
MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.
Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Monthly Fairs.
Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

Markdale Church Directory.
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.
CHRIST CHURCH.
Services for January, 2nd 7. 9th 7, 16th 10:30 and 7, 23 7. 30th 10:30 and 7. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.
METHODIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9. Rev. Geo. H. Cornish, Pastor; G. S. Bowes, S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection; Mrs. T Hill, Secretary.

Post-Office Directory.
MARKDALE.
The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.
Mails closed as follows, viz:
C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m
TRAVERSTON.
Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.
HARKAWAY.
Friday, 12:30 noon.
For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.
W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

Directory.
MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.
Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.
Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.
COUNTY OFFICIALS.
Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace. W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N, Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., B. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, B. Allan, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. J. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, ohn Blyth, Orchard.
DIVISION COURT CLERKS
No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos, Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Glenelg Council.
Town Hall, Glenelg, Feb.
The council met this day pursuant to adjournment, all the members present. The reeve in the chair, minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. The reeve presented his report on the treasurer's sureties.
Williams—Lamb—That the report on treasurer's sureties be received and adopted.—Carried.
The auditors handed in their report on the receipts and expenditure for the year 1886.
Lamb—McMillan—That the report of the auditors as finally audited by this council be adopted, that there be get 200 copies printed in pamphlet form, and that the auditors be paid $5 each.—Carried.
Lamb—Williams—That John Arthur be paid $1.50 for services as surveyor on D. R., and that the clerk be paid $2, for committee work.—Carried.
Dunsmore—Lamb—That the account of C. W. Rutledge for $12.45 for stationary be paid.—Carried.
By-law 248 confirming appointment of township officers passed through all its stages and ordered to be engrossed in the minutes.
Lamb—Williams—That $10, be paid to Alex. McClung for work done on lot 1, con. 14 in 1886.—Carried.
Dunsmore—McMillan—That Peter McNeil be re-appointed caretaker of the Town Hall, and that he be authorized to let said hall for $3, per day or night as required, and that he receive $2 for his services for each time he lets the hall otherwise than for township purposes.—Carried.
McMillan—Lamb—That the treasurer be instructed to accept collector's roll for ward no. 3, less $1.40 for lot 14 con. 11.—Carried.
A petition was presented from John Askin and 29 others praying the council to pass a by-law commuting statute labor in Markdale.
Lamb—Dunsmore—That the petition of R. Askin and others lay over for further consideration.—Carried.
Council adjourned to June 13th.
J. S. BLACK, Clerk.

ENJOY LIFE.
What a truely beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of Mountains and oceans, and thousands of means of amusement. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraging and worn out with disease when there is no occasion for this feeling. Now every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will restore them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the primary causes of seventy five per cent, of the maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will produce wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

Important Unreserved
AUCTION SALE,
—OF—
DOMINION PEDIGREED SHORT HORN AND OTHER CATTLE.
Will be held on Wednesday, 9th March, 1887, at the stock farm of W. Kough, Brook, one mile from Owen Sound, consisting of 6 short horn Bulls, 1 short horn Cow all fashionably bred—Dominion Herd Pedigrees will be given to purchasers at time of sale. 3 of the short horn Bulls are the property of Mr. J. Harrison, of Owen Sound; 2 of the short horn Bulls are the property of R. J. Doyle, of Owen Sound. The following are the property of W. Kough, viz: 1 short horn Bull 1 one short horn Cow 7 crosses, 1 Polt Cow, 1 Yoke Working Ox 3 Galloway-cross Bulls calved 1 2 Galloway-cross Heifers calved 1 All sired by Galloway Silver Bull Close burn [671.]
Lunch at noon. Sale to commence at one. Terms approved joint note payable 1st January, 1888. For further particulars with extended pedigrees write for and see Sale bills to W. Kough, Owen Sound.
WM. BEATON, Auctioneer.
Owen Sound, 28 Feb. 1887.

I was attacked about [illegible] years ago with asthma, [illegible] was as bad as a person [illegible] I tried Dr. Jug's me[illegible]

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 341. MARKDALE, ONT., MARCH 17, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Publisher.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

EASTER Sunday the 10th April.

THIS is the anniversary of Ireland's patron Saint.

Celebrate it by attending the Presbyterian Sabbath School Anniversary this Eve.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's D. Store.

CHESLEY Public School will have five teachers this summer.

Clover Seed at the Medical Hall, A. Turner & Co.

Holland Council meets the 24th March.

Euphrasia the 25th.

CLOVER & TIMOTHY Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

MRS. MCFARLAND and daughter, Miss Amelia, are visiting friends in Owen Sound this week.

FROM 300 to 400 teams passes the Standard office, Mill Street, Markdale every day.

A Social will be held by the Ladies Aid Society at the house of Mrs. Cornwall on Wednesday evening 23 inst.

Pebble spex, Crystal Lenses, and 4 colors in sun glasses. Call at W. A. Brown's Jewellry Store.

BOOTS THAT ARE BOOTS.—A select stock of boots and shoes for spring trade just opened at W. McLeod's.

MISS NELLIE ARMSTRONG has been visiting friends in Owen Sound for the past ten days.

Oil Cake, the champion cattle food for sale at Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

GENTS hand made boots a specialty at W. McLeod's; A good variety made up to select from.

ECONOMICAL farmers may be now seen in numbers taking home large grists of flour and chop to put them over seeding.

SUGAR making will soon be the order of the day among farmers: We hope friend Geo. Richardson won't forget ye editor.

A long felt want supplied.—Prepared Paints ready for use—any quantity or shade—guaranteed pure; See them at Haskett Bros.

WE have now a larger stock of boots and shoes than on any former occasion —All genuine goods, no shoddy. A call respectfully solicited. W. McLeod.

A SUPPER was given in honor of Dr. Sproule, M. P. and Joseph Rorke, M. P. P. at Muller's Hotel, Clarksburg last night.

Timothy Seed wanted for which I will pay highest cash prices. W. L. Davis'.

W. T. JACKMAN was out for a drive last Saturday for the first. We expect he will be able to do some case work next month.

W. J. MCFARLAND has received Advice of a large Shipment of New Spring Goods to arrive via Steam Ship Umbria from Liverpool to New York thence by rail to Markdale.

The refreshment house of Hugh Dennison of Bracebridge, near the railroad station, was burned early on Tuesday morning and two lives lost in the fire, the proprietor Mr. Dennison and wife.

ARE you made miserable by indegestion, constipation, dizziness, loss of appetite: take Rejuvenator Bitters sold by Smith the barber.

George Pereira, of Holland Centre, cabinetmaker, has moved to Wiarton—His greatest accomplishment is "blow."

Mr. Robt. Oliver of Artemesia has purchased from Mr. Thos. Tyreman, near Hanover, his entire flock of Southdown ewes and lambs.

THE Thornbury Standard of last week says "3720 bushels of wheat were sold in Markdale on the previous Tuesday.

Miss S. Tucker of Drayton has been spending a few weeks with her sister, Mrs. Rev. Hosking, and returned home recently.

LADIES should call and examine W. McLeod's new stock of boots, something select, and sure to please in quality style and price.

SATISFIED CONFIDENCY.—J. B. H. Girard, of St. Edwidge, Clifton P. Q., says, "I am well satisfied with the use of Burdock Blood Bitters; it has cured me of dyspepsia that I had for three years. I used five bottles, and shall tell every person I know that may be attacked with similar sickness, and should not be afraid to guarrantee every bottles used."

Iron Harrows "spring tooth Harrows" Drills and seeders from the best manufactures in Ontario, at Jackson's.

WANTED AT ONCE.—Fifty thousand feet soft Elm Logs, to be delivered at Armstrong's Mill, Markdale, for particulars apply to W L. Young, at Lucas & Co's Bank.

A GOOD MOTIVE.—Harry Ricards, of Toronto, agent for Fine Art Publications states that he was so tronbled with deafness for eight years that he could scarcely attend to business, until he tried Yellow Oil He desires to make this cure known, for the benefit of others afflicted.

EXTENSIVE CREDIT SALE —An important sale will be held on the farm of Mrs. A. Elliott, lot 11, con. 24 Artemesia, 2 miles east of Markdale, on Tuesday the 22nd March, commencing at 1 o'clock, when Mrs. Elliott will sell her large stock by auction. For full particulars see posters. Geo. Noble, Auctioneer.

Saw mill men, Flour mill proprietors Wool-factory owners and all who run steam or other machinery should call at Mabee's and examine his machine oil which is the best in the market,

MARKRALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 76 to 76 cents; spring wheat 76 to 76; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 15 to 17; eggs 16; potatoes 50 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

A LUCKY ESCAPE.—"For six years I suffered with my throat and enlarged tonsils. I was very weak; I doctored four years, and had advice from three doctors; they said I would have to undergo an operation. I tried B. B. B. instead. One bottle cured me." M. A. Squelch, Reglan, Ont.

CURE FOR CROUP.—Prompt relief to prevent suffocation from the accumulation of tough mucous—the formation of false membrane— and the obstruction of the air passage, is necessary in case of a sudden attack of croup. Hagyard's Yellow Oil should be used at once, afterwards Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam.

THE C. P. R. Telegraph system is forming a complete network of the country. An office for commercial purposes is opened in Markdale, at the railway station.

W. J. SHEPHERDSON has been favored with instructions to sell by public auction on lot 15, con. 12, Holland, on Tuesday 29th March, a large stock implements &c. Mrs. M. Nixon, Proprietoress.

THE STORY OF HUNDREDS.—In a recent letter received from Mrs. Sarah A. Mills of Wheatley, Ont., she says, "I was a sufferer for six years with dyspepsia and liver complaint, My food did not digest and I grew weaker every day. I lost appetite and had little hope of recovery. I tried many remedies, but all in vain, till I took Burdock Blood Bitters. The first bottle gave relief; after taking seven bottles, I am thankful that I now enjoy good health."

IN some instances it is amusing, and oftener annoying, to look over the paper after we are done printing and see typo. errors that have escaped correction in the hurry making up the paper.

HAMPDEN WATCHES.—My own name on—just received; Key and stem wind, will be sold close, cash or time. W. A. Brown, Jeweller.

ALL parties indebted to W. McLeod by overdue accounts are requested to settle without further delay or he will be compelled to place the same in court.

For Fleury and Wilkinson Plows go to Jackson's; price to suit hard times.

R. O. WHITBY is prepared to do all kinds of carriage painting; a first class job with the best material guaranteed. Now is the time to bring in your wheel'd rigs and have them re-painted for summer use. Shop over Hull's new cooper shop.

Go to Jackson for land Rollers. Cheapest and best in the market. Call and be convinced.

WHAT IS ALABASTINE.—It is a preparation of plaster-paris and other ingredients used for decorating and whitening walls and ceilings, is easily applied, will not scale nor rub off, and is cheaper and better than calcimine. You can get it at Haskett Bros.

LOST.—A parcel containing 8 yds cottonade wrapped in brown paper on Saturday last 12th inst between Markdale and Mr. John Hamilton's. The person who found it will please leave it at the Standand office and be rewarded.

HIGHLY SPOKEN OF.—Mr. James M. Lawson, of Woodville, Ont., speaks in high terms of Yellow Oil for rheumatism, lame back, sprains and painful complaints. Yellow Oil is used internally and externally in case of pain; also coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., and has made many remarkable cures of deafness.

WHY EMPLOY DOCTORS.—Consult a doctor and in 9 cases out of ten he pronounces your disease Liver Complaint and charges you $1 for a small bottle. Consult your druggists and for $1 he will give Dr. Chase's Liver Cure, guaranteed to cure, and a valuable receipt book free.

Try Davis' new 30c, Japan Tea you will be convinced that it is a very superior article for the money, Special reduction for large purchases.

COMMENDABLE ENTERPRISE.—The Toronto Globe has reduced the subscription of the daily from $7 to $5 per annum, and chartered a special Grand Trunk train to leave Toronto every morning at 3:55—being but a few minutes after the paper comes from the press—and runs through the garden of Ontario calling at all stations arriving at London at 6:40 a. m. nearly five hours ahead of the old time. This is a great stroke of enterprise for the Globe which will doubtless be highly appreciated in Western Ontario.

The Patent Review is the name of a new publication recently established at Ottawa, its object being to represent the patent interests, or the interest of inventors and patentees. It is a neat little journal of 12 pages, is well printed, and contains much matter valuable to those whose interests it espouses. It is published monthly for $1 per annum or 10 cents per single copy. A. Harvey, C.E. Editor and proprietor.

REMOVED.—Having secured for a term of years the blacksmithshop in Mr. McNally's new carriage establishment, and moved into it, I wish to return thanks to my numerous customers for their very liberal patronage in the past, and by close attention to business and honest dealing I hope to merit a continuance of your liberal support.

D. MCFARLANE.

P. S.—As business must be conducted on business principles, all over-due accounts must be settled by cash or note on or before the 10th inst.

D. McF.

EXCITEMENT mingled with gladness and regret was depicted on many a countenance among those engaged in the wood business last week when Paddy Burns' man arrived and ran up the prices 55 cents per cord at one jump. The bulk of the wood had been bargained for, but those who were fortunate enough to still have the right to sell were amused in a very desirable manner, while those who had sold were tickled in the opposite direction.

A CONTRAST.—No. 1—A young man, with a cigar in his mouth, driving at a furious rate a horse with prominent ribs and exited appearance; you see the smoke, hear the crack of the whip and are otherwise attracted by the way he shoves on the lines. No. 2, drives leisurly along with a horse shining like a mirror; he draws a tight line, and is careful not to soil the glossy coat of his noble animal by perspiration—In fact there is a total absnce of smoke or steam.—Exchange.

ATTACKED BY A BEAR.—While Mr. William Reed and Daniel and Archie McQuarry of Melancthon. were going to the bush on Wednesday morning to cut railway ties, their dog started in pursuit of a bear a short distance from them, and as Mr. Reed advanced towards the spot where the bear and dog were engaged in a tussel, the bear turned upon Mr. Reed, who having his axe with him struck him in the head, spliting it open, and causing almost instant death.—[Dundalk Herald.

As may be seen by our advertising columns, Mr. Thos. Hill has severed his connection with the late firm of Hill Bros. This has been brought about owing to failing health, but we are pleased to say that by freedom from confinment to the shop together with great care, the prospects are good for his recovery. We regret very much however to loose him from our business circle: he is quiet and reserved in his disposition yet always affable; his character is unimpeachable and integrity unquestioned, and while his retirement from business will be universally regretted yet we trust it will be the means of his complete restoration to former health.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure inspient catarrh: 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh; 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333-8o

Artemesia Council.

Present—Dr. Christoe, Reeve; Dep. Reeve Boland, and Councillors Sharp and Cairns. Shortly afterwards Depnty-Reeve McArthur entered and took his seat.

Minutes of last meeting approved.

Petition from Thos. Crow, Eugenia, complaining that his property in the town of Eugenia was assessed much higher than its cash value, and asking for a refund, was read and duly considered by Council.

Moved by John Boland, seconded by Wm. Sharp, that a refund of taxes amounting to 45 cents be made to Thos. Crowe.—Carried.

McArthur—Sharp,—That the account of G. Lattimer for 4½ cord wood to Boyles $4.50 be paid; also W. J. Bellamy, Clerk, for Registration under Sec. 26, Chap. 36, R. S. of O., amounting to $17.90. be paid.—Carried.

Sharp—Cairns,—That Report of Committee on Treasurers Securities be adopted and filed.—Carried.

Resignation of Mr. John Whitby, as Assessor, laid on the table, when following motion was put and carried unanimously:

McArthur—Cairns,—That Mr. Whitby, having placed his resignation in our hands, as the Assessor of the Township, we take the opportunity to express that we believe (1) That Mr. Whitby discharged his duty to the best of his ability, and in accordance with the statutes as he understood them. (2) That we believe that at no period of the Township's history has the Township, as a whole, been more equally assessed; and notwithstanding any contradictions, either public or private, the Township may congratulate itself upon the faithful services of our late Assessor.

In the matter of two petitions from the Tyrone neighborhood, Artemesia the following motion was put and carried:—

McArthur—Boland,—That the petition of Geo. Binnie and seven others be entertained, and Twp. Clerk be instructed to make application to the Government, as provided in section 58 and the two following sections, at the cost of the proprietors of the lands in each concession or part of a concession interested—the expenses not to exceed twenty-five dollors.—Carried.

Boland—Sharp,—That the parties interested in petition (from M. Akitt and others) asking for license for Eugenia to sell intoxicants be advised to submit it to the proper authorities, viz., the License Commissioners for adjudication, as this Council has no control whatsoever in the matter, this Council not having this counter petition before them at the time a contrary one was presented, can not now feel it to be their duty to change the course thus adopted.—Carried.

By-law 410 to amend 409, appointing Assessor, and By-law 411, appointing Municipal officers for 1887, introduced and passed.

Mr. Wm. McLoughry was duly appointed Assessor in place of Mr. John Whitby resigned.

Pathmasters.—Samuel Coleman, H. D. Irwin, John Stedwell Wm. Davis, H. Matthewson, Robt. Best, Chas. Irwin, jr., John Allan, David Stinson, Geo. Ludlow, Thos. Talbot, R. Watson, Thos. Davis, Arch. Foster, Jacob Holley, Price Teeter, Geo. Wardrobe, John Pedlar, Wm. Talbot, Thos. Henry, Wm. Gallop, Jas. Corufiled, sr., Samuel Sheardown, James Patton, John Walker, W. J. White, Wm. Spears, Wm. Wright, sr., James McMillan, Rodrick Stewart, Geo. Buskin Chas. Hales, Samuel Waucob. Wm. Ludlow, James Johnston, C. C. James, I. W. Stinson, Wm. Reid, sr., John Whyte, Wm. Meade, Thos. Taylor, jr., Malcolm McMillan, Malcolm McDonald, sr., John Bowland, Robt. Olliver, John, Campbell, Neil McFadden, Peter, Muir, sr., Frank Thompson, sr., Wm. Fletcher, Richard Whittaker, jr., James Fisher, Samuel Badgerow, Alex. Henry, James Nash, James Atwell, John Beecroft, Martain Phillips, Thos. Gilbert, Robert Meldrum, Wm. Hooper, J. W. Armstrong, Geo. Murphy, Thos Kells, Wm. Hutchinson, Alex. Madill, Henry Williams, Robert Cooper, Geo. Sewell, James Hanson, Samuel Martin, R. Carruthers, John Williams, sr., Robt. Graham, John Weber, and Richard Whittaker, sr. *

Fence Viewers.—Richard Whittaker, jr., Joseph Aussum, Donald McMillan, Alex. Muir, Dugal Currie, H. D. Irwin, Robt. Shannon, Wm. Blair, Wm, Hill, Geo. Moore, Geo. Stewart, Chas. Bellamy, Edward Ross, J. McKee, sr., Jonathan Hickson, J. B. Sloan, and Jas. Sewart, sr.,

Pounkeepers.—Duncan Lamont, Priceville; J. E. Marsh, Markdale; A. Mulshaw, Flesherton; M. Akitt, Eugenia.

Boland—Cairns,—That the Auditors' Report be referred to Auditors to insert statements regarding School Debentures as this Council thinks that the law intends that each debenture account be shown separately and distinct, showing annually the amount of Sinking Fund deposited as well as the accumulated interest, for it would be entirely aside from the intent and spirit of the By-law creating the debt.—Carried.

Boland—Sharp,—That T. B. Gilliland be paid $5.50 for surveying Valley Road.—Carried.

McArthur—Sharp,—That the Reeve issue his order for this day's session of Council and indigent allowance.—Carried.

Flesherton pathmasters will be appointed next meeting of Council.

Council adjourned.

Flesherton, March 7th.—[Advance.

HOUSEHOLD.

A Simple Baby-Basket.

Among the mysteries of preparation for a little new-comer, nothing is daintier than the baby-basket, with its contents, ready for the first toilette. Very little expense will serve to dress a common willow, reed or shaker basket, so that it will be as beautiful as need be. The material of the basket is of very little, indeed, no importance, as it is entirely covered by a cambric of pale pink or blue, over which a sheer white muslin, dotted or plain, is drawn in folds or puffs on the inside, and let fall in a full ruffle on the outside, the upper edge of the basket being finished by a quilling of ribbon in color, "blue for a girl" and "pink for a boy," and carry it into all this preparatory wardrobe. A basket lined with blue would have a small blue pincushion, a blue and white powder box, though a pretty white one is babyish. The basket being covered and furnished with two inside pockets should then be filled with all the article necessary for the first dressing. A piece of narrow bobbin, a small bottle or box of vaseline, a number of small squares of soft linen, or the mouth cleansing, a piece of very soft sponge, square of pure castile s a.). These articles will all be required before the cloths, and should have a prominent place in the basket, for the dressing on top is found a strip of soft flannel, torn from a piece, and turned over only on the edges for the band; the little shirt of hand-knit wool, two diapers of old soft linen, the pining blanket, flannel petticoat and the slip, and a square of flannel or a knit blanket to wrap around the little one when it is carried about.

The baby-basket will be found every morning with baby's toilette articles all ready, and there will not arise confusion in the search for baby's own soap, sponge, etc. For a baby powder, the scented rice powder is not as good as cornstarch, to which a small quantity of pulverized orris root is added; this is the purest and best. In addition, we should also suggest that a cotton flannel apron, furry side out, is a valuable possession for nurse and mother, as the little one can be taken from the bath on to the lap and rolled up in the apron, which answers at the same time the purpose of a soft towel. For wiping of head and face, an old white silk handkerchief is a good thing to use at the bath. A dainty wrapper, which is very inexpensive, can be made princess in shape, of cheese cloth and cotton wadding. A layer of wadding should be tacked between two of cheese cloth, and fastened at intervals of a few inches by knots of worsted, as in a comfortable, the worsted pale blue or pink. The princess pattern is then laid on and the wrapper cut out, the seams felled on the inside and the edges finished by a buttonhole stitch of blue or pink worsted. These little wrappers can be worn after the bath during the morning, and add warmth as well as save the freshness of the slip for afternoon.

Helpful Hints.

Remove flower-pot stains from window-sills by rubbing with fine wood ashes and rinse with clean water.

Grained woods should be washed with cold tea, and then, after being w ped dry, rubbed with linseed oil.

Let all girls have a share in housekeeping at home before they marry; let each superintend some department by turns.

Avoid a rich mixed diet for children, it taxes their delicate digestive organs, and causes inflammatory conditions to ensue.

If the wall about the stove has been smoked by the stove, cover the black patches with gum-shellac and they will not strike through either paint or calcimine.

Lamp wicks should be changed often enough to insure having a good light. If they seem clogged they may be washed in strong suds and put into the lamps again.

A young babe should not be fed more frequently than once in two hours, and by the time it is three months old, once in three hours is preferable. A child is not hungry every time it nestles and frets.

Cold biscuits left over from tea may be made better than when first baked by dipping them in hot water and placing them singly on the hot grate in the oven long enough to let them get well warmed through.

A butter stamp should always be washed in cold salt water before it is used. If soaked in hot water the butter will stick to it, but never if soaked in cold brine. The salt absorbed by the wood keeps it moist while in use.

To save stair carpets nail several thicknesses of old carpet or canvas over the edge of each stair. It is a good plan to buy more carpeting than is needed to cover the stairs and move it each season so that the whole will wear evenly. If stair carpets cannot be changed in this way they will not wear nearly so long.

Meat fed children are cross, and irritable, and quarrelsome. Meat once a day is sufficient; the other meals should consist of milk toast, cracked wheat, graham gems, oatmeal, gluten, fruit, fruit puddings, milk and such food. Eggs, fish and fish balls are better even than meat, and should be eaten at breakfast; the other meals being farinaceous.

A very excellent carminative powder for infants subject to colic, may be kept in the house and prepared by the nurse or mother; it consists of five grains of oil of aniseed and two of peppermint on half an ounce of lump sugar rubbed in a mortar with a drachm of magnesia into a fine powder. A small quantity of this may be given in little water with good results.

"Infantile convulsions usually accompany teething, indigestion, whooping cough, fevers, worms, indeed, any disease that causes a reflex action upon the brain. When a child is seized with convulsions act promptly. Get the child into hot water as soon as possible; do not wait to remove its clothing, put it into a foot-tub or a child's tub nearly full of water, as hot as can be safely borne, supporting it on your two hands. Add from time to time as much hot water as the hands will bear. Keep the child in the water until relaxation of the muscles is produced, and have blankets heated meanwhile and ready to wrap the baby in."

Choice Recipes.

HAM CROQUETTES.—One cupful of finely chopped cooked ham, one of bread-crumbs, two of hot mashed potatoes, one large tablespoonful of butter, three eggs, and a speck of cayenne. Beat the ham, cayenne, butter, and two of the eggs into the potato. Let the mixture cool slightly, and then shape into croquettes. Roll in the bread-crumbs, dip in beaten egg, and again in crumbs; put in the frying basket and plunge into boiling fat. Cook two minutes, drain, and serve hot.

GOOD BREAD.—Pare and boil soft six potatoes in two quarts of water, strain through a colander boiling hot on to one cup of flour; stir well, and when cool add one yeast cake soaked in warm water. Keep it warm until it is light, then stir it well and keep it in a cool place until morning. Then stir it into the middle of your tray of flour (adding warm water enough to make the desired quantity of bread), add a little salt and cover the top of this batter with flour, and keep it warm until it cracks the flour and foams up through. Then add flour and mix up stiff and let it rise again. Then knead up into loaves, put into pans, let it rise again, not too light, and bake one hour very carefully.

CORN STARCH, BLANC-MANGE, AND CHOCOLATE SAUCE.—Take two tablespoonfuls of corn starch and mix with cold milk very smooth; warm to boiling point two pints of milk, in which some lemon rind, sugar, and a few drops of essence had been put, and pour into the corn starch without the lemon peel, while stirring all the time. Let simmer a few minutes while stirring, and pour into a shape. Melt a little fresh butter in saucepan, stir in half a spoon of corn flour and some chocolate finely scraped, with sugar to taste; pour in warm milk, stirring all the time, and beat up with the yelk of an egg. Having turned out the blanc-mange at serving, pour the chocolate sauce over it.

Needle Notes.

Plait stitches are herringbone stitches done so fine and close together as to touch each other.

Chain stitch is very useful for tacking down the edges of applique work on any article, but it makes rather a coarse line for outlining.

A lovely effect can be produced by following the outlines of a brocaded figure on silk or wool with couching in gold thread on a contrasting color.

Darning stitches are very useful for filling in outlines or for making backgrounds. By darned work a beautiful play of color may be obtained on a plain neutral fabric.

Tracing stitch is very useful in applique embroidery, and is worked by laying down a line of filoselle or embroidery silk. Secure it with a thread of another color by bringing it up from the back of the material on one side of the embroidery silk and carrying it back on the other. The stitches which secure the silk should be exactly equal in distance from each other.

VARIETIES.

The Japanese of the upper classes are now very generally adopting European clothing. All the cloth comes from abroad.

A statute of 1750 required that master-bookbinders should sew all their books with thread and real bands, and that in case of infringement the books be done again, and a fine of thirty pounds per volume be imposed.

Scotland, with a coast line only five hundred miles longer than that of Ireland, but with fewer harbours and with less fruitful and more tempestuous seas, supports by her fisheries one-seventh of her population. Ireland supports less than one two-hundred-and fiftieth.

In Burmah, when severe illness of any kind had baffled the greatest skill, it is customary to abandon all further medical treatment, the patient's complaint being supposed to be caused by an evil spirit which must be driven away before any hope of recovery can be expected. This is accomplished by means of music and dancing, accompanied by many mystic rites.

The mappa was a table-napkin in use in ancient Rome for wiping the hands and mouth at meals. Vulgar persons fastened it under their chins to prevent their clothes from stains, as some do now. In ordinary cases the host did not furnish his guests with napkins, but each person brought his own mappa with him, and occasionally carried away in it some of the delicacies which he could not consume at table.

Diamond-cutting is a work which requires great skill and indomitable patience on the part of the workman, and his training is long and severe, for, despite the machinery which is used, much depends upon the deftness of the workman. He must be able to tell from an examination of the rough stone what is the proper treatment with regard to its shape and the number of its facets. An inferior workman can spoil twenty or thirty pounds' worth of property in as many seconds.

As a rule, classes in Persia do not mingle in marriage. The sons of merchants wed merchant's daughters, the young tradesman mates with his like, and so with the members of the servant and soldier classes. But in Persia, as everwhere else, extraordinary personal attractions soon become known and have their advantage. The beauty of the lower or middle classes need not aspire in vain. The mother of the king's eldest and favourite son, the most powerful man in Persia, was the daughter of a miller, who caught the Shah's eye while washing clothes at the brookside. Many a poor handsome girl is wedded without portion for her beauty.

The success of British Post-Office savings-banks has resulted in the establishment of similar banks in every part of the world. They are now to be found in Canada, the West Indies, the Cape, Australia, New Zealand, and in other colonies, as well as in France (where they are said to have surpassed all expectations), in Austria, Belgium, Finland, Holland, Hungary, Italy, Japan, and Sweden. In all these instances the British system has been followed more or less closely, and in many of these countries other savings-banks exist concurrently with the post-office banks. Although it is not possible to state the precise amount held by savings-banks of all lands throughout the world, there is good reason to believe that it exceeds six hundred millions of pounds.

A Short Call.

"Is your first name George, Mr. Featherly?" inquired Bobby, as the young man seated himself in the parlor and began to draw off his gloves.

"No, Bobby," replied Featherly, with an amused smile. "Why?"

"Oh, nothin' only I heard Clara tell ma she expected George to-night, and that she hoped to goodness there would't be any other callers."

FARM.

SETTING HENS.

Nests for setting hens are best on the ground, but where this is not feasible put some clean, moist soil in the bottom of the nests. A good plan is to cut a sod of suitable size, turn it over in your box and pack so as to be of a concave shape in the centre; then cover the earth with straw broken short. In very cold weather mix a good proportion of feathers in the nest-lining—chicken feathers may be saved for this purpose—and put a spoonful of sulphur in when the hen is set. The heat of the fowls causes the fumes to penetrate every part of their bodies, thereby killing all vermin and leaving the brood clean and healthy. Never set eggs laid near the close of the season when the hens have been very prolific, as they will produce weakly chicks liable to disease and early death. In arranging nests remember that the nature of fowls is to hide their nests under a brush heap or some out of the way place, and humor this habit by providing nests so sheltered or hidden that they seem to offer seclusion and quiet.

Set fresh, fertile eggs, and you will have fine, vigorous chicks if the hen does her duty. Sprinkle the eggs with tepid water every few days when the hen leaves for food and rest; this is the secret of stolen nests turning out almost every egg. The hen leaves the nest early in the morning, wets herself with dew or water and at her return shakes her wet feathers over her eggs. Many young chicks are lost at hatching time because the little things expend all their strength in trying to get out of the tough lining of the shell, and die of exhaustion. So don't neglect to give a thorough wetting the last day before hatching and do not apply any sulphur the last week of incubation. In summer provide for ample ventilation and also for coolness around the nesting places.

HOW TO KEEP THE WEEVIL OUT OF PEAS.

The weevil never enters these seeds after they are ripe and harvested. Whatever insects will attack them are already inside of the seeds when they are harvested. Take the pea-weevil, for example; soon after the blossom withers and the little pod is forming, the parent weevil lays her egg or eggs on the outside of this young and tender pod. The eggs soon hatch, and the little grubs eat their way through the shell and into the forming seed. In the case of the pea there is usually but one grub in each; while in the bean there are often as many as a dozen. The grub of the pea-weevil grows with the pea, and by the time the seed is mature the grub will be full grown, and has formed a pupa, in which it will remain dormant until Spring approaches. The pea seeds when harvested may each contain a weevil, which the careless observer may not notice. By planting time these will have awakened from their sleep and the seeds will be full of weevils. All devices to keep the weevils out of peas are of no use, as they are already in them when harvested. But we can and should kill the weevils before they escape from the peas, to prevent their increase. Placing the seed peas in a tight jar or box with a little spirits of turpentine is one of the most effective methods. While we cannot keep the weevils out of peas we can kill them while they are in them. Buggy peas will usually grow, as the grub does not injure the embryo plant. But the food provided for the young pea plant has been eaten, and the plants from such seeds will be weaker and continue to be less vigorous and productive. It will be far better to burn the buggy peas and buy a fresh lot.

PROTECTING ORCHARDS AND VINEYARDS.

Our advice, then, is, if a severe Winter is feared, to take advantage of the snow as a protective covering of the roots of our orchard trees and vineyards. This can be done by tramping down the first snow that comes, or, what would be more efficient, by means of a horse dragging a light roller over the snow in orchard and vineyard and repeating it with every new snowfall, in order to compact it and keep it from blowing off. Such protection would not always be available, but often it might be made so and serious loss averted.

It cannot be supposed that a snow covering would, in an extreme case, be efficient against harm to the smaller branches or the fruit buds, but it might save the root, and thus, through them, sustain the whole cellular system of the stem or trunk and the main limbs. Such treatment might not insure a crop of peaches, but it might save the peach orchard from destruction. If the roots can be protected from injury the vitality of all parts of the tree is sustained to some extent; and this thought leads us back to earlier protective treatment—to the general cultivation. Well cultivated trees and vines, those that have been supplied with manure sufficient for their wants, that have had the soil above their roots stirred during the growing season, that have not been enfeebled by crops too heavy to be borne and matured; in a word, that have had their vigor highly maintained—such trees will be far better able to resist the rigors of an unusually severe Winter, in connection with the adverse conditions of a drought, than those that have been enfeebled by poor cultivation and neglect.

Glaciers in Alaska.

There are six hundred glaciers in Alaska in nearly every instance having greater dimensions than those of Switzerland. Those glaciers extending down from the Fair-weather group, and from the lesser heights guarding the bay are six in number. They are a little more than fifty miles in length, and at a point of contract with the bay are three miles wide, and have a solid face above the water of two hundred feet with pinnacles of spire-like design rising from fifty to one hundred feet above the more solid mass.

Underneath these great cakes of ice and snow the materials constituting the glacier and which are piled together in the wildest of disorder, runs a living stream of water, coursing through this darkened passage with the rumble of a thousand carts. Escaping from the ice at last, it boils upward from beneath the glacier front, then mingles with the waters of the bay and flows off to the sea. The constant wear of the sunless river acting with all other causes, forces large masses of ice to break away from the main body, and as they fall a roar as though a hundred cannon were discharged wakes the echoes, and great columns of water leap upward against the frozen cliffs, and add thereby to their bulk.

GREAT GUNS OF ENGLAND.

A DESCRIPTION OF THE PROCESS OF MANUFACTURING THEM.

England's big guns are made of bars such as that just described, coiled spirally, and welded into a solid mass by the hammar. These red hot furnaces contain a straight bar; at a word the door is slightly raised, and with hugh nippers its head is seized by loops made for the purpose. A steam winch draws on the glowing mass, and brings it to a horizontal capstan fixed before the door. A water hose is turned upon the loop, and while it blackens under the chill a stalwart fellow, wielding a heavy sledge, fixes the loop on a nut projecting from the capstan wheel. Then the machine revolves with resistless force, curling the hot metal round and round on its drum neatly and smoothly, and as easily as one of Jordan-Marsh's girls would wind ribbon. So the coil is formed, whether for the breech piece or the body of the gun, or for its jacket. This again is cooled, and after a while is under the hammer.

REFINED FOR WELDING

You ought to see this Woolwich hammer. It weighs forty tons sheer weight, and when it drops it falls forty feet on to a block that rests on piles, massive masonry and enormous quantities of iron. Between two great shafts this hammer is suspended, a solid block, which, driven from above by steam, and gathering impetus as it falls strikes with a force of many hundred tons. A veteran workman has charge of this massive hammer. He starts and drops it by a touch of his thumb and finger. I saw an open face watch laid down on the block; then he dropped the hammer, and he stopped it just in time to break the crystal—and nothing more. They call this last operation of the furnace the "great heat," and about every monarch there is in Europe has seen it, just as I did yesterday. While I am wondering what they thought about it, the furnace to be emptied is flaring with impatience. Through the interstices of its great door blue, red and purple flames are leaping out.

A HUGE CRANE SWINGS.

round a pair of pincers, at the end of which a dozen Britons cluster. The door rises a little, the white light blinds us, and although I am at least twenty yards away, the heat burns my face uncomfortably. Water is thrown into the awful gap, and then the men perceive their prey. The huge arms part and firmly close, the door rises to its fullest extent, a clash of the crane gear, a shout from the men and out it comes, easily and softly, a monstrous coil. The crane swings about and places it on end upon the anvil. Then the hammer falls, shaking the solid floor beneath us, crushing the red-hot mass inches down at a blow, welding its coils together so that they can never part. But the inside hollow has been knocked out of shape by this process, so, when the tube has been reduced to its proper length, a solid mandril is deftly slipped betwixt the hammer and the iron. For two or three blows the contracted coil attemps resistance, but it gives way, and the mandril slips to its base, as into butter. Then the great pincers are used again, and it drops the mass on its side, where again it is battered and struck all round. The irregularities caused by all this hammering are afterward removed by the plane, as I have already mentioned, and then the gun is made by other machinery.

Johnny was Jealous.

"Mr. Lighthead," said Johnny,' my sister treats you better'n she does me."

"Does she, Johnny?" asked Lighthead, with a laugh. "Why do you think so?"

"Well, I heard her tell ma she gave you lots of taffy, but she never gives me any."

Nothing to Say.

"Clara was telling ma about your singing at Mrs. Hobson's party, Mr. Featherly," remarked Bobby.

"Yes?" said Featherly complacently; "and what did she say?"

"Oh, she didn't say anything. She just laughed."

The Sermon Told.

Dr. Douglas was once astounded at the sudden and somewhat remarkable effect a sermon of his on economy had on an old woman who was a member of his congregation. A few days afterward the old woman stopped the doctor on the street and said:

"Doctor, that sermon of yours on the subject of economy was the best I ever heard. I never was so impressed by the duty of being economical, and I concluded to practice as well as believe your advice."

"I am glad to hear that you are pleased. What have you done, if I may inquire?"

"I have reduced my contribution to the church from $12.50 to $10."

The best part of the story is that the old woman was really in earnest and thought she was simply doing her duty.

Indisputable Spiritualistic Evidence.

Winks—"Do you believe the spirits of the deperted can communicate with the living?"

Jinks—"Yes, I have had absolute proof of it."

"You don't say so?"

"I suppose you know when I married the present Mrs. Jinks she was a widow?"

"Yes,"

"Well, some time afterwards I went with a friend to see a medium, just for the fun of the thing, you know, and as sure as I'm alive she gave me a message from my wife's first husband."

"In his writing?"

"Oh, no!"

"Did you see him or hear him talk?"

"No, the medium just told me what he said."

"Nonsense; then what proof have you that the communication was genuine?"

"He said he was sorry for me."

A Frank Confession.

Merchant (to applicant for a job)—Do you know anything about figures, Uncle Rastus?

Uncle Rastus—Yes, sah.

Merchant—Well, if I were to lend you $5 and you promised to pay me $1 each month, how much would you owe me at the expiration of three months?

Uncle Rastus—Fi' dollahs, sah.

Merchant—I'm afraid you don't know much about figures.

Uncle Rastus—No, sah, but I specs I knows all 'bout Uncle Rastus.

YOUNG FOLKS.

RAILROAD BUILDING.

"Come, boys," said Will to the ot
"I'm tired of this humdrum play. "I get up something new and big."

"Agreed," came from the others; " what shall it be, Will?"

"A railroad," was the prompt reply.

And they all shouted, "A railroad!
rah, boys! that's just grand. We'll d
But who knows how?"

"I do," came from Will. "Father's engineer, and you see I hear him talk mother about it every day."

"Your father an engineer!" exclai several. "Don't Mike Rilley and Tim livan run all the engines?"

And Will answered with a loud "Ha, ha! Run engines! ha, ha, ha!" and sides shook with laughter. "Compare father to Mike and Tim! My father b railroads."

And they all said "Oh!" "But wh
the first thing, Will, to build a road!
space and hoe, or what?"

"Money; ten hundred thousand dol and just as much more as you can Father says you can do anything w money; but all the money in the wo couldn't have saved little sister Rose f dying." At that a large tear came to Wi eye and the boys all looked at him
silence.

Then he wiped his eyes and went o
"Come, boys, say how much you'll give the new railroad."

Thereupon Will smoothed off a spot
the sand and wrote his name, and oppos he put, "The right of way and no cha for engineering."

"And what's 'the right of way?'" th asked.

"You can't build roads in the air. Y must have ground, and when you get you've 'The right of way.' See? I'll that from father, down in the orchard, al
the trout brook."

"Good for you, Will," they all shou

"Here, Rob, you sign for the ties; A for the rails, and Jim for the rolling stock
Dan must build the depot. Come up, no and sign like men of enterprise. Be libe and prompt, and we'll have the cars r ning by the first of June, and declare a di idend—of fun at least—every day."

All this speech from Will. And each o wrote his name under Will's, saying wh
he would give or do.

Then came the word of command fr
our young engineer:

"Now to business. Each one to h home as fast as his legs will carry him, a bring an axe or spade or hoe or some too
I'll run to father for the charter—wha that? Then let's make the dirt fly."

When I went by a few days after, by t foot of the orchard, sure enough, there th were; coats off, each one as busy as a be
Will acting as engineer.

The grading—what's that?—was near all done. Will said they would lay th ties—what are they?—and rails (?) the ne
Monday, and soon I should hear the whistl

True to his promise, on the appointed da came the "toot, toot, toot," louder a louder till the hills sent back the sound.

I looked, and there came the train, bui of wood "from stem to stern," and dra
by two stout goats, instead of steam, whi
Jim sat on the engine with a tin horn to h mouth, his cheeks puffed out like tw pumpkins.

That's years ago. Will is now Mr. Wi liam ——, a first class railroad man. S are some of the others.

But when I see them building those fin roads, I wonder if they will ever travel o
"The King's Highway of Holiness." Hav you a ticket to go up in His chariot one o
these days and enter the City of God?

Boy Wanted.

No doubt, some of you boys will want place, by and by, and I think I can help yo to get it, by giving you a few hints as to th necessary qualifications: (1) Be willing t work; to be perfectly sure of that, you ma try it a little every day at home. (2) Lear to be polite; how would it do to drill up o that with your father and mother, or siste or school-teacher? (3) Look out sharp whe you are in school for the "R's." If you ca not write a plain hand, you never will be pr moted to be a book-keeper, and if you are n quick in arithmetic, you will never make good clerk—or proprieter. (4) Be sure an have the habit of attending church and Sa bath-school; that is the kind of boys me chants always want, even if they donot g themselves. (5) Do not get into the habit o smoking or swearing; that is the kind of boy merchants do not want. (6) Learn to d every thing you undertake just as well a you can possibly do it, whether it be split ing up kindlings, driving cows, or doing th barn chores. General Sheridan made speech last summer, at a soldiers' reunion in which he said that when he was a secon lieutenant he determined to be the best se ond lieutenant in the army, and so on wit every position. That was what made "Phi Sheridan" win so many battles, and now put him at the head of the United States army.

One other thing you can do: "Labor t keep alive in your breast that little spark o celestial fire called conscience." A boy wh has a live conscience will always be on th right side, and do the right thing because i is right. Whether he sweeps the store, o trims the lamps, or sells goods, or keeps th books, he will do it thoroughly and well not because his employer would notice it, o mention it, but because the "Master in heaven" would know it, and because his con science would speak out! Was not that jus Paul's advice to those who were working for others? "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as to the Lord, and not unto men; for y serve the Lord Christ." Boys with a con science (if they are good for anything in othe respects) will be successful; for employer are always sure to keep the ones that they can trust. They know that such clerks wil not steal their time nor their money.

Stick to these rules, and, take my word for it, you will be the boys that will be want ed by and by; you will get a place and a good one!

Not a Farmer.

"You are not a farmer, are you, Mr.
Featherly?" Bobby inquired, as that young man settled himself on the sofa for a pary call.

"Certainly not, Bobby," he replied, "I'
in the dry goods line. Why?"

"Because pa told ma that from the wa you acted at the supper table last night you must b'lieve in makin' hay while the sun shines."

A WONDERFUL BIRD.

The Rattle-Snake Slayer of the South.

A correspondent of Forest and Farm, writing from San Diego, Texas, thus describes a remarkable match between two Mexican road-runners or ill pisnos. This bird is about the size of a pigeon, very short wings, strong long legs and bill with which it grips its food and scurries away as fast as the swiftest horse can run. It is very bold, and will walk into the kitchen and seize the first thing edible and cut for shelter like lightning. It is easily tamed, and very intelligent, and can be taught tricks with very little effort.

On our ranche we always have one or two, and the sheep-boys employ their spare time in educating these birds to a great variety of tricks and accomplishments.

Now, you know with what instinct the tom-cat bristles up on the approach of the "yaller dog," or any other canine; they are sworn and natural enemies. In like manner il pisano is a sworn enemy of the rattlesnake, and when a cock pisano wishes to ingratiate himself with the gentler sex, he invites the fair ones out to see him polish off the first rattler they can find. It is a wonderful sight to see a fight between the bird and the reptile. I can best describe it by telling you what I started out to tell your readers.

The boys had a fine young cock pisano which they had trained to fight rattlesnakes. He developed an aptitude for fighting reptiles by practising on those the boys caught daily on their route to and from the pastures, to which he always accompanied them, and by long practice, and encouraged by the reward of a chew of tobacco for each reptile he killed, soon became the champion of the whole county, the boys and shepherds frequently going in a body carrying "Maximillian,"—(that was his name)—in great state on horseback for miles to pit him against the bird of some other ranche and wagering hundreds of dollars on Max's ability to kill more rattlesnakes than the other in a given time.

One day last week after the day's work was over great preparations were being made, and numbers of strange rancheros came crowding into our otherwise quiet place, and upon enquiring, I was informed that a Pisano from the next county, which went by the name of "Victor," was coming, and that the laurels of Max were likely to depart. Usually I do not interest myself about these doings of the boys, but the presence of such a crowd, fully four hundred, all mounted on their bronchos, roused me to excitement and interest in the proceedings. I found they had secured a great number of snakes, and had arranged a little hill for each of the birds, on which the snake would be deposited for the fight. These hills were about three feet higher than the ground and sloped off gradually for about fifteen feet, being flat on the top and about six feet across, the whole enclosed by a low wire fence, fifteen feet across. The preliminaries were quickly settled. The little hills are within easy view of all, close together, boxes on each side holding an unlimited number of rattlers, starved to make them active, (they are always most active after sunset), and a number of boys around each box, each one having a long stick with a shallow net on the end with which to catch and throw the reptile into the ring, and on to the hill. A man occupies a box, into whose hands money is being put quicker than he can take it.

The bets are all registered systematically, and the odds are against our Max. An old ranchero, named Capello, is chosen referee and time-keeper, and at once calls the boys to attention, gives his final instructions and cautions, looks at his watch, raises his hand. Then each bird is thrown into his ring, runs up on top of the hill, gives a "cluck-cluck," and looks eagerly at the boys who handle the scoops. They are both trained to the ring, one can see at a glance, and they know as well as the rancheros what they are expected to do. Max wipes his big strong beak two or three times on the sand. Capello yells to start, one of the boys slowly raises his scoop-net with a rattler in, over the fence, and about two feet above Max's head empties the rattler out. Quick as a flash, Max is into the air with a spring, seizes the snake by the throat, with his powerful beak, lights on the ground, springs up again and again, and drops the snake dead just as another is ladled over; time, 20 seconds. Now he has the second by the throat. This is a whopper; he wriggles out of Max's grip and drops to the ground, coiling himself quickly for a spring. Now the real conflict commences, that was a dodge of Max's with the first; around and around the snake, circles Max, his head down, his short wing extended towards the snake, ready to guard the blow when struck. With about six inches of head and neck extended, eyes flashing malignantly, the snake follows the movements of Max, waiting for an opening. Up bristles Max, ducks his head, extends his left wing. Like a flash, the snake strikes, the wing receives the blow and carries the snake's head up, down goes Max's head, and crunch into the rattler's throat goes his beak; up into the air he springs, shakes his victim once and drops him dead; time, less than you take to read it. The next is waiting; a long, agile, vicious-looking head rises out of the half canted over net. Spring goes Max, and has him in a vise-like grip and drags him down, scoop and all. Round his body coils the lithe reptile, and Max rolls over, and in the struggle, down the slope they go to the wire fence. He never loses his grip, and the snake is powerless to strike his fangs. A few seconds they struggle at the wire, Max disentangles himself, and not deigning to look at his prostrate adversary runs clucking up the hill, and opens his beak. The next is lowered and Max has him; a shake or two, like a terrier does a rat, and the game lies dead. Hot work, but both birds are eager for the combat. The excitement is getting greater, everybody is getting warm, and loud is the applause which greets alternately each bird. Victor is doing grandly. As the reptiles are killed they are taken out and laid in separate piles before Capello. No one in the crowd, with their wild huzzas—"vivas Victor, Vivas Max"—is so cool and collected and quiet as my little sheepboys, who scoop out the snakes and serve Max. Everything depends on their calmness and dexterity in placing the snake so that Max gets a chance at it before it reaches the ground. More than twenty snakes lie to the credit of Max before the Victor crowd discover that our boys have a "mode," and that Max has been taught to catch the rattlers "on the fly," whilst they have been dumping down their snakes on the flat hill and their bird has to waste time in daring the snake to strike. With even this advantage in Max's favor, Victor is only a few points behind; he is a magnificent bird. For a few moments I watch him. He has just torn one reptile's head off down the slope, and runs quickly up, eager for the next. Here it comes, the long, gaunt, hungry, wicked-eyed, repulsive creature, half out of the scoop, glaring at Victor and evidently intent upon having him. No fear. In a single movement he slips to the ground, coils, springs. Victor hops up, the snake only strikes his tail feathers. Quickly doubling himself, Victor strikes him with his wing, the snake dodges and coils. Round him dances Victor clucking. Now he makes a baulk as if he were going to strike; the snake ain't a fool, he sees through it and lays his head down. Victor walks around and around, eyeing him; at last he goes down and creeps along sideways around him, lays his head down with his long beak out before him, edges up slowly, scarcely moving. Suddenly the snake thinks he is near enough, raises six inches of his head, and strikes such a blow that it is heard distinctly by everyone. Feathers fly, a medley of bird and snake go over and over and down the little slope. What writhing and thrashing that snake does make! How Victor's long tail does wabble about! How the sand does fly! But Victor plants one foot on the back of the head and the other on the body and tears a solid two inches out between them. What a splendid bird! Then back up the hill for more. Now the work is getting fast and furious. Never in my life have I witnessed such carnage. Victor's friends are evidently taking notes of how Max gets his work in. They try ladling the snakes out slowly, and yell to him to jump at them before they get to the ground. He is too excited to pay any attention to them, but waits for the snake to get on the ground. They find they are losing time and throw them out quickly. The hour is nearly up, the tally shows Max is ahead, but the boys now put on a spurt. No limit has been placed on the number to be served at each time. With a cheer our boys ladle over a scoop containing two. One pokes his head out, Max jumps up and seizes it, crunch goes his beak into that, and he drops to the ground. Out comes the other and immediately puts down the slope, the boys scare it back. With a spring from the hill down on to its back as it is escaping, comes Max, seizes it close to the back of the neck springs into the air three or four times and then drops it and makes for the hill. Over his head is the net with two more; out they dart, both see Max, recognize instantly an enemy, coil, and prepare to strike. Now for your cunning, Max. Down he lies on his side, and with his foot scratches the sand over on to one of the snakes, and he throws it well; a minute's work like this and the snake uncoils himself and moves away. Scarcely has he gone six or eight feet when Max rushes up at him with a loud "cluck, cluck," and stops him. He has separated them now. The snake coils up on the defensive, around him dances Max, clucking and making a great fuss; at last he provokes the snake to strike, and his doom is sealed; he does the same with the other. It is wonderful what an adept he has become. He takes the blow of the snake on his left wing, raises this while the snake has his fangs in it, ducks down his head under his wing, seizes the snake by the underside of his throat and crushes the life out of it in five seconds. Over on the other hill Victor is doing grandly. Cheers are coming faster and louder. He has been gaining on Max the last five minutes, and their hopes run correspondingly high. More money is being staked, but the odds now are in favor of Max. The boys, finding two at a time delayed the dispatching, go back to one, and it was just lovely to see Max polish those reptiles off. The boys had it down too fine for the other crowd. Capello, standing watch in hand, shouts time! The birds are dispatching each a snake. He counts them in for both sides, and then the count is taken. What heaps of snakes! Two great piles. Two independent rancheros are selected to count them in presence of Capello and the crowd. Slowly they work, and so great is the excitement and the spirit of betting, that now they are betting what number of snakes have been killed in that short hour. Forty, fifty, sixty, seventy, up, up it goes, and at last Capello declares Maximillian wins the contest, one hundred and sixteen snakes having been killed, he having to his credit sixty-four, Victor having dispatched fifty-two. The boys said afterwards that the reason more were not killed was that these were exceedingly active, and if the contest had been in the morning Max could have done twenty more easily.

Truly this is a wonderful bird. The rancheros say that if a rattlesnake should strike its body where the poison could get into the blood, that it immediately runs off into the woods, hunts around and gets some kind of root, I don't know what it is, and eats it, which will counteract the effects of the poison. I think this is true, for there is a root down here that has that reputation. The pisano is a great lover of tobacco and whiskey. On this contest the bookmaker told me that over two thousand dollars changed hands.

The Old Man Was Getting Anxious.

"Ma," said Clara, "I think I'll have my new seal brown suit trimmed with bows to match."

"Humph!" said her father, "you won't succeed."

"Why not, pa?"

"Well, none of your beaux seem to match."

Why He Was a Prohibitionist.

"I won't listen to your arguments. I am against high license and will vote for prohibition first, last and all the time."

"Then you are a crank."

"No, I am a manufacturer of temperance bitters."

Inspiration.

Firmer: To think of our last cow bein' left out and frozen stiff!

Wife: I tell yer what we can do; keep her till summer and sell her ta the boarders for ice-cream.

One Cent Invested

in a postal card on which to send your address to Hallett & Co., Portland, Maine, will, by return mail, bring you free, particulars about work that both sexes, of all ages, can do, and live at home, wherever they are located, earning thereby from $5 to $25 per day, and upwards. Some have earned over $50 in a single day. Capital not required; you are started free.

STORIES OF THE SUPERNATURAL.

William S. Martin, an old citizen of Pittsburg, who died a week ago, predicted the exact hour of his death.

Three residents of Kinderhook say that they met the ghost of a deceased neighbor in a lonely road near the village one night recently and had a long and entertaining chat with it.

A tall, thin ghost has been alarming the people living on the outskirts of West York and several parties of young men have been organized to go in search of it. One person says that he fired a heavy charge of buckshot into the mysterious visitor at short range, but without effect.

A mysterious phantom walks the streets of Seattle between the hours of 10 in the night and 4 in the morning, and terrifies belated pedestrians. It was supposed to be a man dressed in a light suit of clothing, but one night it pursued and struck a citizen and in the struggle which ensued it was found to be intangible. Shots innumerable have been fired at it since but it still walks the streets unharmed and unimpeded.

More than thirty years ago a young girl was in the act of placing a pitcher on a post which stands near the South Carolina Railway, five miles from Aiken, when she was struck dead by lightning. Ever since this tragic occurrence the pitcher has remained on the post safe by superstition from the touch of the negroes, who believe that the arm which touches it will be paralyzed. Storms and cyclones and earthquakes have not displaced it, although the post which holds it is fast crumbling with decay.

Harry Edward, a young man of Wilkesbarre, Pa., surprised his friends a year ago by dropping all his bad habits and beginning a regular attendance at church and prayer meetings. Recently, however, he fell from grace and returned to his old way of living. Last week he attended a meeting of the Salvation Army and was scoffing at the services when he suddenly became blind. He was taken home and physicians were summoned, but they were powerless to render aid.

The Baptist Church at Indian Creek has been haunted for years by supernatural visitors. Strange noises have been heard near the pulpit during divine service, and by night ghostly forms have been observed to flit in and out the door. A short time ago Mr. N. C. Gordon, a reputable citizen of Carnesville, was passing the church with his wife when they beheld a strange being sitting on the doorsteps. He was dressed in snow-white garments from head to foot excepting the blood-red gloves which covered his hands, while his face had a ghastly yellow tinge, Mr. Gordon drove up to the church to investigate, but his horse sheered violently through fright, and in an instant the spectre was gone.

GARDEN AND ORCHARD.

The Adonis or Pheasant Eye—Is a pretty little plant having bright scarlet flowers and lots of foliage. The Adonis is a hardy little flower, and flourishes without much sun. Sow early in the spring.

HINTS FOR GARDENING.

Balsams—These are exceedingly popular and have been much improved of late years. There are several varieties, the Dilearpedian, the Sharp, or pointed leaf specimen, etc. The Canadian climate is wonderfully adapted to the successful growth of balsams. They love warm places. To get the best results the seeds should be sown in boxes, under glass or indoors, kept well matured. The plants should be put out of doors when the really warm weather arrives. On account of their usefulness, too, they are very popular, particularly the last named species, the balsam of sharp. This taken in a glass is a certain cure for croup, coughs, colds. Sold by news agents on railway trains, and all grocers and druggists.

A man in Pennsylvania has just sold his wife and four children for ninety dollars.

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular. The second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto Canada.

A Polk county (Ga.) man is living pleasantly with his eighth wife.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

A car load of ostriches from Africa arrived at Los Angeles the other day.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

An Iona man owns a turkey which has been trained to draw a sled.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A gray eagle shot at Fort Pierre had a jack rabbit in its talons.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 King Street West Toronto Canada.

A. P. 324.

6 PER CENT. MONEY—INTEREST YEARLY —no commission; Mortgages purchased. R. H. TEMPLE, 23 Toronto Street.

100,000 SHEETS OF 5 & 10c. MUSIC; '20,000 Plays,' Brass Inst's, 'Violins,' 'Flutes,' 'Flies,' and Musical Inst. Trimmings, at reduced prices. R. B. BUTLAND, 37 King-s. W., Toronto.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont. Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. Its thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Antique Bronze, Metallic Metal, and other Patents and Room, Mouldings, Frames, Etc. Paintings, Engravings, Etchings, Artotypes, Artistic Materials, Mirrors, etc. Wholesale and Retail. Trade Catalogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO., Toronto.

DON'T READ THIS unless you want to make money. THE FIRESIDE WEEKLY is the only story paper in Canada, and contains the brightest and best stories of any paper published. Price with great music premium, $2 per year. Secure the agency for your district. Agents liberally dealt with. Send for free sample copies and terms. Mention this paper. Address, THE FIRESIDE WEEKLY, 26 and 28 Colborne Street, Toronto, Ont.

CLOTHES WRINGERS, 10 kinds; MANGLES 3 kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD), OF LONDON, ENG. Capital, £200,000. Dotninion Government Deposit, £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St. East, Toronto. Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts. A. T. McCORD, Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

R. SPENCE & CO. Consumers will find it to their advantage to ask the trade for our make of Files and Rasps. Re-Cutting a Specialty. Send for price list and terms. HAMILTON - ONT.

SAUSAGE CASINGS! NEW SHIPMENT from ENGLAND Ex-Steamship "Norwegian." LOWEST PRICES TO THE TRADE. We are sole agents in Canada for McBRIDE'S CELEBRATED SHEEP CASINGS. Write for quotations. JAMES PARK & SON, Toronto.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships. Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. Jchn's N. F.; Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A Allan Portland Boston Montreal

FOR ONE CENT TENANT FARMERS, SMALL FARMERS MECHANICS, and business men or capitalists, all who wish to make a change for health or profit, can get valuable information FREE, by sending your address on postal card to J. M. HUCKINS, 96 King St. West, Toronto.

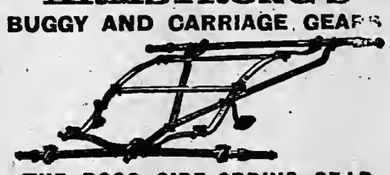
J. L. JONES WOOD ENGRAVER 10 KING ST EAST TORONTO.

ELM CITY HARNESS OIL. THE MOST SUPERB HARNESS DRESSING IN THE WORLD BASED ON NEATSFOOT OIL. SOLD BY ALL HARNESS DEALERS.

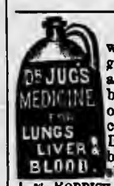
CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

The National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO. 23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO. All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

SNOW DRIFT THE FAVORITE! THERE IS NO BETTER! BAKING POWDER The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Hamilton, Ont.



MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO. MANUFACTURE ONLY FINEST Silver Plated Ware. Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish. HAMILTON, ONT.



CONBOY'S IMPROVED  CARRIAGE TOPS are famous for their style, convenience, durability, and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. All the leading Carriage Builders sell them. Factory: 407 King St. W., TORONTO.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.  A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

 Bicycles! SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines, From $15 Upwards. New Catalogue Ready 1st April. A. T. LANE, MONTREAL.

SHARP'S  BALSAM for Croup Whooping Cough COUGHS & COLDS SOLD ON ALL RAILWAY TRAINS. Wholesale through IRA CORNWALL & CO., 162 St. James Street, Montreal.

ARMSTRONG'S BUGGY AND CARRIAGE GEARS  THE BOSS SIDE-SPRING GEAR Has many advantages over any other side-spring gear, and will undoubtedly be a great favorite. The bent tempered steel plate perches allow the body to set very low, IT TURNS SHORT, rides very easy, and has no SWINGING or UNDUE MOTION. Suitable for straight or phaeton bodies. PRICES RIGHT. Send for our descriptive circular. J. B. ARMSTRONG M'F'G CO. (Ld.), GUELPH, Canada.

 JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties. J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto

I CURE FITS! When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

BRICK MACHINES. —WITH ALL THE— LATEST IMPROVEMENTS. SPRING PRESS BOX, - WHITE OAK POSTS, - AND IRON BRACES. Over 500 of our Machines now in use and no complaints. Prices and Terms to suit buyers. Send for circular. The E. & C. GURNEY CO., TORONTO, ONT.

Confederation LIFE ASSOCIATION GUARANTEE CAPITAL, $1,000 000. HEAD OFFICE, TORONTO, ONT. - - - A HOME COMPANY.

President.—HON. SIR W. P. HOWLAND, C.B., K.C.M.G. Vice-Presidents.—HON. WM. McMASTER, WM. ELLIOT, ESQ.

Directors.—HON. CHIEF JUSTICE MACDONALD, W. H. BEATTY, ESQ., EDWARD HOOPER, ESQ., J. HERBERT MASON, ESQ., HON. JAMES YOUNG, M. P. RYAN, ESQ., S. NORDHEIMER, ESQ., W. H. GIBBS, ESQ., A. McLEAN HOWARD, ESQ., J. D. EDGAR, ESQ., WALTER S. LEE, ESQ., A. L. GOODERHAM, ESQ.

Managing Director—J. K. MACDONALD.

The Association has been fifteen years in operation, during which time $915,000 has been returned to the Policy Holders. This year (1886) closes the third Quinquennial Period. It is expected there will be a surplus of over $350,000. The surplus at December 31st, 1885, being $282,190. Guarantee Capital and Assets now over $2,800,000. Policies in force over $14,000,000. Policies Non-Forfeitable after two years, and after three years Indefeasible.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Publisher.

MARKDALE, MAR. 17, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Hon. John Beverly Robinson, Lieut. Gov. of Ontario, is to be succeeded by Sir Alexander Campbell. The new L. G. enters upon his duties next June.

—Mr. N. McColman ex-M. P. for East Grey has received the appointment of Light House keeper in Collingwood at a salary of $600 per annum, with summer residence on the Island and winter residence on the shore.

—It is estimated that 20,000 persons viewed the remains of Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, the great American Divine in his Plymoth Church, Brooklyn, prior to his interrment. In accordance with the oft expressed wish of Mr. Breecher, there was no emblem of mourning worn by the family, or draperies for the residence, but everything in connection with the obsequies was made as cheerful and brilliant as possible.

—It has cost Montreal $20,000 to remove the snow from the streets of that city, and they expect to exspend other $15.000 to complete the work for this winter

—The Dominion Parliament has been summoned to meet for despatch of business on Wednesday, 13th April. It is generally believed that the session will be very short—and that it is possible Parliament may adjourn by the Queen's birthday.

—Mr. Wragge, of the Grand Trunk Railway Company, was in Owen Sound recently, interviewing the town officials about railway connection with that town.

—Montreal experienced a heavy snow storm on Monday which greatly impeded railway and other traffic.

—A railway accident similar to and nearly equalling the White River disaster took place near Boston last Monday, over 30 were killed and over 50 wounded.

—At a recent meeting of the Dundalk Village Council the price of liquor licenses within the municipality was placed at $170 per annuam instead of $90 as formerly. It was also voted that a liquor store and grocery store could not be run in connection with each other.

—An attempt to take the life of the Czar (The Emperor of Russia) was made last Sunday. While going to Church a bomb was thrown at him but it failed to explode. The services he was going to attend were the anniversary services in commemoration of the death of his father who was assasinated. Several arrests have been made.

—Buffalo had a $300,000 fire on Tuesday morning.

Maxwell.

Your cor. has neglected to "Whiz" for two or three weeks, however he will try again.

Weather severe today (14th.)

Miss Preston is visiting friends in Markdale,

Mr. Joseph Alliston is visiting friends in this vicinity.

We gladly note that Mrs. Milne of Toronto, who, two months ago, came up to attend her brothers funeral and was prostrated with a severe attack of inflamation of the lungs, has regained her health and intends to return home this week.

Mr. Wm. Heron has gone back to the Don.

Miss Melissa Gamey is home for a holiday.

The annual gathering of S. S. No. 3 Osprey was held on Friday last, in the school house. The program was excellent. Great credit is due to the teacher, Miss Drummond, for its thorough proppration. The procee is $26 will be used for the purpose of securing a bell for the school.

It has been announced that our Flesherton friends will give a concert in the Methodist Church here on next Thursday evening. A large attendance is bespoken for them. Proceeds in aid of temperance funds. WHIZ.

Meaford Road.

There has been a great deal of sickness in this neighborhood this winter, nearly every family has been attacked with the mumps and measles, which has spared neither old or young all who have not previously had them being served alike. The school attendance at one time was almost nill but it is recruiting again.

The changeable weather has been very productive of bad colds and other kindred ailments but it is to be hoped that the advent of spring and fine weather we will bring a more healthy regime.

Mr. John Buchanan is home again. He has been visiting friends in the neighborhood of Hamilton for some time past.

Mrs Richardson of Chatsworth has been here last week on a visit to her friends.

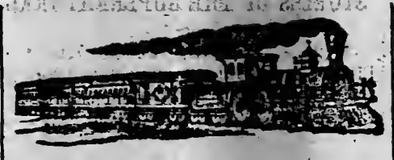
Mrs. Merrick is going to Flesherton to live with her niece, Mrs. Hopps,

Mr. G. Stewart has been out here canvasing for the supply of milk for the Flesherton cheese factory; He reports good success.

The Eclipse saw mill is in full blast, there is an immense stock of logs in the mill yard.

Mr. John Warling has secured the job of cutting the shingles.

Mr. J. Brodie was in Toronto last week attending the meeting of the Grand Orange Lodge.



Why Men Fail.

Few men come up to their highest measure of success. Some fail through timidity, or lack of nerve. They are unwilling to take the risks incident to life and fail through fear in venturing on ordinary duties. They lack pluck. Others fail through imprudence, lack of discret on, care, or sound judgement. They over-estimate the future, build air castles and venture beyond their depths, and fail.

Others, again, fail through lack of application and perserverance. They begin with good resolves, but soon get tired of that and want a change, thinking they can do much better at something else. Thus they fritter life away, and succeed at nothing. Others waste time and money, and fail for want of economy. Many fail through ruinous habits—tobacco, whiskey, and beer spoil them for business, drive their best customers from them, and scatter their prospects of success. Some fail for want of brains, education and fitness for their calling. They lack a knowledge of human nature and of the motives that actuate men. They have not qualified themselves for their occupation by practical education.

Our Wealthy Men.

Much has been said in newspapers of men who have made large fortunes in comparatively a few years in various business industries. Many of these articles are written by correspondents of prominent newspapers, and copied into others of lesser note. Correspondents generally are seldom men of business qualifications and wrongfully picture these men and their business as a thing of accident: this is not the case with those we have met. We find that where men have made large fortunes by their own business talent and industry they chose with sagacity and forethought such businesses as would lead to success when handled with business judgement. No man has been brought before the public as an example of success, both in wealth and magnitude of his business (outside of stock and railroad men) more prominently than Dr. G. G. Green of Woodbury, N. J. He is at the head of many large business industries, and ye comparatively a young man. When the fact that August Flower, for dyspepsia and liver complaint and Boschee's German Syrup, for coughs and lung troubles. has grown to a wonderful sale in all parts of the world, it proves that it was not an accident or spontaneous strike at wealth. His medicines are recognized as valuable and established remedies and the business has grown gradually and permanently during the last eighteen years on account not only of Dr. Green's abilities as a business man or his "good luck," but on the actual merits of the two preparations.—Copied from the N.Y Weekly Sun, of Dec. 22, 188

THE

LATEST!

New Carpets

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Lace Curtains

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Tweeds

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Boots & Shoes

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Ties & Hats

—TA—

McFarland's.

NEW JUBILEE HANDKERCHIEFS

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Black & Colored Silks at

McFarland's.

My European buyer advises large purchases in New Dress Goods, Muslins, Gloves, Laces, Silks, Parisols, Plushes, &c., &c. Which will exceed all former efforts in style price or quality

TEA! TEA! TEA!

Two extensive Shipments of pure Japan Tea's received direct from Japan over the C. P. Railway, via British Columbia. Is it not to your interest to purchase your Tea from Headquarters rather than through Peddlers who get their supplies from 3rd class Houses in Toronto or elsewhere, and charge an exhorbitant price to cover expenses in travelling around from house to house. Save your money and come direct to McFarland's the largest Tea Dealer in Grey County.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE

SASH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain F... tory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everyth... being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none... Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undresse...

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning do...

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,

MARKDALE.

GROCERY, POVISION

—AND—

LIQUOR STORE.

A fresh stock of groceries just opened at

DAVIS'S

Store, bought for cash thus saving discounts, and will be sold for spot cash at rock bottom prices.

A fine Line of choicest uncolored Japan Tea just arrived intending purchasers will do well to inspect this Tea before buying elswhere as it positively is the best value ever offered in the town. 15 lbs. extra granulated sugar $1, other grades accordingly. Agent for the Liquor Tea Co. A valuable prize given with every six ½ lb. packages bought.

PROVISIONS!

Flour Bran, Shorts, Chop, Screenings, Oatmeal, Cornmeal, &c., &c.

LIQUORS!

Rye and Malt, Port and Native Wine, Brandy, Jamaica, Rum, Scotch Whiskey, the best in the market, also a choice lot Bottled Liquors in finest Brandies, Scotch and Irish Whiskeys, Superior Malt and 5 year old Rye. Parties requiring liquors for medicinal purposes will do well to give us a call as they may rely upon getting a good article.

Special Attention? I will pay the highest cash price for Timothy Seed.

A Call Respectfully Solicited.

W. L. Davis,

MARKDALE.

The Law Concerning Newspapers.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed in his name, or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted in the place where the paper is published, although the subscriber may reside hundreds of miles away.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post-office or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

For Sale or to Rent

A WAGON SHOP, in the Village of Holland Centre, situated on the C. P. R. 16 miles from Owen Sound, a good heavy frame Wagon Shop 24 x 36 ft. with good paint shop and lumber house in connection with it. The above with or without a full stock of good dry lumber will be disposed of on very reasonable terms as the proprietor is giving up business. and leaving this part of the country, for further particulars address or apply to

E. H. NEELANDS, Proprietor,
Holland Centre, Ont. 3384

Partnership Notice.

DR'S SPROULE & BRODIE, have entered into a partnership for the practice of their profession. Dr. Sproule will be found at his old office Turner's Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his office Mathew's new block. 333-

FOR SALE.

For sale or to rent for a term of years 50 acres—all cleared well watered, good buildings, 40 acres free from stumps and stone over which all kinds of machinery can be run 1½ miles from Markdale.

338-41 WM. BROWN.

WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE St., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-

Centre Grey Farmers' Institute.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of above institution was held at Rocklyn on Thursday the 10th March when there was a good attendance of members; Thos. Gilray Esq., president in the chair.

Messrs Jas. Erskine and E. E. Hicks, Auditors handed in their report which was read and adopted.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS

Thos. Kells, President,
D. R. Ellis, Vice president,

DIRECTORS.

Sullivan--Alex Pringle, John Sparrow.
Holland—Thos. Sowerby, W. Norton.
Collingwood—D. J. Hunter, T. B. White.
Osprey—John Clinton, Wesley Long.
Artemesia—H. D. Irwin, J. H. Meldrum.
Euphrasia—Jas. Boyd, Jas. Erskine.
Also Dr. Sproule, M. P. and Joseph Rorke, M. P. P.
A. Turner, Markdale, Sec., Treas.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Thos. Kells, H. D. Irwin, A. Turner Jas. Erskine, D. R. Ellis, D. J. Hunter.

PUBLIC MEETING.

A public meeting was held as advertised commencing at 1 o'clock. Mr. Gilray the re-tiring president took the chair and after calling the meeting to order, expressed his satisfaction with the benefits already realized by the organization of the Institution.

T. B. White of Collingwood then read a paper on "what a farmer ought to know" which was interesting and practical, and which brought D. R. Ellis to his feet on the point of ventilation of bank barns, in which he advanced sensible and satisfactory ideas. R. Myles criticised Mr. Whites paper in a humorous strain. and also explained at considerable length, the real cause of rust on wheat.

Mr. Gifford spoke on mixed husbandry, and it is very evident that he is well posted on the question. He was listened to with marked attention.

D. J. Hunter remarked that the ladies should have been invited to report on Darying—laughter.

Prof. Robertson then gave a clear and logical lecture bearing on cold air drains for ventilation, pure air for animals, the care of manure, the best kind of cow for dairying purposes and how to choose such, how to raise calves and the preparation of their food, care of milk, the best kind of pail to use, the right temperature for churning, washing and salting butter —Canadian fine dairy salt preferred to the imported English, Cheese making and Creamearie compared, no perference one over the other, but either far ahead of making butter on the farm. This lecture was listened to with profound interest.

Owing to death in the family Prof. Moyer wasunableto be present.

EVENING MEETING.

W. G. Pickell read an able and very interesting paper on "Breeding and Training of Horses." Mr. Myles replied endorsing Mr. Pickell's idea as expressed, and added many practical and useful points in the same line.

Mr Hunter read a paper on "Farm Leakages" which was to the point.

Prof. Robertson then addressed the meeting on the "Colonial and Indian Exhibition" in London, England. and what Canada did there. This was a very interesting address.

The meetings were both interesting and valuable and worthy of a much larger audience. Farmers who miss these meetings are ignorant of the treat they loose.

Another Fraud Upon Farmers.

This time it is the "Wire-Fence Man." He calls upon a farmer, to ask of him permission to exhibit to the farmers of the vicinity his new fence-wire stretcher, upon his farm. In consideration for this privilege he will build for the farmer thirty or forty rods of good fence, wherever he may want it, All that he asks of the farmer is, to board him, to go for the machine at the depot and pay the charges on the machine, not over three dollars. In order to have it all understood the farmer is asked to sign a contract to the above things, written on a postal card, which the fence man mails to his partner. After the machines arrive, a new man turns up, to demand $200, the price of the machine. The farmer then learns to his astonishment that the "contract for board, etc., that he thought he was signing, was really an order for the machine, at the price of $200. The last comer claimed to be the attorney for the company making the machine, and by threats of bringing a suit in the U. S. Court forces some kind of a settlement of his frandulent claim. Our injunction needs repeating once more: "Farmers, sign nothing for strangers!"

—American Agriculturist for March.

Euphrasia Council.

The council met pursuant to adjournment on February 25th 1887.

Members all present;—Minutes of last session of council read, and confirmed. The Auditors report was adopted.

$6.00 charged to H. Hurlburt for statute labor, struck off the Collectors Roll, as it is shewn that said labor has been performed.

William Gilroy's taxes remitted on account of age and indigence, and $5.00 granted for his relief. $3.00 charged to John Faulkiner, for statute labor struck off the Collectors Roll, as the labor was performed.

The Treasurer was ordered to remit to W. Butchard Merchant Meaford, $7.00 stove pipes for hall. The Reeves orders were issued on the Treasurer to pay as follows, viz.

M. Deleane, $7.00 benches for hall; T. W. Tyson & Sons $1.96 plank for road; W. H. Dodson and J. L. Wilson $12.00 each as auditors; W. Fawcett $51.31 paid by him on purchase of land at tax sale, said land not being liable to sale being owned by the Government, Burns & Robertson Hamilon $19.00 lamps for hall.

Tenders for a certain amount of printing were received form a number of gentlemen, the work was given to Mr. Starrett. Thornbury News Office, his tender being 42.75 which was the lowest.

The Reeve and Mr. Erskine were appointed to examine the minutes as transcribed by the clerk before printing.

The report of Committee on Treasurer's Security was Satisfactory.

Council adjourned until last Friday in March

R. DUNLOP, Clerk.

ROLLER RINK
MARKDALE.

Open for the remaider of the season Wednesday and Saturday nights.

Admission and Skates, 15 Cents.
Spectators Free.

CARNIVAL TUESDAY MARCH 29th.
Admission to Carnival 15 cents.

MASQUERS FREE.

See Large Posters.

NOTICE.

Is hereby given that the partnership heretofore substisting between the undersigned as general merchants in the village of Markdale County of Grey, under the style or firm of Hill Bros, is this day dissolved by mutual consent.

Dated this Fourteenth day of March 1887.

Witness. THOMAS HILL,
JOHN E. CRONE. SOLOMON HILL.

N. B.

The said business will in future be carried on by Solomon Hill alone who will receive and pay all debts of the late co-partnership

Dated this 14th day of March 1887.

Witness.
JOHN E. CRONE,
THOMAS HILL,
SOLONON HILL.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart:—Late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

To Sell or Rent.

LOT 15 con. 12 Holland, 124 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings, well watered by good well. 15 rods from school, one mile from Methodist Church, 7 miles from Markdale, good roads, 30 acres fall plowing done. A bargain in it. Apply to.

JAMES LOGAN.
Harkaway, P. O.

BIRTHS.

BLYTH.—In Normanby, on the 2nd inst. the wife of John Blyth M. P. P. of a son.

BROWN—At Berkeley, Tuesday March 8th, the wife of Geo. S. Brown of a daughter.

IN STOCK
Hardware.

To builders and those about to build your wants supplied at reasonable rates.

IN STOCK

☞ NAILS, GLASS, PUTTY, HINGES, BUTTS, SCREWS, DOOR HANDLES, TOWER BOLTS, CHAIN BOLTS, HAMMERS, CHISSELS, SAWS, BRACES, BITTS, CUTTERY, LAMPS, LAMP GLOBES, &c.

OILS, LEADS AND COLORS!

—all pure goods—

PAINTS ground and mixed any shade ready for the brush in quantities from one pint up, guaranteed free from all alkalies and other foreign substances.

Full Lines in Tinware at bottom prices.

CALL AND SEE US IT WILL PAY YOU.

Note the place the sign of the cross cutt saw.

E. MABEE.

HEAD QUARTERS
—FOR—
Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

NOTICE.

ALL persons are hereby warned against giving goods of any kind whatsoever on my account after this date without my written order, as I will not be responsible for the payment of the same.

JESSE DOWDING.

Euphrasia, March 4th, 1887.

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for further particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
338-48 Holland Centre P. O.

Stock Taking
SALE
At the Toronto House,
Markdale.

SLAUGHTER PRICES FOR CASH.

Wm. Brown.

Seeds!
Seeds!
Seeds!

FIELD & GARDEN

SEEDS!

—AT—

Stephen's
DRUG STORE

Your's Respectfully,

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.
REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have re-moved to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

HAMPDEN

WATCHES

DURABLE--:--RELIABLE.

—ALSO—

Waltham, Elgin and Colombiers,

—IN STOCK—

American Clocks, Silverware, Wedding Rings.

☞ Watch repairing and fitting Spectacles a specialty.

W. A. BROWN.
RELIABLE JEWELLER,
MARKDALE

XMAS GOODS.

NEW GOODS ARRIVING EVERY —WEEK AT—

RUSSELL'S
Noted Jewellry Store,
FLESHERTON.

Consisting of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES, CLOCKS, JEWELRY, SPECTACLES, SILVER-WARE, FORKS, SPOONS, KNIVES, Fancy MIRRORS, ALBUMS, VIOLINS &c.

Any one looking for Xmas presents will do well to call at RUSSELL'S, Flesherton, a fine stock to select from, and prices very low, If your watch or clock wants repairing, RUSSELL'S is the place to take it: A satisfactory job every time, ☞ Remember,

JAS. G. RUSSEL'S
Noted Jewelry Store,
FLESHERTON.

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRAITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,
UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 13, CON., 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation, well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY
31-t Berkley.

TO RENT.

THE old and well known Pickell farm adjoining Flesherton, consisting of 100 acres, eighty five cleared, twenty fall ploughed. Splendid bank barn with spacious horse stable, stone cow stable, and never-failing well, all underneath barn. Fine young orchard of 100 trees bearing well a good variety of fruit. Comfortable log house.

For terms apply to Wm. Brown, Esq., Markdale, or on the premises to

W. G. PICKELL.

NOTICE.

All persons having accounts against the undersigned are hereby requested to hand the same in to G. S. Bowes, Markdale on or before the 26 March. and the same if correct will be paid by Minnie and Emma Williams.

ROBERT WILLIAMS,
340-1 Glengelg March 8th 1887

HEALTH.

Sudden Changes of Climate.

If a blizzard of unusual severity were coming from the northwest that would send the thermometer down 50° or 70° in three hours, we should expect a great increase of pneumonia and other respiratory diseases, resulting in many deaths. Now, instead of three hours, suppose the mercury were to drop threescore degrees in three minutes—or take another step in fancy, and suppose this great change to take place in three seconds—what would likely be the effect on health? And yet we bring about, artifically, changes to ourselves quite as sudden and as severe as this.

We make an artificial climate in our houses. We live in-doors in an atmosphere heated by stoves, furnaces, or steam-pipes, to 70° or 80°; and we pass from our parlor or hall so heated into the open air. At a step, literally in a breath, the temperature of the air has, for us, dropped 50° or 70°. We may put on an extra coat or shawl and shield the outside of the body and chest, but we can not shield the delicate linings and membranes of the air-passages, the bronchial tubes, the lung-cells. Naked, they receive the full force of the change—the last breath at 70°, the next at freezing or zero—and all unprepared. We have been sitting, perhaps for hours, in a tropical atmosphere; nay, worse, in an atmosphere deprived by hot iron surfaces of its ozone and natural refreshing and bracing qualities. Our lungs are all relaxed, debilitated, unstrung; and in this condition the cold air strikes them perhaps 60° below what they are graduated to and prepared for. Is it strange if pneumonia and bronchitis are at hand?

If we are in the West Indies, or even in Florida, and wish to come North in winter, we try to make the changes gradual. But in our houses we keep up a tropical climate, or w orse, for you have not the freshness of air that prevails in an open tropical atmosphere, and we step at once into an atmosphere as much colder as 40° difference of latitude will make it. It is in effect going from Cuba to Iceland at a step, and we make the journey perhaps a dozen times a day. And often, while we are still shut up in our domiciliary Cuban climate, Iceland comes down upon us from an open window. Especially is this likely to occur in schoolhouses, where children will instinctively seek to get a breath of fresh air that has not had all its natural refreshing qualities quite cooked out by hot stoves, furnaces, or steam-pipes. And all these sudden changes and shocks of cold come upon us while the whole system has its vitality and powers of resistance gauged down to the low necessities of a tropical climate.

Regularity in Eating.

If there is one table-law about which all persons are agreed, it is, that our meals should be taken at stated and regular periods. People may differ about vegetarianism, about sweets, about pies and cakes, about tea and coffee; but I have never met a person who would insist that regularity was of no consequence—that it was just as well to take two meals to-day and five to-morrow, to take dinner at one o'clock to-day, three to-morrow, and five next day. Without understanding the physiological law, all are agreed that regularity is important.

A long journey by rail does not derange the stomach because of sitting in an unventilated car, for the traveller, may occupy a still worse place in the pursuit of his business at home; neither is it because of the character of the food furnished at the railway lunch rooms, for the food at home is often worse; but the stomach derangement which nearly always comes with the long railway trip is, in great part, to be traced to irregularity in the times of eating. In a recent trip, we took breakfast the first morning just after daylight, next morning, at half-past nine o'clock, the next at seven, and so with the other meals; only one day we had no dinner at all. When we reached our destination we were all suffering from indigestion; some were conscious of no disocmfort in the stomach, but not one of us escaped the dullness and depression of spirits which comes of imperfect digestion. Among the table-laws this one of regularity is preeminently important.

Hints.

When a consumptive person finds a clim ate which agrees with him, he should stay there so long as he lives.

Dr. Fernandez, of Barcelona, recommends the hypodermic injection of cobra poison for the cure of hydrophobia.

Iodoform.—It is claimed that balsam of fir completely disguises the smell of iodoform. A mixture of one part of finely powdered camphor with three parts of iodoform is said to destroy the odor completely. Freshly roasted coffee has been used for the same purpose.

Goitre.—Fill a bag large enough to cover the hypertrophy with chloride of sodium, moisten this and bind around the throat before retiring. Take four times a day three grains of a good goitre powder. We have cured several cases with this treatment in from two to four months.

Dr. Chas. Pickney was asked what he thought of the allopathetic and homeopathic practice in medicine. "Forty-nine people out of every fifty who are sick would get well without medicine, but the fiftieth would die. Homeopathy does, perhaps, less harm to the forty-nine than allopathy, but allopathy has to come in to save the fiftieth el ow

Love s' cough mixture is made thus: One pint bottle Hoff s malt extract; best whisky six ounces; glycerine, six ounces; juice of six lemons; crushed sugar, two ounces; mix and boil ten minutes. The dose is from one teaspoonful to two tablespoonfuls every two or three hours. The above is commended by Dr. Love, in the Weekly Medical Review, as a most excellent general cough mixture.

Treatment of Warts.—A plaster of black soap applied each night for a fortnight, according to M. Vidal, will soften a wart so that it may be scraped off. The treatment by M. Cellier is to transfix the principal wart with the point of a pin, the head of which is then to be held in the flame of a candle until the wart is destroyed; it will drop off in a few days. The remaining warts will then usually disappear.

A sprained ankle has been cured in an hour by showering it with hot water poured from a height of three feet. Tepid water acts promptly as an emetic, and hot water taken freely half an hour before bed time is the best of cathartics in constipation, while it has a most soothing effect on the stomach and bowels. This treatment, continued for a few months, with proper attention to diet, will alleviate any case of dyspepsia.

Bismuth for Burns.—Cleanse the parts thoroughly with warm, carbolized water. Puncture large vesicles. Powder the burn with bismuth, cover this with a thick layer of absorbent cotton, and apply a bandage. If the injury be extensive, mix the bismuth with water, and paint over the part. This permits uniform distribution of a minimum quantity and lessens the danger of bismuth poisoning. Once applied, the dressing should not be disturbed except to remove any pus, and then as little of the bismuth should be removed as possible.

Chapped Hands.—The following very simple direction is recommended. "To keep the hands smooth they should always be rinsed in fair water after soap has been used. It is well to use soap and soft warm water, avoiding, however, the use of yellow or bar soap, and also the colored castile; but to prevent roughness it is absolutely necessary the hands should be rinsed in soft, fair water, and then made thoroughly dry on the towel. And it is well to avoid going out in the cold directly after washing. A proper observance of these directions will always keep the hands smooth."

Effects of Fear.—Twelve years ago, in France, a poor woman was bitten by a dog, undoubtedly rabid, near Notre Dame, and taken to the Hotel Dieu, where the wound was at once cauterized. Several months after she was recognized in the street by a student who had seen her under the operation. "Hullo!" he exclaimed, "you are not dead? The dog which bit you was nevertheless mad!" The poor woman, dismayed, was soon afterwards seized with spasms of the most violent kind. Admitted, d'urgence, to the clinique of Dr. Bucquoy, she was put under treatment, but without avail, and died soon afterwards.

For Others.

On our Atlantic coast there stands a quiet little farmhouse which was once the scene of a long, heroic struggle, never recorded in any history. Twenty years ago it was occupied by Mrs. Blank, a woman of great beauty and intellectual power.

After her husband's death, she remained throughout the year in this country house. One day a dissolute woman, in rags and bloated with drink, came to the door begging. Mrs. Blank inquired into her history, found that she had some feeble wish to reform, to "be like other women again." She took the woman in, clothed her, gave her work.

The woman brought her companions. Mrs. Blank received eight of them. Her means were small. To enable her to do this thing, she was forced herself to dress coarsely, to live on the plainest fare, to share in the work of her inmates. For eighteen years she carried on this charity, always keeping her house full. Many of the women were brought back to decency and respectability; some of them even to a religious life.

She labored to help each one, as if she were her own child. But she was often deceived by imposters; many of the women went back to a life of crime; still more were ungrateful. As time passed, too, her friends urged her to come back to the city again; to lead a life of ease and enjoyment in the society and pursuits for which she was suited. But she persevered in her work until her death, about a year ago.

Molokai, one of the Sandwich Islands, as our readers know, is set apart as a Home for Lepers. Five years ago, a young priest, Father Damen, left his home and friends and gave himself up to work among these people, every one of whom is marked for a slow and awful death.

For some time he was able to return for a yearly visit to his family and home, but last spring a farewell letter was received from him.

"It is impossible," he wrote, "for me to go any more to Honolulu, as the leprosy has broken out in me. Now that I am satisfied as to the true character of my disease, I am more calm, and am resigned and happy among my people."

There he remains, administering consolation to the members of this wretched colony, more than ever devoted to the work of the Master now that he, like themselves, is living under the shadow of a terrible doom. Who, better than such a man, could inspire them with hope and confidence in an immortal life free from the spots and taints which in this lower world affect both body and soul? This man and woman belonged to sects of widely differing creeds. But surely, they who have thus given their lives to their fellow-men are together, very near to that Saviour who is the Elder Brother and Helper of us all.

Great Presence of Mind in a Punster.

"You know Doc. Cutler," said a Toronto traveler to an associate.

"Who, the coroner?"

"That's the man; you know he has the reputation of never losing his head. Always ready for any emergency."

"Yes; I've heard that of him. But what about it?"

"I saw him thoroughly rattled the other day."

"What about?"

"Simply because he couldn't find his ink bottle."

"Pshaw! That shouldn't have disturbed him. I should think that any man in his business would have known just what to do in a case like that."

"What would you have done?"

"Held an ink quest, of course."

And he escaped just in time to deprive the undertaker of a job.

Freedom.

BY JOHN IMRIE, TORONTO.

Freedom is obedience to righteous law
Framed for the guidance of a nation great;
Made to be kept—not broken by a flaw
Known only to the rulers of the State!
Justice that treats the rich and poor alike,
Defending each from favor or attack;
Slow to convict—yet ready for to strike
The fatal blow on all that honor lack!
A nation's strength is measured by her laws;
Her safety is the welfare of her sons;
Industry and loyalty the power that draws
In peace her commerce, and in war her guns.
Freedom—our birthright, sell it not for gold,
Our fathers bought it with their blood of old!

Pleasure must first have the warrant that it is without sin; then the measure, that it is without excess.—H. G. Adams.

Man must work. He may work grudgingly or gratefully. He may work as a man or as a machine.—[Henry Giles.

A FEW THOUGHTS CONCERNING TREES IN CITIES.

BY R. W. PHIPPS.

It is said that there are three things that everyone thinks he can do,—mend a fire, sharpen a pencil, and fold a newspaper. To judge by the astonishingly misshapen results everywhere visible, we may add a fourth; everybody thinks he can prune a tree—and is wonderfully mistaken. Here you will pass a grove of evergreens, their lower branches all sawed off, with the intention, apparently, of making them look like apple trees, and the result of making them look like hearth brushes. Every wound, too, is exuding gum, and will for years, impoverishing, and perhaps killing the tree. Here is a once beautiful maple, beautiful no longer; its formerly spreading branches have disappeared, nothing remaining but a succession of stumps, protruding here and there from the trunk, as if this were the hall of the giant, and that his hat-rack. A little further on and somebody else has tried his hand. He knew better; he would cut close, has done so, cutting in from the top, and when nearly through, naturally the branch has fallen, tearing away a yard of bark and sap-wood below. Yet all this is from no want of care; the same quantity of care, properly applied, would have greatly improved the beauty of the tree. The fact is, that without a certain amount of knowledge about the structure, growth, and functions of a tree, one is just about as likely to be successful in tree pruning, as he would be if similarly ignorant in watch mending. It is proposed in this article to explain so thoroughly the structure of a tree, so far as refers to this matter, as to render such extremely injurious mistakes improbable on the part of my readers.

The trunk of a tree is composed, as all are aware, of a number of tubes, through which the sap ascends from the roots, each branch having its own set of these tubes in the trunk, arising from one particular portion of the roots. What we call the sap is largely water, mingled with plant-food, of which the water is the vehicle to carry it from the earth, up through the tubes of the trunk, then through those of the branches, and out to all the leaves. In the cells of these leaves it is exposed to the air, which adds to it other materials of food, and fits the whole for nourishment. The water, which carried up the food, has now done its work, and mostly passes off into the air, while the plant-food is carried back into the tree, and adds to the growth of all parts—stem and branch, leaf and twig.

Of course, when we cut off a branch, we interfere with the process; but very different results follow in certain cases. If we cut a large one, say four or five inches through, off from the trunk, the sap is found to lodge in the tubes from the cut to the root, and to soften and discolour that portion of the wood. This injures it for timber, yet will not, for other purposes, much impair the tree, granted that air and water be kept out. The way to keep these out is to cut close to the tree, leaving all smooth and even with the bark. A little of the bulge at the base of the branch, but not more than a quarter of an inch, may be left, when the cut should be painted over with coal tar, to preserve it from the weather and from cracking till the bark grows over, which it will at once commence to do, and shortly cover it smoothly and completely. It should be remarked that, if we cut off a portion of a branch, that is, one or more branches from a larger branch, still leaving plenty, say half, no injury to the wood follows, for the remaining branches have the power of perfectiug the surplus sap and returning the plant-food.

But when a short stub is left, a very different action takes place. The bark cannot grow over it, and, the checked sap within receiving, through the rotting stub, air and water from without, decay takes place throughout the tubes from the wound to the root, and at the stub, where the process is strongest, infects the neighbouring tissues and, in a few years, forms a rotten cavity deep into the tree. Yet we often see, in Toronto, when men are set to reduce the size of trees in parks or streets, a dozen such stubs left on a tree. The consequence is that the tree, which might, had the branches removed been cut closely and the wounds painted, not have been in the least injured by the operation, weakens, and stands, during life, a sickly monument of ignorant pruning. Necessarily, for at all these points decay is weakening its fibres. A few minutes' extra work would have made all the difference.

Perhaps it may be well to say a word on the method of cutting off branches. All of those under an inch in thickness can easily be cut with a knife, always cutting upwards, and slightly lifting the branch, at the same time. Where, for larger branches, a saw is used, the danger being that the branch in falling may tear away the bark below the cut, it is best first to cut from under, one third through the branch, and then finish from above. For high branches the use of a pruning chisel, on a long handle, will save much climbing, and with care, very good work may be done with it, always remembering in shortening a branch, to make the cut so as to shed the water.

It must be remembered that the above only applies to the deciduous trees. The great family of evergreens—the pines, the firs, the cedars—are impatient of the knife, and should never be pruned. Let them, if they will, branch to the ground, it is their nature thus to protect their bark from a heat and cold to which in their native forests it is a stranger. When older, if the lower branches die, we should remove them, but while in life to cut them creates a wound from which gum exudes for years. If it be desired, however, to check the growth of an evergreen branch, it can be effectually done by pinching off an inch or two of the ends of the fresh growth for the year.

Nothing is more astonishing than to observe the manner in which many trees, especially in the parks and streets of Canadian cities, are mangled, under the idea that they are being pruned, as if the idea was that a tree was a tree, and that any difference in its appearance was of no consequence. But there are, to those who look closely—to all those, in fact, capable of taking pleasure in the beauties of of nature—no two things in the world more different than a well-cared for and an ill-managed tree. The one will be sickly, jagged, torn, its bark rotting, its branches decaying at the top. The other will be upright, its branches vigorously spreading, its bark clear, bright, with every channel accurate as if fresh from the sculptor's chisel, its leaves abundant, moist, and vivid of colour. The two trees are the types of cultivated beauty and unnecessary deformity.

In streets, and in the small plantations which surround many residences, it would often be productive of a much better effect to remove a certain number of the trees altogether, than to prune them. The pruning is done with the view, in streets, of clearing the roadway of obstructing branches, and in the other case, generally to open up a view. In both cases removal and replanting would often better answer the purpose. Young and vigorous trees are always beautiful, and give for a long period sufficient shade; but when they grow tall and overshadow the houses, a result which is necessarily obtained by pruning their side branches, it is doubtful whether they benefit health. They certainly cause both roofs and house fronts to decay, which never creates a healthy atmosphere. Venerable trees are excellent and valuable for many purposes: but it is doubtful whether, in streets, our object should not always be to keep lines of young trees, not too close to each other or the houses, and under twenty feet in height. This might readily be secured by proper forethonght. In small city gardens, too, the same rule would be valuable. For though your high trees on the north are no harm to your house, yet they keep the south sun from your neighbors, while on east, south and west, your house is better of no overshadowing trees. For cities, a succession of young trees, removing them when over twenty feet high, would, it appears to me, be more beautiful and more healthy than the large trees often allowed to grow. A young tree, properly cared for, is one of the most beautiful objects in the world. But the main object of this article is to say that we should never cut branches from evergreens, and that when we take them from deciduous trees, we should leave the cut perfectly smooth and level with the bark. A stub, left on one of them, rots straight to the heart of the tree.

RICHES AND TROUBLE.

The Bother Which Sometimes Attends Wealth.

A minister preaching against the love of money had frequently repeated that it was "the root of all evil." Walking home from the church, one old person said to the other: "An' wasna the minister strang upon the money?"—"Nae doubt," said the other; and added, "Ay, but it's grand to hae the wee bit siller in your hand when ye gang an errand." We quite agree with this and believe in the "needful." It's grand to have the price of food and clothes, and we are not at all averse to a little pocket money, but after a modest sufficiency has been realized, what is the good of fretting and working for more. Is enough not enough?

Nature has placed a limit to the personal indulgences of each, and it is impossible for any one to consume more than so much. We may spend £5,000 to £10,000 yearly, but the bulk of it must return to whence it came, in the payment of labor or profit to the distributor. The money is beneficial to many, and not solely to its possessor.

"When goods are increased, they are increased that eat them; and what good is there to the owner thereof, saving the beholding of them with their eyes?" A rich man is an agent who manages what he is pleased to call his property for the good of others. Burke used to say that the "dependent pensioners called the rich are trustees for those who labor, and their hoards are the banking-houses of these latter."

There is sound philosophy in the answer a king is related to have given to a stable boy. Meeting him one morning he asked him, "Well boy, what do you do? What do they pay you?"—"I help in the stable," replied the lad; but I have nothing except victuals and clothes. "Be content," replied the king: "I have no more."

In a meeting assembled to make arrangements for the last preaching campaign in London of Mr. Moody, the American Evangelist, one of the speakers expressed his hope that Mr. Moody would do something for the miserable poor of London." "I will try and do so," was the preacher's reply; "and I hope also to be able to do something for the miserable rich." "The miserable rich!" Some would think the expression almost a contradiction in terms, but it is not, for the rich have many things to make them unhappy. The poor in sleep forget their misery, but too often the rich are tortured by sleeplessness. They suffer from ennui, "that awful yawn which sleep cannot dispel." The French financier exclaimed: "Alas! why is there no sleep to be sold?" Sleep was not in the market an any quotation.

Bacon said that money is "like muck—not much use unless spread." It is nothing to him who does not know how to use it wisely, and on the other hand poverty is nothing when it is not felt. If you mix with people better off than yourself, you feel poor; but it may be only by contrast, for perhaps you do not want more than you have. In one of his stories a well-known writer describes the effect upon a poor teacher of a legacy of £1,200 a year. Suddenly the cottage he has lived in for so many years, seems to have grown too small—the furniture looks old and worn. Claire had never remarked the fact before, but she now perceived clearly that there was no longer any possibility of tracing the pattern of the carpet, that the curtains were dingy, the coverings of the chairs faded, the table rickety. "The poor old furniture!" said Claire, "must they go? Yet it is frightfully shabby."—"The poison is eating into our souls," her father went on with deeper gloom. "For twenty years and more I have thought this little salon a model of good taste. Claire, when we go into a large house, we will keep the old furniture all in a room by itself, whither we may go and remind ourselves of the past. If we are rich, we must never forget that we were once poor and happy."

His Mother Never Gets Left.

"I'm afraid your son will bring your gray hairs in sorrow to the grave," said one of the clerks to the old traveling man, after listening to a long account of his boy's misdeeds.

"No, he won't; not much."

Here he took off his hat and displayed a smooth, shining caput.

"You see, his mother beat him out of any fun he may have counted on having with my gray hairs. She never gets left."

The real things are inside. The real world is the inside world. God is not up, nor down, but in the midst.—[Mrs. A. D. F. Whitney.

A FRIEND IN NEED.

An Unknown Man Who Appeared to Kossuth in an Emergency.

In the last volume of his memoirs Louis Kossuth relates an incident which occurred immediately after the Hungarian revolution of 1848.

Kossuth had fled to Widdin, and, with a companion, was in danger of being handed over to the enemy unless a letter could be immediately dispatched to Lord Palmerston, begging his intervention.

Kossuth goes on to say: While we were thinking over how this could be done, a man entered my apartment—a typical English figure, with his hat pushed back over his forehead, an immense umbrella under his arm, covered with dust and looking exceedingly weary. It could be easily seen that he had just come from a long journey.

"Good day, gentlemen!"

"Good day, sir; can we oblige you?"

"I have come from India to fight for the freedom of Hungary. It looks as if I had come too late."

"Unfortunately, too late. Take a chair."

He sat down, pushed his hat still further back, wiped the perspiration from his forehead, placed his umbrella between his legs, and busied himself with cleaning his finger nails.

Hennington whispered to me:

"We have already a courier who won't stand still until he's in Downing street."

"Whom do you mean?" said I.

"That man there. He is an Englishman and that is enough."

He stepped up to him and tapped him on his shoulder.

"Sir!"

"What is the matter?"

"Is your passport in order?"

"Yes."

"Have you money?"

"Yes."

"Well, the matter is so"—(and here he explained the circumstances). "We require a man who will travel to London without stopping and without sleeping, and who will not rest until he has placed this letter in Lord Palmerston's hands. Will you do that?"

The brave Englishman jumped up from his chair, reached me his hand, and merely said: "Where is the letter?"

I gave it to him, he put it in his knapsack, drew his hat down over his ears, took his umbrella under his arm, and said: "All right! good-bye," and he rushed out.

In less than a quarter of an hour I heard the sound of horse's hoofs on the street, and there he was with a servant, riding due west. He took advantage of the quickest route, and did not rest until he had put my letter in Palmerston's hands. The letter also had the desired effect.

I was travelling to Niagara, in Canada, our train stopped at a station to allow another train to pass in the opposite direction. At the desire of the people I stepped to the carriage window. A man's arm was extended to me from a window of the other train and reached me a visiting card. I took it and read: "Mr. Roger Casement," with the words written in pencil, "I gave Palmerston the Widdin letters." Thus I learned the name of the man, but never heard anything more of him afterwards.

SCIENTIFIC AND USEFUL.

Vacuum has but one technical meaning—void space, with neither gas nor air within its boundaries.

Casters made of leather are said to be a new invention. Heavy furniture which must be moved often for sweeping soon wears bad places on floors or carpets, and a solid sole-leather caster must prove a blessing to housekeepers.

Cures of sciatica are reported as having taken place in Paris after a single application of Dr. Debove's method of freezing the skin above the painful parts with a spray of chloride of methyl. The operation is said to be applicable also to facial neuralgia.

To clean and polish a parlor organ or piano, wash it with a soft old silk handkerchief wrung out in lukewarm suds made with best Castile soap; then dry immediately and rub with chamois-skin. If the instrument is very much scratched and defaced, rub with good furniture polish and polish for a long time with dry chamois or a piece of soft silk.

Mr. E. Martin of Munich manufactures a compound consisting chiefly of common salt, alum, soluble glass, and tungstate of soda which has been introduced with great success in Austria and Switzerland for the extinction of fires, and is now being used in Germany, where the Admiralty have recommended it to their naval yards. It can be obtained in liquid or solid form, and is thrown on the fire either by a pump or from pails.

It is sometimes desirable to produce a small blister quickly. For this purpose nothing is better than concentrated water of ammonia. Put a few drops of it into a watch-glass or any receptacle of the sort, cover it with a pledget of absorbent cotton, invert on the spot to be blistered, and press closely. In half a minute or so a red circle will appear on the skin around the edges of the confining vessel. It is an evidence that vesication has taken place, and the blistering material can be removed. The blister should be treated in the same manner as one obtained with cantharide.

Not as Innocent as it Appeared.

"Say, I was in a predicament the other evening," remarked a middle-aged professional man this morning, "and all because I wanted to turn school teacher.

"You see, I was endeavoring to impress upon my little girl the difference between the animal, vegetable and mineral kingdoms. Well, I was proceeding very nicely, as I thought, but I was treading on a pitfall.

"'To what kingdom does the orange belong?'

"'To the vegetable kingdom,' was the prompt answer.

"'Now, to what kingdom does our hired girl belong?'

"'To the vegetable kingdom.'

"'Oh, no,' said I, 'that is not right.'

"'Yes it is, pa. I heard you tell her she was a daisy, and they belong to the vegetable kingdom.'

"The very worst part of it was," said the fond parent, "that the little thing looked so mischievous I knew her answer was not nearly so innocent as it might appear."

RIFT AND SPRAY,

OR,

LOVE AND VENGEANCE AMONG THE SMUGGLERS.

THE MOST FASCINATING OCEAN ROMANCE SINCE THE DAYS OF COOPER AND MARYATT.

CHAPTER XXXII.—(CONTINUED).

Once again Gerald and Grace bade each other good bye and then the police surrounded their prisoners, but the warm heart of Captain Mocquet was not satisfied. He ran up to Gerald and embraced him.

"Be brave, mon cher Gerald. I shall fight wid Monsieur Tickle, by gar! And as de proverb Anglaise says of himself: 'A long lane is always turning.' Worse luck next time, let us hope always toujours. Adieu!"

"Adieu!" said Marie, gently.

"Police," said the admiral.

"Yes, sir."

"Be sure you take good care of that fellow Thomas Wright. He will be put upon his oath to-morrow and if he so much as swears to the slightest that is not true I will prosecute him for perjury if it cost me a thousand pounds."

Thomas Wright, as he called himself looked rather cadaverous at this; and as he was removed in custody he muttered to himself:

"I wish I hadn't come and done it for Dolan, though he did give me fifty pounds and promised me fifty more. I wish I had done the honest thing and run away with his fifty pound and not come here at all. I shall only get into a scrape—I sees that as plain as a captain, I does."

Then Captain Mocquet made another similar bow and put his daughter's arm beneath his, as he said:

"Adieu, messieurs, adieu! I shall do something for my friend Gerald. I shall do something I have not think of now, but it shall be something. Adieu!"

"My dear Admiral Clifford," said Mr. Suffles.

"Well, sir."

"Ha! ha! It's a good joke, you know, but you really don't mean to remand me? You see admiral, that there is no evidence."

"I beg your pardon," said the lieutenant. "I overheard you invite those in the boat to smuggle."

"Oh, that was ironically!"

The lieutenant shook his head.

"Very well," said Mr. Suffles, "then I shall bring an action."

"A what?" said Mr. Tickley.

"An action against you, sir."

And what for, sir?"

False imprisonment, sir."

"Boo, sir."

"You may cry 'boo!' as much as you like, sir, but as I can get as much law for a penny as you can get for a shilling, I'd advise you to look out, sir."

Mr. Tickley looked serious.

"Admiral?"

"Well."

"I don't think, in my own mind, that there will turn out to be evidence enough to convict Mr Suffles."

"Nor I either."

"Then I think, admiral, he had better go."

"So far as I am concerned, Mr. Tickley, I do not feel disposed to keep any one who is not part of the crew of the Rift."

"Very good. You may go, Mr. Suffles."

Mr. Suffles darted off on the moment, without saying good-bye to anybody.

A few minutes more and there were no persons in the room but the admiral and Captain Morton and Grace Morton. Then the latter stepped up to the admiral and took his hand, saying, as she did so:

"Sir, you ought not—you cannot doubt of the innocence of poor Gerald."

"I do not, my dear. Be quite at ease about him, for to-morrow, I have no doubt will clear him. I only wish that I had some sort of positive evidence to produce that would contradict the assertions in the mouth of that Thomas Wright. Dolan himself, too, condemns the lad."

"Dolan?

"Yes. There is a letter."

"From him, sir?"

"It is so. You shall read it; and then, my dear, you can come to some judgment about it."

The admiral gave Grace Dolan's letter to read, which she did with the most marked attention; and the changes of her expressive features as she did so sufficiently testified the indignation with which she regarded the aspersions that were cast by that letter upon Martin, and Joseph, and Gerald. When she had concluded the reading she said:

"I must think of all this. O father; Gerald must and shall be saved to-morrow. I must think what can be done, dear father; for you do not know how good and kind he has been for years to me."

"Everything shall be done, my dear love, that you can suggest. Your father will go heart and hand with you."

Grace looked very thoughtful, as she again glanced at Dolan's infamous letter to the admiral. Then she whispered to herself:

"Yes, for Gerald—for Gerald. Anything for Gerald!"

CHAPTER XXXIII.

DOLAN MAKES HIS LAST PREPARATION FOR ESCAPE.

There is intense excitement in the sea cavern of the cliff, for the smuggler crew are now well aware that something is seriously amiss and that their safety is in some way jeopardized, if not actually compromised.

The absence of Martin, the absence of Joseph and the mysterious death of the nightwatch on the deck of the cutter, had all become known to them, and by the time Dolan found his way back to the cavern through the cool, heaving waters of the little bay, there was all that kind of commotion in the community of the hidden caverns that betokens uneasy expectation.

The feeling on the part of several was that at that very moment they stood in the position of men sold and betrayed by Dolan.

His absence was prolonged and they had thought him in the caverns, and it was only the presence of several huge chests in one of the minor caves and which they had been taught to look upon with interest and reverence as containing the common stock of plunder and profits of the whole crew that made any of them doubt that the absence of Dolan was permanent and treacherous.

His loud whistle from the deck of the Rift was a welcome sound to all.

From numerous recesses of the caverns—from beneath tarpaulins and boat-cloaks—some of them of the most costly description, which had formed part of the plunder which now and then had come to hand in the cruise of the Rift—came the crew who had for so long made up the nefarious ship's company of Dolan.

The affair with the Spray had given to some of them wounds, the existence of which was betrayed by various bandages, and as they rowed across the black-looking waters of the sea cave they looked as desperate a set of ruffians as the world could exhibit.

There was not one of all that ship's company, now that Martin and Joseph were gone, who might not, had smuggling been their only offense, have stood up as an angel of light in comparison with what he really was.

And Dolan was the worst of all. His career from first to last, long before he had anything to do with the Rift, had been one of lawless violence and outrage towards anything that had even the semblance of right.

And now in the darkness of that sea cavern—for the huge sails were drawn closely over the opening—he stood upon the deck of the Rift, looking something like the archfiend himself, gathering about him his familiars and associates.

The light from several torches, stuck into clefts in the cliff shed a lurid kind of lustre over the dark, heaving water and on the hull, cordage and brailed sails of the cutter.

That light, too, shone upon the fierce and weather-worn, as well as crime-worn, countenances of the pirate crew, and upon Dolan, all dripping with salt water, as he was standing upon the deck of the cutter.

They crowded up the sides of the Rift like so many spectres, and then they stood about midships; while aft, upon a small raised portion of the deck, was Dolan; and they could see by his pale face and compressed lips that he had something to say.

In silence they gathered about him.

It must not now be forgotten what was the exact state Dolan was in as regarded his intelligence of what had occurred in relation to Captain Mocquet, Gerald, Grace, Martin and Joseph.

The whole of those persons, so far as he knew, were in the caverns and subjected to his mercy.

The ruffian had to receive the blow which a knowledge of their escape would give to him.

There was, therefore—with a conviction of power to be brutal and murderous if he liked—upon his countenance a gleam of triumphant ferocity that was terrible to look upon.

"My gallant crew," he said; "my noble fellows, who have with me braved for so long the breezes and storms of old ocean, and who have defied men and laws—the time has come when, along with the reward of your past exertions, you will get news of who is your friend and who your foe, and be able, no doubt, to do justice to both."

"Give us our money!" cried a voice.

"Who is that?"

"Me—Jem Ratlings. Give us our money!"

"Share! share!" shouted several others. "Give us our shares, and let us all separate whice way we please!"

"Come, old Dolan," said one. "Let's have no fine speeches; it's the rhino we want!"

Dolan's eyes gleamed savagely.

"Mates," he added, "If you like now, this moment, to have the chests opened, and their rich contents divided among you—"

"Yes, yes—open them! Hurrah! All's right! That will do! Yes, yes! Hoorah!"

"You may!" added Dolan, with a yelling voice, that startled them all; "but—but—but—"

"What now?" growled one.

"But what?" cried several.

"You will, within the next twenty-four hours, all fall into the clutches of the law!"

There was a hushed look about them all, and they advanced a step nearer to Captain Dolan.

"One and all!" he added; "I have been some hours from you; and during those hours I have learnt all we want to know to put us on our guard."

"What is it?—what is it?"

"Will you have your money, all of you, and take your chances now at once? I don't want to hinder you and I don't want to tell you what will save your life and fortunes, all of you, if you don't want to listen."

"We do—we do!"

"Oh, you will have your money now?"

"No, no! Tell us all you have to say. We will hear all."

"And cut it short, old un!" said one.

"Who is that?"

"Why, it's Ned Bolt."

"Then I won't say a word more while he is on the deck of the Rift. Over with him!"

There was a brief scuffle. Ned Bolt, who had spoken so irreverently to Dolan, was pitched head foremost over the side of the cutter into the sea, from which, with a profusion of oaths, he swam to and scrambled into one of the boats.

"Now, captain, go on. What is it?"

"Not only," continued Dolan, with a violent wave of his arm, "not only did I wish every man here to get his full share of the plunder we have in these caverns, but I wanted him to get off with it and enjoy it."

"Ay, ay—that's it!"

"And enjoy it!"

"You said that before."

There was a slight laugh at this; but Dolan did not think it worth while to push his authority too far—so he took no notice of it, but went on quietly.

"And for that purpose it was that I went on a voyage of discovery on shore, and right away to the town. It has cost me more gold than I choose to mention to find out what I have found out; and that is, that to-morrow morning there will be an attack of these caverns!"

"An attack!"

"Yes, an attack, both by sea and land."

"Are they found out, then?"

"They are!"

The commotion among the crew now was very great; and, there was, at first, a disposition to leave the Rift, and for each one to look after his own safety and means of escape, but Dolan succeeded in stopping them, by calling out, in a loud voice;

"Hear me! I have more to tell you."

"Ay, ay!—hear the captain!"

"After finding out—it don't matter how—after finding that we were in this danger my next object was to discover the [illegible] and wherefore—the reason why (for people don't [illegible] and particularly I should know nothing of this cavern unless they were told by some one familiar with it)."

"Ay, ay! That's certain and ship shape."

"Gerald—my own son, Gerald!"

There was a laugh at the sentimental way in which Dolan strove to say this; but he continued:

"Yes, my own son—for, notwithstanding all any of you may have heard to the contrary, he is my own son—has betrayed us; I am certain of that."

"Kill him!—drown him!—death to him!"

"Stay, stay!—no, not yet. I have one favor to ask of you for all I am now doing for you—one favor; it is that you shall spare that boy."

There was a groan of discontent.

"Hear me out! You will approve of what I have to say if you will only hear me out, my brave companions. Hear all, and then decide for yourselves, mates."

"Hear him! hear him! Ay, ay, go on."

"What I propose, then, is that you get the start of your enemies. The large chests that contain your treasure can be easily put on board the Rift; and just at the ebb of tide to-night (which is about two o'clock) open the covering of the cavern and sail out into the bay. The attack on this place will not be till the morning's light; and by that time you may be right away on the Sussex coast. I advise that you beat up northward, then to some obscure place in Scotland, and there land and divide your booty. There is Edinburg, by the Frith of Forth; you will run up to it in the cutter within a week. I will meet you there, and we shall be quite safe in a place like that; and from it you can all go whatever way your fancy leads you."

There was a shout of approval at this proposition, and then one voice said:

"Why don't you come with us, captain?"

"Because I have some business here. I will come and join you overland; but I will come with you, for I will send the treasure chest with you."

"Ay, ay!—that will do."

"I have many little affairs to settle in regard to some of the cottages which I want to sell; and then there is my little daughter Grace I want to see placed somewhere where she will be taken care of."

Dolan again tried to look sentimental, and again some of the crew laughed; and when they did so he bit his lip and thought to himself:

'Wait a bit—oh, only wait a bit!"

"And the boy?" cried one.

"Take him with you; I advise, by all means, that you take him with you. That is what I want to ask you to do. Take him. Don't have his death at any of your doors; for he is but a boy. Take him to-night with you in the Rift; and when you get in the North Sea, send him adrift in one of the small boats, and do anything you like with him; but take him with you to-night."

"Very good!—very well!" said one; "but there's a little objection."

"Objection!"

"Yes, captain; he's not to be found."

Dolan staggered.

"Not to—be—found?"

"No; he's off, and Miss Grace, too. When we found you were away, and when some of the fellows said you were not coming back, we had a good hunt through all the caves."

"Ah!"

"And found them gone."

A livid hue spread itself over the face of Dolan; and he dashed the fist of his right hand against the palm of his left, as he cried:

"This is Martin's doing!"

"Not a doubt about that, I should say," growled Bowline; "not a doubt of that."

"Why not a doubt?—why? why?"

"Cos he's gone, too!"

"Gone! gone!—Martin gone?"

"Ay! Joseph, too; so that there's no lookout now on the old plateau."

Dolan was forced to hold to the main rigging for support, and a feeling of faintness came over him. Had his victims, after all, eluded him? Was it possible that they had escaped, or were they only hiding somewhere, in the numerous ramifications of the old caverns of the cliff? Was all he had schemed and striven for, after all, to pass away like a dream, and were his victims to elude his vengeance?

(TO BE CONTINUED).

Female Nihilists.

A month or two ago a serious disturbance took place in St. Petersburg. On the anniversary of the death of a noted song-writer and patriot, Bogolinboff, some five hundred students of the university gathered, to place wreaths on his grave, and to hear orations in his praise.

The authorities, however, locked and guarded the cemetery gates, and would not allow the students to enter it. The young men became so excited and rebellious that the Cossacks were sent for, and the mob of men was dispersed.

It was a striking feature of this affair that among the students were over a hundred young women, who belonged to the medical classes of the university. On the following day these young women were deprived of their passports, so that they could not leave the capital, and eighteen of their ringleaders were arrested and imprisoned. They will be tried, and probably expelled from their classes. In former days they would have been exiled to Siberia.

The real purpose of this demonstration was a political one. Professing to do honor to a dead patriot, they intended to show their hostility to the Czar's rule; and many of them, perhaps all, belonged to the great Nihilist conspiracy.

During the whole course of this conspiracy, it has been notable for the large number of young women, of every social rank, who have become members of it. In almost every instance in which a Nihilist crime has been committed, or a Nihilist plot has been detected, young women have been found among the culprits.

Some years ago, a girl, named Vera Sassalitch, shot General Tropoff, the chief of the St. Petersburg police. She declared, on being arrested, that she belonged to the Nihilists, and was resolved to aid in ridding Russia of her tyrants. Strangely enough, she was acquitted, but was forced to fly from Russia immediately after her release.

When, five years ago, the assassins of the Czar Alexander II. were captured, it was found that one of them, Sophia Perovskaya, was a girl of good family and education. She was tortured in order to compel her to betray her confederates; and was then executed for the part she had taken in the [illegible]

In each of the French revolutions, women [illegible] conspicuous for daring and violent deeds. They have led mobs, set fire to public buildings and assisted in the killing of the victims of the revolt. But these French furies have, for the most part, been ignorant, coarse women, from the very dregs and slums of society.

The female revolutionists of Russia, however, seem to come from every social rank, from every condition of life. They include women, not only of refined education, but of high rank and great wealth; operators from factories; women of the lowest classes; peasants; and even prioresses and nuns of the convents of the Greek Church.

Young women of good social standing have been known to go into Russian households, disguised as servants, in order to make converts to Nihilism. Others have gone to work in factories, in order to circulate treasonable pamphlets among the operators.

Of course, such women cannot lead other than wicked, restless, feverish lives. By taking part in dark and desperate plots, and even committing violent crimes, they lose all those qualities for which women are respected, honored, and loved.

They become hard and bold, and plunge themselves into morbid, anxious and troubled careers, in which they can never know any peace, and which can be only ruinous, if not to their lives, at least to their characters and their happiness.

MEN AND WOMEN.

The Czar of Russia has ordered, it is said, picture of the St. Paul ice Palace. Montreal will please consider herself snubbed.

An item to the effect that Sam Jones made $19,000 in Boston has been widely current in the exchanges. It shows how easily an absurd rumor may receive general credit.

It is contrary to law in the Central Park, N. Y., for a man to skate in the snow-shoe costume of the Canadians; and a member of the snow-shoe club wants to know if he must skate in a swallow tail and a crush hat rather than in knickerbockers, long stockings, and a red sash.

One gets used to earthquakes. The Rev. J. D. Paris, a Hawaiian clergyman, writes of the shocks accompanying the present eruption of the volcano Mauna Loa: "For 36 hours there has been one continuous series of earthquake—tremendous jars, with pretty hard shakes interspersed, running into each other—and our house has seemed like a little craft or a bubble floating on a wave-chopped sea. While I write my table rocks so that it is with difficulty I can keep my seat and hold my pen."

Dr. Riegler, of Pesth, has just made a very curious experiment in photography, and one that to many people will appear almost incredible. He has photographed a bullet after it had been fired from a rifle, and while it was proceeding with a velocity of 440 meters—rather more than a quarter of a mile—a second. A werndi infantry rifle was the weapon selected for the purpose of conducting the experiment, which was in every way successful, a perfect reproduction of the bullet being the result. A horse at full gallop, a swallow in its flight, and even a flash of lightning, have succumbed to the photographer's art; but his last triumph is still more marvelous.

Howells's genius came to him, perhaps, from his Quaker grandmother. His mother, Mary Dean, was a woman of many virtues, but it cannot be said that her inclination was very marked in the direction of letters. The father, now eighty years old, was until quite recently United States Consul at Quebec. He lives in Jefferson, where his son J. A. Howells, still owns and edits the Sentinel. Anne Howells, the younger daughter, married Frechette, the Canadian poet. She, too, is a writer of verses and descriptive articles, but her talent is not of as high an order as that of her distinguished brother. The novelist is a Howells rather than a Dean. His father's stoop is prepetuated in him, while he inherits his mother's Pennsylvania German thrift and business capacity.

When in the civilized world Mr. Henry M. Stanley smokes six cigars a day. In africa he uses a pipe and mild tobacco, which he finds a solace and an aid to concentration of mind. On one of his journeys down the Congo, as he was about to enter a dangerous country where he knew a fight was inevitable, he told his men to make ready, and then lit his pipe and settled down for a five minutes' quiet smoke before the battle. Ten minutes later they were all fighting for their lives, and the battle lasted for hours. He did not begin to smoke until he was 25, and did not master a pipe until he was 30. Livingstone, it is remembered, never smoked. Gordon was a most inveterate smoker, and when he went on his last journey to Khartoum 19,000 cigarettes formed an important part of his baggage.

Lotta owns in her own name and without incumbrances the Park Theatre in Boston and the International Hotel property in front of that place of amusement. For this she paid $350,000 in cool cash in addition to $25,000 that she paid Henry E. Abbey for the moveable property it contained, such as scenery, furniture, carpets, &c., opera chairs and gas-fixtures. The theatre is said to be the best stocked in this country. There are over twelve complete sets of stage furniture, one costing $800, another $500, another $350 and so on. In addition to the scenery in the theatre, over forty complete sets were found stored in an outside warehouse. All these "properties" were estimated to be worth not less than $50,000, so that prudential Miss Lotta and her ma, with the wary financial eye, were not driving a bad bargain. In addition to this Lotta has $100,000 invested in different manufactories and dwelling-houses in New York and Harlem. She has one house and lot covering nearly a square and originally costing $90,000. She has a house and property on Staten Island, and in Akron, Chicago, Kansas City and San Francisco. Add to all this the $400,000 worth of jewelry, and you'll see that the sum of $1,000,000, does not fully represent her possessions.

Ins And Outs of Housekeeping.

Bridget (well trained): Be yes in or out, mum? It's the grocer?

Mistress: Out!

Grocer (with bill following close): Well, I will wait until you return.

HOME AND FOREIGN NEWS.

Paris is said to consume nearly 50 tons of [illegible]

The London Spectator says that war between Austria and Russia approaches fast.

Agents for the German Government have purchased 200 horses in Ireland at a high price.

The Belly River is reported frozen to the bottom in many places. The ice is from two to three feet thick all over it.

An explosion of fire-damp occurred in a colliery near Mons, in Belgium, which entombed 140 miners, none of whom can be taken out alive.

The development of the Cascade coal mines near Banff, N. W. T., is being vigorously pushed, and the daily output will soon reach five hundred tons.

Information has been received at Ottawa that the ninety days' quarantine enforced by the State of Kansas against cattle imported from Canada has been raised.

It is understood that Sir Charles Tupper is still performing the duties of High Commissioner, and that nothing has been done yet towards appointing his successor.

Traffic on the Canadian Pacific railway has been seriously interrupted in British Columbia by freshets in the mountains. Six men while clearing the track were smothered by a snow slide.

Advices received by the department of Agriculture give prospects that the influx of emigrants from Europe to Canada will be greater this year than ever before. The rush is expected to begin early in April.

A tea merchant from Japan who is at present in Ottawa states that as soon as the Canadian Pacific route becomes known to the tea merchants of Japan it will completely supersede the route for tea shipment via the Suez canal.

Enormous destruction and loss will be caused on both the Canadian and American sides of the St. Lawrence by the floods caused by the ice jam, which extends from Croil Island, to a point ten miles up the river. The water is nine feet above high water mark in the flooded district.

A special cablegram to the press says Lloyd's committee has consented to bring before the English underwriters the complaint of the Montreal Board of Trade that that shipping port is much injured by the present rule compelling transient ships to leave the St. Lawrence before September 30 each year.

At Pictou, N. S., negotiations are going on between the colliery managers and representatives of the miners, by which their differences will be adjusted by arbitration, and it is believed the striking miners will return to work in a few days. The strike has already extended over one month and has been mutually disastrous.

Reports from the different sections of the McLeod district say that the last few weeks have pulled down cattle considerably. Although not a great many have died, still many are left in a weak condition, and if there should be bad weather later on the chances are that a good many will go under. The majority of those that have died are eastern cattle taken in last summer.

A Blood Indian has lately returned to the reserve in a badly frozen condition. He reports that some more Bloods have been laid out by the Gros Ventres, near the Sweet Grass Hills. Of course it is hard to say whether this report is to be believed or not, but it is very probable that it is true. The same Indian says that the antelope are so poor and weak, from the effect of the weather and the great amount of snow, that they will hardly get out of a man's way, and are therefore easily killed.

Such a universal blockade as has taken place on New Brunswick railways the past three weeks has not been known for ten years. On the New Brunswick railway, between Gibson, Woodstock and Great Falls, miles of track have been buried under seven feet of snow. Ploughs are useless and all the men available have been organized as shovelers. The Grand Southern railway between St. John and St. Stephen has been blocked a week. There has been no travel for four days on the New Brunswick & Prince Edward Island railroad from Sackville to the Cape. The Indiantown branch is to be closed for the winter, the chief reason being the snow drifts over the line. The Northern & Western Road is impassable from Gibson almost to the north shore. The blockade on the Intercolonial road is about over.

Michael Dumas, who escaped from the Northwest after the rebellion, in company with Gabriel Dumont, and is residing with his family at St. Charles, near Winnipeg, before the amnesty was granted, was living near the boundary, and afterwards rejoined his family. He gives an interesting description of the trip of Dumont and himself from Batoche to Fort Belknap, which occupied eleven days. They lived most of the time on antelope they shot during the trip. They never saw a white face, as they kept out of the district where civilization was likely to exist. After their release by the American authorities Dumas worked for a time on a ranche at Lewiston, Montana, while Dumont maintained himself by hunting. Then came the offer to join Buffalo Bill's Wild West Combination, which Dumas declined and Dumont accepted. During his separation from his family Dumas says four of his children died, while Dumont lost his wife.

STATISTICS.

In 1880 butter was exported from Canada to the extent of 18,000,000 lb. Since 1882 the quantity has been under 9,000,000 lb. The export of eggs in 1885 amounted to 11,542,703 doz.

Between 1855 and 1885 the population of Scotland increased from 2,978,065 to 3,907,736, and the births from 93,349 to 126,110 per anumn. The deaths in 1855 were 62,004 and in 1885 74,603.

SOUTH AUSTRALIA.—The annual value of the exports of South Australia is about £6,000,000 sterling; of this wool may be reckoned as not much under £3,000,000, and wheat and flour at close upon £2,500,000 sterling. Over the Southern half of the colony sheep-farming is very widely spread. How extremely varied the quality of the land is may be seen from the fact, that over many districts it takes 30 acres to keep a sheep, while in other parts 15 sheep may be reared on one acre. Of the 900,000 square miles indeed, a very large proportion—nearly the whole of the centre—is almost absolute desert or salt-marshes.

Legal.

P. McCullough,
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE.
The subscriber begs to inform the travelling public generally, that he has leased the above premises for a term of years, and hopes by catering to their comfort to merit a share of public patronage. Bar and Larder well supplied. Good stabling and attentive hostler.
D. McLEAN, Proprieto

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
1241y

WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster, Flesherton.

WARNING.
ALL persons are hereby warned against purchasing a promisary note for the sum of $40.00 drawn and dated the 15th February by the subscriber and payable I think) ten months after date, to Wm. Fawcett, Euphrasia, as I did not get value for the same.
JACOB NEELY,
338-40 Euphrasia, February 19th 1887.

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain rem dy.
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try the excellent remedy.
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 800 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.
TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
ROBINSON & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Wanted Immediately!
CANVASSERS IN THIS COUNTY
FOR THE
"OUR NORTH LAND,"
A PURELY CANADIAN,
describing the wonders of our own country, with thrilling incidents of travel and adventure. This is by far the most saleable subscription book ever published in Canada. not a book of scraps and clippings, but an original copyright work, richly and profusely illustrated.
To energetic men who will promise to canvass at least one township, we will offer the most liberal inducements. As we manufacture the book ourselves, upon our own premises, we can afford to place it in the hands of canvassers at a very low figure, while the retail prices place the work within the reach of all classes. Application for Territory received at once. We want at least one man in every county in Canada.
Also the "NEW HOME PARALLEL BIBLES," and Photogrrph Albums in over 300 varieties.
C. Blackett Robinson,
JORDAN ST., TORONTO Publisher.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.
First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.
Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.
For sale by all dealers.
T. MILBURN & Co., Proprietors, Toronto

Markdale Roller Mill.
FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.
Flour always on Hand
To give in exchange.
'Baker's Patent' and best family flour for sale. Retail price per bbl. $4.50. Three barrels or more, $4.10 to $4.25.

SHORTS, per ton	$13.00
BRAN, "	10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.
Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn

THE
Association Can't Stop Us.
HAVING PURCHASED
—A—
FIRST-CLASS HEARSE.
Built by B. J. Mash, London. also having a large stock of Coffins, Caskets and funeral furnishings, we are prepared to supply the public in the undertaking line on the shortest notice.
A large stock of furniture always on hand at lowest living prices.
Having a first-class cabinet maker, we are prepared to make all kinds of furniture to order, also repairing done promptly.
COLEMAN & HAMILTON,
Next door to Knapp's store.
MARKDALE.

NEW HARNESS SHOP.
R. CARNAHAN would respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of the surrounding country that he has opened a general harness shop on King street in the village of
HOLLAND CENTRE,
where he intends to manufacture and keep on hand a large stock of LIGHT and HEAVY HARNESS, long and short tugs, STRAW COLLARS, WHIPS, COMBS, BRUSHES, HARNESS OIL &c.
I will use only first class material and those requiring anything in the harness line will find it to their interest to call at the new harness shop and get prices before going elsewhere. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. Soliciting a share of public patronage. I am respectfully yours.
R. CARNAHAN.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH.
TIME TABLE.
Taking effect Monday, July 28th, 1886.
GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.
Toronto....Leave	7 45am	4 50pm
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 30 "
Orangeville. Arrive	10 07 "	7 03
Orangeville. Leave	10 20 "	7 22
Orangeville Jun	10 32 "	7 34
Shelburne	10 58 "	8 04
Dundalk	11 22 "	8 30
Flesherton	11 47 "	8 55
Markdale	12 02pm	9 10
Berkeley	12 14 "	9 22 "
Holland Centre	12 23 "	9 32 "
Chatsworth	12 38 "	9 49 "
Owen Sound	1 05 "	10 20 "

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.
Owen Sound	5 40am	2 40pm
Chatsworth	6 10 "	3 07 "
Holland Centre	6 25 "	3 30 "
Berkeley	6 34 "	3 40 "
Markdale	6 47 "	3 52 "
Flesherton	7 02 "	4 06 "
Dundalk	7 26 "	4 31 "
Shelburne	7 51 "	4 57 "
Orangeville Jun	8 22 "	5 23 "
Orangeville. Arrive	8 30 "	5 35 "
Orangeville. Leave	8 45 "	5 55 "
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 30 "
Toronto.....Arrive	10 55 "	8 10

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, by
C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,
TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.
Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.
Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.
Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1
No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.
THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Society Directory.
Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78. meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, McDougall's block. Visiting brethren welcome.
Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, McDougall's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.
MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.
Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Monthly Fairs.
Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

Markdale Church Directory.
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.
CHRIST CHURCH.
Services for January, 2nd 7. 9th 7. 16th 10:30 and 7, 23 7. 30th 10:30 and 7. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.
METHODIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9. Rev. Geo. H. Cornish, Pastor; G. S. Bowes, S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection: Mrs. T Hill, Secretary.

Post-Office Directory.
MARKDALE.
The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.
Mails closed as follows, viz:
C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m
TRAVERSTON.
Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.
HARKAWAY.
Friday, 12:30 noon.
For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.
W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

Directory.
MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.
Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.
Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.
COUNTY OFFICIALS.
Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace. W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N. Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, B. Allan, Owen Sound.
M. P., East. T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East. Capt. J. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.
DIVISION COURT CLERKS
No, 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett. Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Subscribe now for the STANDARD: there is good times acoming.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

Melancthon and Osprey township said to be agitating for a branch C. P. R. from Shelburne to Thorn

Rev. J. C. Dunlop of Durham moved to Corinth, Bentinck.

The following are recently Pro appointed in this county, viz.—L Inspectors, Centre Grey—James C bell, Clarksburg, North—C. C. P Owen Sound. South—Thomas A. P Durham. License Commissione East Grey—Thos. W. Tyson, Brown, Thos. B. White. North Price, D. R. Dobie, James Ste South—A. Davidson, Thos. Smith. J. Ryan,

At Paris, Ont., three girls were $5 each recently for furious driving

W. G. Pickell of Artemesia has appointed bailiff of Thornbury Di Court. Mr. Pickell is a man who high in the estimation of the public know him, and we feel certain he honor his position.

A young man named Byron Bash instantly killed at Ameliasburg Saturday while coasting. The ran against a stump with above re

A large block owned by Robt. Indoo was burned at Wiarton last day morning.

St. Thomas has an $8,000 fire Sunday morning.

An exchange says: The very l thing in social gatherings is the "geo phical social." The gentleman are cards on each of which is printed name of some county in the pro while the ladies are given each a with the name of the county town ed thereon all for a dime apiece. each gent hunts up the county to his county to take to refreshments you cannot tell the county town your county you must pay ten cent the fund as a forfeit before you can tain the desired information. If does not afford sufficient amusement the evening, geographical conundr charades, etc., can be introduced.

I WONDER.
If the Y. P. S. have became defunct.
If they should not show the Flesh people how to get up an entertainment.
If this would not be a desirable tim agitate incorporation,
Who or what is the hinderance anyho
If it would not be a good idea to clean snow off all the side walks now, since streets are in such a filthy state.
If it would not be a profitable chan exercise from tobaggoning, for the (especially the young men) to make a on the snowbound sidewalks some night clear them, so that we could get along evening stroll without singing out.
If the dude salesman has attempted another lady without permission since the kerwhollop over the kersnout.
If we should not all the more admire ladies' who do not take everything for ed.
KLAUD I WONDER.

WE draw attention this week to notice of dissolution of partnership Hill Bros. general merchants of place. This was one of the first, has been one of the most succe establishments in our village. Bros. have by close application business, honesty and industry built and extensive and lucrative busi an have, not only one of the fi mercantile buildings in the county, carries a stock which for variety qu or extent is seldom equalled even much larger places. Mr. S. Hill, elder brother, will carry on the busi as heretofore; His sterling worth well known business capabilities a sufficient guarantee for the contin success of this mercantile establish

ASTGNISHING SUCCESS.
It is the duty of every person who used Broschee's German Syrup to let wonderful qualitise be known to their fri in curing Consumption, severe Co Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact throat and lung diseases. No person use it without immediate relief. Three will relieve any case, and we consider it duty of all druggists to recommend it to poor, dying consumptive, at least to try bottle, as 30,000 dozen bottles were last year, and no one case where it failed reported. Such a medicine as the G Syrup cannot be too widly known. Ask druggists about it. Sample bottles to sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in United States and Canada.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

VENTH YEAR.—No. 342. MARKDALE, ONT., MARCH 24, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Publisher.

al and Other Items.

s in these columns intended to benefit ridual or Society will be charged ten ine for the first insertion and five ine each subsequent insertion.

CE.—Correspondence, communica- dvertisements, &c., must be in this noon on Tuesday to insure publication k.

L MATHEWS is home from Sarnia.

TAYLOR is on a visit to Markdale.

ER & TIMOTHY Seeds at Stephen's tore.

DALE Public School has now 0 pupils.

ver Seed at the Medica' . Turner & Co.

TED.—10,000 doz. Eggs, also bs. Butter at J E. Richards'.

R. L. Stephen's new adv. you iss it very easily.

JOHN MCBRIDE of Mono visited in this district last week.

l Cake. the champion food for sale at Medical Hall A. & Co.

S THAT ARE BOOTS.—A select stock s and shoes for spring trade just at W. McLeod's.

le spex, Crystal Lenses, and 4 n sun glasses. Call at W. A. 's Jewellry Store.

JOHN R. LAINES of Glascott offers roved farms for sale on easy See posters for particulars.

Grey Agricultural Society will heir Annual Spring Show at rton on Friday 22nd April.

STODDART our new tailor fully solicits a share of public ge. See his adv. in this paper.

Markdale grain elevators never s full as at present; something 0,000 bushels being now in store

Editor of the Advance has writt- logue on "The Young Father" or t baby—How appropriate.

parcel advertised last week as s found and returned the second er the paper was published.

normous quantity of wood, ties, posts, lumber, &c., is now in our yard for shipment.

quality English galvanized iron oughing at right prices. Call and imates at Mabee's Hardware.

A. B. RUDD and bride, of Perth, been the guest of Mr. Thos. s, their brother-in-law, the past time arrangements were being or Markdale Spring Show. Who ake a move?

RICHARDS of Rocklyn returned oronto, Monday evening, where been purchasing his spring stock.

Flour and Feed merchant has and is getting his store stocked he different brands needful in his long felt want supplied.—Pre- Paints ready for use—any ity or shade—guaranteed pure; em at Haskett Bros.

you made miserable by indiges- constipation, dizziness, loss of te: take Rejuvenator Bitters sold ith the barber.

MPDEN WATCHES.—My own name st received; Key and stem wind. e sold close, cash or time. W. A. , Jeweller.

not wise to do two days' work for that brings sooner or later, ndition that makes it impossible ne day's work in two.

STORY OF HUNDREDS.—In a recent received from Mrs. Sarah A. Mills eatley, Ont., she says, "I was a r for six years with dyspepsia and complaint, My food did not digest grew weaker every day. I lost te and had little hope of recovery. many remedies, but all in vain, ook Burdock Blood Bitters. The ttle gave relief; after taking seven , I am thankful that I now enjoy ealth."

Hope nothing from luck, and the probability is that you will be so prepared, so forewarned and forearmed, that all shallow observers will call you lucky.

MARKDALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 75 to 76 cents; spring wheat 75 to 76; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 15 to 17; eggs 16; potatoes 50 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

Saw mill men, Flour mill proprietors Wool-factory owners and all who run steam or other machinery should call at Mabee's and examine his machine oil which is the best in the market,

OVERLADEN fruit trees mature their fruit while it is yet small. Pick off one half before much growth is made, and the remaining half may grow to as many bushels as all would if left.

THE Thornbury Standard says that about 50 buildings are to be erected in Markdale the coming summer. The editor has worked in a cipher too much somehow.

IF the drunken loafers who come to town every week to make an exhibition of the streets, could see themselves as others see them, suicides would be more frequent.

CURE FOR CROUP.—Prompt relief to prevent suffocation from the accumulation of tough mucous—the formation of false membrane— and the obstruction of the air passage, is necessary in case of a sudden attack of croup. Hagyard's Yellow Oil should be used at once, afterwards Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam.

NOTICE.—The milk hauling to Markdale Cheese Factory on the several routes will be let by public auction at the Markdale House at 2 o'clock on Saturday next, 26th March. B. COLEMAN, President.

MR. WM. BURNETT of Orange Valley, Artemesia lost a horse last week by being hooked by a cow in the breast. The animal bled to death in a few minutes. This is the second horse Mr. Burnett has lost in four months.

THE Presbyterian S. S. Anniversary was held last Thursday evening. There was a good attendance and a pleasent and profitable time throughout. The Children did their part creditably and the event was entirely successful.

W. J. SHEPHERDSON has been favored with instructions to sell by public auction on lot 15, con. 12, Holland, on Tuesday 29th March, a large stock implements &c. Mrs. M. Nixon, Proprietoress.

A LUCKY ESCAPE.—"For six years I suffered with my throat and enlarged tonsils. I was very weak; I doctored four years, and had advice from three doctors; they said I would have to undergo an operation. I tried B. B. B. instead. One bottle cured me." M. A. Squelch, Reglan, Ont.

IF you loose a parcel, advertise it in the STANDARD. A great many articles have been found by this means, and there is no risk in the shape of expense, as we refund the money if the article is not found.

THE last Masquerade Carnival of the season will be held in the roller skating rink Markdale on Tuesday evening next, 29. Music furnished by the Brass Band. See posters for full particulars and prize list.

R. O. WHITEY is prepared to do all kinds of carriage painting; a first class job with the best material guaranteed. Now is the time to bring in your wheel'd rigs and have them re-painted for summer use. Shop over Hull's new cooper shop.

FIRE.—The dwelling house occupied by W. McLeod of this village caught fire from a defective ceiling flue on Sunday morning about ten o'clock but by well directed efforts on the part of the inmates and neighbors was soon subdued, not however before considerable damage was done

Markdale Cheese Factory is fixing for a heavy years' operations. There is more milk promised for the comming summer than has been any year heretofore. That is the way to make it pay, and we may reasonably look for a successful and profitable seasons operations.

It seems that a lawyer is something of a carpenter. He can file a biil, split a hair, chop logic, dovetail an argument, make an entry, get up a case, frame an indictment, empannel a jury, put them in a box, nail a witness, hammer a judge bore a court, chisel a client and other like things.

A GOOD MOTIVE.—Harry Ricards, of Toronto, agent for Fine Art Publications states that he was so tronbled with deafness for eight years that he could scarcely attend to business, until he tried Yellow Oil He desires to make this cure known, for the benefit of others afflicted.

WHAT IS ALABASTINE.—It is a preparation of plaster-paris and other ingredients used for decorating and whitening walls and ceilings, is easily applied, will not scale nor rub off, and is cheaper and better than calcimine. You can get it at Haskett Bros.

The social given at the residence of Mrs. Cornwall by the L. A, S. of the Methodist Church was an entire success. The house was well filled and an exceedingly pleasant and enjoyable evening spent. There appeared to be no limlt to the mirth of the company.

SATISFIED CONFIDENCY.—J. B, H. Girard, of St. Edwidge, Clifton P. Q., says, "I am well satisfied with the use of Burdock Blood Bitters; it has cured me of dyspepsia that I had for three years. I used five bottles, and shall tell every person I know that may be attacked with similar sickness, and should not be afraid to guarrantee every bottles used."

ITEMS of news are always acceptable, and we urge our readers to kindly inform us in some way of the little items which may come under their notice from time to time; It will not hurt you, while it will greatly assist us. Let us have them by Tuesday noon, and as much earlier as convenient, for that weeks issue.

IT does appear strange what a hub-ub people make in reference to the so called "Ross Bible. We venture to say that 99 out of every 100 ratepayers are wholy ignorant of what it contains. One thing is certain, if the lives of its opposers were squared by its teachings, they wouldmake good citizens, perhaps much better than at present.

HIGHLY SPOKEN OF.—Mr. James M. Lawson, of Woodville, Ont., speaks in high terms of Yellow Oil for rheumatism, lame back, sprains and painful complaints. Yellow Oil is used internally and externally in case of pain; also coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., and has made many remarkable cures of deafness.

WE received this week from a friend in Kansas, a copy of the Manhattan Republic, a double sheet, broadside Double Royal, which is an excellent spenimen of newspaper for a town of 3,300 inhabitants. It is beautifully printed and profusely illustrated, giving handsome cuts of all the churches of the the town, also many business places and private residences.

LECTURE.—Rev. D. Rodgers is a fluent and easy speaker, and gave "Talmage's" lecture on "Ingersollism" (a defence of the Bible against the attacks of infidelity) last Wednesday evening in the Methodist Church, Markdale, to a delighted audience. The attendance was rather slim, but we doubt not that had the public any reasonable conception of the intellectual treat which was in store, the house would have been crowded.

WHY EMPLOY DOCTORS.—Consult a doctor and in 9 cases out of ten he pronounces your disease Liver Complaint and charges you $1 for a small bottle. Consult your druggists and for $1 he will give Dr. Chase's Liver Cure, guaranteed to cure, and a valuable receipt book free.

STRATFORD May 3.

I had been the victim of one of the worst of blood diseases and I was treated by a number of the best medical men in the Country, and my constitution was completely undermind, a friend advised me to try Dr Jug's Medicine, it restored my appetite and fixed me up complete after using seven bottles. I strongly recommend it to all similar affected.

FRANK C. COUNTER, of Starks & Counter

Sold by A. Turner & Co.

MRS. JAKE KING of Collingwood is visiting friends in Markdale.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's D. Store.

MR. RUTHVAN of Collingwood township gave friends in Markdale a call this week.

For Fleury and Wilkinson Plows go to Jackson's; price to suit hard times.

MR. and Mrs. Andrew Beattie of Artemesia has been visiting friends in Streetsville recently.

Timothy Seed wanted for which I will pay highest cash prices. W. L. Davis'.

THERE is prospects of W. J. Rowe turning his stone flour mill into a Woolen mill the coming summer.

Go to Jackson for land Rollers. Cheapest and best in the market. Call and be convinced.

J. E. RICHARDS is bound to go ahead, he has just returned from city with a full line of goods, the largest ever brought in Euphrasia, look out for bargains.

Iron Harrows "spring tooth Harrows" Drills and seeders from the best manufactures in Ontario, at Jackson's.

ON Tuesday last while loading a car of timber for W. J Rowe, Henry Boyce of Barrhead Mills slipped falling on the steel rail and breaking his right arm near the wrist. Dr. Brodie set the bone, and he is doing well.

Try Davis' new 30c, Japan Tea you will be convinced that it is a very superior article for the money, Special reduction for large purchases.

We occasionally receive a communication or correspondence for the paper without any signature—of course we know our regular correspondents, and it is not necessary for them to sign each batch of news— but all else go straight to the waste basket unless the above requirement is complied with. We do not require the name for publication, but as an evidence of good faith.

READ what the Thornbury Standard says about our Markdale talent at their Concert last week. "The Concert in the Music Hall here on Thursday evening last under the auspices of the Presbyterian Choir was one of the best ever held in Thornbury. Mr. Hunter, Clarksburg occupied the Chair. The chief attractions at the concert was the singing and recitations of Mr. W. J. Benson of Markdale, and the playing on the piano of Master John Dundas of the same place. The playing of Master Johnny who is only twelve years of age was extraordinary. He delighted the audience very much, and was encored again and again. As a comique Mr. W. J. Benson stands very high. He is equal in every resoect to the late James Fax of Toronto, and far surpassed all expectations held of him by the people here, they thinking that nothing good could come from Markdale but Dr. Sproule. To say that he was uproarously encored at every appearance would be putting it very mild. He was encored three times on every appearance and then yelled and yelled for. All his pieces were of a fine humorous character that would not offend the most fastidious. It is the intention of the people here to have Master Johnny Dundas and Mr. W. J. Benson at the next entertainment."

Politicians attention! Those interested in politics will do well to visit the Political social to be given by the members of the Young People's Society, in the basement of the Markdale Methodist Church, on the evening of good Friday. You will hear more about it next week.

The business men of Owen sound are alive to the interests of their town, and to that end a deputation recently waited on the C. P. R. officials in reference to the encouragement of Western States freight traffic. Their elevator which has a capacity of 260,000 bushels is found quite too small for this great western trade, and plans are now being drawn for a new elevator to hold 1,000,000 bushels; a packing house 800 feet long is also to be erected.

MR. HENRY KING is becoming a noted horse man, and is determined to keep apace with this progressive age in that line. He has recently purchased from Mr. Rennie of Toronto a fine thoroughbred Clydesdale colt, will be three years old on 30th day of May and now weighs 1,800 lbs. This is the kind of stock ther's money, in and farmers are fast getting their eyes open to that fact.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure inspient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh; 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333-8b

IDENTIFIED.—Pardon us for trespassing, but, as there seems to be some misunderstanding as to who the man was who caused the notice headed "lost, strayed or stolen" to be published, and as to who the Traverston Committee is, therefore we wish you to say in your paper the two first initials of his name are Dennis Sweeny. Dennis, old man, never again misplace or surrepticiously abuse the confidence imposed in you by a friend, nor publicly or privately proclaim a single utterance that may have the slightest tendency to injure a fellow creature, without just cause for so doing; for the tongue of scandal is ever charged with rank deadly poison. In the future look before you leap and, the "arrows and slings of outrageous fortune" will not torture you for transgressing. * * *

Since the Toronto Mail has severed its connection with the Conservative party, those who do not read the paper would doubtless like to know its platform, which is as follows—Loyalty to Britain, but Loyalty also to Canada.

Religious Equality for all. Ecclesiastical Privilege for none.

Protection to Native Industry.

Manhood Suffrage for all who can read and write.

Senate Reform.

Liberal Aid to Education, and for the encouragement of Scientific Farming.

As a result of a recent visit from the Bishop's Commissioner, Diocese of Huron, the Markdale Parish has been divided; The new arrangements to come into force on 1st April. Markdale and Berkeley forming the new field for one clergyman, Maxwell, Flesherton and Eugenia the new field for another.

Mr. Andrew Beattie has purchased a fine young Clydesdale stallion which is said to be a very fine specimen of that valuable class of horses. We understand he will travel him in this district the coming season.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a similar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections also a positive and radical cure for nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Send by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper W. A. NOYES 149 Power's Block Rochester, N. Y. 284-65 E. O. W.

FARM.

NOTES.

At a recent exhibition in England, where prizes were given for walking horses, the speed attained was over five miles an hour.

Poultry should have a certain proportion of salt in their food as well as animals, as it is necessary to the promotion of health and thrift.

Fresh-made butter, with dainty flavor, must always be sold in preference to a butter made three months before it is put on the market.

A little loose sand thrown over those beets in the corner will prevent that shrivelled appearance they now have. Of course you have a good supply of sand on hand for this purpose.

Have you looked over the fruit and vegetables to see if they are rotting? We know the same question was asked before, but we propose to keep on asking it and save those vegetables and fruits if possible.

Young stock, once allowed to run down, never fully recover from the effects thereof. Of inferior feed and lice the first generally brings the second. Poor feeding is scandalous; vermin added, it is brutal.

Make drains, and thus allow the water to run off as fast as the snow melts, in order to avoid slush and dampness in the barnyard; but be careful not to allow of any escape of the liquid matter from the manure heap. Use some kind of absorbent and save it.

Of the different roots, potatoes are the most liable to injury by freezing; beets next, and carrots still less, partly because carrots usually grow most of their roots beneath the surface. Parsnips can be left in the ground all winter, and are rather better for some freezing.

GATE WITHOUT HINGES.—A gate can be made without hinges by having the hanging stile somewhat longer than the front style, and making both ends rounded. The lower one is to work in a hole in the end of a short post raised so that soil will not readily get in, and the upper one works in a hole made in an oak piece attached to the top of the gate-post. Gates of this kind can be made and hung with but little more expense than bars, and will be found far more convenient and saving of time than the latter.

SUGAR.—While European governments are paying bounties for the production of beet sugar, we are cutting off our maple groves. Don't do it. Maple sugar and syrup will bring fair prices—not for use as every-day sugar, but as luxuries. Let us have all you can make, and let it be pure and full of the maple flavor. Sorghum is excelling beets in this country. With the best varieties and apparatus, every farmer can make sugar and syrup a profitable farm crop, even at present prices. The seed is valuable, and the stalks, after the juice is pressed out, are better than corn fodder for ensilage.

NEW KINDS OF LIVE STOCK.—The demand for heavy work horses is such that the farmers may well consider if it will not pay him to do his work with heavy mares that shall breed for him every year a big Percheron or English Shire foal that can be broken to light farm work at two years old and sold at four. Then there are the Holland cows, and Guernseys, and Polland breeds, and the beef-making Herefords, each claiming pre-eminence in their ways. Yorkshire pigs, mutton sheep. Wyandotte fowls, etc., all possess merits which it is the progressive farmer's duty to investigate, and, so far as his means go, to choose between the old and the new.

NECESSITY FOR DRAINAGE.—Wet lands should be drained because we cannot unlock the fertility of the soil unless air takes the place of the the water, says Prof. Scott. in the Agricultural Gazette. We drain to let water into the soil, as much as to take it out—not merely to carry off the surplus water, but to make the fertilising rain filter through the soil. Amongst other effects, draining improves the texture of soil by making it porous, drier, looser, and more friable; it makes land more asily worked; it raises temperature of the soil; it enables a greater variety of crops to be grown; it gives an earlier seed-time and an earlier harvest; and it makes manure more effectual. And even this does not exhaust the practical advantages of draining wet lands.

THE FEEDING OF CATTLE.—Prof. Wallace (Professor of Agriculture, University of Edinburgh,) in a lecture on "Cattle Feeding," says: "As to early maturity, I am not one of those who believe that all cattle should be finished and killed before they are two years old. In a bad or awkward climate, and where inferior forage is produced, I think it would pay to keep cattle longer, not only the climate and the nature of the forage being against the fattening powers of the animal, but the tendency to early maturity is not compatible with that hardiness of constitution which has deen induced by adversity in the conditions of life.

SOMETHING ABOUT ASPARAGUS.—Joseph Harris in the American Garden, says:—Many false ideas prevail about asparagus. It is just as easy to plant and raise this crop as to plant and raise potatoes. The old directions in regard to trenching and manuring are obsolete. True, it will do no harm to work a lot of good manure into the soil and sub-soil, provided you do not turn up all the poor sub-soil on top. The best asparagus bed we had was neither trenched nor manured. We top-dress it with nitrate of soda every spring and occasionally with manure late in the fall.

EXPERIMENTS AT THE ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY.—Prof. Morrow, of the Illinois University, has made the following deductions from experiment: 1. Increase of weight in cattle is most cheaply secured by pasturage without any grain during the best part of season. 2. Feeding whole corn in the autumn months to cattle on pasture is the most economical method of fattening cattle. The feeding is done with least labor. When hogs follow the cattle there is very little waste. The manure is all saved and distributed without cost. While comparatively low prices are to be expected for cattle marketed in the autumn or early winter, a fair profit has been made annually. Even with the prevailing exceptionally low prices, sales have been made (for November delivery) of most of the cattle purchased last spring at a price which gives fully satisfactory profit. 3. After three or four months of full grain feeding a considerable decrease in rate of grain may be expected. 4. Apparently from thirty to thirty-six months are the most profitable ages at which to sell cattle fattened on this system—unless those of a little greater age can be bought at a price which gives no profit to the grower. 5. It is not profitable to feed grain to yearling steers on good pasture, if it is designed to keep them another year and fatten for the general market. 6. Calves reared on skim milk, with addition of some meal, may make entirely satisfactory growth and beef animals of good quality. A high-grade Shorthorn steer now on the farms weighs 1,470 pounds at a few days over twenty-nine months, and with less than two months full grain feeding. He has gained 185 pounds in the last forty-five days.

A FAMOUS ESTABLISHMENT.

Special Correspondence.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19, 1887.—We recently availed ourselves of an invitation extended to several medical gentlemen to visit the celebrated Laboratory of Dr. H. Root, the noted specialist upon Epilepsy, in New York city, where his specific remedy for Epilepsy "Elepizone," is prepared. It is at the junction of Cedar and Pearl streets—New York city—the main office being at 182 Pearl street.

The Consulting Room is a large and richly furnished apartment—admirably adapted to medical purposes. It is one of the most completely furnished Laboratories in the country.

His valuable Library, comprising over 2,500 volumes, includes the standard works and publications of the most celebrated physicians and surgeons of this, and foreign countries, each work having been carefully selected for its special reference and exhaustive treatise upon the disease "Epilepsy," in the treatment of which Dr. Root has so signally distinguised himself in the ranks of his profession.

A distinctive feature of Dr. Root's system is the privilege accorded to each employe of the Laboratory, of free access to this valuable medical collection.

Another striking feature in the Consulting Room is the electrical apparatus whereby instant communication can be established with any member whose presence is desired. By Telephonic connection with an adjoining Telegraph office, the Doctor places himself in communication with the managers of his Branch Laboratories in Toronto and London, whereby maintaining a direct superintendency over his entire business the world over, two very essential elements in a successful and extended practice.

From this room we enter the General office—where the utmost activity prevails, yet entirly devoid of bustle or confusion—a result of that systematic action which regulates the management of the entire establishment. Here, the extensive mail matter is received, its orders, applications for medicine, and general correspondence assorted and assigned to the special departments, the cases for treatment carefully arranged, classified, and prepared for the Doctor's special study and opinion—each case being personally diagnosed by him before final action is taken thereon, and a report made to the patient. The force employed numbers twenty-three persons—ten of whom have been in the Doctor's service for thirteen years. And who occupy corresponding positions of importance.

It may here be appropriately remarked that the recent decision of several large firms, to divide their yearly profits with their employes, is an adoption of a long-established custom of this office—Dr. Root having long advocated this mutual co-operation, and fully illustrated its advantage by the very comfortable circumstances of his employes.

Passing into the Printing Department—wherein the enormous supply of Circulars, Treatises, and other printed matter pertaining to his remedy are prepared, and through the mailing, packing and shipping rooms, each of which is fully provided with all the conveniences of safety and dispatch, we come to the Laboratory, where an idea of the magnitude of the business is obtained.

Huge steaming boilers, which reduce the vegetable ingredients of the Elepizone to a liquid form: compact sweating boxes, that extract certain curative properties from other peculiar medicinal herbs; long rows of percolators, vast cooling tanks, long relays of receptacles for the preparation, preparatory to bottling, together with the numerous scientific and ingenious apparatus employed, attest the care, skill, and profound study and research of the originator of this wonderful process, by which thousands of Epileptics have been Cured for Life.

A glance at the shipping book for 1886 shows that 13,785 bottles of this Infallible Remedy for Epilepsy was sent to Physicians, alone, for their individual practice, while the Druggists sold 53,207 bottles, and to Patients treated during the same year, 295,236, making a total of 362,228 bottles of Elepizone. If this great remedy did not have merit it could not "get there" in such great quantities.

The immediate advantages of Dr. Root's specific method of treatment lies in its originality, effectiveness, and cheapness to the patient, placing a cure within the reach of all. A Free Trial Bottle is first sent to those who apply, and a carefully prepared statement of the case is then required from the patient. From this the case is thoroughly diagnosed by the Doctor, and the patient treated as successfully by mail as by a personal consultation.

Railways in India.

The capital invested in the Indian railway system, with its connected steamer services, is estimated at £161,917,840. Of this sum the Government have spent directly £82,255,391. The capital outlay of guaranteed companies stands at £71,032,838, and that of the "assisted" companies at £3,808,232. Native States—the principal in this respect being Mysore and Hyderbad—are responsible for an outlay of £4,821,379 on lines within their territories. When the construction of railways in India was first mooted, there were some who warned the projectors that caste prejudices would prevent the natives from using them; but it is an astonishing fact that in 1885 Indian railways carried no fewer than 80,864,779 passengers, who paid for their fares the sum of £5,538,126. In 1884 the number of passengers was 73,815,119, and their freight was valued at £5,070,754.

A Highland Proclamation.

The following is a proclamation made at the Market Cross of Inverary in the last century:—"Ta hoy! Te tither a hoy! Ta hoy three times!!! an' ta toy—Whist!!! By command of His Majesty, King George, an' her Grace te Duke o' Argyll: If anybody is found fishing aboon the loch, or below te loch, afore te loch, or ahint te loch, in te loch, or on te lock, aroun' te loch, or about te loch, she's to be persecutit wi' three persecutions: first she's to be burnt, syne she's to be drownt, an' then she's to be hangb—an' if ever she come back she's to be persecutit wi' a far waur death. God save te King an' Her Grace te Duke o' Argyll.

Temperance Item.

Judge—"In your drunken fury you drew your pistol and dangerously wounded an unoffending man."

Cowboy—"Yes, Jedge, that's about the size of it."

Judge—"Whisky has got you into serious trouble. If it had not been for whisky you would not now be under arrest."

Cowboy—"That's where you're a little off, Jedge. If I had been sober I'd have killed him deader than a door nail instead of only cripplin' him up a little."

Seven Years

Of suffering relieved in as many days. Corns cause in the aggregate as much suffering as any single disease. It is the magic solvent power of Putnam's Corn Extractor that makes it speedily successful in removing corns. Take no substitute, however highly recommended. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is the best. Sure, safe, and painless.

The Power of Influence.

That example is more powerful than precept is an old adage, and it is as true to-day as when it was first written. The insincerity too often shown as a matter of politeness, if observed by children and understood at its proper value, through overhearing some remark before or after the occurrence, will undo any lesson on truth that the person who has practiced this deception can afterwards give. The child will think it can't be wicked to lie or deceive, or mamma, papa, auntie, or whoever else it is talking, would not do it.

The writer recalls an incident that occurred over thirty years ago. She was in company with a lady friend for whom she entertained a genuine respect, regarding her as a very good Christian. This friend was given some errands to do by the writer's aunt, and when, in so doing, she went into a millinery store to select some bonnet trimming, and not finding what pleased her at a low price, she said to the milliner, the lady has a sister in the city, I will go and see what she thinks about it before buying.

On leaving the store the writer suggested that Aunt B—should be called on before we did any trading. She replied, "I did not mean to go to see her; I only told the milliner so, as I did not like the ribbon and didn't want to tell her my reason."

The writer could never place any confidence in the word of this very worthy lady again.

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular. The second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto Canada.

Alf Analf says that, in regard to matrimony, the modern girl is like modern clothing—ready maid.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

That mother is indiscreet, as well as slangy, who tells her daughter to "sit on" the young man who calls often and stays late.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

"Chestnuts!" yelled several person in the gallery at the minstrel show. "That's right gentlemen," responded Bones, "if you don't get what you want, ask for it."

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

A young farmer in Quebec, who had saved up $200 in bank bills, wrapped a piece of paper around them and stuck the roll up the chimney in his bedroom for safe-keeping. One cold afternoon his mother put a stove in the room and built a rousing fire in it, and wnen the young man returned to supper only the charred remnants of the notes could be found.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 303 King Street West Toronto Canada.

A. P. 325.

6 PER CENT. MONEY—INTEREST YEARLY—no commission; Mortgages purchased. R. H. TEMPLE, 23 Toronto Street.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

FOR SALE.—SEVERAL FIRST-CLASS IMPROVED FARMS for sale—in the County of Essex (called the garden of Canada); easy terms of payment. C. G. MARTEN, Leamington.

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the U.S. and all foreign countries. Engineers, Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Causes. Established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

100,000 SHEETS OF 5 & 10c. MUSIC; '30,000 Plays,' Brass Inst'e, 'Violins,' 'Flutes,' 'Fifes,' and Musical Inst. Trimmings, at reduced prices. R. B. BUTLAND, 37 King-s. W., Toronto.

AGENTS WANTED everywhere for "Living Words," Sam P. Jones' Own Book—A series of matchless sermons collected and edited under the author's own supervision, with an autobiographical sketch of the great Southern Evangerist; 39 sermons, all new; full page engravings, and a steel plate portrait of the author. Remember, this book is only sold by subscription, through authorized agents.
WILLIAM BRIGGS, publisher, Toronto, Ont.

CANADA PERMANENT
Loan & Savings Co'y.
INCORPORATED, A.D. 1855

Subscribed Capital,	$3,500,000
Paid-up Capital,	2,300,000
Reserve Fund,	1,180,000
Total Assets,	9,301,615

OFFICE:
COMPANY'S BUILDINGS, TORONTO-ST., TORONTO

SAVINGS BANK BRANCH
Sums of $4 and upwards received at current rates of interest, paid or compounded half-yearly.
DEBENTURES.
Money received on deposit for a fixed term of years, for which Debentures are issued, with half-yearly interest coupons attached. Executors and Trustees are authorized by law to invest in the Debentures of this Company. The Capital and Assets of the Company being pledged for money thus received, depositors are at all times assured of perfect safety.
Advances made on Real Estate, at current rates, and on favorable conditions as to re-payment. Mortgages and Municipal Debentures purchased.
J. HERBERT MASON, Managing Director.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO.
Manufacturers of the highest grade of
SILVER PLATED WARES.
Steel Knives, Spoons, Forks, Etc.,
A SPECIALTY.
ALL GOODS GUARANTEED.
TORONTO, CANADA

SNOW DRIFT BAKING POWDER
THE FAVORITE!
THERE IS NO BETTER!
The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford, Ont.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated Ware.
Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish.
HAMILTON, ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships.
Sailing during winter from Port and every hursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.
For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co. Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM
The Mutual Reserve Fund
LIFE ASSOCIATION.
The largest and most prosperous open Assessment Association in the world, desires active representatives in every section of Canada. Liberal inducements. It has full Government deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa
Correspondence solicited. Address,
J. D. WELLS,
General Manager,
65 King StreetEast, Toronto

DUCHESS DRESSING.
A PERMANENT BLACK POLISH
ESPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR LADIES & CHILDREN'S FINE SHOES.

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; ehe was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties.
J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

Bicycles!
SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines,
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st April
A. T. LANE, MONTREAL.

SHARP'S BALSAM

Croup Whooping Cough
COUGHS & COLDS
SOLD ON ALL RAILWAY TRAINS.
Wholesale through IRA CORNWALL & CO., 162 St. James Street, Montreal.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

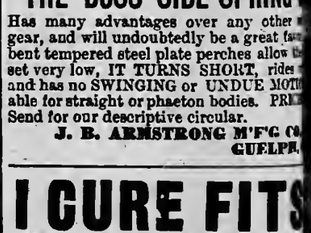
AGENTS WANTED for "Life of [illegible] from an authentic memoir furnished order and written with his encouragement tion and blessing, by Bernard O'Reilly. This is the only work approved by the [illegible] and all others advertised as such are [illegible] terms address ROSS PUBLISHING CO., [illegible]

DON'T READ THIS unless you [illegible] money. THE FIRESIDE WEEKLY [illegible] story paper in Canada, and contains the and best stories of any paper published, [illegible] great music premium. $2 per year. Sample for your district. Agents liberally dealt with for free sample copies and terms. Mention this Address, THE FIRESIDE WEEKLY, [illegible] borne street, Toronto, Ont.

ILLUSTRATED CIRCULARS
CANADIAN BUSINESS UNIVERSITY, hand Institute, Public Library Building, ronto. Specialties: Book-keeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, etc. Write for particulars.
THOMAS BENGOUGH,
Official Reporter York Co. Court, Toronto.
CHARLES H. BROOKS, Sec'y and Manager.

GUELPH Business College, Ontario
Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of graduates, this College owes its popularity. For circulars giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address
M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

CHURNS.
Many kinds. Churns of all kinds: Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Carpet Stretchers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries.
HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Ont.
Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.



PILES!
Blind, Bleeding, and Itching Piles effectually cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment. Medical Pile Ointment.
Thousands of cases have been cured. We testify to the permanent relief from the use of this ointment and external Remedies. $1.00 per box. Sold by your druggist for it, or will be sent by Mail postage paid.
HUGH MILLER & CO.,
167 King St. East., Toronto.
PILES

Wall Paper
MANUFACTURED BY
M. STAUNTON & CO.
Samples on application. TORONTO.

SAUSAGE CASINGS
NEW SHIPMENT from ENGLAND
Ex-Steamship "Norwegian."
LOWEST PRICES TO THE TRADE. We are the only agents in Canada for McBRIDE'S CELEBRATED SAUSAGE CASINGS. Write for quotations.
JAMES PARK & SON, Toronto.

SMITH
R. SPENCE & CO.
Consumers will find it to their advantage to ask the trade for our make of Files and Rasps. Re-Cutting a Specialty. Send for price list and terms.
HAMILTON - ONT.

The National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Blocks, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for price list.

ARMSTRONG'S
BUGGY AND CARRIAGE GEAR

THE BOSS SIDE-SPRING
Has many advantages over any other gear, and will undoubtedly be a great favorite. bent tempered steel plate perches allow the set very low, IT TURNS SHORT, rides easy and has no SWINGING or UNDUE MOTION able for straight or phaeton bodies. PRICE Send for our descriptive circular.
J. B. ARMSTRONG M'F'G CO.
GUELPH.

I CURE FITS
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

Hamilton Scale Co.
All Styles of Improved
STANDARD SCALES
We make a Specialty of
Hay, Stock, and Portable form Scales.
BEST IN THE MARKET.
Every one Guaranteed. All Styles of Trucks.
Send for Illustrated Price List.
OSBORNE & CO, - - - HAMILTON

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING ST. EAST
TORONTO.

Farmers and Threshers
USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN

Peerless
NINE GOLD MEDALS Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE, for your Wagons and Horse Power.
Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by
SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO.

BRICK MACHINE
—WITH ALL THE—
LATEST IMPROVEMENTS.
SPRING PRESS BOX, - WHITE OAK POSTS, - AND IRON
Over 500 of our Machines now in use and no complaints. Prices and Terms to suit buyers. Send
The E. & C. GURNEY CO.
TORONTO, ONT.

RIFT AND SPRAY;

OR,

LOVE AND VENGEANCE AMONG THE SMUGGLERS.

THE MOST FASCINATING OCEAN ROMANCE SINCE THE DAYS OF COOPER AND MARYATT.

CHAPTER XXXIV.—THE JEWELS IN THE LOCKER.

"No, no!" Dolan gasped; "it cannot be! They are here; they are all here still! Who was on watch?—who was it? They could not have left unobserved. Who was on watch by the ravine?—who? who?"

"I was," said a man.

"And who more?"

"Beard. Tom Beard. He isn't the likely man to let anyone pass his watch without a brace of bullets; or me, either. Nobody came my way."

"And who was here—here on the cutter's deck?"

"Benjamin."

"Ah, yes! Oh, fools! fools! To forget that—God, I saw him! They killed him! I remember all now! I saw the body! I turned it over and saw the ghastly, drowned face! Why, it is real! The danger is all real! Help! We are all lost—lost!"

"Why what's in the wind now?" said Bowline savagely, advancing upon Dolan.

The crew, too, took up the cry and looked threateningly at him.

Then Dolan, with a face as pale as death itself, said, quite gently:

"What's the matter?"

"You ought to know that," said Bowline. "What did you mean by saying all was lost, eh?"

"Did I say so?"

"You know you did, and that the danger was not now."

"Well, it is; and all will be lost if you do not do as I say to you—all will be lost; but if you do that all will be saved. I wish now some of you to go down to the cabin and fetch up Captain Mocquet, the French captain. You know I destroyed his note of hand for the ransom; and so I think you ought to have another from him and take care of it yourselves, my brave mates. When I meet you in Scotland we can, I dare say, think of some way of getting the money for it."

"Oh, he's gone, too," said Bowline.

"Gone!"

"Ay, Captain Dolan; you may reckon them all up now—Grace, Gerald, Martin, Joseph and Captain Mocquet."

Dolan licked his lips and shuddered.

"Who went into the cabin?"

"I did."

"And—and you saw nothing—nothing?"

"Nothing."

Dolan made two steps toward the hatchway and then he shrank back; then he made another step, and, turning toward Bowline, he said:

"You are sure?"

"Sure of what?"

"You saw nothing?—you heard nothing?"

"Not I. I suppose you are thinking of the ghost of the Frenchman's daughter you spoke of seeing when you were half out of your mind; but I didn't see her."

"Well, well, in a moment; I will come back in a moment, my men, only I have some papers down below which I should not quite like to go away without. That is all; that is all. I shall only be a moment, and —Bowline! Bowline!"

"Well, what now?"

"If I call out, will you come down?"

"Ay, ay!"

Thank you, thank you! Did you see if the cabin lamp was alight when you were there?"

"It was."

"Very well—very good!"

Dolan slowly went down the hatch.

Nothing but his cupidity could possibly have contended against his superstitious fears and induced him to go down into that cabin, in the little berth leading from which he had been so terrified by the sight of the French captain's daughter, whom he believed he had without the possibility of doubt, consigned to a watery grave.

But in a drawer of one of the lockers—a secret drawer that he had with great pains constructed himself—Captain Dolan had secreted a small canvas bag, in which were some ten or a dozen unset precious stones, which from time to time he had purchased at a cost of about a hundred pounds each, and there placed, as the most portable form in which he could have that amount in money and which he knew would be easily convertable into cash in any large city.

It was then, to get possession of this precious deposit, that Dolan made his way to the main cabin of the Rift.

It was a great confidence to him that the crew were upon the deck, and that he was so near living beings, even if his eyes should again be terrified by the sight of that spirit, as he had fully believed Marie to be, in the little berth.

And although Dolan would not have had one of the crew down in the cabin with him on any account, and although his heart was full of the blackest treachery toward them all, yet he was most attentive to listen to every word that they uttered.

It was the hold of human life that he wanted as he descended into the cabin, which he fully believed had been so strangely visited by a supernatural being.

The lamp was alight.

Swinging very gently to and fro with the light wash of the cutter in the deep seacave, it shed a faint gloom upon the various objects in the cabin.

It was a great relief to Dolan to find the little sliding door of the berth closed.

At the entrance to the cabin he paused for a moment or two and looked uneasily about him. He strained his sense of hearing to the utmost, too, until it became absolutely painful, but all was profoundly still there.

A confused murmur from the deck as the crew conversed together and the light wash of the tide against the sides of the cutter were the only noises that he could detect.

"It is gone!" he said "it is surely gone! Perhaps these things can only appear once. It is gone—it is surely gone—and that fear is over."

The locker was on the other side of the cabin table and close to the slidingdoor of the berth. It was a sore trial to go to it, but there was no help for it.

With stealthy steps and a blanched face and drawing his breath in little short gasps, Dolan, so full of fears that at some moments he was almost inclined to give up his bag of jewels and make a rush upon the deck to get out of the atmosphere of the cabin, slowly reached the locker.

It took him about a minute to get at the secret drawer and then he clutched the bag of jewels.

His courage was waning a little and he left the drawer open as he hastily moved away from the little sliding panel that led to the supposed haunted berth.

There was nothing to alarm Dolan. He might have gone boldly enough to the locker; boldly enough he might have flung aside the door of the little berth. The fair girl who had so terrified him was safe and away. Her young heart was riven at the thought that Gerald could not love her as she would fain he should have loved her; but she was safe and otherwise happily far away from Dolan and the Rift.

As if the fiend himself had been at his heels then, Dolan rushed to the deck of the Rift, and the look of relief upon his face when he reached it was great. He breathed deeply and freely, and one would have thought that no danger but the imaginary one he had escaped pressed upon him.

Then Bowline stepped forward and, amid the silence of the crew, he said:

"Captain Dolan, we don't want to spoil good fellowship or to cast any doubts upon you; but we have come to the conclusion that we should like to see into one of those same cheats of treasure which you have had in your keeping so long."

"Nothing more natural," said Dolan.

"You have no objection?"

"Quite the contrary."

"Then come on, captain, at once."

"Yes, and let there be such a search through the caverns that there shall be no doubt left that Gerald and Grace are gone. I have been thinking, mates, that after all the plan I have sketched out for you will do all the same; for they can't all of them tell more than one, and that one (Gerald) had already told it. The attack on the cavern will not take place till the morning."

Captain Dolan spoke truly when he said he had been thinking; but the result of his thoughts was very different to what he said it was to the crew.

What he really thought was, that, although Gerald, and Grace, and Martin and Joseph had made their escape from the caverns, the last thing they would think of doing would be to betray him and the Rift.

There were many reasons why Dolan thought he might safely come to that conclusion.

In the first place, he had a very high opinion of the honor of both Martin and Joseph; and he did not think that either of them would betray his comrades, however much they might differ from them in their notions and wishes. The fact was, that Joseph and Martin were simply smugglers, but Dolan was a pirate as well; and this made the distinction between them.

But yet Dolan considered that neither of those men would turn informer against the Rift.

Then as regarded Gerald and Grace, he was not in possession of the facts that they had to go upon, and which were so well calculated to induce a belief in their minds that they were not the children of Dolan.

Little did he imagine that Grace had found a father, and that there was a fixed idea in the mind of Gerald that he, too, was some unfortunate who had only got, by accident or crime, into the hands of Dolan.

Therefore was it that, by a series of self-delusions, Dolan still believed that the secret of the cavern in the cliff was quite inviolate, and would be kept so.

And, indeed, if the reader reflects upon this portion of the subject, he will find that, after all, it is owing to the information that Mrs. Wagner gave that the smuggler's haunt was really and truly discovered.

But Dolan did not suspect her in that respect. He thought that, after all, her interests were too much identified with his to permit her to betray him.

And likewise, with the vanity and selfishness of men of his class, he thought that she must think a great deal too much of him, personally, to play him false.

Dolan felt easy in his mind.

"I shall destroy them all!" he said to himself. "The Spray, or some other vessel bent on their destruction, will await them in the offing at ebb tide and they will sink or be captured—I care not which; and then there will be a hue and cry, and Gerald will be taken, and what with my letter and the testimony of Wright, he must be condemned. Wealth, immense wealth, and revenge!—I shall enjoy both. What can I look for more? Yes, I think I will get rid of Wagner. I don't seem to care about her now. I will make up my mind to get rid of her and I will find Grace again. When the Rift and its crew are all disposed of I shall have, besides, plenty of leisure and then I can find the girl. How beautiful she is! Old!—no, I am not so very old. She grows day by day more beautiful. I must and will find her. I will claim her as my daughter and this man with whom Wagner was talking will lose the clue by her death—for she shall die!"

CHAPTER XXXV.

A MIDNIGHT MURDER IN THE CAVERN.

While these reflections were rapidly passing through the guilty brain of Dolan, the smugglers were anxiously looking for a performance of his promise to show them that the large chests in the cavern actually contained treasure, in some shape or another.

They pressed around Dolan as though they half expected that, by some means or another, he would yet escape them; and the coolness and easiness with which he had acceded to the request had not fully reassured them on a point which had been for a long time a subject of uneasy speculation to many of them.

"Come," said Dolan "since you must see those treasure chests, so be it. You will find I have done well for you."

"Ay, ay! The treasures! Let's see them, captain," was the cry, as Dolan slipped into one of the boats alongside the Rift and was rowed to those steps that led through the chalk to the upper cavern.

The lamp still burned there, shedding its mysterious light about the large, irregular place, and then Dolan went to a recess which was closed by a massive door of which he had the key, and putting it into the lock, he held his hand upon it, as he turned to the crew, and spoke with ease and assurance:

"I had these chests made," he said, "in a particular fashion. I thought that when a time came for a division of our spoil, it would be better to have most of it in gold and silver, even although it might be weighty to carry."

"Nobody objects to the weight of gold and silver, I take it, mates," said Bowline.

"Not a bit!" was the general cry.

"So I thought," added Dolan, "and therefore I converted what goods we got together into money, rather than notes, which might be burnt or stolen, for exposed to many accidents, besides there was a sort of security in the very weight of these chests."

"Ay, ay!"

"Try one. This one, now."

A couple of the men with great difficulty raised the end of one of the chests.

"My eyes and limbs," said one, "and is that all money?"

"It is—and your money, too, my bold companions and shipmates. Your money!"

"We would just like to see it," said Bowline. "Shot weighs heavy and so does old ballast."

There was a shout among the crew at these suggestions, and more than one knife gleamed in the dim light.

"Let me understand you," said Dolan. "Does Bowline mean to say that the weight of these chests is owing to shot and old ballast being in them? Because, if he does, let him step forward and say so like a man."

"I didn't say so."

"Then what did you say?"

"Come, come, Captain Dolan. The day is going fast, and if we are going to get away from here at the ebb, we shall have enough to do. If you can show us the money, I will own that I am quite wrong. If you can't—"

The knives gleamed again.

"Why, you will kindly murder me," said Dolan. "Very good, I have had some trouble in being your treasurer and this is my reward. Very good. Well, shipmates, you will have a job to move these chests on board the Rift, but if you put slings on them you will manage it well enough."

"The money! The money!"

"How impatient you all are! There!"

Dolan knelt down by one of the chests and produced a key which he fitted into the lock; but it would not turn, or he pretended it would not.

The men got more and more impatient.

"Come, come," said Bowline, in a sarcastic tone, "we can do without a key. I'll warrant we will soon open the lid of a chest. We have opened a good many lids of other folks' chests without the key, and I don't think, mates, that we shall find it a very difficult thing to open our own."

"Ay, ay! That's it!"

"Ah! there it is," said Dolan.

The lock opened with a snap.

There was an eager projection of heads to look into the chest and Dolan opened the lid a little way, crying out as he did so:

"Now, mates, honor among smugglers!"

The rays from the lamp that hung in the centre of the cavern glittered upon a confused surface of silver coins of all denominations lying one upon the other.

"Oh! that is the silver one," said Dolan.

"My eye!" said one of the men.

"It's all right," said another.

"Is it all the way down?" said a third.

"That makes it so heavy," replied Dolan, "but we will turn it all out and see."

"No—no. Oh! no."

"Is Mr. Bowline satisfied?"

"It is there," muttered Bowline.

Bang went the lid of the chest down and Dolan locked it on the moment.

"We have little time to lose," he said, "but I will look for the keys of the others and you can have them all open before you take them on board the Rift."

"No—no. We are satisfied! That will do! We are content. Three cheers for Captain Dolan!"

"My good fellows," said Dolan, "there is a shore-going saying which says: 'Don't halloo till you get out of the wood,' and I think we may apply it here. No cheers till you get clear off with your booty. If I might advise you, I should say get these treasure chests at once on board the Rift, and then you can place your own guard over them, and I shall feel relieved of a great responsibility."

"Aye, aye! That will do."

The crew set to work, and these chests were then taken out of the recess in the cliffs, and with a great deal of labor were fairly brought alongside the Rift and slung on to her deck and placed midships as nearly as possible.

Bowline took good care to keep out of the way of Captain Dolan, but the latter would speak to him.

"My dear Bowline," he said, "you were only mistaken, that is all. I forgive you."

"Oh! bother," said Bowline. "I don't want your forgiveness, not to say anything more about it."

"Very well."

It was perfectly astonishing how amiable Dolan looked, and it was only when he was quite alone in one of the recesses of the cavern that his whole frame was shaken by a suppressed laugh, and he said to himself:

"Twenty pounds' worth of silver makes a great show on the top of a chestful of old chain cable. Ha, ha!"

Every preparation was now made by the smuggler crew to sail out with the Rift on the first turn of the ebb-tide. There was a thorough searching and ransacking of the caverns, so that nothing of readily convertible value should be left behind, and that search convinced even Dolan that Grace and Gerald had really, for the time, escaped him.

And then the day drooped, and from the ocean cave they could all hear the rising wind, as from the southwest a brisk breeze came on, each moment increasing in force, until the wild roar of the wind, and the hissing of the surging sea, almost drowned all other possible noises.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

There are now 16,000 colored teachers in the United States.

Things one would rather have unsaid: "Well, but if you can't bear her, what made you propose?" "Well, we had danced three dances, and I couldn't think of anything to say."

The path of truth is a plain and safe path; that of falsehood is a perplexing maze. After the first departure from sincerity, it is not in your power to stop. One artifice unavoidably leads on to another, till, as the intricacy of the labyrinth increases, you are left entangled in your own snare.

CRAZY WITH AIR.

Thin-Blooded People Who Cut Up Strange Capers at Cheyenne.

"It is strange how some people are affected by the light air and 6,000 feet altitude of Cheyenne," said Policeman Bean. "A short time ago a book agent reached here from Denver. He was rather a cadaverous-looking chap, who didn't seem to pack around more blood in his constitution than the law allows. As the train neared Cheyenne he began to glare around the car as if he was afraid somebody was going to slug him, and when the news agent passed through peddling some oranges he fairly yelled for them to take him away. He was afraid of being killed. When he reached here he got spells in the same way, and I had a good deal of bother in soothing him.

"When he wasn't flighty he told me that he had often been troubled that way when he reached any tolerably high altitude. The least excitement brought on a fresh spell. I learned afterward that he never had any such attacks at home. In my experience at the depot here I have known of many people who have been troubled in the same way. This seems to be especially true of ladies, who grow worse until they begin to descend the hill from Sherman to Laramie City, and on inquiring of the trainmen I learn that afterward they go through all right."

"You remember that little fellow from Nevada, who cut up such tantrums at the depot here a few months ago?" asked the Judge. The listener intimated that he hadn't forgottan the circumstances.

"Well, that fellow began to show the effect of the altitude as the train neared Cheyenne. By the time he had reached here he had barricaded himself in the retiring-room and was about to throw himself out of the window when the trainmen forced their way in and caught him. He was sure somebody was going to kill him. I got him away from the crowd and told him I'd protect him, and finally got him quieted down. The trainmen looked after him until they began to descend from Sherman, and soon after he seemed to be as sane as anybody.

"It was only a few days later that an old lady on the train was taken in the same way. She got it into her head that a colored woman who sat in the far end of the car had foul designs upon her. Until the train reached Cheyenne the unfortunate daughter of Africa did not dare move a muscle for fear of throwing the old lady into convulsions. Cases of this sort turn up often."

"What sort of people seem to be the most affected that way?" was asked. "They are generally thin-blooded, nervous people, who, if they are in fair health, have got vitality back of them," was the reply. "Very nervous old women are very often the victims. A slight jar or shock sets them going, and then the depot rustler has a picnic on his hands and no mistake. Their mania always assumes the same phuase—they always believe somebody is going to kill them.'

The Relief of Emin Pasha.

The arguments which Stanley brings in favor of the Congo route to the equatorial lakes of Africa are very strong. It is seventeen days shorter than the Masai, which is the shortest of the eastern routes, but as the expedition has to be carried by steamer from Zanzibar to the Congo, a twenty days' voyage, its length, measured by days, is about the same as its rival's. Of the one hundred and fifty-seven days which Stanley expects to spend in making the journey, only ninety-nine are to be spent in land travel, the remaining fifty-eight being by steamer. As the ammunition, necessary not only for the relief expedition but for the forces of Emin Pasha, and also the cloth, beads, etc., necessary to purchase food and other suppli have to be carried on men's backs, this difference between the routes is a most important one. The most important advantage of the Congo route is, however, that by it there will be less danger of a collision with the natives. It is somewhat remarkable that Mr. Stanley, who knows the character of the Zanzibaris so thoroughly, and who places so little reliance upon, them should have preferred them to such men as the Houssas, who have proved, during centuries of trial by the British authorities on the west coast, to be the most reliable, courageous and intelligent of all races of blacks in the world. Emin Bey, about whom Stanley heard so much that was romantic in Cairo, is a true African hero. In 1878 he was made governor of the equatorial provinces by General Gordon, and since that time he has been ruling, fighting and civilizing, in the midst of the greatest mass of barbarism remaining in the world. He has built roads, forts, and even towns; taught his people to make cloth, shoes and waggons, and to cultivate cotton, coffee, indigo and rice. He may not be a great military leader, but he for years kept the slave hunters in check, mainly with the native forces, and his retreat southward to the banks of the Albert Nyanza was only made when the odds against him were overwhelming and ammunition began to fail. For three years and more he has been shut off from all communication with the outside world, and it is six years since he received supplies, so that Stanley cannot reach him too soon.

Strive for a Good Name.

Although riches, learning, and high position are within the reach only of a few, a good character may be obtained by every person; and a good name is better than all these. It is important to every individual. It is necessary in all situations. It becomes the source of the purest gratifications. It is the most solid honour. If we are without it, we can gain no sincere respect among our fellow-creatures. Should respect be paid to a person of destitute character, it is only on account of extrinsic circumstances which compel the tongue to use language that the feelings of the heart condemn. Without a character which commands respect, our importance in society is unfelt and the bloom and vigour of life pass without a proportionate elevation in the community of which we form a part. According as we are deficient in character we sink in public estimation.

The average price for peaches received by the Delaware growers in 1886 was 52½ cents per basket.

Learn from the earliest days to inure your principles against the perils of ridicule; you can no more exercise your reason if you live in the constant dread of laughter, than you can enjoy your life if you are in the constant terror of death.

CANADIAN VICE-ROYALTY.

Views of a Parisian Judge in Regard to Governor Men.

The Paris correspondent of Truth, who read what Sir Charles Tupper said upon the "Truthster," has called to give the supplemental information about the past and present representatives of her Majesty at Ottawa. She was in that city when the announcement was made that the Lansdownes were to get the Chateau of Montreal fitted up and to spend there the coldest month of the year, which are the ones in which tobogganing, sleighing, carling, skating tournments and torchlight processions are in full fling. This news caused intense excitement, and the Anglo-Scotch thought it rather a shame that the Vice-regal Court should go in midwinter every year to show the light of their countenance to the French at Montreal. Lord Lansdowne, I was told, keeps up a fine show. His carriages and horses have given a great idea of his wealth to the colonists. What must it have been, they wonder, before his income from his Irish estates was reduced by a quarter—a reduction which was on his side voluntary, and therefore, to his honour. But there is at Government House as in the Dufferin's time. At their entertainments the Marquis and Marchioness do things magnificently, but close economy is the every-day rule. Lord Dufferin not only spent his £10,000 a year, but dipped his estates and sold the timber on them when he could gain political points by a judicious use of money. My visitor assured me that "Lorne and the Princess Louise did not salt away a dollar," when they were in Canada. The Princess was as beneficent as could be, and never was appealed to for money without (when she was satisfied that she had to deal with honest people) putting her hand in her pocket or signing a check. She was a great success until the sleigh accident befel her. Her nervous system then got upset, with the effect that, in speaking she was apt to make use of words just the contrary of those she wanted to say. She, therefore imposed on herself the rule of silence with those whom she did not well know. This passed for sullen reserve and favoritism, and caused a good deal of RESENTMENT AMONG THE LADIES.

NO BURNING OF CANDLES AT BOTH ENDS

"Lorne was just as good as he could be and first-rate in business," said my visitor "but he was unendurable."

"How so?" I asked.

"He was so stand-off in his demeanor. Dufferin knew the Christian and pet names of all the children in Ottawa, read of the births in the papers, and remembered to congratulate their fathers of the new-born babes. He shook hands publically with a grocer's wife who had triplets, and one day got out of his carriage to go and admire them when they were with their mother and the servants in the street. If a newsboy said a smart thing to him he'd stop to talk to him, and I often saw him shake hands with a conductor of the street cars who came from his part of Ireland, and he had always something bright and pleasant to say.

LORNE'S STAND-OFFISHNESS

after Dufferin's chaff and heartiness was like an icy blast in the month of May." The Princess Louise enjoyed best in Canada the society of the French. She was very fond of getting away from Ottawa and going to live en artiste at the citadel of Quebec—an old place that dated from the Marquis de Montcalm. It became the thing there to be artistic. Officers, the sons and daughters of judges and of ministers (preachers), successful trades-people, and so on, went in for sketching, impressionism, art furniture and art unions, to be bien en cour. The Princess used to go out on skating expeditions in a boat. She had some narrow escapes near rapids; that however, was not at Quebec, but high up the river. It used to be said of her that she was all radiance to the French-Canadians, and had more French than English books on her drawing room table. But Lady Sophia Macnamara understood the "independent" temper of the Anglo-Scotch Provinces, and helped to make things smooth and agreeable.

A Parson's Description of the Newest Style of Waltz.

The gents encircle their partner's waists with one arm. The ladies and gentlemen stand close, face to face. The gents are very erect and lean a little back. The ladies lean a little forward. (Music) Now, all wheel, whirl, circle, and curl. Feet and heels of gents go rip-rap tippity tiap. Ladies' feet go tippity-tip. Then all go rippity, clippity, slippity, tippity, bippity, skippity, hoppity, jumpity, bumpity, thump. Ladies fly off by centrifugal momentum. Gents pull ladies hard and close. They reel, swing, slide, sling, look tender, look silly, look dizzy. Feet fly, dresses fly, skirts fly, all fly. It looks tuggity, pullity, squeezity, rubbity, rip. The men look like a cross between steelyards and "limber jacks." The maidens tuck down their chins very low, or raise them exceedingly high. Some smile, some grin, some giggle, some pout, some sneer, and all perspire freely. The ladies' faces are brought against those of the men, or into their bosoms, breast against breast, nose against nose and toes against toes. Now they go in again, making a sound like Georgey, porgey, derey, perey, ridey, pidey, coachey, poachey. This dance is not much, but it's the extras I object to.

Conscience.

Conscience is not merely a director for moments of action or decision; it should be a constant guide, urging every man to think rightly as well as to act rightly, and to that end to enlighten his mind, increase his knowledge, strengthen his judgment, thus fitting him to pursue the duties and fill the relations of life with ever-increasing excellence. Some people are accustomed to speak of conscientiousness and intelligence as if they were something separate, but when the true kingdom of conscience becomes established it will be found to embrace the growth of intelligence as one of its most important elements.

There are said to be over fifty applicants for the office of president of the Nevada University, in case a $5,000 salary be voted by the Legislature.

The grand total of the white pine lumber product of the Northwest for 1886 was 7,425,368,000 feet. This is 370,000,000 feet in excess of the preceding year.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Publisher.

MARKDALE, MAR. 24. 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES

—There has been a devastating flood in Dakota the past week.

—The snow is fast disappearing in the North-West.

—Emperor William's 90th birthday was enthusiastically celebrated by the Germans on Monday.

—A. F. Compbell, editor of the Brampton Conservator, has been elected by acclamation as Mayor of that town in the place of L. Milne, deceased.

--Formerly when the "triple alliance' was spoken of, it meant Germany, Austria and Russia. But when the same term is used now it means Germany, Austria and Italy. The dropping out of Russia and the taking in of Italy instead is a fact of immense importance in European politics these days. It is the answer of the new three, as we may call them, to the threatened alliance of Russia and France.

—A fire broke out in Chautauqua on Sunday night destroying the principal part of that lovely summer resort, and burning fifty private summer residences. The total loss will exceed $100.000.

—President Cleveland is one of that small class of men who believe that principle and precepts are for use and not for ornament, and he insists upon practising them. He has said that "public office is a public trust" and insists upon fulfilling that trust as honorable and as conscientiously as if there were no popularity to be lost by so doing. In filling the public office he acts upon the unheard of principle that they should only be filled by men capable of filling them well and honestly. It is stated on good authority that he has had the utmost difficulty in filling the five official commissionerships, not that there were not thousands of officers seekers and not even that he could not find good men, but because he could not find good men who would accept office. For a month or more these well paid and apparently comfortable officers have been going begging in Washington. Good men are generally already found filling good places, and they are not willing to desert them in order to accept positions which they will be compelled to vacate when a new administration come in. The spoils system is responsible for this state of thing.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truely beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of Mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraging and worn out with diseases, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them free from disease, as when born. Dispopsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy five per cent, of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10. cents Try it.

CARD OF THANKS.

I wish hereby to return thanks to those who so bravely and successfuly assisted in subduing the fire in my house on Sunday morning last.

W. McLeod.

MARRIED.

McGILBERIE—CLARK,—By the Rev. A. Wilson, Mr. Duncan McGilberie, of Eldersley, to Miss Jennie Clark, of Orange Valley, on Tuesday the 8th March.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

Mr. Cargill, the M. P. elect for East Bruce, has resigned owing to being Post Master for Cargill P. O. which makes his election ill-legal. There will be another election, nomination on 26th. and and if any opposition, election on April 3rd.

The C. P. R. steamers at Owen Sound are being put in readiness for the seasons work and the freight sheds are to be enlraged.

A blacksmith of Kilsyth has skipped after forging notes, it is said, to the amount of some $7,000. It is said that he kept a forge in his shop.

Shelburne is agitating for a branch of the Mechanics' Institute.

Dundalk became an Incorporated Village the 1st January, and the Herald says, since that date over, 50 persons have come to the village to reside,

A young man in Durham was fined $15 and costs for disturbing a Salvation Army meeting recently.

Under the pastorate of Rev. Father Cassin, formerly of Glenelg & Priceville R. C. Churches, St. Mary's Church in Mt. Forest is to be enlarged this summer.

Wm. Ludlow of Arthur township recently sold a pair of colts, a yearling and a two-year-old, for $280.

Irwin Bros, furniture dealers of Shelburne, have made an assignment.

Alexander Mitchell of Collingwood township has been appointed bailiff for Thornbury Division Court in the place of W. G. Pickell, resigned.

Mr: George Dinwoody of Artemesia, near Flesherton, died on the 11th inst. after a short illness, aged 43 years. He was a highly respected and good christian man.

The first robin of the season has made his appearance.

Fred. LeGard, son of Mr. Joseph LeGard, of this township, drove from home to Heathcote—A distance of twenty miles—with a Newfoundland dog and handsleigh. This was on Wednesday of last week, and the journey was accomplished in three hours and fifteen minutes!—[Advance,

A YOUNG MAN near Wiarton treed a bear one night recently while on his way home after seeing his girl. He procured assistance to capture bruin but found to his dismay, it was a porcupine.

Miller's steam sawmill at Allenford was burned recently.

A LIBLE SUIT.—John Maclay, late Registrar of Bruce, has issued a writ for libel against the County of Bruce. He claims $40,000 damages, Mr. Maclay, it will be remembered, was removed from his position as Registrar for alleged over charging but in view of the unanimous judgement of the Court of Appeal, which declared the fees charged by Mr Maclay to be the regulation legal fees, and the Ontario Government having failed to act on this decision Mr. Maclay had only this resource. The venue is laid in Hamilton.

Mr. Andrew Findaly, who died on Thursday at his residence, 171 Richmond street west was 70 years of age, and one of the largest and most finely proportioned men in Canada. He stood six fee seven and a half inches, and measnred 56 inches around the chest. He was formerly a mail clerk on the Grand Trunk, but retired about ten years ago. The coffin measured seven feet six inches and the outside box eight feet.

The A. O. U. W. has a flourishing lodge at Creemore.

Durham expects to have a foundry in three years or perhaps less.

Walter's Falls wants a through mail per C. P. R. via Chatsworth.

Mr. Frank McCartney, of Holland met with a most severe accident last Thursday. While chopping at Mr. Thos. Green's near Arnott, the tree lodged against another and flew off the stump, catching Mr. McCartney's leg and runoing it to the earth. The leg had to be dug out from under the tree, when he was taken to Mr. Green's house and Dr. McCullough sent for, who dressed the limb, which was badly broken below the knee.—[Chatsworth News.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con. 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson. Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompeon, Orilla.

342-tf

THE

LATEST!

New Carpets

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Lace Curtains

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Tweeds

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Boots & Shoes

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Ties & Hats

—TA—

McFarland's.

NEW JUBILEE HANDKERCHIEFS

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Black & Colored Silks at

McFarland's.

My European buyer advises large purchases in New Dress Goods, Muslins, Gloves, Laces, Silks, Parisols, Plushes, &c., &c. Which will exceed all former efforts in style price or quality

TEA! TEA! TEA!

Two extensive Shipments of pure Japan Tea's received direct from Japan over the C. P. Railway, via British Columbia. Is it not to your interest to purchase your Tea from Headquarters rather than through Peddlers who get their supplies from 3rd class Houses in Toronto or elsewhere, and charge an exhorbitant price to cover expenses in travelling around from house to house. Save your money and come direct to McFarland's the largest Tea Dealer in Grey County.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE

SASH and DOOR FACTORY

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Planing tory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, every being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Batts

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEIL

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,

MARKDALE

GROCERY, POVISION

—AND—

LIQUOR STORE.

A fresh stock of groceries just opened at

DAVIS'S

Store, bought for cash thus saving discounts, and will be sold for spot cash at rock bottom prices.

A fine Line of choicest uncolored Japan Tea just arrived intending purchasers will do well to inspect this Tea before buying elsewhere as it positively is the best value ever offered in the town. 15 lbs. extra granulated sugar $1, other grades accordingly. Agent for the Liquor Tea Co. A valuable prize given with every six ½ lb. packages bought.

PROVISIONS!

Flour Bran, Shorts, Chop, Screenings, Oatmeal, Cornmeal, &c., &c.

LIQUORS!

Rye and Malt, Port and Native Wine, Brandy, Jamaica, Rum, Scotch Whiskey, the best in the market, also a choice lot Bottled Liquors in finest Brandies, Scotch and Irish Whiskeys, Superior Malt and 5 year old Rye. Parties requiring liquors for medicinal purposes will do well to give us a call as they may rely upon getting a good article.

Special Attention? I will pay the highest cash price for Timothy Seed.

A. Call Respectfully Solicited,

W. L. Davis,

MARKDALE.

The Law Concerning Newspapers.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed his name, or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

2. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted in the place where the paper is published, although the subscriber may reside hundreds of miles away.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post-office or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Partnership Notice.

DR'S SPROULE & BRODIE, have entered into a partnership for the practice of their profession. Dr. Sproule will be found at his old office Turner's Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his office Mathew's new block. 338

FOR SALE.

For sale or to rent for a term of years 50 acres—all cleared well watered, good buildings, 40 acres free from stumps and stone over which all kinds of machinery can be run 1½ miles from Markdale.

338-41 WM. BROWN.

New Tailor

Will Stoddart:—Late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,

Faithfully your's,

WILL STODDART

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

Beecher Epigrams.

GEMS OF THOUGHT TOUCHING ALMOST EVERY EMOTION AND PRINCIPLE OF LIFE.

Mr. Beecher never delivered a discourse in which there were not many gems. A hasty glance through a few of his published utterances discloses these epigrammatic thoughts upon every page. A few of them are culled and presented below, but they of necessity lack completeness and serve better to show Mr. Beecher's originality of expression than the breadth of his mind. The misconceptions of religion and the quarreling of the sects were frequent topics with him.

Religion is a very small, lean, gaunt, poor, ill-fed thing as it is ordinarily conceived of in this world.

Men sit around a tool-chest quarreling about saws and planes and chisels. They are not building anything, they are debating about tools. They are fit to be a theological seminary.

That kind of revival preaching which seeks to drive men into heaven by the fear of hell is not Christianity. It is the worst form of Paganism.

Sects are candlesticks, and a man or woman that is big enough to be good for anything is too large for any sect.

Why is it that men think it incumbent upon them to be cats and dogs in religion and gentlemen in everything else outside of it?

Sunday with him was not a day of gloom, and he took frequent occasion to show the needlessness of being sombre on that day.

I esteem the awfulness that is attached to Sunday, and church, and pulpit, the greatest mistake of Christendom.

The prevalent idea of keeping the Sabbath is that it is a day in which certain things must not be done. To the majority of people, Sunday is a day full of nots.

I am in favor of any movement that helps anybody to appreciate Sunday as a day of rest, of health and pure pleasures, and that will gently lead men, women and children from the things of low estate up to the higher.

DEATH AND THE LIFE TO COME.

Some of his utterances on the question of death and the future life are peculiarly appropriate at this time.

To one who is living aright no death can be sudden and no place unfavorable. One step and all roads meet.

Dying is the best part of life to one who knows how to live worthily.

If the life that has gone out has been like music, full of concords, full of sweetness, richness, delicacy, truth, then there are two ways to look at it. One is to say: "I have not lost it!" Another to say: "Blessed be God that I have had it so long!"

When we comprehend the fulness of what death will do for us, in all our outlook or forelook, dying is triumphing. Nowhere is there so fair a sight, so sweet a prospect, as when a young soul is passing away out of life and time through the gate of death—the rosy, the royal, the golden, and pearly gate of death.

Death is as sweet as flowers are. It is as blessed as bird-singing in spring. I never hear of the death of any one who is ready to die that my heart does not sing like a harp. I am sorry for those who are left behind, but not for those who have gone before.

As I grow older and come nearer to death, I look upon it more and more with complacent joy, and out of every longing I hear God say: "O, trusting, hungering one, come to Me." What the other life will bring I know not, only that I shall awake in his likeness and see Him as He is.

Beat on, then, O heart, and yearn for dying. I have drank at many a fountain, but thirst came again: I have fed at many a bountenous table, but hunger returned; I have seen many bright and lovely things, but while I gazed their lustre faded. There is nothing here that can give me rest, but when I behold Thee, O God, I shall be satisfied.

THE BEAUTY OF CHEERFULNESS.

His ever exuberant and joyous nature was a constant protest against the ascetic in religion or in daily life:

Don't mope. Be young as long as you live. Laugh a good deal. Frolic every day. A low tone of mind is unhealthy.

A lawyer who works ten months in the year and then for two solid months amuses himself, will last twice as long as if he took no recreation.

Men have come to think that tears are more sacred than smiles. No! Laughing is as divine as crying.

Humor usually tends toward good nature, and everything that tends toward good nature tends toward good grace.

If laughing's a sin I don't see what the Lord lets so many funny things happen for.

Having wit and buoyancy of spirits let them flash out in services of religion Don't consider it necessary to rake them up and hide them.

Humor is the atmosphere in which grace flourishes.

I say when a person becomes a Christian that he loses nothing that he should not be afraid to keep. If ever you are going to be a Christian don't set out to be a gloomy-eyed, twilight-faced, bat-like Christian.

A Work for Spring.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR,—In some recent letters, advocating the necessity of planting trees for shelter, the value of bows of evergreens, as giving shelter to the most exposed sides of farms, has been especially touched on. I would like, with your leave, to mention a method which I have seen adopted for this purpose with great success, at a time of year now rapidly approaching.

In the experiment I am aware of, a time has been chosen when after the frost was out of the ground, it had during a cold night, frozen again to the depth of an inch or so. There having been plenty of young pine trees standing near in the edge of the bush and in pasture fields, a number of men were obtained, so as to finish the job before the ground could again thaw, trees chosen about six feet high, and the earth cut round them with a sharp spade so as to leave a circle about eighteen inches across. These then, when lifted, the slight frost above holding all together, came up with a circular mass of roots and earth two to four inches deep. They were carried at once and set in their places, and the gaps filled with fresh earth. The loss in some hundreds of trees was not one in a hundred. If the chance spoken of be not obtained, it is better for regular planting, to wait to the middle or last of May or the first or second week in June.

There are, all over the country, in openings in woods, and in fields, many thousands of fine young evergreens of proper size to move, which it would be extremely valuable to obtain, and plant out along the north or most exposed sides of farms. They are much better for the purpose than deciduous trees, as they give shelter the whole year round, and will be found especially valuable in winter, changing for the better, it has well been remarked, the whole climate of the farm. A couple of days given to such work at the right time would be found the best investment possible.

Yours truly,
R. W. PHIPPS.

Toronto, March 17th, 1887.

The Board of Trade of the City of Toronto.

GRAIN, MALT AND HOP SECTION.

Toronto, March 14th, 1887

At a meeting of the Grain Section of the Board of Trade of the City of Toronto the following resolutions were adopted, and it was ordered that copies of the same be sent to the Grain and Produce dealers throughout the country hoping that they would consider the subject of sufficient importance to bring it before the farmers in their vicinity without delay.

BARLEY.

WHEREAS.—Owing to the superior quality of the Barley grown in Canada, our farmers have been enabled to compte successful with American growers in the markets of the United States, even with a duty of 10 cents per bushel against the Canadian grain;

AND WHEREAS.—An attempt during the last two years has been made to introduce new seed, and of a variety that does not find favor with American Maltsters and Brewers;

AND WHEREAS.—It is essenially necessary in order to maintain our present reputation of growing, in Canada, the best Barley on this continent that only the most desirable matured seed, properly cleaned, should be sown.

Resolved.—That this Grain Section of the Board of trade of the City of Toronto urge upon the dealers throughout the country, and farmers generally to discontinue the growth of Mensury, Russian or Imperial varieties of Barley.

RED WINTER WHEAT.

Resolved.—That the attention of dealers and farmers be called to the necessity of more care being exercised in the selection of the Red Winter Wheat seed used that it be well matured, and not mix the White Winter Wheat, as the mixture, although producing a sound healthy grain, makes it unfit for grading as Red Winter Wheat, and consequently deteriorates its value.

NEW

Hardware.

To builders and those about to build your wants supplied at reasonable rates.

IN STOCK

☞ NAILS, GLASS, PUTTY, HINGES, BUTTS, SCREWS, DOOR HANDLES, TOWER BOLTS, CHAIN BOLTS, HAMMERS, CHISSELS, SAWS, BRACES, BITTS, CUTTERY, LAMPS, LAMP GLOBES, &c.

OILS, LEADS AND COLORS!

—all pure goods—

PAINTS ground and mixed any shade ready for the brush in quantities from one pint up, guaranteed free from all alkalies and other foreign substances.

Full Lines in Tinware at bottom prices.

CALL AND SEE US IT WILL PAY YOU.

Note the place the sign of the cross outt saw.

E. MABEE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confdence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

To Sell or Rent.

LOT 15 con. 12 Holland, 124 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings, well watered by good well, 15 rods from school, one mile from Methodist Church, 7 miles from Markdale, good roads, 30 acres fall plowing done. A bargain in it. Apply to.

JAMES LOGAN.
Harkaway, P. O.

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for further particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
Holland Centre P. O.

338-48

Stock Taking

SALE

At the Toronto House,

Markdale.

SLAUGHTER PRICES FOR CASH.

Wm. Brown.

Seeds!

Seeds!

SEEDS!

FIELD & GARDEN

SEEDS!

—AT—

Stephen's

DRUG STORE.

Your's Respectfully,

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have re-moved to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

HAMPDEN

WATCHES

DURABLE-:-RELIABLE.

—ALSO—

Waltham, Elgin and Colombiers,

—IN STOCK—

American Clocks, Silverware, Wedding Rings.

☞ Watch repairing and fitting Spectacles a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,

A RELIABLE JEWELLER,
MARKDALE

XMAS GOODS.

NEW GOODS ARRIVING EVERY —WEEK AT—

RUSSELL'S

Noted Jewellry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Consisting of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES, CLOCKS, JEWELRY, SPECTACLES, SILVER-WARE, FORKS, SPOONS, KNIVES, Fancy MIRRORS, ALBUMS, VIOLINS &c.

Any one looking for Xmas presents will do well to call at RUSSELL'S, Flesherton, a fine stock to select from, and prices very low, If your watch or clock wants repairing, RUSSELL'S is the place to take it: A satisfactory job every time, ☞ Remember,

JAS. G. RUSSELL'S

Noted Jewelry Store,
FLESHERTON.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRAITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE,

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 15, CON., 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation, well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY
31-t Berkley.

TO RENT.

THE old and well-known Pickell farm adjoining Flesherton, consisting of 100 acres, eighty-five cleared, twenty fall ploughed. Splendid bank barn with spacious horse stable, stone cow stable, and never-failing well, all underneath barn. Fine young orchard of 100 trees bearing well a good variety of fruit. Comfortable log house.

For terms apply to Wm. Brown, Esq., Markdale, or on the premises to

W. G. PICKELL.

WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

Scottish Humor and Character.

MINISTER AND BEADLE.

The office of an English beadle is commonly allied to the duties attaching to a messenger or crier at court. A Scotch beadle, however, is invariably associated with the minister and the kirk. He is a home-grown product, a Scotch beadle, and is, as a rule, eminently characteristic and racy of the soil. In rural parishes, more especially, the kirk beadle is an indispensable adjunct or tail-piece of the minister, and is usually alluded to as "the minister's man." Next to the minister himself, the rural parish beadle is often, by force of individual character and position, the most conspicuous personage in the kirk, the precentor ranking third only by a good long way. As the handy confidant of the reverend gentleman in small and purely mundane matters, the minister and his man have conjointly furnished the ready humorist with endless situations of characteristic and amusing portraiture. In these humorous collisions, the beadle has generally the best of it. As a rule, our shrewd, long-headed, canny-going Scotch beadle, in commou with the ruling elder—both of whom are privileged to see behind the scenes—has too often discovered in his grave spiritual superior many of those little weaknesses native to us all. As a result of this, the amalgam of humoristic story and anecdote, which sticks to the Scotch minister and his man like feathers to glue, is a healthy, relishable product of the soil, flavoured oftentimes with the driest of Scotch humour, and entirely denuded of objectional hypocrisy and mean cringing to the "cloth."

The following story may be instanced in this connection, in which the beadle, by an ingenious exercise of sly humour, or pawkiness, as it is termed north of the Border, fairly out-generals his parsimonious spiritual superior.

A parish minister in Stirlingshire, noted for his parsimonious habits, had his glebe land wholly cropped with corn upon one occasion. After the ingathering of harvest, news reached him that a considerable fall in prices was expected; and he ordered his serviceable "man" John to get the corn thrashed and taken to market with all possible speed. Now, the beadle, having a well-founded hatred for his master's greed, set about his work in his ordinary style—a slow if sure process. John's style, however, did not on this occasion please the minister, who ordered him to get through with the task, even although he should get it done by candlelight.

"Weel, weel," said the beadle; "say nae mair aboot it; it'll be done, sir, e'en as ye desire."

Next day, the minister, hearing the sound of the flail, entered the barn to see what progress was being made with the work, when, to his astonishment and anger, he found his beadle "flailing" away with might and main, and a candle burning brightly on each side of the thrashing-floor.

"What's this I see? What's the meaning of this?" demanded his master. "Candles burning in broad daylicht!"

"Oh, contain yersel, sir—contain yersel," replied John with provoking coolness. "I'm daen' nae mair than ye bade me, for I m daen' the job baith by daylicht and by can'le-licht."

The beadle, after being severely lectured on his extravagant conduct, was ordered to take the candles to the kitchen, and henceforth and at all times he was to be deprived of their use.

One night shortly after, a message came to the minister that one of his parishioners, who lived at a distance, was supposed to be dying, and was anxious to see him. John was despatched to saddle the horse; and his master set about equipping himself for the journey. He then stepped across to where John was waiting with the animal, and seizing the reins, was about to mount, when suddenly, seeing a pair of horns on the crest of his steed, he shouted: "What in all the earth is this you have done, John?"

The beadle, comically peering in the darkness at the creature, exclaimed: "I declare, sir, if I hav'na saddled the coo instead o' the horse, for the want o' can'le-licht!"

In olden times, the serviceable beadle was armed with a small wooden "nob" or mallet, with which he was quietly commissioned to "tap" gently but firmly, the heads of careless sleepers in church during the sermon. An instance to hand is very amusing and is not out of fair probability.

In the old town of Kilbarchan, which is celebrated in Scottish poetry as the birthplace of Habbie Simpson the piper and vei semaker of the clachan, once lived and preached a reverend original, whose pulpit ministrations were of the old-fashioned, hodden-gray type, being humdrum, and innocent of all spirit-rousing eloquence and force. Like many of his clerical brethren, he was greatly annoyed every Sunday at the sight of several of his parishioners sleeping through the sermon. He was especially angry with Johnny Plane, the village joiner, who dropped off to sleep every Sunday afternoon simultaneously with the formal delivery of the text. Johnny had been "touched" by the old beadle's mallet on several occasions, but only in a gentle though persuasive manner. At last, one day the minister, provoked beyond endurance at the sight of the joiner soundly asleep, lost his temper.

"Johnny Plane!" cried the reverend gentleman, stopping his discourse and eyeing the culprit severely, "are ye really sleeping already, and me no half through with the first head?".

The joiner, easy man, was quite oblivious to things mundane, and noticed not the rebuke.

"Andra," resumed the minister, addressing the beadle, and relapsing into informal Doric, "gang round to the wast loft (west gallery) and rap up Johnny Plane. Gie the lazy loon a guid stiff rap on the heid—he deserves 't."

Round and up to the "wast loft" the old-fashioned beadle goes, and reaching the somnolent parishioner, he rather smartly "raps" him on his bald head. Instantly, there was on the part of Johnny a sudden start-up, and between him and the worthy beadle a hot, under-breath bandying of words. Silence restored, the reverend gentleman proceeded with his sermon as if nothing unusual had occurred.

After sermon, Andra met the minister in the vestry, who at once made inquiry as to the "words" he had had with Johnny in the gallery. But the beadle was reticent and uncommunicative on the matter, and would not be questioned as to the reception the joiner had given his salutary summons.

"Well, Andra," at length said the reverend gentleman, "I'll tell ye what; we must not be beaten in this matter; if the loon sleeps next Sunday during sermon, jist you gang up and rap him back to reason. It's a knock wi' some force in't the chiel wants, mind that, and spare not."

"Deed no, sir," was the beadle's canny reply. "I'll no disturb him, sleepin' or waukin', for some weeks to come. He threatens to knock pew-bibles and hymn-books oot 'o me, if I again daur to 'rap' him atween this and Martinmas. If Johnny's to be kept frae sleepin', minister, ye maun just pit the force into yer sermon."

Robbie Fairgrieve was sexton as well as kirk-beadle in the parish of Ancrum, Roxburgshire, and despite the solemn duties attaching to his vocation, was on the whole a genial man, about equally fond of a joke and a good dram. In fact, Robbie was afflicted with a chronic "spark in his throat," which was ill to quench, and was indeed never fairly extinguished during the fifty years he officiated as kirk beadle and sexton.

One day, the minister of the parish met Robbie coming home from a visit to Jedburgh fair much sooner than was expected, he, (Robbie) having found the fair painfully dry, in the sense of an unprecedented absence of friendly drams. Curious to know the cause of the beadle's quick return, the minister inquired as to the reason of such correct conduct, since most of his fellow-parishioners would likely stay out the fair.

"O sir," said Robbie, 'huz yins [us ones] wha are 'sponsible kirk-officers" (alluding to the minister himself)' "should aye strive to be guid ensamples to the riff-raff o' the flock."

The following bit of true Scotch humour may be classed in the same category as the preceding sketch, the witty impeachment once more coming from the lips of the minister's own beadle. The story is put down to the credit of the very learned Dr. Macknight, one of the lights of the Scottish Church in his day. The doctor's beadle, or a "a man in attendance," seems to have possessed a keen sense of dry, pawky humour, and had judged the doctor's habit of writing and publishing learned Scriptural books as just so much waste of time.

"Is the worthy doctor at home?" asked a reverend caller at the manse one forenoon.

"Na, indeed, he is not," promptly replied the beadle. "He's awa like a chased hare to Edinburgh on a fell fuilish job." (The learned doctor had just gone off to the printers with his laborious and erudite work, The Harmony of the Four Gospels.

The caller was inquisitive; and on being further questioned as to what this "fell fuilish' job might be which so engaged his minister's attention, the witty beadle made answer: "He's gane awa' to mak' four men agree wha never cast oot' (disagreed).

VARIETIES.

In the peninsula of Corea it requires two ponies to carry coin to the value of thirty pounds.

It has been calculated that in the purchase of fish of the herring kind the public do not expend less than five millions sterling per annum.

Every street in the city of Mexico is as straight as streets can be made, yet it is a law that on every corner there shall be a directory containing the names and numbers of business-houses on that square.

John Byrom (1692-1763), shorthand-teacher, not only received from his pupils a fee of five guineas, but exacted from them "an oath of secrecy." An Act of Parliament gave him the sole right of publishing and teaching his system for twenty-one years.

The only country that comes anywhere near the United Kingdom as regards the average cost of producing coal is the United States, where the difference shown is only about sixpence per ton. Every other country is still more or less dependent upon England for their coal supplies; and this has been increasingly the case even within recent years.

Quarrels among people of the lower orders in China are less common than among the same classes in Europe, and, when they do occur, they do not result in the use of offensive language—at least, not very offensive. Chinese can be as angry as Englishmen or Frenchmen, but they give vent to their anger with less affront to propriety. It is not very dreadful, for instance, for Ah-Sing to say to Min-ying, "I'll make yon eat capsicum!"

The beds of the ancients had, in general, few peculiarities to distinguish them from our own simpler forms. Both the Greeks and the Romans had their beds supported on frames that resembled the modern bedsteads of to-day; feather and wool mattresses were common, and the bed-clothing, in the luxurious periods of each nation, was richly decorated with elaborate needlework. The Britons, when conquered by Cæsar, slept on skins, after the manner of the North American Indians; but at a later period they made use of straw sacks as beds. The ancient Egyptians had a couch of peculiar shape and a profusion of soft cushions and richly-embroidered drapery. Most of the beds mentioned in the Bible were probably of the ordinary simple kind.

Chestnuts Set to Rhyme.

"Oh, what makes the chimney sweep?
And why did the codfish ball?
And why, oh! why did the peanut stand?
And what makes the evening call?

Oh! why should the baby farm?
And why does the mutton chop?
Can you tell me what makes the elder blow!
Or what makes the ginger pop?

Say, why does the terrible bed spring?
And why does the saddle horse fly?
Or what makes the pillow slip?
And why do the soap-boilers lye?

What made the monkey wrench?
Or why should the old mill dam?
And who did the shoemaker strike?
Or why did the raspberry jam?

Oh, why should a tree bark?
And what makes the wind howl?
Can you tell me what makes the snow ball?
Or what makes a chimney foul?

The Young Man Who Was Right.

"Young man," he said in solemn tones, "don't you know that if you persist in drinking you will never get ahead in this world?"

"Won't get ahead?" repeated the young man.

"Why, my dear sir, your ignorance surprises me. I'll have a head on me to-morrow morning as big as a barrel."

HEALTH.

Anointing the Body.

The practice of anointing the body with oil is very ancient. It prevailed not only among the Romans, Greeks and Jews, but throughout Egypt and the East. In Egypt, and to some extent among the Jews, it is an act of hospitality to anoint the head of each guest.

Among the Jews, the copious pouring of oil on the heads of high priests, kings and prophets was one of the chief ceremonies of induction into office. Among the Greeks and Romans inunction followed bathing, and in the case of the weakly, preceded it. This prevented the roughness of skin that would naturally result from frequent resort to the bath—and the luxurious among the later Romans resorted to it and bathed several times a day. Much of the oil was highly perfumed. In one small Roman city an entire street was lined with unguent shops.

Inunction was also generally employed for medicinal purposes. The passage in James 5: 14, doubtless simply means, let prayer to God accompany the use of the ordinary healing remedies. At the present day there is a tendency to return to inunction as a remedial agent. In case the skin is dry and scurfy, the process will fully restore its natural softness. Frequent bathing renders the epidermis thin, and thus unduly exposes the terminal nerves; inunction would relieve this.

At a well-known Sanitarium, inunction with olive-oil was tried twenty years ago in case of wasting disease. The results were so favorable that it has become a favorite prescription in various forms of disease, though, in most cases, cocoanut-oil is now preferred to olive-oil.

In an article on this subject in the December "Laws of Life," the writer shows that inunction has been found to be more satisfactory in its effects when administered by a strong attendant who is skilled to rub, rapidly and thoroughly, the surface of the body. The oil is more quickly absorbed, and there seems to be some value in the mere rubbing.

The practice seems to be especially suited to cases in which the stomach and intestinal tract are unable to digest fatty food.

It has been practised with good results in cases of consumption (tuberculosis), attended with great loss of flesh; innutrition, due to inflammation of the digestive tract. From two to six times a week the application can be made, according to the patient's power of absorption.

Getting Ready for Germs.

Prepare for the annual spring cleaning up of house and premises. Now is the time to clean out of the cellar the odds and ends of perishable things which have been accumulating during the winter.

Apples, potatoes, cabbages, all sorts of fruits and vegetables, which have been stored for winter use in the "dark hole under the house," which constitutes the average cellar, should be gotten out before they begin to decay, if they have not already begun to fill the air with the germs and gases of decomposition. Clear away from the backyard the accumulations of chips and garbage and rubbish of all sorts which careless "hired help" have allowed to gather during the winter months when the frequently falling snows have hidden these sanitary sins under a mantle of white. The first thaw exposes these unsightly heaps in all their hideousness, and. if they are not removed, the warm April sun will speedily set them into an unhealthy ferment, sending out myriads of active and disease-producing germs, a potent cause of spring fevers, diphtherias, "contagious colds," and "malaria." The best remedy for germs is starvation. Furnish them no food, and like trampe and other vermin, they will patronize some other back door where they find a more hospicable reception.

A Word for the Babies.

Unfortunately for the coming babies, our own personal reminiscences do not extend to the first twelve months when we were the victims of the mistaken fondness of an untaught mother, or the persecutions of a stiff-necked generation of nurses. We can not remember how we used to feel when we were obliged to lie across the maternal lap with head lower than heels till our thin skull nearly burst from the pressure of blood and we have quite forgotten about the deadly sickness at the stomach from being tossed and whirled and rocked and jolted on somebody's bony knee It is a very dim recollection, indeed, we have about the pin torture which we endured, and for which the only compensation was an extra bottle of milk or a sugar plum when we cried, which only gave us a "wind oelic" in addition to our other afflictions. If a baby could only "rise and explain," wouldn't there be a list of grievances and misdemeanors for mothers and nurses to answer for? Before you begin to toss a baby up in the air and catch it as it comes down, to jog it on your knee till its toothless gums chatter, to chuck it under the chin, to pass it round to be kissed, or to subject it to any other of the hundred ingenious indignities to which babies are treated, just pause a moment to think how you would like to be treated in the same way yourself in some such "Jack-the-Giant-Killer monster as you used to dream about.

Give the babies a fair chance and see how good natured they will be. Treat them with decent respect, and you will save yourself a good many wakeful hours, and a good many self-reproaches when you become awakened to an appreciation of babies rights and wrongs.

Notes.

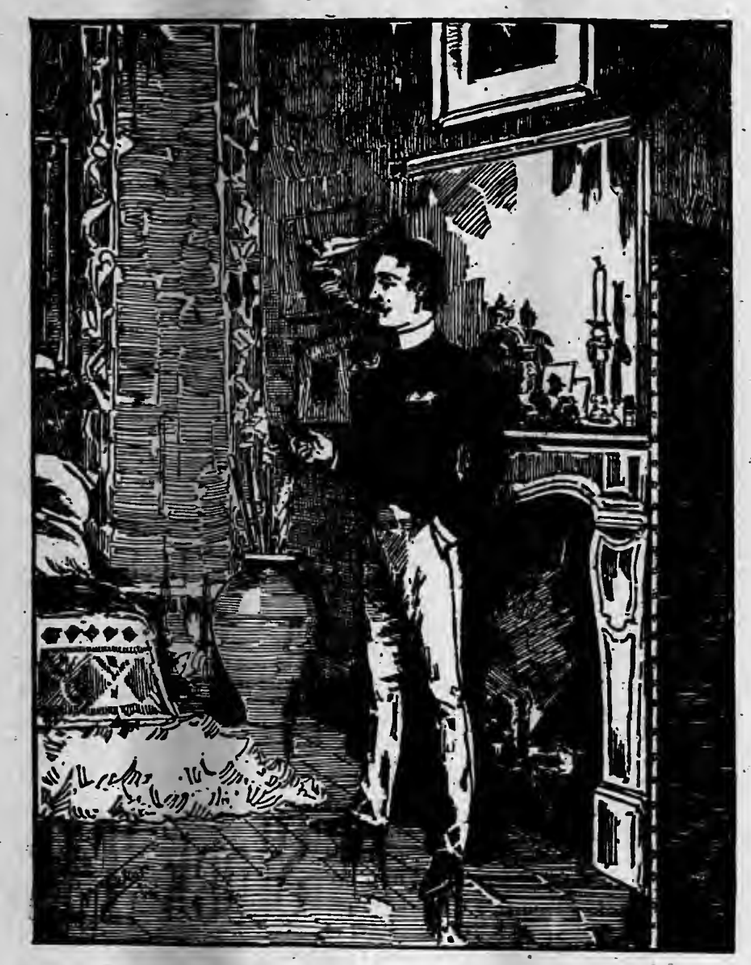
Sir James Clarke's Diarrhœa and Cholera Mixture.—Tinct. of opium; tinct. of camphor; and spirits of turpentine; of each three drachms; oil of peppermint, thirty drops. Dose one teaspoonful.

Convulsions may frequently be cut short like magic by turning the patient on his left side. The nausea as an after effect of chloroform or ether narcosis may be generally controlled in the same manner.

Excellent Tooth Powder.—Suds of castile soap and spirits of camphor, of each an equal quantity; thicken with equal quantities of pulverized chalk and charcoal to a thick paste; apply with the finger or brush.

Salicylic suet is used in the German army as a remedy for foot-sores, etc., instead of the salicylic powder formerly employed. It is composed of two parts of pure salicylic acid and ninety-eight parts of the best mutton suet.

Mustard, according to Dr. Richardson, is best applied by soaking a sponge with it. Tie the sponge up in a handkerchief and apply the convex side. This mustard sponge can be remoistened several times for re-application.



It has been shown by actual experiment that the water which streams down the window of a close sleeping-room is so impregnated with the noxious exhalations of the sleeper that one drop is sufficient to poison a rabbit.

It is said that a solution of pilocarpine, two grains to the ounce of water, injected into the tooth cavity will cure neuralgia caused by bad teeth. From an eighth to a quarter of a grain seems sufficient to check the pain in the course of an hour.

BILLIOUSNESS.—The editor of the Boston Medical and Surgical Jonrnal says, a plain diet of bread, milk, oatmeal, vegetables and fruit, with lean meat or fresh fish is best. Exercise in the open air. The worst of an acute attack will be righted by 1. abstinence; 2. porridge and milk; 3. toast, little meat and fish, and ripe fruit, then coming to solid food gradually.

NEURALGIA.—A correspondent of the Lancet says: A few years ago, when in China, I became acquainted with the fact that the natives when suffering with facial neuralgia using oil of peppermint, which they lightly applied to the seat of pain with a camel-hair pencil. Since then, in my own practice, I frequently employ this oil as a local anæsthetic, not only in neuralgia, but also in gout, with remarkably good results.

The fear of cold weather is one of the greatest of modern foes to health. What does nature bring us the winter for? Certainly for some good purpose. Our warm, moist summers produce a vast development of animal and vegetable growth, which in the fall, matures and ripens, then decays and forms a fertile soil for germs, those mighty though microscopic enemies of health. Just when the baccillus and the micrococcus, the bacterium and the other great and terrible midgets are getting rampant and dangerous, along comes Jack Frost and puts a stop to their festivities. They are all frozen up solid, every one, and the autumn air, which a little while before, like the silver mine in Nevada, had "million in it," becomes the pure and unadulterated elixir of life, and so remains until the vernal sun loosens the icy fetters and sets them free again, when fortunately, most of them forget to awaken from their frozen slumber and nature begins anew the endless alternation of life and death. What a blessed thing is winter!

A GILDED YOUTH.

Well? IT IS A GILDED YOUTH.

Is it not a pretty dear? OH, YES! IT IS AS PRETTY AS A LITTLE RED WAGON!

Who made it? IT IS SELF-MADE, BUT THE PATTERN WAS IMPORTED.

Was it expensive to make? VERY COSTLY.

Figure it up.

CRAVAT AND PIN,	$15.00
SHIRT COLLAR,	25
OTHER CLOTHING,	100.00
WATCH AND CHAIN,	150.00
JEWELLERY,	25.00
CASH ON HAND,	7.35
EDUCATION,	20,000.00
EXPERIENCE,	30,020.00
Total,	$50,317.60

Quite costly! What dividend is the investment paying? ITS RUNNING EXPENSES ARE MUCH TOO GREAT FOR IT TO PAY DIVIDENDS. THERE ARE MONTHLY ASSESSMENTS ON ITS STOCKHOLDERS

There are persons then who take stock in it? OH, YES, PLENTY; FOR IT HAS VERY PLEASING WAYS.

HOME AND GENERAL NEWS.

Robberies and incendiarism are increasing daily throughout Burmah.

The Pope and the Queen have exchanged Jubilee congratulations and sent each other valuable presents.

A recurrence of earthquake shocks in the Riviera has induced a fresh rush of frightened tourists to Monte Carlo.

An increase in the number of Dominion cruisers employed to protect the fisheries this season is considered probable.

A revolt recently occurred in a Russian prison, and in quelling the outbreak the governor shot down fifty prisoners.

A young man steering a toboggan at Paris seeing danger ahead rolled off and left the load of ladies to look out for themselves.

In a bar-room fight at Rogers' Pass, in the Selkirks, Wm. Sands was stabbed to death with a dirk by an Italian named Cursia. The murderer is not yet captured.

The Government will shortly resume the work of laying out the national park at the Banff Hot Spring. Roads, drives and bridle paths have been constructed already. The improvements last season cost upwards of $15,000.

Mrs. James Farley, a widow lady about 55 years of age, residing on Shuter Street, Toronto, committed suicide the other evening by hanging. Her husband died about two months ago, and she has been very despondent since then.

It is reported that an immense combination of American and Canadian capitalists is being formed in New York to acquire the ownership and control of all the known iron deposits of Canada, and that the Central Ontario railway will form part of the scheme.

Another terrible railway disaster occurred the other morning near Boston on the Dedham branch of the Boston and Providence railway. Five cars full of passengers fell through a bridge to the road thirty feet below, all the occupants being killed or badly injured. Twenty-seven of the bodies have been identified, and five others are lying at the morgue. About fifty were injured of whom several will die.

The Minister of Agriculture has received a letter from Col. Ravenhill, of the Royal Artillery, stating that Col. Goldie, Assistant Adjutant-General at Halifax, has been appointed by the British Government to purchase horses in Canada for the Imperial army for a term of years. About 150 horses from Ontario and the older provinces and the same number from the ranches in the North-West and British Columbia will be required annually.

A bill before the British Columbia Legislature provides that any person who is proven to be imbecile, or an habitual drunkard, shall not have the right to manage or dispose of any real or personal estate. Also any such person may, on petition by his or her husband or wife, or by any blood relation, by marriage, or by any public officer presented before any Judge of the Supreme Court of British Columbia, be interdicted and declared incompetent to transact any business whatever.

A young gentleman of Howe Island, while chopping firewood the day before his wedding was to take place, inflicted an ugly gash six inches long in his right foot. Medical assistance was soon summoned and five stitches were placed in the wound. He was visited by his intended bride that evening and it was arranged that the marriage ceremony would not be postponed. Accordingly next day they were made one, although the groom had to be assisted to and from the altar.

The following is stated to be a correct account of the recent tragedy at Grand Falls, N. B.:—Two traders named Blake and Kelly have been in the habit of selling goods in that vicinity. When they last left there was some trouble about a note and a man named Searway swore that if ever Blake came back he would beat his life out of him. On the 21st ult. Blake and Kelly returned and went into a public house. Seated in the room were two Frenchmen and shortly after Searway entered. The Frenchmen called on him to carry out his threat against Blake. Searway was afraid to attack Blake openly and going behind his back picked up a poker and struck him on the head, knocking him senseless. Then he picked up the body threw it in a wood-box and jumped on it until Kelly interferred to save his partner from being murdered. Then the Frenchmen jumped upon Kelly, Searway also turned on him, and catching him up, threw him over the table, and jumped upon his chest until it was pulp. Help came and Searway and the Frenchmen fled. The beaten men were taken to the Grand Falls hotel, where two days later, Kelly died of his injuries and even now Blake lies at the point of death. Searway has been arrested.

HOUSEHOLD.

The Management of Lamps.

So one has written a few directions fo. treating lamps, and it so accords with the experience of another that we present them herewith. To insure good light, the burners of petroleum lamps should be kept bright. If they are allowed to become dull, the light is uncertain, and, owing to the absorption of heat by the darkened metal, smoke is the result. Once a month place the burners in a pan, covering them with cold water, to each quart of which a tablespoonful of soda should be added, and also a little soap. Boil slowly, for one or two hours, and of the end of the time pour off the black water. Then pour enough boiling water into the pan to cover the burners, adding soap and soda in the same proportions as before. After boiling again a few minutes, pour off the water rinse the burners with clear hot water and rub dry with a soft cloth. The burners must be perfectly dry before the wicks are introduced. Should the wicks become clogged with the particles of dust floating in the oil, and new ones not be desired, they may be boiled in vinegar and water, dried thoroughly, and put back in the burners. If wicks have done duty all winter, they should be replaced by new ones in the spring. Nickle burners may be boiled as well as brass ones. Time spent in the care of lamps is never wasted. A perfectly clean lamp that gives a brilliant light, is a great comfort. What is more cheerless or depressing than an ill-kept lamp, which gives forth an unsteady, lurid, sight-destroying flame? The paper roses, guelder roses, and chrysanthemum, so popular for decorative purposes, are admirable for placing in the large chimneys to keep out the dust during the day, and the wicks should be turned a little below the rim of the burner, to prevent exudation of the oil.

Substitute for Pie.

Have some pieces of crustless, raised bread, whole-wheat graham, wide and long enough to fit into the bottom of a pint bowl in the form of spokes to a wheel with an open space between each and in the centre. Drain the juice from a pint of canned whortleberries, and heat it to boiling. Fill interstices between the slices of bread with the fruit, cover it with another layer of slices of bread and fruit; this time putting the bread over the fruit in the first layer, and filling in the fruit over the bread in the first layer. Fill the bowl with alternate layers of bread and fruit, then pour the hot juice over all. Put a plate with a weight, on the top to press it firmly. Dip off all juice that may press out, and set the bowl away in the refrigerator to cool and press until perfectly cold. When it will turn out in perfect shape, and can be cut in slices and served with a very little whipped cream spread on each piece for a dressing.

Notes.

Add a little salt to expedite the beating of eggs.

To cure the toothache try a bit of soda in the cavity.

Do not allow the wood-box to fill up with wet chips, apple cores and other filth.

Hellebore sprinkled on the floor at night destroys cockroaches. They eat it and are poisoned.

Air, but don't sun, feathers, ticks and pillows; the sun draws the oil, making an unpleasant smell.

Drain pipes, and all places that are sour or impure, may be cleansed with lime water or carbolic acid.

Paper will stick to walls that are washed in a solution of one-fourth pound of glue to a gallon of water.

Remove flower-pot stains from window sills by rubbing with fine wood ashes and rinse with clean water.

It should be known that "Rough on Rats" is common arsenic, a deadly poison, not to be kept or used carelessly.

Postal cards slit lengthwise with the scissors make good lighters. A single card makes about two dozen lighters.

Mucilage of gum arabic is a good application for a burn. Paint it on and let dry; then apply a second coat and let dry.

If gilt frames, when new, are covered with a coat of white varnish, all specks can then be washed off with water without harm.

HAM BALLS.—Stir one-half cupful breadcrumbs with two eggs previously well-beaten, chop fine some bits of cold boiled ham and mix; make into balls and fry.

If the cistern or the sink smells offensive, two ounces of saltpeter, dissolved into a quart of warm water and thrown into it, will remove the objectionable odor.

To cleanse a chamois skin wash it in cold water with plenty of soap, and rinse well in clear cold water; thus you may wash as often as you please and still keep it soft.

Copper wire, number eight or nine, makes a neat and handy clothes line, behind the kitchen or living-room stove. It does not rust the clothes as does iron wire.

It is stated on good authority that if salt be sprinkled on the floor before the carpet is nailed down the Buffalo bug will not harbor there to the injury of the carpet.

The farmer's homely fare may be plain, but he generally knows of what it is composed, which is more than the average resident of the city can asseverate of his fare.

GRAHAM GEMS.—One quart of buttermilk, one teaspoonful of soda, one teaspoonful of salt, graham flour enough to make a stiff batter; bake in gem pans hot and well greased, in a hot oven.

MOCK SAUSAGE.—Soak dry bread in water. Take as much cold meat, chopped fine, as you have bread. Mix and season with salt, pepper and sage. Make into small cakes and fry in hot lard.

CIRCLE CAKE.—One egg, one cupful sugar, one-third cupful butter, one-half cupful sweet milk, two and one-half cupfuls flour, two heaping teaspoonfuls baking powder, a pinch of salt; flavor to taste.

The question is asked, of what is the "currant jelly" so largely used by bakers composed, that it can be bought by them at less than five cents per pound? We give it up; ask us something easy.

It is said that corns can be cured by applying a poultice of bread crumbs and vinegar as hot as can be borne. The corn can be picked out without pain. "Soon" probably means in a day or two.

HERMITS.—One cup of butter or lard, two cups sugar, three eggs, one cup raisins, one teaspoonful of soda, dissolve in a little hot water. Spices of all kinds. Flour to roll.

JOHNNY CAKE.—Two cups of Indian meal, one cup of sifted flour, two eggs, one and one-half cups of sour cream, one cup of sugar, shortening the size of an egg. Two teaspoonfuls of baking powder and a little salt.

To cleanse a bottle which has contained milk or any prepared food for infants, cut up raw potatoes in long, narrow slices, and put in the bottle with a very little water; shake round and the bottle will be cleansed instantly.

HOT WATER GINGERBREAD.—One cup of molasses, one teaspoon soda, one tablespoon ginger, one tablespoon butter melted, one-half cup boiling water, two cups flour. Mix in order given and beat well. Bake in a deep cake pan.

PORK CAKE.—One pint of molasses, one cup sugar, pinch of salt, one cup of chopped pork, two cups of raisins chopped fine, one large teaspoonful soda, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, one of cloves, one nutmeg, flour to stiffen. Will keep for weeks.

PARSNIP FRITTERS.—Boil six parsnips tender, then skin and mash them; mix with them one or two eggs well beaten, and two teaspoonfuls of wheat flour. Make them in small cakes; fry them in a little lard, made boiling hot before the cakes are put in. A little salt should be added to the lard.

Oilcloth may be improved in appearance by rubbing it with a mixture of half ounce of beeswax in a saucerful of turpentine. Set this in a warm place until they can be thoroughly mixed. Apply with a flannel cloth, and then rub with a dry flannel.

BREAD CRUMB PIE.—One cupful breadcrumbs, one-half cupful vinegar, one-half cupful cold water. Soak the bread-crumbs in the water and vinegar; when soft add one cupful sugar, one teaspoonful cinnamon, one-half teaspoonful cloves, a piece of butter the size of a small nutmeg, one-half cupful raisins; boil all together three minutes. Bake with two crusts. The above can be made with crackers instead of bread-crumbs.

My Heart is Scotland's Yet.

BY JOHN IMRIE, TORONTO.

Oh, weel I loe the Scottish tongue,
The language o' my hame;
An' weel I loe a sang that's sung
In praise o' Scotland's fame.
It maks me think o' happy days
An' scenes o' beauty rare;
There's something in my heart that says:
There's nae lan' half sae fair!

CHORUS.—My heart is Scotland's yet,
Though I bide ower the sea;
I never can forget
The lan' sae dear tae me!

When traveling in a foreign lan'
I hear a Scottish voice,
Instinctively I gie my han',
An' baith o' us rejoice;
An' then we crack o' Scotland's fame,
Recite her battles ower,
An' feel we yet could daur the same
Our faithers daur'd before!

CHORUS.—My heart is Scotland's yet!

Oh, Scotland is a bonnie place,
Wi' scenery sublime;
Whaur Nature smiles wi' fairest face
That stan's the test o' time!
Each mountain, river, loch or glen,
Are fu' o' storied fame;
Wha reads the history o' her men
Will ne'er forget their name!

CHORUS.—My heart is Scotland's yet!

In every lan' roun' a' the earth
Are leal hearts true tae thee;
An' prood are they tae own their birth
Ayont the wide saut sea,
Whaur towers the mountains bold an' gran'
Like guardians o' the free,—
Oh, here's my heart and here's my han',
Dear Scotland, aye tae thee!

CHORUS.—My heart is Scotland's yet!

Fair Canada for Me.

BY NORA LAUGHER.

I've seen old Scotia's lofty hills
All clad with purple heather,
Green Erin's rocks, and Cambria's rills,
Felt Albion's balmy weather.

I have dwelt in Southern gardens,
The land of birds and flowers,
Where summer reigns throughout the year,
Where all are golden hours.

I have climbed wild, rugged mountains,
Whose icy summits rise
To snow-line height, while at their feet
The sweet hedelweiss lies.

I've wandered east, I've wandered west,
Thro' many foreign lands;
But only find my home and rest
On fair Canadian sands.

Where Norman, Dane and Celt reside,
All equal in degree,
Where lurks no foolish high-born pride,
Men, brothers all, and free.

As wind-tossed, feathery snowflake free,
Flying its home to seek,
With hearts warm as the crimson blush
Mantling a maiden's cheek.

No other skies seem half so blue
When far away I roam,
No other hearts are half so true
As those I find at home.

My song is e'er of Canada,
Of Canada the free,
Where skies are blue and hearts are true,
Fair Canada for me!

Such as I Am.

BY L. A. MORRISON.

"And Paul said, I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am except these bonds."—Acts 26:29.

What a picture of earnest living!
Weary working, and patient pain!
Manacled hands, outreached, forgiving,
Pleading, though it may be in vain,
Nothing for self or earthly gain.

King Agrippa in condescension,
Deigning to hear him plead his case
Is, as he listens with rapt attention,
"Almost persuad-d" to embrace
The Christian faith, for saving grace.

"Such as I am:" 'tis not unpleasant
To royal ears to hear that word;
Though Festus saw but the much-learned Peasant;
King Agrippa, his conscience stirred,
Heard, through Paul, the voice of the Lord.

"Such as I am:" what consecration!
Full surrender of self to God;
Leaving the gifts of Home, and Nation;
Seeking the paths, his Master trod;
Scorning hate, and the lictor's rod.

"Such as I am:" the light breaks clearer!
What a beautiful Christian Creed!
His simple life brings living, nearer
Mortal measure, and human need;
And "Whosoever runs may read."

"Except these bonds:" his heart, forbearing,
(See from his eyes the tear drops start)
Would not have one true servant wearing
Satan's bonds on his hands or heart:
Freedom is life's supremest part.

Then at the last, with the toiling ended,
All life's "race course" faithfully run,
God's martyred Saint to Him ascended;
For saintliest life-work, grandly done,
A "crown of Righteousness" he won.

His Opinions.

"Oh, Mr. Wise," she said, meeting him in a bookstore, "I'm so glad to see you. [illegible] husband's birthday gift, and now you can help me out in my selection. Now, don't you think he'll like [illegible] works?"

"Why, Mrs. Blank, I think——"

"Yes; I think so, too. We have several of Thackeray's already, however. He is very fond of history, and I thought some of getting Macauley's 'history of England.' Don't you think it's the best?"

"Well, really now, Mrs. Blank, if I were to choose I'd——"

"Would you, indeed? Well, of course, tastes differ. I'm sure I don't know hardly what to do about the history, Charles is fond of philosophy. Don't you think Emerson's book is the best written in our day?"

"I can hardly say that I——"

"No? Well, I've often thought myself that Emerson was overestimated. If you were going to buy the complete works of an American poet, wouldn't you select Longfellow's?"

"I am fond of Longfellow's works, but I——"

"Is that so? I am fond of Whitter's myself. But Charles don't read much poetry. He enjoys essays very much. Don't you suppose he'd like Carlyle's?"

"Really, Mrs. Blank, I hardly know what——"

"No, really? How people do differ. But I know a great many people who think just as you do. I've a mind to get fiction, after all. Don't you think Dickens superior to any writer now living?"

"Well, you know, Mrs. Blank, that the writings of Dickens are——"

"That is true—so they are; Charles might not like them on that account. Have you the fashionable craze for Howell?"

"Oh, I read nearly everything he writes, but I——"

"You don't fancy him particularly, eh? Well, neither do I. I find that we agree on so many points. I wonder if you think as I do about Shakespeare?"

"I hardly know, Mrs. Blank; I am, of course——"

"Yes; so am I. Well, Mr. Wise, I'm so glad to have had your opinions. They will help me greatly in making a final choice. I shall remember all you have said and be guided by it. Charles and I think everything of your judgment on such matters, and I'm so glad to have met you just at this time. Good-by."

"Good-by," says Mr. Wise, in dumb bewilderment.

A Lawyer Outwitted.

At one of the supreme courts in England, about the year 1820, a boy was brought in as a witness, when the lawyer for the defence, supposing he would in all probability loose his case if the boy was allowed to swear, undertook to invalidate his evidence on the ground of his being a mere booby, appealed to the judge, who was inclined to favor the boy's giving evidence, as he seemed to be large enough to know something of the nature of an oath; but the lawyer, still persisting, said, "question him, my lord, question him; satisfy the court that he is nothing but a booby."

Judge.—"I have no disposition to question the boy. Question him yourself if you like."

Lawyer, (to the boy)—"Boy, who made you?"

Boy.—"Moses."

Lawyer.—"There now, didn't I tell you he was a mere dunce? He can't tell who made him."

The judge, still willing to favor the boy, said that his answer showed that he had some knowledge of Scripture, as he seemed to remember something about Moses at all events.

The boy looking up to the judge, said, "Now, judge, may'nt I ask Mr. Lawyer a question?"

Judge.—"Oh, yes, my lad, ask him any question you like."

Boy, (to the lawyer)—"Mr. Lawyer, who made you?"

Lawyer, (very smart)—Aaron."

Boy, (to the judge)—"Well, Mr. Judge, we read in the good Book that Aaron made a calf, but who'd a tho't the 'tarnal critter 'd a got in here?"

It was with some difficulty the constables could restore order for the uproarious laughter.

His Birdling.

"It ain't ev'rybody I'd trust my little gal to," said old farmer Skinner to the love-lorn young granger who had become enamored with Miss Sally Skinner and wished to carry her from the loving care and shelter of the home nest.

"The "little gal," who was five feet and eleven inches tall in her bare feet (as she was at that moment), hid her happy, blushing face on the dear, fond old father's shoulder, and wept happy tears as he said to the deeply-moved lover:

"You must take good keer of my wee birdling, Jack. Recollect that she's been raised kind o' tender like. Two acres a day is all I ever asked her to plough, and an acre of corn a day is all she's used to hoeing.

"She kin do light work, sich as makin' rail fences, and digging post holes, and burning brush, and all that, but ain't used to reg'lar farm work, and you musn't ask too much of her. It's hard for her old dad to give his little sunshine up. He'll have to split his own cordwood and dig his own taters now. But go, birdie, and be happy!"

Knew His Own Weakness.

It is so seldom that a man is willing to acknowledge any deficiency in his mental make-up that this anecdote from an exchange is positively refreshing:

A tourist of the Curragh was strolling round the outskirts of the camp with a party of ladies and gentlemen, when they found a man laboriously turning a windlass, which hoisted from a shaft a bucket filled with rock. The only thing remarkable about the man at the windlass was his hat, the crown of which was cut clear off, allowing a hot sun to pour down upon a perfectly bald head, some waggish friends having recommended this arrangement as sure to produce a crop of hair. The gentleman and his party stood watching the man toiling unceasingly at his heavy labor for several minutes, when the kind-hearted visitor spoke up with concern, and said:

"My friend, why don't you cover up your head? This hot sun will affect your brain."

"Brain, is it?" cried the man, as he gave the windlass another creaking revolution. "If I had any brains, d'ye think I'd be here pullin' up this bucket?"

Military Mechanism.

No crowd, however brave, even when composed of disciplined men, can now fight regular soldiers. Insurgents cannot obtain [illegible] can store the necessary [illegible] riotors can obtain [illegible] secure the millions of cartridges necessary for their effective use. Even in a city, amateurs cannot pass through that dreadful sweep of leaden hail with which a modern regiment protects its position; and they could no more face well served breech-loading cannon than they could face an outpouring of accurately directed thunderbolts from the sky—an "improvement," by the way, in war now quite within the range of scientific foresight. Many accidental circumstances, especially the increase of wealth which makes revolt too injurious, and the great leniency of modern Governments, have occurred to conceal the truth in all its fullness; but it may be questioned whether in Europe a popular rising unsupported by an army is any longer possible. Experienced soldiers doubt whether even England could not be held down by a resolute army possessed of full arsenals, and it may be taken as certain that 10,000 men in possession of adequate batteries on Hampstead and at Sydenham, would hold the undrilled population of London entirely at their mercy. They could, in fact, reduce London to a heap of ruins in 12 hours. We doubt if this generation will see again a rising even in Paris unless favored by a portion of the soldiery; and in any open province of Europe, an insurrection would be a senseless defiance of irresistible force. All Catalonia would not be so dangerous to Madrid as one regular brigade. This is a great change, only beneficial because for the moment the enemy to be dreaded threatens civilization and freedom from below, and not from above. The Kings or Dictators of the future may yet oppress terribly, especially through inequitable taxation. Immunity when battle is over is a terrible addition to the power of an invader, and we may yet see a conqueror disarm Europe and hold it down with his scientific weapons as completely as ever the knightly caste of feudal times held down the French or the German peoples. Men say—we have said it ourselves—that there is compensation to be found for this in the extinction of the danger from barbarians, but that confidence is a little premature. We shall know more about it when the Chinese have learned to make weapons of precision, and begin to roll forward armies which can destroy as well as those of Europe, and can afford to expend 5,000 men a day besides. Civilization is for the moment clad in enchanted armor; but suppose that Pekin, or Mecca, or Samarcand forges Excaliburs successfully! There is nothing whatever to prevent their doing it except want of knowledge, and a Chinaman with a repeating rifle which he knew fully how to use would be a Frankenstein against whom the human race might be obliged to unite in order to destroy him.

SCIENTIFIC AND USEFUL.

Indian red is made by calcining iron sulphate. It is a more or less pure iron peroxide.

Brass or german silver may be "oxidised" by a vapour-bath of sulphur made by burning a piece of sulphur in a box in which the articles are hung.

The oils, glues, fertilising agents, &c., prepared from the refuse of the fisheries of the United States realise fourteen per cent. of the fish captured.

A trace of antimony in melted lead will cause it to oxidise on the surface much more rapidly than would otherwise be the case, and by stirring the mass it is transformed into a kind of pasty oxide. Cadmium also promotes the oxidation of pure melted lead, and that too with a play of beautiful colors.

M. Camille Koechlin asserts that the solar spectrum yields only two simple colors, blue and yellow. The third is blended with yellow and blue to constitute the reds on the one hand and the violet on the other, purple being red deprived of yellow, or violet deprived of blue, or simply the spectrum without yellow or blue.

Mr. T. Fraser of Aberdeen has introduced a new method of preparing clay for preventing leakage in reservoirs, water-tanks and so on. His plan is to puddle with dry com pressed clay, which clay is dried and ground before being applied to the bed of the reservoir, arch, or road, and is thus believed to render it more water-tight. The compressed clay absorbs water, but, being prevented to a certain extent from expanding, it does not readily admit of infiltration.

Metal is now being substituted for cardboard in bookbinding. This novelty is known as the "British Pellisfort" binding, and it consists in the use of thin sheet-metal for covers. The metal is specially prepared, and the cover may be bent and straightened again without perceptible damage. It may, in fact, be safely subjected to such treatment as would destroy ordinary covers. The metal is covered with the leather usually employed in bookbinding, and the finished book presents no difference in appearance except in the greater thinness of the cover.

REMARKABLE FACTS.

An eminent doctor advises scrawny girls to go to bed at 9 o'clock every night for six months.

A yearling calf harnessed to a good-sized hand sled, and trained so that it will obey every command of its driver, is one of the attractions at Sioux City, Ia.

A queer fish was recently sent to the South Kensington Aquarium. It was a stickle back that looked very much like an old mouse. English scientists are puzzled by so strange a departure.

At Sag Harbor, twelve-year-old Albert Nickerson daily sits down to the table with his father and mother, grandfather and grandmother and great-grandfather and two great-grandmothers.

While Captain Cameron, of Portland, was walking on a dock the other morning smoking, a ball from some unknown rifleman struck his pipe, carrying it all away, except a little bit between his teeth.

The light from an electric lamp tower at Davenport, falls full upon a flower garden about 100 feet away, and during last Summer the owner observed that lilies which usually bloom only in the day opened in the night, and that morning-glories unclosed their blossoms as soon as the electric light fell on them. It has frequently been observed that trees were most exuberant in their foliage on the side nearest the electric light.

HISTORIC HOLYROOD.

Sketch of a Visit to the Old Scotch Palace.

It was a chill, drizzly day. It did not pour, but [illegible] might well be described as a Scotch mist. I sat at the window of my hotel, overlooking Princes street, Edinburgh. There were few pedestrians in sight, and they, taken with the state of the weather, kept well to the side of the buildings, while I sat thinking of the business that had brought me to the city. After a while I resolved to shake off my lethargy and devote the afternoon to "seeing the lions," in spite of wind or weather. Full of my new resolution I descended to the entrance, hailed a cab, and drove to Jehu that I wanted to go to Holyrood.

A short drive through quaint, old-fashioned thoroughfares and I was set down in front of the palace and was left to my own resources, indeed, I was left very much to myself, for, with the exception of two sleepy-looking sentries paring back and forth, I could see no living thing. It was not a gala day in the heart of Midlothian, atmospherically or otherwise, and I was rather pleased for in that case I was not likely to be troubled with a crowd of companion sight-seers. I took a look around me. There on my right hand stood Arthur's seat and the crags, like with their heads in the clouds. Altogether the scene was not inviting; so I made my way to the arched entrance of the abbey, through which many a royal cortege had passed in the days of old. After a few preliminaries and a scarcely perceptible display of red tape I was admitted, and made my way as soon as possible to Queen Mary's rooms. Understand Queen Mary was my particular divinity, or rather had been when I was a boy, and perhaps no man lives who does not carry with him a portion of his boy heart, even into the centre of his manhood. As it happened, or as the weather willed it, there were but two visitors besides myself; so I thought I was in luck.

TWO GRIM MONSTERS

In spite of the watchful eyes of my guide, into whose hand I slipped a good-sized "image and superscription," I contrived frequently to linger a moment or two behind the party, and thus enjoy the luxury of a dream or two alone. I saw the little supper-room where, on that February night long ago, by Darnley, Ruthven, and others. I stood long and gazed upon the stains of blood which, of course, are not there, and then I turned to look at the queen's work table and the little odds and ends upon it. This was my delight, and I could not keep my eyes from it. I had turned to leave the apartment and follow my guide and the two other visitors, when a most singular circumstance occurred, for which, of course, you will have to take my word.

POOR RIZZIO HAD BEEN MURDERED

From a feeling not to be described by the pen, I somehow became aware that I was not alone in the room although I knew perfectly that all doors were locked behind us, and that my party was some distance in advance. I felt that no presence could ever be more real; indeed, I fairly looked back to see, and was not disappointed. There, only a few feet from where I stood, was a lady. She leaned slightly over the little table, upon which one of her hands rested. Her outline was handsome in the extreme, and I remember thinking that my eyes had never gazed upon a form of more perfect loveliness. Her robe seemed to be of crimson velvet, while the upper part of her dress, albeit of quaint out and pattern, was ablaze with jewels. It was the work of an instant for me to recall pictures I had seen and descriptions I had read, which, when taken together, brought the conviction that I stood in the presence of Mary, queen of Scots, or rather the air drawn semblance of that royal lady. I was not startled. To me, at the time, there did not seem to be anything strange about the matter. I simply stood and looked.

INTO HER MAGNIFICENT EYES,

which were modestly lifted to mine. In a few seconds my mind ran over all the trying scenes of her life; indeed I seemed to be taken out of myself, and wafted away back into the stirring times when the Lords of the Covenant stood every man with his sword drawn, and the hapless Mary was the sport of circumstances. By and by I came to what had always seemed to be a curious part of her history, her escapade with Bothwell, and once again I mentally formulated the question, Is it possible that so much beauty could ever find anything to love in that scapegrace lord? I asked myself the question, but judge of my amazement when the figure answered it. The lips moved: "No," it said, "he never owned my love; but, think, my subjects were in open rebellion; my husband and been a brute when he ought to have beeh my protector; I was a woman in a strange country "without a trusty friend in the whole wide world; what could I do?" The infinite pathos with which she uttered those words brought a pang to my heart, and, I must confess, a tear to my eye. Involuntarily I advanced toward her, eager to express sympathy, that sympathy which clings around the heart of every Scotsman for one who may have erred much but whom the world treated not well. As I moved the figure vanished and I was alone.

Opportunely, to save me from making a fool of myself, my party returned on their way out, and I joined them, full of wonderful dreams and theories, but

SILENT AS TO MY ADVENTURE.

In descending the stairway I was first, with the janitor two steps behind. You will believe I was surprised when that staid old gentleman gave me a slap between the shoulders, hard enough to make my watch-chain rattle, and shouted: "Hello, Sims; gone to sleep, eh?" My surprise was increased, rather than diminished, when I looked up and found it was not the old man at all, but my young law partner, Russell, who had come to the city on the same business as myself, and having been shown up to my room, found me "doing" old Edinburgh in a very entertaining dream.

I need a Saviour to save me. I have no salvation till I find a Saviour. A person I must have. The highest truth will not save me, further than as it brings me to the Saviour, that he may give, and I may get eternal life.

The inhabitants of cities suppose that the country landscape is pleasant only half the year. I please myself with the grace of the winter scenery, and believe that we are as much touched by it as by the genial influence of summer.

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE.
The subscriber begs to inform the travelling public generally, that he has leased the above premises for a term of years, and hopes by catering to their comfort to merit a share of public patronage. Bar and Larder well supplied. Good stabling and attentive hostler.
D. McLEAN, Proprieto .

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. G. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale. 1241y

WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at lowest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster, Flesherton.

WARNING.
ALL persons are hereby warned against purchasing a promisary note for the sum of $40.00 drawn and dated the 15th February by the subscriber and payable I think) ten months after date, to Wm. Fawcett, Euphrasia, as I did not get value for the same.
JACOB NEELY,
338-40 Euphrasia, February 19th 1887.

MANDRAKE * DANDELION LIVER CURE

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.
500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.
TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
T. CHAMBERLAIN & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calcemining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
230

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P, O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Wanted Immediately!
CANVASSERS IN THIS COUNTY
FOR THE
"OUR NORTH LAND,"
A PURELY CANADIAN,
describing the wonders of our own country, with thrilling incidents of travel and adventure. This is by far the most saleable subscription book ever published in Canada. not a book of scraps and clippings, but an original copyright work, richly and profusely illustrated.
To energetic men who will promise to canvass at least one township, we will offer the most liberal inducements. As we manufacture the book ourselves, upon our own premises, we can afford to place it in the hands of canvassers at a very low figure, while the retail prices place the work within the reach of all classes. Application for Territory received at once. We want at least one man in every county in Canada.
Also the "NEW HOME PARALLEL BIBLES," and Photogrrph Albums in over 300 varieties.
C. Blackett Robinson,
JORDAN ST., TORONTO Publisher.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.
First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool.
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

Markdale Roller Mill.
FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.
Flour always on Hand
To give in exchange.
'Baker's Patent' and best family flour for sale. Retail price per bbl. $4.50. Three barrels or more, $4.10 to $4.25.
SHORTS, per ton - $13.00
BRAN, " - 10.00
The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE.
He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.
Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

THE
Association Can't Stop Us.
HAVING PURCHASED A FIRST-CLASS HEARSE.
Built by B. J. Mash, London, also having a large stock of Coffins, Caskets and funeral furnishings, we are prepared to supply the public in the undertaking line on the shortest notice.
A large stock of furniture always on hand at lowest living prices.
Having a first-class cabinet maker, we are prepared to make all kinds of furniture to order, also repairing done promptly.
COLEMAN & HAMILTON,
Next door to Knapp's store,
MARKDALE.

NEW HARNESS SHOP.
R. CARNAHAN would respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of the surrounding country that he has opened a general harness shop on King street in the village of
HOLLAND CENTRE,
where he intends to manufacture and keep on hand a large stock of LIGHT and HEAVY HARNESS, long and short tugs, STRAW COLLARS, WHIPS, COMBS, BRUSHES, HARNESS OIL &c.
I will use only first class material and those requiring anything in the harness line will find it to their interest to call at the new harness shop and get prices before going elsewhere. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. Soliciting a share of public patronage. I am respectfully yours.
R. CARNAHAN.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH
TIME TABLE.
Taking effect Monday, July 28th, 1886.
GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.
Toronto....Leave	7 45am	4 50pm
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 30 "
Orangeville. Arrive	10 05 "	7 03
Orangeville. Leave	10 20 "	7 22
Orangeville Jun.	10 32 "	7 34
Shelburne	10 58 "	8 04
Dundalk	11 22 "	8 30
Flesherton	11 47 "	8 55
Markdale	12 02pm	9 10
Berkeley	12 14 "	9 22 "
Holland Centre	12 23 "	9 32 "
Chatsworth	12 38 "	9 49 "
Owen Sound	1 05 "	10 20 "

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.
Owen Sound	5 40am	2 40pm
Chatsworth	6 10 "	3 07 "
Holland Centre	6 25 "	3 30 "
Berkeley	6 34 "	3 40 "
Markdale	6 47 "	3 52 "
Flesherton	7 02 "	4 06 "
Dundalk	7 26 "	4 31 "
Shelburne	7 51 "	4 57 "
Orangeville Jun.	8 22 "	5 23 "
Orangeville. Arrive	8 30 "	5 35 "
Orangeville. Leave	8 45 "	5 55 "
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 30 "
Toronto.....Arrive	10 55 "	8 10

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL
CURES RHEUMATISM.
FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

The Markdale Standard
Is issued every Thursday, by
C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,
TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.
Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion; nonpareil measure.
Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.
Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1
No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.
THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Society Directory.
Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78, meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, McDougall's block. Visiting brethren welcome.
Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, McDougall's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.
MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.
Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Monthly Fairs.
Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

Markdale Church Directory.
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.
CHRIST CHURCH.
Services for January, 2nd 7. 9th 7, 16th 10:30 and 7, 23 7. 30th 10:30 and 7. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.
METHODIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9. Rev. Geo. H. Cornish, Pastor; G. S. Bowes, S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection; Mrs. T Hill, Secretary.

Post-Office Directory.
MARKDALE.
The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.
Mails closed as follows, viz:
C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m
TRAVERSTON.
Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.
HARKAWAY.
Friday, 12:30 noon.
For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.
W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

Directory.
MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.
Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.
Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.
COUNTY OFFICIALS.
Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace. W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale. Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N. Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North. D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. J. Borke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, ohn Blyth, Orchard.
DIVISION COURT CLERKS
No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Borke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Subscribe now for the STANDARD: there is good times acoming.

DEAR EDITOR,—Since last week's interesting STANDARD was published I have been decidedly ill. In accordance with my request an M. D. was called in; he wore a stiff hat and pair of rubbers, a sorrowful expression and various other garments, but beneath which could be seen features which would indicate a desire to reap financial gain. I wore a red gurnsey with arm holes and a pained and troubled countenance, which developed into a look of horror when he described the nature of my malady or series of ailments.

He said, first, I was suffering from an attack of conquestion in the left hampshire of the brain, which was exceeded by the stoppage of the ventilators of the heart, and caused information of the mind; that I was liable to a severe attack of chloroform morpus.—you too was sick last week Mr. Editor, and you will know how to sympathise—There is no blessing like health, especially when one is sick. I suffered appalling anguish the same evening after the Dr. left, when my wife went to the sideboard for the castor oil bottle, and she smiled a most exultant smile—not thinking that I was looking—she doubtless thought it was "all day with me," but Oh! this thought was nearly as bad to me as taking physic; whether it was a reality, and I a victim of my own misplaced confidence, or whither or not it was a delusion caused by my enfebled brain I am not in a position to affirm.

The following night I fell into a troubled sleep and dreamed that I wondered a great many things, among them the following:—

If my wife should not love me more than any man in Markdale, since I spent a hard earned $2.50 on a pair of Mrs. Bormer's improved corsets to improve her figure.

Who will provide for her and the young wonders when I am gone.

Who will handle the peoples money this year for street improvements, the Police or Pathmasters.

If it is a sin to steal axe handles.

Which shows the more Christian spirit, the lady who will assault and batter you for attempting to kiss her or the one who would knock her admirer heels over head down a flight of stairs because he wanted to stop kissing long enough to get breath.

If members of the choir should presist in giggling during service.

If your foreman won't feel as merry as a kitten when he gets out.

If Markdale would not be a good point for a furniture factory.

If the two girls who gained admission to the Lecture without paying the fee don't think they are smart.

If others look upon them that way.

KLAUD I WONDER.

The New Draught Horse Book.
ANNUAL MEETING OF THE DOMINION DRAUGHT HORSE BREEDERS SOCIETY.
In accordance with notice given this Society met in the council chamber. Clinton last Friday, Mr. John McMillan acting as chairman in the absence of Mr. Allan, president.
Reports from the secretary and treasurer were read, showing about 150 entries received 46 members enrolled, and $80 disbursement during the year.
The minutes of the last general meeting held at Seaford were read and confirmed.
The election of officers and directors resulted as follows:
President—John McMillan, Hullett. Vice-President—David McIntosh, V. S. Brucefield.
Council of Directors—S. Smillie. Hensall, Wm. Wellwood, St. Helens.; Alex. Innes, Clinton; John Marquis, Benmiller; W. H. Graham, St. Marys; Thomas McMitchael, Brussels; John Mason, Londesboro; J. D. Neil V. S. London; Thos. McLaughlin, Seaford; J. E. Blackall, V. S. Clinton; Joseph Salkeld, Stratford; T. J. Bell, Londesboro; J. J. Fisher, Benmiller; James Mitchell, Godrich. Five of these shall form a quorum.
J. J. Fisher, as treasurer, and James Mitchell, as secretary, were re appointed to their office during the pleasure of the council.
Messrs Smillie and Innes were appointed auditors for the year. The Executive Committee for the examination of pedigrees was appointed as D. McIntos, J. E. Blackall, John Mason, J. J. Fisher and Alex. Innes.
The Auditors and Executive Committee were instructed to meet at Clinton on Saturday, March 19th, to examine the officers' books and a number of entries awaiting registration.
The time for the next annual meeting was fixed as the second Wednesday in December ensuing, and the place as Clinton.
Messrs. McMillan, John Mason, Blackall, and Smillie were appointed a committee to revise the present rules and regulations and submit a report to the Council, who will lay their report and recommendations thereon before the next annual meeting for consideration,
It was resolved that in view of a contemplated raising of the standard for registration at the next annual meeting the time for receiving entries under the present standard close on Dec. 1st.
After some further routine business and general consultation, the meeting adjourned.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 342. MARKDALE, ONT., MARCH 31, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Publisher.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

To-morrow is "All fools day."

A week from Sunday will be Easter.

Pure raw sugar at J. G. Anderson's.

Spring is at hand, the Crows are out.

Clover & Timothy Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

Latest style hats, cheap at J. G. Anderson's.

A very considerable snow storm struck this locality last Sunday.

Beautiful pantings just opened at J. G. Anderson's.

We had a pleasant call from Mr. M. S. Kello of Tara yesterday.

Eggs & Butter wanted at J. G. Anderson's.

A gentleman was in town on Tuesday prospecting for a wool factory.

Ready made clothing in great variety at J. G. Anderson's, cheap for cash.

Mrs. Donald McLeod of Toronto visited her son in Markdale this week.

Everything new and stylish in the gents furnishing line at J. G. Anderson's.

Mr. & Mrs Arch. Boyd of Dakota have been visiting friends in this neighborhood.

Dr. Armstrong formerly of this place, and his lady are the guests of Mrs. W. J. McFarland.

Horse to Sell.—Six years old, sound and true, color black. Apply to Alex. Smith, Glenelg.

Best quality English galvanized iron eavetroughing at right prices. Call and get estimates at Mabee's Hardware.

East Grey Agricultural Society will hold their Annual Spring Show at Flesherton on Friday 22nd April.

Pebble spex, Crystal Lenses, and 4 colors in sun glasses. Call at W. A. Brown's Jewellry Store.

Oil Cake, the champion cattle food for sale at Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

Bad colds are all the rage the past week or two; very few, if any, good ones are heard of.

Just received at J. G. Anderson's, new shirting, new prints, new dress goods. Choice goods at bottom prices for spot cash.

Rev. A. Thibadeau, of Holland Centre, lost a very intelligent and attractive daughter of 10 summers by the hand of death this week.

Wm. Jackson our photographer has purchased the Shanahan property and is now having material put on the ground for a new photo. gallery.

Mrs. Chas. Richards of this village will sell her household furniture by public auction next Tuesday, 5th, April, commencing at 1 o'clock.

Permanent pasture Seeds. Prof. Brown's formula and other popular kinds at the Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

Rev. Jas. Hannon of Saugeen stopped off at Markdale a few hours yesterday on his way north. He gave us a friendly call.

About 8,000 feet of lumber a day has been hauled from Wiley's mill, Euphrasia, to Markdale Station for shipment, the past week.

A long felt want supplied.—Prepared Paints ready for use—any quantity or shade—guaranteed pure; See them at Haskett Bros.

Are you made miserable by indigestion, constipation, dizziness, loss of appetite: take Rejuvenator Bitters sold by Smith the barber.

Hampden Watches.—My own name on—just received; Key and stem wind, will be sold close, cash or time. W. A. Brown, Jeweller.

Query; who was the individual seen going down street hatless and in a rage to find the man who accused him of being drunk.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's D. Store.

We received a parcel last week from Philadelphia about 3 lbs in weight which cost $5, while the duty and express charges amounted to $2.85.

Wiley Bro's of the 7th line Euphrasia have delivered at this station during a few weeks past 160,000 feet of lumber for shipment.

For Fleury and Wilkinson Plows go to Jackson's; price to suit hard times.

See S. Hill's announcement in this issue. Mr. H. is to the fore with a very large and select stock, every department of his large establishment being replenished with fresh seasonable and stylish goods.

Cure for croup.—Prompt relief to prevent suffocation from the accumulation of tough mucous—the formation of false membrane— and the obstruction of the air passage, is necessary in case of a sudden attack of croup. Hagyard's Yellow Oil should be used at once, afterwards Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam.

Markdale Markets.—Fall wheat 75 to 76 cents; spring wheat 75 to 76; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 15 to 17; eggs 13; potatoes 50 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

Saw mill men, Flour mill proprietors Wool-factory owners and all who run steam or other machinery should call at Mabee's and examine his machine oil which is the best in the market,

Why employ doctors.—Consult a doctor and in 9 cases out of ten he pronounces your disease Liver Complaint and charges you $1 for a small bottle. Consult your druggists and for $1 he will give Dr. Chase's Liver Cure, guaranteed to cure, and a valuable receipt book free.

Mr. Robt. Williams will sell by auction at his premises, one mile west of Markdale, on Friday the 1st April, (to morrow) at one o'clock, his farm stock, implements &c. Terms 9 months on sums over $10. Geo. Noble Auctioneer.

Cheap Fares.—The following reduced fares will be made for Easter Holidays, viz:—Between all stations on the C. P. R. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 7th, 8th and 9th, return tickets will be issued good to return up to and including April 12th for one and one third fair.

Timothy Seed wanted for which I will pay highest cash prices. W. L. Davis'.

A. McGill, of Chatsworth, manufactures an excellent school desk, 500 of which he has made to order and delivered since last May, and expects to double that this season. Wm. Jackson is his agent in Markdale.

Shut The Door.—"This is the name of a comic office door tab issued by G. G. Green proprietor of Green's "August Flower" and "German Syrup; and is a very necessary reminder to many who indulge in standing in the door keeping it wide open while talking to the editor or others inside on a cold day.

Highly spoken of.—Mr. James M. Lawson, of Woodville, Ont., speaks in high terms of Yellow Oil for rheumatism, lame back, sprains and painful complaints. Yellow Oil is used internally and externally in case of pain; also coughs, colds, sore throat, etc., and has made many remarkable cures of deafness.

This being the fiftieth anniversary of Her Majesty's reign, great preparations are being made in all parts of her Empire to celebrate the Queen's Jubilee. The 21st of June has been fixed by the Imperial Parliament as the great celebration day, but any town or place can appoint a day to best suit themselves.

Mr. Wm. Stewart of Kimberly is one of the tallest men in the district, and also possesses considerable physical energy as he walked to Markdale, nine miles, last Monday through the exceeding heavy roads, where he took the train to attend the Assizes in Owen Sound as a Grand Jury man.

If our business men are in need of a fresh supply of printed letter heads, envelopes, bill heads, statements or any other such requisites, we will be happy to fill their orders now neat and promptly. We have a large stock of fine papers and a new lot of fashionable type just to hand, and fully prepared to turn out work equal to the city.

A good motive.—Harry Ricardo, of Toronto, agent for Fine Art Publications states that he was so troubled with deafness for eight years that he could scarcely attend to business, until he tried Yellow Oil He desires to make this cure known, for the benefit of others afflicted.

A lucky escape.—"For six years I suffered with my throat and enlarged tonsils. I was very weak; I doctored four years, and had advice from three doctors: they said I would have to undergo an operation. I tried B. B. B. instead. One bottle cured me." M. A. Squelch, Reglan, Ont.

Satisfied confidency.—J. B. H. Girard, of St. Edwidge, Clifton P. Q., says, "I am well satisfied with the use of Burdock Blood Bitters; it has cured me of dyspepsia that I had for three years. I used five bottles, and shall tell every person I know that may be attacked with similar sickness, and should not be afraid to guarrantee every bottles used."

R. O. Whitey is prepared to do all kinds of carriage painting; a first class job with the best material guaranteed. Now is the time to bring in your wheel'd rigs and have them re-painted for summer use. Shop over Hull's new cooper shop.

Notice.—The Social to be held under the auspices of the Young Peoples' Society of the Methodist Church, on the evening of Good Friday, promises to surpass all former efforts. It is called a "Political Social." and a cordial invitation is extended to all, young and old. Doors open at 7:30. Admission 10 cents. An excellant program will be rendered. Come and bring a friend along.

Go to Jackson for land Rollers. Cheapest and best in the market. Call and be convinced.

What is Alabastine.—It is a preparation of plaster-paris and other ingredients used for decorating and whitening walls and ceilings, is easily applied, will not scale nor rub off, and is cheaper and better than calcimine. You can get it at Haskett Bros.

Since last issue we learn that Mr. Will Burnett, of Orange Valley has purchased an interest in A. Beattie's Stallion and will handle him this season. This is said to be the best boned colt ever brought into this part. He is a pure bred Clydesdale and may be found registered in the Great Britain and Ireland Clydesdale Stud Book, as well as in the Dominion Herd Book, of Canada.

The Latest.—A "Political Social" is probably the latest idea in socials and is conducted as follows—The name of the various Electoral Divisions in a Province or state is written, one on each ticket, and the member elect is put on another ticket. The gentleman upon entering is handed one of the former for which he pays 10 cents—or whatever the admission fee is—and the lady one of the latter at the same price: the gentleman is then to find the lady with the name of the M. P. for his electoral division and take her to refreshments.

The story of hundreds.—In a recent letter received from Mrs. Sarah A. Mills of Wheatley, Ont., she says. "I was a sufferer for six years with dyspepsia and liver complaint, My food did not digest and I grew weaker every day. I lost appetite and had little hope of recovery. I tried many remedies, but all in vain, till I took Burdock Blood Bitters. The first bottle gave relief; after taking seven bottles, I am thankful that I now enjoy good health."

Completely Left.—A couple of Markdale bloods accosted Mr. Currie our egg merchant the other day with the startling information that a new business firm was to open in town shortly. What is the name of the new firm? queried Currie; McCullough & Hill answered the senior partner. What line do you purpose dealing in? We expect to buy up all the farmers' eggs in the country, and run Currie off the track. All right, said Currie, you take the farmers' eggs and I'll be content with the hen eggs. The new firm suddenly dissolved.

In spite of the storm and bad roads on Tuesday evening the Carnival at the Roller Rink was largely attended, although not quite so brilliant as the last, Considering the cold and state of the roads, much better than could be expected. The following prizes were awarded—Fastest skater, Arthur Askin; best lady skater, Miss. Cooper; Best Highland Costumed Lady, Miss. McDuff; Worst costumed Gent, W. L Younger; Best costumed Gent, John Knapp; Best Lady and Gent skaters, Jas. Sproule and Miss Cook; Best old man costume, B. Anderson; Best costumed girl under 15 Medie McNea; clown W. Ford; Fat man R. Sproule.

Iron Harrows "spring tooth Harrows" Drills and seeders from the best manufactures in Ontario, at Jackson's.

CLIPPINGS.

Where Are They?—On Tuesday afternoon of last week when Mr. Donald Bell of Bell's Corners was returning home from Dundalk, he got out of the sleigh when about a mile from the village, and his horses, a spirited young span, immediately started on the run. Although followed by Mr. Bell he soon lost sight of them, and has not been able to get any trace of them up to the present time. The country has been searched and inquiries made but strange to say nothing has yet been heard of the lost team.—[Dundalk Herald.

Obituary.—We regret to announce this week the death of Mr. Lachlan McLeau which sad event took place at his father's residence, Priceville, on Wednesday of last week, The deceased was about 24 years of age. His death is supposed to have been caused by internal injuries received in a railway collision in the Western States on his return from British Columbia and California a short time ago. He remained insensible for some hours after the accident, and during that time was robbed of all the valuables in his possession including his railway ticket to Toronto. Fortunately he had $100 secreted in his undershirt which escaped the notice of the thieves. The decesed was a very estimable young man, and was a particular favorite with all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance. His remains were interred in the Priceville cemetery on Friday last, and were followed to the grave by the largest funeral procession ever seen in that village.—[Free Press.

Dufferin Post.—Mono is to the front again. A very unusual and happy coincident occurred in the banner township on the 6th inst. On that date the wives of Mr Robert G. South and Robert A. Marshall presented their husbands with a son and daughter respectively. There is nothing very remarkable about this information so far, but the singular part of the story is that the two couples were married together on the same day (14th April, '86) by the same clergyman Rev. W. A. Hunter. They are neighbors, living near Camilla, and each couple are pardonably fond of their little blossom. Both ladies rejoice in the fact that Mono is their native heath, and the good old township willingly yield to the soft impeachment. All will admit that a double wedding and a double birth, as in this case, in something extremely rare.

While at Holland Centre on Thursday we had the pleasure of visiting the Church of England Mission House, recently established through the instrumentality of the Rev. J. F. Fairley. The congregation have fitted up Mr. C. Price's hall very comfortably with seats for one hundred people, and have put in a nice organ for mission purposes. Mr. Fairlie holds service there every Thursday evening, and we were pleased to learn that the hall is crowded every service. The Rev. gentleman is an enthusiastic christian worker who has endeared himself to all classes who have made his acquaintance, both in and out of his own congregations, and we hope that he will live long and continue to grow in favor and good works.—[Chatsworth News.

S. Hill.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for past favors, I would solicit a fair share of trade in future, feeling certain I can give you good goods at very low prices, and would ask my patrons and the public generally not to fail to give me a call and examine goods and prices, as my goods are purchased for cash in the best markets; I can offer my friends and patrons the best goods at the very

LOWEST PRICES,

and I trust by close attention to business to merit a fair share of public patronage in future as well as in the past.

MY MILLINARY

Department will be opened the 2nd week of April and will be filled with the latest NOVELTIES OF THE SEASON. And Miss Love who will have charge of this department will be pleased to meet her old friends and customers generally: Your requirements will be got up tastefully and cheap.

MY CLOTHING DEPARTMENT

is filled with Men's, Boy's and Youth's clothing, quality good, and prices low. Youth's Suits, $2.50 up: Men's Suits $6.00 up: Every line of clothing very cheap this season.

BOOTS & SHOES!

This department is filled with the finest goods in the market, from a plough boot to the finest Kid.

Ladies' and Gentlemen, Boy's Girl's and Children, call and be booted from a stock worthy of inspection.

☞Men's & Boy's HATS in great variety.

Ladies' call and see my Dress Goods, Prints, Muslins, Ginghams, Gloves, etc.

S. HILL.

HOUSEHOLD.

Things Worth Knowing.

Variety is the best culinary spice.

Never eat until you are real hungry.

Vinegar-saturated sugar will cure hiccough.

It is said that a good horse is never a bad color.

To prevent lockjaw, apply turpentine to the cut.

A little vinegar in water will clean lime off of paint.

A hot, strong lemonade, taken at bedtime, will break up a bad cold.

Medicinal herbs should be dried, put in paper bags and labeled.

If the oven is too hot when baking, place a small dish of cold water in it.

When sponge cake becomes dry it is nice to cut in thin slices and toast.

Hemorrhage from the lungs can be easily stopped by eating a little salt.

To remove ink spots, dip the spotted part in pure melted tallow, then wash.

Wipe hot flat-irons on a cloth wet with kerosene, to prevent them from scorching.

Soda water is very effective in washing the smoke of kerosene lamps from the ceiling.

Whitewashed walls can be prepared by first washing with vinegar to "kill" the lime.

Iron rust can be removed from clothes by rubbing with lemon juice and laying in the sun.

When there is a crack in the stove, it can be mended by mixing ashes and salt with water.

Sunshine on mirrors will injure their lustre, therefore do not hang opposite a door or window.

Rub the bottom of your sauce-pan, in which you boil milk, with a little butter to prevent the milk from sticking.

To remove the glossy appearance from coat collars and elbows, rub with a cloth dipped in warm water and borax.

Clothes that have turned yellow through bad washing, or from being long laid by, may be whitened by soaking in buttermilk.

As a rule Lima beans are not cooked long enough. A lady of our acquaintance cooks them slowly for four hours. Try her plan.

A good cement to fasten on lamp tops is melted alum; use as soon as melted, and the lamp is ready for use as soon as the cement is cold.

If matting, counterpanes or bedspreads have oil spots on them, wet with alcohol, rub with hard soap, and then rinse with clear, cold water.

The following is a good remedy for burns: Mix four ounces of the yelks of eggs with five ounces of pure glycerine. This forms a kind of varnish.

It seems to be the mission of the average Canadian house-wife to educate the cooks for the people who are able to pay a dollar in wages more than she does.

If a closet or cupboard is damp and likely to cause mildew, place in it a saucer of quick-lime, which should be removed once a fortnight. This will absorb the dampness and purify the place.

Hot alum is the best insect destroyer known. Put it in hot water, and let it boil until all the alum is dissolved. Apply hot, with a brush, and all creeping things are instantly destroyed.

Discolored tea and coffee pots may be cleaned by filling them with water in which two or three tablespoonfuls of wood ashes have been placed, and letting it boil up, then wash it thoroughly with hot soap-suds, and rinse.

One may utilize old matting which is no longer fresh enough to look well, by putting it under carpets. It can be cleaned perfectly by washing it on both sides with hot water and salt; hang it on a line out-doors to dry.

Red ants will never be found in closets or drawers if a small bag of sulphur is kept in these places.

To harden cast iron, mix one-half pint of oil of vitriol and two ounces of saltpetre in three gallons of clean water. Heat the iron to a cherry red, and dip as usual.

When larger flower pots are used, there will be more leaves than flowers. Often plants do not bloom because, having so much space, their strength is expended in forming roots and leaves.

It has been discovered by a Chicago physician that suburban life is a powerful provocative of dyspepsia. Men are like animals, and must eat their meals quietly and leisurely to secure a perfect flow of the gastric juice.

It is said that watercress destroys the toxic principles of tobacco without destroying its other qualities. If this information can be relied on, smokers have only to moisten their tobacco with the juice of watercresses and they can enjoy a harmless smoke.

Receipts.

MOTH PREVENTIVE.—The following recipe for keeping moths out of clothing is a favorite in some families: Mix half a pint of alcohol, the same quantity of spirits of turpentine, and two ounces of camphor. Keep in a stone bottle, and shake before using. The clothes or furs are to be wrapped in linen, and crumpled-up pieces of blotting paper dipped in the liquid are to be placed in the box with them, so that it smells strong. This requires renewing about once a year.

SUGAR GINGERBREAD.—One cup of sugar and one-half cup of butter rubbed together, one cup of sour milk, one-half teaspoonful of saleratus, a little salt, and flour enough so that you can roll it out, place it in the pan, indent with a teaspoon, put a little speck of butter in the cavity, and so on through the dough, making these dents an inch apart, then sprinkle on cinnamon all over the top, and over that sprinkle granulated sugar, taking care always to have the sugar last. If you do not have sour milk, take instead two teaspoonfuls of cream of tartar with one of saleratus.

BEEFSTEAK.—The best process for cooking beefsteak is to place it on a gridiron over hot coals until the outside is properly browned, not scorched; then remove it to a hot platter and season with butter, pepper and salt, after which place it in a hot oven, where it should remain from three to five minutes. At the end of that time it will be found cooked through, and of a delicate roseate hue, neither dried nor burned in any part. Some prefer to season the steak just before serving.

STEAMED CHICKEN.—Prepare the chicken as for roasting. Make a stuffing of bread crumbs, seasoned with pepper, salt and butter, to which is added one dozen oysters, each cut into three pieces. Fill the chicken, bind the legs and wings to the body and put it into a steamer with a closely fitting lid. If the fowl be full grown, steam steadily for two hours. Open the steamer at the end of the second hour for the first time and try the breast with a fork. If tender, remove the chicken to a hot water dish and keep it covered while you make the gravy. Strain the gravy from the steamer or pail into a saucepan; stir in two tablespoons of butter four of oyster liquor (also strained, a tablespoon of flour wet up in three tablespoons of cream and a tablespoon of chopped parsley. Bring to a boil, stir in quickly a beaten egg, season to taste and pour some of it over the fowl, and the rest into a boat.

HOME AND GENERAL NEWS.

The Toronto police force has been strengthened by the addition of 28 new men.

Boston importers are seeking to introduce in Canada free of duty fish taken out of warehouses there and represented as the catch of Newfoundland.

A trial made on the New York Central railway of an apparatus for heating the cars by steam demonstrated the practicability of the scheme.

The Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk railways are almost at loggerheads over their rivalry to secure the immigration traffic arriving at Quebec.

Two hundred and thirty-five members of the Imperial Parliament have signed a memorial in favour of preventing the publication of offensive details in divorce cases.

Work on the Sault Ste. Marie branch of the Canadian Pacific railway, which was commenced in January, and on which about fifteen hundred men are employed, will be completed by next November.

The consolidated debt of the Province of Quebec is $18,155,018, which, with the floating debt claimed by Mr. Mercier to amount to $3,693,000, makes a total provincial indebtedness of $21,848,018.

It is said that the steamer Lansdowne will not be commissioned for the fisheries protective service this season. The purchase of the new steamer Triumph has been concluded. She will carry the usual armament and a crew of about 23 men.

The Dominion Government have received a requisition for the extradition of the Italian, Francesco Trinario, who murdered a fellow-countryman in Chicago about a month ago. Trinario escaped to Manitoba, but was arrested in Winnipeg a short time ago.

There is a growing impression that the Anarchists are not dangerous as long as they are only armed with firearms. They only hit one crowned head out of fifty they shoot at, and they seem to have received their training as sharpshooters in the United States militia.

The fifth annual report of the Canada North West Land Company says the sales of farm lands and town sites were satisfactory last year, that settlement is increasing, free homesteads are being rapidly taken up, and that a material increase of sales is expected in the near future.

It is expected that the Dominion Artillery Association, at its annual meeting to be held in Ottawa on May 5th, will arrange for holding a monster competition on the Isle of Orleans, in July or August, in place of the annual trip to Shoeburyness, which will be abandoned this year.

Stewart Bros., of St. John, N. B., and London, England, have entered action in Montreal against the Bank of British North America for $500,000 damages and against the Star for $100,000, the former for refusing payment of the firm's cheque and the latter for alleged libel in connection with the Maritime Bank failure.

Halifax is greatly excited over the enforcement of the new Provincial license law, which forbids the selling of liquor in hotels to other than guests, and in case of guests to be drank only in private rooms or at meals. At shops liquor cannot be sold in less quantities than a pint, and this must be carried away and drank. Hotelkeepers say their receipts have fallen off fully one-half.

A young man calling himself H. C. Logan, of Chicago, but who is alleged to be V. E. Vanzandt, of Markham, is in gaol at Farmington, Missouri, on the charge of attempting to pass bogus cheques. A cheque on the Ontario Bank for one thousand dollars was found in his possession, and also a letter from his mother in Markham stating that detectives were searching for him for passing a cheque for a large amount on the Dominion Bank.

Last week the Indians moved up out of the bottoms at the Blood Reserve, saying that they expected the chinook in three days, and that it would flood them out. It did start pretty early Friday morning, and began in earnest at about ten o'clock on Saturday night. It blew with terrific force all night, and all day Sunday and Monday. Sunday morning the snow was nearly all gone but the drifts, and by last night only the larger drifts remained. There was from eighteen inches to two feet of snow when the chinook came.—Fort McLeod Gazette.

Can His Wife Explain?

"I understand," said the agent, "that you want a burglar alarm in your house."

"I did talk of having one awhile ago, but I've given it up."

"They are a nice thing."

"Yes, I suppose so; but they wouldn't help my case any. I am not losing anything now?"

"You—you——?"

"I simply leave my pocketbook in the barn o' nights instead of my bedroom, and I haven't missed a dollar for weeks."

Heat and Cold

Is a never-failing cause of disease. At this season of the year neuralgia, toothache, and a host of similar diseases are rampant. The great question, then, is to find the quickest, surest, and most economical remedy. Polson's NERVILINE exactly fills these requirements. It is prompt, efficient, and most economical, for it exceeds in power every known remedy, and is as cheap as inferior articles. A 10 cent sample bottle will give every person a chance to test it. Large bottles only 25 cents.

Arguments.

It is seldom that we hear an argument conducted in a thoroughly truthful manner. Whatever be the subject, whatever the ability to discuss it, whatever the views held, in nine cases out of ten the effort of the contestant is to bring all the proofs, reasons, and testimony that he can find to bear upon his own side, to refute all objections, and finally to triumph in having silenced, if not convinced, his opponent. Such an effort conducted in such a spirit can result in no accession of truth for either party. Indeed it is not truth that they are seeking, but victory. Defeat means for them mortification and unmingled regret, whereas, if they were truth-seekers, it might be the one who had been overthrown that would rejoice, for he would have gained a knowledge of some new revelation or new method that had never dawned upon him before.

Spooner's Copperine.

Perhaps you don't know what Spooner's Copperine is. Perhaps you think it is a new cure for rheumatism, or a temperance drink, or a comforter for teething children, or a patent affair for keeping your feet dry, and turning your pedal extremities into galvanic batteries capable of melting the gold around your store teeth with magnetic currents. Well Spooner's Copperine is nothing of the kind, it is a purely non-fibrous, anti-friction metal, for use by engineers in fitting axle boxes. The great difficulty in all machinery is to keep the axles from heating. Brass, bronze, and babbit metal are used, but all have more or less friction which engenders heat, and if there is one thing in this life that amuses an engineer it is a hot box. It is not necessary to be an engineer to be acquainted with the peculiar merits of a hot box, but there is nothing will make an engineer so fully appreciate the beauties of a humble, lowly Christian spirit as to have an axle everlastingly tearing itself to pieces, in a red hot passion of fury. Now Copperine is a metal patented by Mr. Spooner, of Port Hope, which cannot by any means be induced into a glow of warmth. Its coldness would give the chills to charity. To fill a box with it, is like a visit from your wife's most estimable mama, the axle has to hustle for all it is worth to keep from freezing. This metal is now being put up in handsomely stenciled wooden packages suitable for counter display, and no hardware store claiming to rank above a tin pot concern can be without a stock. The Georgian Bay Consolidated Lumber Co., the Rathbun Co., the Wm. Hamilton and Peter Hamilton Co's., of Peterboro', and others without number, speak of Copperine in the highest terms. In fact engineers from Quebec to New Westminister yearn for Copperine, and Mr. Spooner is rapidly developing a business of large proportions. For heavy journal bearings, crank pins, steam beats, saw mills, roller grist mills, planing mills, and in all good machine work, Copperine can be strongly recommended. The metal can be shipped from Toronto, Montreal, Winnipeg, and from the patentee, Mr. Spooner, Port Hope.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

The Federal Life Assurance Company.

(Hamilton Times, March 3rd, 1887).

The fifth annual report of this company, which appears elsewhere in our columns, is such a report as must be perused with pleasure by all who feel interested in the success of a worthy home institution. That the Federal should have done an amount of new insurance in its fifth year in excess of what has ever been done in Canada in any year by any company, except the Canada Life, shows a degree of success in this regard which is quite unparalleled. When the Federal adopted the Homans plan of insurance, it was claimed by officers of other companies that there was no field in Canada for such a system of insurance. The contrary has been proved by the experience of the Company. The gain in insurance in force over the previous year has, under the circumstances, been remarkable. In fact, the progress of the Company has been in every way most satisfactory. We are assured, while the new business so far this year far exceeds that done during a corresponding period in any previous year, renewal premiums are being paid with a degree of regularity and promptness that affords the utmost satisfaction to the Company.

The St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway have undertaken to construct 750 miles of new line this season. This will carry the road into Fort Benton, Great Falls and Helena, Montana, opening one of the finest sections of the Territory. The headquarters of the construction department have been established at the new town of Minot, Dak., which grew so rapidly last season. Minot is situated at the second crossing of the Mouse River, 118 miles west from Devil's Lake and 527 from St. Paul. The extensions to be made this season by the railway company will give employment to upwards of five thousand men and three thousand teams, with their drivers. This will afford excellent opportunities for settlers going into North Dakota, after making their selection of location and doing their spring work, to obtain employment whilst the crop is maturing.

Many people of fine sensibilities, when appealed to on behalf of the victims of some odious form of cruelty or oppression, stop their ears and exclaim that they really cannot endure to listen to such harrowing details. This is only another way of saying that their imagination is outraged by the recital, while their hearts are callous to the reality.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

Mr. S. A. B. Trott, of Bermuda, has a newly-hatched turkey which has four legs and four wings.

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular. The second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto Canada.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

A justice of the peace at Ionia, Mich., has begun suit against a man for a wedding fee.

There are 9,199 licensed saloons in New York city, or one saloon to every 140 inhabitants.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

It takes 800 patents to protect the modern bicycle with its improvements from infringements.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness. Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A. P. 326

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

6 PER CENT. MONEY—INTEREST YEARLY —no commission; Mortgages purchased. R. H. TEMPLE, 23 Toronto Street.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

FOR SALE.—SEVERAL FIRST CLASS IMPROVED FARMS for sale—in the County of Essex (called the garden of Canada); easy terms of payment. C. G. MARTEN, Leamington.

100,000 SHEETS OF 5 & 10c. MUSIC; '80,000 Plays,' Brass Inst's, 'Violins,' 'Flutes,' 'Fifes,' and Musical Inst. Trimmings, at reduced prices. R. B. BUTLAND, 37 King-s. W., Toronto.

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Antique Bronze, Natural Wood, and other Picture and Room Mouldings, Frames, Etc. Paintings, Engravings, Etchings, Artotypes, Artists' Materials, Mirrors, etc. Wholesale and Retail. Trade Catalogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO., Toronto.

BARGAINS.—328 Acres — LARGE HOUSE—Price $3,425; one of 60 Acres, $600; mild climate, dead shot on rheumatism, asthma, and lung diseases; best soft water in America. For particulars address E. H. WITMER, Nottoway, C.H., V FARMS WANTED—OUR LAND LIST—40,000 copies just being issued; 20,000 circulated in England. Parties placing their farms with us immediately can have them inserted in our list. A. E. WILLIAMS & Co., London, Ont.

EASTER CARD PACKETS By Mail—PACKETS of one dozen beautifully assorted Easter or Birthday Cards, at 10c, 15c, 25c, 50c, 75c, and $1 each packet; also silk-fringed packets, 6 in a packet, at 50c, $1, and $2 per packet; cash to accompany order. A dozen packets of a kind, 20 per cent off. Matthews Bros. & Co., 93 Yonge St., Toronto.

AGENTS WANTED for "Life of Leo XIII," from an authentic memoir furnished by his order and written with his encouragement, approbation and blessing, by Bernard O'Reilly, D.D., LL.D. This is the only work approved by the Holy Father, and all others advertised as such are a fraud. For terms address ROSE PUBLISHING Co., Toronto.

DON'T READ THIS unless you want to make money. THE FIRESIDE WEEKLY is the only story paper in Canada, and contains the brightest and best stories of any paper published. Price, with great music premium, $2 per year. Secure the agency for your district. Agents liberally dealt with. Send for free sample copies and terms. Mention this paper. Address, THE FIRESIDE WEEKLY, 26 and 28 Colborne Street, Toronto, Ont.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont. Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

SEEDS.

OUR SEEDS Give Satisfaction to all. They are Fresh, true to name, and Cheap. If you have not already received our catalogue, send for it. ROBERT EVANS & CO., Seed Merchants and Growers, Hamilton, Ontario.

SAW. R. SPENCE & CO. RASPS.

Consumers will find it to their advantage to ask the trade for our make of Files and Rasps. Re-Cutting a Specialty. Send for price list and terms.

HAMILTON - ONT.

SAUSAGE CASINGS!

NEW SHIPMENT from ENGLAND

Ex-Steamship "Norwegian."

LOWEST PRICES TO THE TRADE. We are sole agents in Canada for McBRIDE'S CELEBRATED SHEEP CASINGS. Write for quotations.

JAMES PARK & SON, Toronto.

SNOW DRIFT BAKING POWDER

THE FAVORITE

THERE IS NO BETTER!

The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford.

THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD), OF LONDON, ENG.

Capital, £260,000. Dominion Government Deposit, £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St. East, Toronto. Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts. A. T. McCORD, Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.

MANUFACTURE ONLY

FINEST

Silver Plated Ware

Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish.

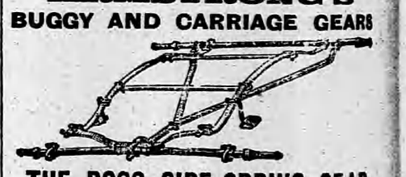
HAMILTON, ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly. For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomas & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love, Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed the opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties. J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto

FOR ONE CENT



TENANT FARMERS, SMALL FARMERS, MECHANICS, and business men or capitalists, all who wish to make a change for health or profit, can get valuable information FREE, by sending your address on postal card to J. M. HUCKINS, 96 King St. West, Toronto.

J. L. JONES WOOD ENGRAVER 10 KING ST. EAST TORONTO.

THE National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO.

23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO. All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

ARMSTRONG'S BUGGY AND CARRIAGE GEARS

THE BOSS SIDE-SPRING GEAR

Has many advantages over any other side-spring gear, and will undoubtedly be a great favorite. The bent tempered steel plate perches allow the body to set very low, IT TURNS SHORT, rides very easy, and has no SWINGING or UNDUE MOTION. Suitable for straight or phaeton bodies. PRICES RIGHT. Send for our descriptive circular. J. B. ARMSTRONG M'F'G CO. (Ld.), GUELPH, Canada.

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

Confederation LIFE ASSOCIATION

GUARANTEE CAPITAL, 1,000,000.

HEAD OFFICE, TORONTO, ONT. - - - A HOME COMPANY.

President—HON. SIR W. P. HOWLAND, C.B., K.C.M.G.
Vice-Presidents—HON. WM. McMASTER, WM. ELLIOT, ESQ.

Directors: HON. CHIEF JUSTICE MACDONALD, W. H. BEATTY, ESQ., EDWARD HOOPER, ESQ., J. HERBERT MASON, ESQ., HON. JAMES YOUNG, M. P. RYAN, ESQ., S. NORDHEIMER, ESQ., W. H. GIBBS, ESQ., A. McLEAN HOWARD, ESQ., J. D. EDGAR, ESQ., WALTER S. LEE, ESQ., A. L. GOODERHAM, ESQ.

Managing Director—J. K. MACDONALD.

The Association has been fifteen years in operation, during which time $915,000 has been returned to the Policy Holders.

This year (1886) closes the third Quinquennial Period. It is expected there will be a surplus of over $350,000. The surplus at December 31st, 1885, being $282,199.

Guarantee Capital and Assets now over $2,800,000. Policies in force over $14,000,000.

Policies Non-Forfeitable after two years, and after three years Indefeasible.

BRICK MACHINES.

—WITH ALL THE— LATEST IMPROVEMENTS.

SPRING PRESS BOX, - WHITE OAK POSTS, - AND IRON BRACES.

Over 500 of our Machines now in use and no complaints. Prices and Terms to suit buyers. Send for circular.

The E. & C. GURNEY CO., TORONTO, ONT.

RIFT AND SPRAY,

OR,

LOVE AND VENGEANCE AMONG THE SMUGGLERS

THE MOST FASCINATING OCEAN ROMANCE SINCE THE DAYS OF COOPER AND MARYATT.

CHAPTER XXXV.—(CONTINUED.)

Numerous torches were lit, and stuck in different crevices of the sea cavern, so that there was a tolerable light throughout the place. The tide brought in a quantity of weed and white foam, and the Rift rode rather uneasily by her anchor, as the hour of midnight drew near.

Then Dolan made an affectation of speaking about the night-watches, and the guards of the opening to the ravine and on the plateau where a man had been stationed in lieu of Joseph, whose constant post it had been.

"All well," was the reply and then one of the men added:

"Nobody has come into the cave but Mrs. Wagner, since the sun set."

"Mrs Wagner!" exclaimed Dolan.

"Yes, captain, but that's all right."

"Oh! yes, Mrs. Wagner. Ha! A boat here!"

Dolan was on the deck of the Rift and he at once stepped into a boat and went toward the steps leading to the inner cavern. These steps and the passages beyond it and the inner cavern were now quite deserted, for the whole of the crew were in and about the cutter. One solitary link was burning at the end of the passage leading to the ships, and Dolan paused at that and listened.

"I do not hear her," he said. "I did not see her come in, but the guard would of course let her pass and she could easily make her way along the dark shadows and I not see her, as I was not looking for her. Well, she has come to meet her doom and it is as well here as elsewhere. Better perhaps—much better. Maria! Maria, I say, are you here?"

There was a suppressed scream and then all was still.

"What on earth does she mean?" cried Dolan as he snatched the torch from its niche in the chalk and ran toward the great cavern, in which there was no lamp lighted now.

Dolan held the link high above his head. For a few moments a confused mass of shadows alone met his view, and then they seemed to arrange themselves into a human form, and crouching down and trying to hide something by holding her hands over it he saw Mrs. Wagner.

There was a small, black box, the lid of it was open and the contents strewed about upon the floor of the cavern. It would appear as if in the fright at hearing the voice of Dolan calling upon her, Mrs. Wagner had dropped this small, black box, which she had been carrying, although it was rather large so to do, and then when it fell no doubt the lid had burst open and the contents had fallen out on the floor.

There were several toys, such as a little child of about two years old might have possessed. There were several articles of children's wearing apparel and a little white beaver hat, with pale blue ostrich feathers. In fact, there appeared to be pretty well the whole paraphernalia of a child's out of door costume.

And all these lay about, and Mrs. Wagner, with cries and screams, was making futile attempts to gather them together and hide them from the eyes of Dolan.

But most futile, indeed, were those attempts, inasmuch as he could not fail to see every one of the articles that fell from the small box, and as he stood there, with the link in his hand, and glared at the wretched woman, his face grew livid with rage, and a baleful fire shot from his eyes.

She looked up at him in terror.

She had never seen him look like that—at least not to her, and she felt all her danger.

"Mercy! Have mercy upon me, Dolan. It was for your good—all for your good."

His rage was so great that for the moment it only vented itself in a hissing noise. Then she, still on her knees, implored again his mercy.

"No—no!" she said, "you must not think that it was to betray your secret—your long-kept secret, that I was taking this box—to—to—to—"

"To whom?" bellowed Dolan, with a roar of rage that echoed through the cavern, like the meaningless howl of some wild animal.

"To whom? To whom?"

"The admiral."

"Clifford?"

"Yes—yes. To save you. To make terms for you. That is it—only for you—only and wholly for you."

It was with a positive yell of fury, then, that Dolan sprang forward, and with a plunge of his foot, rather than a kick, scattered the contents of the black box over the cavern.

"Wretch and spy!" he cried, "I know you—I know you now. You would purchase your own safety by betraying me. I know you now!"

"No—no!" Oh! no."

"Yes, I say. Yes, a thousand terrors."

"Dolan—in mercy! Oh! I will tell all! No no, do not kill me—oh! do not. I did not mean! I will tell you all, Dolan, if ever you felt for me a moment's affection, spare me now."

"Affection? Ha! ha! Affection! Ha!"

"You said you did! Mercy! help! murder! He will kill me. Oh God, have mercy upon me now!"

Dolan sprang upon her with a yell of hate and rage. He struck her on the head with the link. A thousand bright sparks flew from it and it was extinguished. She grasped his arm—she clung to him and screamed aloud. Then there was one half-stifled cry and all was still, save the heavy breathing of Dolan in his rage.

"Dead—dead—dead!" he said "Is she dead!"

He stood in the darkness and listened.

"Eh? What? Go on. What? What say you?"

The moan was not repeated. He bent low down to listen, and then he felt with his hands, lower and lower still. Something hot and damp met his touch.

"Is it blood? Is it blood? Maria! speak! Only a word! speak! speak, I say!"

Not a sound—not a word—not a sigh.

"Dead! she is dead!"

He strove to move from the spot, but he trod upon something soft. It was an arm of the wretched woman, which, in her death agony, was outstretched upon the floor. Dolan recoiled from it as though a serpent had stung him.

"What is that? What is that? Hush! hush! no noise. I have killed her! Well, well, I said I would, and it is done. She was betraying me. She would have killed me. Hanged me in chains. First, the girl—she would have sold me to that strange man in the cottage, for a thousand pounds, and now it was Gerald—what did she want these things but that she might indentify him to the admiral? Of course. Oh, of course, and I have killed her; she lies dead now—dead at my feet."

Dolan shuddered, and, with his arms outstretched, he strove to leave the spot. He trod upon a portion of the dress of his victim, and he recoiled again.

"Get out—oh, get out!" he said. "Don't crawl about my feet. No, no—don't do that. It is so dark, and yet I can see your eyes. Help! Lights! No, no!—no one must see this sight. No, no, no!"

The link lay smouldering on the floor of the cavern. It was just within his reach. By a stretch he got hold of it and he thought as he had seen frequently done with links, that by waving it rapidly through the air the smouldering embers might be fanned again into a flame.

"So, so!" he said. "We will see!"

He whirled the link round and round. The red embers at its head glowed again and then a little flickering flame burst forth which he humored by holding the link about and turning it downward.

The little flame grew longer and the link was in a blaze. Then Dolan tried to turn his eyes upon the object at his feet, but he dare not. Some terrible convulsion kept him from doing so and yet chained him to the spot.

"Dead!—she is dead! It is but another and I have looked upon death so often, why should I fear it in her—I who have killed others? She is not the first—not the first!"

"Hoy!" shouted a voice; "Dolan! Captain Dolan! Hoy! Where are you?"

"They call me. They call me, now!"

"Captain Dolan!"

"That is Bowline. I know that voice. He must not see this sight. He and they must not suspect it. Hilloa! Hilloa!"

"Hoy!"

"Hold! Not another step. What would you? What is it? The time has not yet come. Hold! What would you?"

Captain Dolan strode forward, and held the link so that the shadow of himself fell upon the dead body on the floor and faced Bowline.

"Oh, there you are, captain!"

"Well, well. What is it?"

"Why, here's Miss Grace has come into the cave by the entrance in the ravine."

"Grace? Grace?" yelled Dolan.

"Yes, and it appears that the Philistines have got hold of Gerald and she wants the men to sign a kind of paper that he was forced on bored the Rift and that he was dragged upon the deck and that he did not fire at the king's ship."

"Grace—Grace—she here?"

"She is. You may hear her now. Hark, that is her voice. She prays and calls upon the men to save Gerald. They mock her. Do you not hear?"

"Perdition! Ah!"

Her fair hair streaming in disorder around her—her dress torn by the briars and wild vegetation of the path in the ravine—Grace Morton, as we may now properly call her, entered the cavern and gently knelt down close to the feet of Dolan.

"Here me," she said. "Dolan, you hear me. I have come to tell you of your doings and to ask you to do one act of justice for your soul's sake. Dolan, you have in times past called me your child. You know I was not so; but some spark—some slight feeling of affection for me might remain with you. For that—for justice sake—for gratitude—that I have come to warn you that the secret of this cavern is discovered. I ask you to save Gerald by declaring his innocence. Write it—write it here. It is written. You will put your name to this paper. You will admit that Thomas Wright turned false witness, Dolan! Dolan! you see I kneel to you. I pray to you to do this. I have left a new-found father—I have left dear friends—to kneel to you, Dolan. It is but a little act; but oh, it shall weigh heavily against the evil you have done. Say that he is innocent—write it. Here! here! I implore you, Dolan, for you know that it is the truth!"

Dolan drew a long breath, and the "ah!" that he uttered was so congratulatory that it seemed, indeed, to come from his heart.

"You will do it? You will save him?"

"Stop! Answer me—answer what I shall ask of you!"

"Yes, Dolan."

"Gerald—where is he?"

"In prison."

"Accused—accused? By a letter—by Thomas Wright—of piracy—of inciting us on—of being the worst of all?"

"Yes! Oh, yes!"

"And he is in prison—in a fair way of condemnation?"

"Alas, yes! Oh, Dolan! you see me here—here at your feet. I love Gerald—with all my heart. I do love him! I love Heaven and I love Gerald. It was poor Ann, who died here in these caverns, who taught me to love God! And Gerald, too, I love. Dolan, do this act—save him! Let me carry to the admiral your evidence for him. It is down here on this paper—in a few words. Dolan, you will do it?"

"Not if a thousand devils—well, that don't matter. No—no—no!"

He yelled out the negatives with awful vehemence and Grace recoiled from his awful gaze.

"No! I have you both now, and my heart's desire is satisfied. Gerald a felon! you—you—ha! ha!—and you were safe—you had then escaped me, and you have come back into the toils again! You—fool that you are—you are mine now, not as a daughter—ha!—not as a daughter; no, no!"

Boom! came the sound of a gun at sea.

Dolan started.

"What is that?"

Boom! from shoreward came another gun, and this latter one sounded as from the top of the cliffs.

"Betrayed! We are betrayed!" shouted Dolan. "Betrayed by this girl. It is she who has told the secret of our cavern in the cliff—she and Gerald. "Revenge!"

"No!" cried Bowline. "By the heavens above us, Dolan, you shall not harm the girl!"

"Ah! you oppose me, villain—wretch! I have set my life upon all this! I will kill her—her—you—all! Devils that you are, I am mad—mad—mad!"

A wild cry arose from the sea cave at this moment, as a round shot came with a crash through the sailcloth that closed the entrance to the cavern and tore its way over the deck of the Rift, from stem to stern, killing three men in its progress.

CHAPTER XXXVI.—THE SPRAY OPENS THE SECRET DOOR TO THE CAVERN.

It was about an hour after sunset on that most eventful evening, some of the incidents of which—in connection with Dolan and his secret home in the cliff—we have already related, that an unusual bustle was evident at the bit of coast not far from Admiral Sir Thomas Clifford's residence.

In the fluttering wind—that wind which was so rapidly rising and which was soon to blow into the cavern with all its fury—there stood by the landing place, where Captain Morton, of the Nautilus, had first seen the admiral, several persons.

There was the admiral himself, several naval officers, and there was Captain Morton. A small throng of idlers were close at hand, looking on with apparent wonder at some proceedings they could not comprehend.

The boat of the Nautilus was waiting for Captain Morton at the foot of the steps, and some miles out at sea there burned a blue light on board some vessel, which was evidently beating on and off in the roads.

That vessel was the Spray.

And now, with a bright flush upon his face and a sparkle about the eyes, such as he had not known for many a long day, Captain Morton descended one of the steps leading towad his boat, and holding out his hand to Admiral Clifford, he said:

"My dear friend, we shall soon meet again. I see the boat of your schooner is near at hand now, and you may depend that the Nautilus will not be many feet behind the Spray in the attack upon the pirates' nest."

The admiral pressed the hand of Captain Morton, as he replied:

"I should not be well pleased to be on this enterprise without you, Morton, and I fully comprehend the feelings with which you go on it."

"Yes," added Morton, and the crew of his boat heard his words, "yes, I go in the cause of all nations and of all ships. The Nautilus will be close in the wake of the Spray."

"Thanks, Morton, thanks! Here is my boat."

A boat which had been signaled for from the Spray schooner now dashed up to the steps and both the admiral and the captain descended them together. The Nautilus lay at about a mile ont; and the Spray at about double that distance now; but that space was rapidly decreasing, as with a long tack she was beating in to meet her boat.

Then the admiral turned to one of the officers that were with him and said:

"Are you sure, Mr. Strongways, that Mr. Anderson has taken possession of the ravine?"

"He will be in possession, admiral, within half an hour of this time.

"That will do; and now, gentlemen, I do not order you on this duty. I go myself, more as a spectator than otherwise, for I shall let Mr. Greene, of the Spray, fight his own schooner, and not interfere with him, but I shall, of course, be glad to have you with me."

"And we are glad to go, admiral," was the reply.

The two boats pushed off together and were soon pulling toward their respective vessels.

Captain Morton waved his arm to the admiral, as the American boat shot off at an angle toward the Nautilus; and then the blue light gradually began to die away on board the Spray, but still it shone sufficiently to indicate her place in the offing.

There was a feeling of deep joy and serenity, now, about the heart of Captain Morton. He folded his arms across his breast and kept his eyes fixed upon the admiral's house, which, dimly outlined against the night sky, he could see, as he each moment receded further and further from it.

"She is there!" he thought. "She is there! my own dear child, saved to me at last through so many perils! She is there! my darling treasure! Oh, would that there were but one other in this life, to share with me the joy that now sits so serenely at my heart—her poor mother! No, no, that may not be. We shall not all meet again until we meet in heaven!"

Little did Captain Morton think that Grace—in the depth of her affection for Gerald and in her small experience of the worst villainies of which Dolan were capable—had conceived the idea of revisiting the smugglers' haunt on Gerald's account.

And now the blue light died out on the deck of the Spray, and the admiral's boat was nearly alongside of the schooner.

"Boat ahoy!" was the cry from the deck-watch.

"Flag!" was the response; and then a couple of lanterns at the gangway showed Lieutenant Green in uniform, with his drawn sword in his hand, with which he ceremoniously saluted Admiral Clifford, who returned the courtesy, and then shook hands with Mr. Green.

"Only an amateur on this occasion, Mr. Green, and a passenger, that is all. I bring some volunteers with me, though, all of whom you know; and we want you now to be so good, in a few hours, as to completely rout out the nest of pirates commanded by the man Dolan, and who carry on their practices with the cutter Rift."

"We should be rejoiced, admiral; but as yet we have not fallen in with the rascals."

"They are there."

"There, sir?"

"Yes; there in the bay—in the cliff."

Mr. Green looked at the admiral, and very nearly committed the irreverence of whistling slightly; for he thought, at the moment, that Sir Thomas Clifford's reason must be a little—just a little—on the wane.

"Yes, Mr. Green, in the cliff. I will tell you all about if you will only come below."

"Certainly, admiral, certainly. You command here, sir, Where shall we go?"

"No, I will not command; but keep on and off at the entrance to the bay in which the smuggler vessel was supposed, by Captain Gray, to sink."

"Yes, admiral."

Lieutenant Green gave the necessary orders; and then he and the admiral and the officers who had come with the latter, descended to the little main cabin of the Spray where, to the surprise of Mr. Green, the secret of the cavern in the cliff was fully explained.

"That's it! Yes, that must be it!" he exclaimed; "and it is so easy, too—so very easy."

"There was its success."

"So simple. Why, we must have had no eyes not to see it!"

"It was never suspected and so never looked for," added the admiral. "Its very simplicity has been its safeguard from the first to the last; but that the Rift is lying there now at anchor, I have not the remotest doubt."

"Then we have this villain, admiral, in his own trap."

"We have indeed; and thank God that there are only those there who may well suffer with him. Captain Morton's daughter has been rescued from him; but that is a long story, which you shall hear the full particulars of at my house to-morrow. Lieutenant Anderson, with a strong party of his men, has by this time possession of the only other outlet from the caverns, except by the sea—that outlet from the top of the cliffs to the beach. I think, therefore, Mr. Green, that when they find their nest discovered they will be only too glad to surrender."

"Let them fight, admiral, if they like. We have the rascals surely now."

The heaving of the Spray on the agitated sea each moment became greater, and when the admiral and Mr. Green came upon the deck, the wind had very much increased, and they could see the little yacht Nautilus scudding along at a great rate, although she only carried a foresail, and was a little off the wind.

"Make for the bay," said Mr. Green. "We shall find less wind."

"But more water, sir," said Mr. Royle.

"Very likely, Mr. Royle, but we are going to look for our old acquaintance, the Rift."

"Lord, sir! you don't think of lifting her, do you? For I begin to think that after all, she must have gone down."

"We will see about that. I intend to tread her decks to-night, if I can."

"Yes, sir. Mad. Poor young fellow!" said Mr. Royle to himself. "Why there is nothing at all in the bay but a trumbilng sea, that will knock us about like a cockle-shell."

The Nautilus now shot ahead of the Spray and made its way close to one of two promontories, which, being on the weather-bow, shielded her from the full force of the wind, and she rode easily and safely.

Then the Spray dashed into the bay, and, as Mr. Royle had observed, there was such a tumbling sea in it that while the wind was not really so powerful there, from the reaction against the cliffs and the protection of the promontories, yet there was, in the seaman's phraseology, much more water.

A rocket, then, landward, sprang up into the night air, and Lieutenant Strongways, who had been on the watch for it, approached the admiral and said:

"Lieutenant Anderson sir, has taken possession of the ravine."

"That will do. Now, Mr. Green, I don't think we need wait except for the signal."

"A signal, admiral?"

"Ah, yes! I forgot. My man will hoist a lantern on the old signal post near the edge of the cliff, and below that, in a right line, will be the mouth of the cavern."

"There sir, is that it?"

"Yes; that will do. One white light."

As if ascending in the night air to the height of about twenty feet, by its own mere volition, a white light rose from the verge of the cliff.

"Now, sir," said the admiral, "I leave all to you."

"Admiral, may we follow up our track?"

"How do you mean?"

"Why, sir, when we left off fighting the Rift in this very bay, she had the last shot at us; and there is a piece of new wood in our bulwarks where she hit us. We owe her one for that, sir."

"Do as you please, Mr. Green. But fire one gun as a signal to Lieutenant Anderson that the attack is about to commence."

A few moments, and the boom of the first gun, which had so shocked Dolan in the inner cavern, awakened the echoes of the bay.

With a sharper report, an answering gun from shore.

"The lieutenant has the small twelve-pounder from his battery," said the admiral. "I want to catch these fellows without the loss of honest men's lives, if I can; and I told him to make a display of force. Now, sir, go in."

The crew of the schooner were placed at quarters, and the guns shotted. Surprise and expectation were upon every face; for no enemy could they see, and the Spray seemed to be only intent on her own destruction, by sailing into a bay, around the whole shoreward segment of which there seemed to be nothing but cliffs.

"Bill," said one sailor to another, "the skipper has been a knocking of his head agin the bulks, I take it. Eh?"

"It's orders, said Bill.

"Ay ay; but there's an end of the Spray."

"It's orders."

"Sir! Bill, what a cat's-head you are, to be sure. You haven't got no ideas."

"Loundings, there!" shouted the lieutenant.

"Quarter less three, sir!"

"That will do. Brail up, Mr. Royle. Down anchor, and let her swing!"

"Ay, ay, sir. And in time, too," muttered Mr. Royle. "Why, we are going stern on to this big cliff, with the light on the top of it!"

"You see it?" whispered the admiral.

"Something, sir."

"I fancy there is a difference. Look, Mr. Green."

The admiral had been looking through a night-glass, which he now handed to his lieutenant, who looked long and curiously at the portion of cliff below the light. Then he said:

"It is well done, admiral. I can see nothing but chalk."

"It is well done. One shot will settle the question, Mr. Green. Fire at the chalk, as it seems to be about a line or two over the water's surface."

The Spray had some eighteen-pound guns and one twenty-four. It was the twenty-four now that Lieutenant Green had pointed to the cliff.

You might, as the saying is, have heard a pin drop on board the Spray as Lieutenant Green pointed the gun, as the crew thought, against the solid face of the cliff.

"He'll bring it all down with a run," said Mr. Royle to the steersman.

"Ay, ay, sir."

The lieutenant pointed the gun. The Spray only lightly pitched stem and stern as she rode at her anchor, and the gun pointed from her larboard bow. The death-like stillness on the deck was then broken by the clear voice of Mr. Green: "Ready—fire!"

With a stunning report the twenty-four pounder was fired and awakened all the echoes of the bay. The ball tore through the canvas covering of the sea cave, and there was a crashing sound then and loud screams of rage and pain. A dull glare of light came through the opening in the thick double sail cloth and then the crew of the Spray seemed in a moment to comprehend the whole affair; and they raised a cheer, which mingled with the echoes of the gun.

That cheer was answered by another; and then, standing close in by the bows of the Spray, could be seen the Nautilus, with Captain Morton on her deck and the flush of excitement on his brow.

"Hurrah! Well done!" he shouted.

Lieutenant Green waved his hand to Captain Morton to keep out of the line of fire; for he fully expected a return of his shot from the cavern.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

FRAUD DETECTED.

The Wonderful English Handwriting Expert.

One of the most interesting persons in England is Mr. Inglis, an expert in handwriting. Having given himself to his business for more than forty years, his skill in detecting fraud is so great that there is scarcely a single contested will-case, turning upon the handwriting of testator or witnesses, in which he is not called upon to testify. He is a quiet gentleman, but he has a fund of stories at his command which a novelist would prize—stories of mysterious disappearances, murders, forgeries and concealments, which have been unravelled or detected by the study of a few strokes of the pen. One of these curious facts will show the nature of this expert's profession.

A miser by the name of Whalley died a few years ago, leaving his property, worth seventy thousand pounds, to two men who had nursed him during his last illness. As these men had no especial claim on the miser, his relatives contested the will on the ground of forgery.

The document was shown to Mr. Inglis, who declared the signature to be genuine, but the will itself to be a forgery. By the use of a powerful microscope, he discovered marks in the paper of previous writing, and after long and patient study, he told the court and jury in the case his opinion.

"I find," he said, "that the deceased probably wrote this will with a lead pencil. Now a lead pencil will always leave a furrow in the paper, which will remain, no matter how carefully the lead pencil marks may be removed. When he had written the body of the will, and was ready to sign his name, I think the lead pencil broke. And this is my reason for thinking so.

"The signature by Mr. Whalley is undoubtedly his own. When the lead pencil broke, it is my opinion that another person supplied Mr. Whalley with pen and ink. He signed his name. Then the two nurses rubbed out the will which was written with the lead pencil, and re-wrote this present will in ink, substituting their own names in the place of those originally writen by Mr. Whalley.

"The whole thing was very skilfully done, but, gentlemen, the marks of that lead pencil are to be seen on the paper, and this will is undoubtedly a forgery, although the testator's own signature is attached to it."

The facts of the case actually proved to be exactly as Mr. Inglis stated them. One of the two forgers is now in prison; the other confessed the forgery.

Mr. Inglis says: "Experts in this work are the growth of years; but I do not think you can make an expert, though you may train him up to a certain point.

"Suppose I have two documents to compare, to find out whether they were written by one and the same person. I study the most minute particulars of each paper in turn, the junction of the letters, the slopes the size of the letter and of the lines, the loops and the points.

"I then make out a report on sheets of tracing paper, fastened to a white surface, on which are shown loop for loop, letter for letter, habit for habit, in one column the false writing, in the other the real handwriting, of the person suspected. To each of these is attached in red ink, for facility of recognition, the letter, two numbers in the form of a fraction, say a $\frac{2}{3}$, the 2 showing the line to the document from which it is taken, the 3 indicating the word where 'a' is, in which I detect similarity. And in this way the whole problem is worked out.

"There are some peculiarities about handwriting which an expert must take into consideration, or he will blunder in coming to a decision. A servant, for example, is very apt to imitate the writing of his master. A private secretary will often fall, unconsciously, into the style of his chief. If twenty young ladies are educated at the same school, and taught writing by the same master, their handwriting will have much in common.

"Then, again, the fact that a signature is seen under the microscope to be cramped or tremulous is no indication of a forgery, because thousands of genuine signatures are signed every day by men who are excited, or nervous, or even drunk at the time. The expert must remember all this, and a hundred details besides.

"In the famous Tichborne trial, the comparison of different letters played a large part in deciding who was the rightful claimant to the English property. It may be said that the final disposition of thousands of pounds turned upon the writing of certain letter l's, which are made with too sharp a turn of the top."

Sleep.

The cry for rest has always been louder than the cry for food, not because it is more important, but because it is often harder to obtain. The best rest comes from good sleep. Of two men or women otherwise equal, the one who sleeps the more satisfactorily will be the more healthy, moral and efficient. Sleep well do much to cure irritability of temper, peevishness, and unhappiness. It will restore to vigour an overworked brain. It will build up and make strong a weary body. It will cure a headache. Indeed a long list might be made of nervous disorders and other maladies that sleep will cure. Sleeplessness is best cured by a clean, good bed, sufficient exercise to produce weariness pleasant occupation, good air, not too warm a room, a clear conscience, and avoidance of stimulants and narcotics.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Publisher.

MARKDALE, MAR. 31. 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES

—Hon. Wm. Smithe, Premier of British Columbia, died on Tuesday last.

—Montreal had a $45,000 fire on Tuesday.

—Hon Edward Blake has returned to Toronto from South Carolina, where he spent a few weeks in recuperating his health after the election campaign.

—A year ago a Buffalo paper declared that the Canadian Pacific was a senseless undertaking, running from nowhere to nowhere. Now Buffalo wants to be placed on the C. P. R. system and the Courier of that city is quite certain that the road threatens to monopolize the tea carrying trade.

—Intending immigrants to Dakota will be glad to learn that the floods there are retiring from business in order to leave something for the spring cyclones to do. A Dakota deluge may be hungry for life and property but it is no hog where the cyclone is interested.

THE OUTLOOK.

In reviewing the past three years, the casual observer is forcibly reminded of a series of short crops and low prices to the farmer, and while this is not only an opinion, but a reality, and not confined to one district or province, but has been universal throughout the civilized world, it is well to consider carefully some of the causes of "hard times," and if possible, draw useful lessons therefrom.

It is an indisputable fact that good times and prosperity have a tendancy to encourage extravagance, speculation and fast living generally, while hard times has the opposite effect, and after compels rigid economy.

This is, comparatively speaking, an agricultural country, and, while success depends chiefly on individual effort, yet even those who are not engaged in farming, are depending more or less on its prosperity for success.

One great advantage this country possesses in farming is its adaptation to mixed husbandry: The different varieties of grain, grasses, fruits, roots and stock are grown with success; and during the past three years of depression, special attention has been given to reducing the cost of production, cutting down every possible expenditure and paying increased attention to the cultivation of that which is found to be the most profitable; this is doubtless one reason why the stock and dairy interests have grown to such large proportions, and which is destined to enrich the soil, eradicate weeds and replenish the husbandmans coffers.

There is one remarkable fact, that now after three years of short crops, low prices and general depression, the country is in a better financial position than it was three years ago, after a period of great prosperity; this would appear strange at first thought, but when we consider the amount of debt which people had contracted while times were good, building their hopes on continued prosperity to meet their obligations, when the depression came they ceased to count on good crops and high prices, and consequently bent all their energies towards meeting debts already contracted, and at the same time determined to economize at least until the return of better times; we do not wonder that three years of retrenchment and practical economy has done much to remove encumberances, even though the wherewith remained decidedly scearce.

The Loaning Companies now tell us that money is coming in fast and many mortgages being paid off, but new loans are scearce and hard to get, which is further proof of our argument.

Now we expect a turning point is at hand; indications point to a return of better times, and by adhering to the principles of true economy, a depression may not overtake any individual who thus protects his interests.

A good way to avoid a difficulty is to always be prepared for it,

Farmers' Institute.

Report of meetings held at Maxwell March 22nd 1887.

Three public meetings of the Centre Grey Farmer s' Institute have been held this year, all of which have been successful, profitable and satisfactory, however this last meeting, at Maxwell is said to have been the best of the series, especially so in regard to number in attendance. Another point in which this meeting had the advantage is the fact that our local essayists and lecturers improve by practice, notably in this respect are Messrs T. B. White; D. J. Hunter, and W. G Pickell; These gentlemen have taken a very active part in all the meetings of the Institute, indeed we will not be surprised should they bloom forth full fledged professors at our Institute meetings next season.

In the following order the various subjects of interest were brought before the meeting.

The chair was taken at one o'clock by the very efficient President Thos. Kells, Esq., who explained the nature of Institute meetings in an able manner. In the absence of the Secretary Mr. D. K. Preston was appointed to act pro. tem.

Mr. W. G. Pickell produced his celebrated paper on horses, comparing the different classes and choosing those best adapted for the requirements of farmers in this part of the country, he also dwelt on other points of vital interest to farmers and horsemen.

Mr. T. B. White followed with a paper entitled "What do we know about Agricultural chemistry." This paper, although of a high educational order could be easily understood by any person of ordinary intelligence and shewed distinctly that the writer was both a reader and a thinker.

Next came Mr, D. J. Hunter with a splendid practical paper on a subject too well known but not sufficiently understood by very many farmers, namely "Thistles and Wild Oats."

A second paper by Mr. T. B. White "What a farmer ought to know" was well received. The subject matter of this paper was proof that the venerable gentleman is well acquainted with the relationship existing between a farm and a farmer. Meeting adjourned to sit again at seven o'clock.

EVENING MEETING.

In the evening a large crowd of people both Ladies' and Gentlemen favored the meeting with their presence. The most notable and a very enjoyable feature of the evening meeting was the assistance rendered by the Methodist Choir and individual local musicians, all of whom surprised the foreigners by the superior quality of music both vocal and instrumental, indeed no outsider would expect to find musical talent of so high an order in a village the size of Maxwell. The names of Miss Ferrier and Mr Albert Herron might be mentioned as prominent amongst the solo singers.

The Secretary read a letter from Nicholas Read Esq., warden of the county apologizing in a very humorous and witty strain for his absence, as his name was on the bill calling the meeting. The letter contained also a short comical dessertation on the distinguishing points between different animals.

Mr. D. J. Hunter read his renowned paper on "Farm Leakages," he also delivered a short and very interesting lecture on Manitoba and the North West. Mr Hunter's paper on Farm Leakages is really a splendid composition and well worthy the careful study of every farmer.

Mr. T. B. White read a paper which completely captured the audience and set all his hearers in a happy thinking mood, entitled "Good and bad Times."

The meeting closed by the choir singing "God save the Queen.

It would not be fair to close the description of this meeting without alluding to Mr. Wesley Long who was the chief factor in arranging the meeting which proved so immensely successful in every respect.

Com.

Maxwell.

Guess "March" has got his back up about something for he is taking his departure in a rage.

It is well that the winter is so nearly closed as the farmers are complaining of a scarcity of feed.

We are glad to learn that Mr. Scheniman is recovering, though but slowly, from his recent illness.

Evidently the wedding fever has seized the surrounding country: Wedding bells are heard quite frequently.

The concert given in the Methodist Church last week, was excellent. We hope to have our Flesherton friends come again.

The Farmers Institute held in the Orange Hall, last Tuesday, was greeted with a full house. Many excellent papers on subjects pertaining to farming were read. The evening meeting was enlivened by music furnished by Maxwell choir. Wanz.

THE

LATEST!

New Carpets

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Lace Curtains

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Tweeds

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Boots & Shoes

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Ties & Hats

—TA—

McFarland's.

NEW JUBILEE HANDKERCHIEFS

—AT—

McFarland's.

New Black & Colored Silks at

McFarland's.

My European buyer advises large purchases in New Dress Goods, Muslins, Gloves, Laces, Silks, Parisols, Plushes, &c., &c. Which will exceed all former efforts in style price or quality

TEA! TEA! TEA!

Two extensive Shipments of pure Japan Tea's received direct from Japan over the C. P. Railway, via British Columbia. Is it not to your interest to purchase your Tea from Headquarters rather than through Peddlers who get their supplies from 3rd class Houses in Toronto or elsewhere, and charge an exhorbitant price to cover expenses in travelling around from house to house. Save your money and come direct to McFarland's the largest Tea Dealer in Grey County.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

Auditors' Report

—OF THE—

Receipts & Expenditure of Markdale Village for 1886.

RECEIPTS.		EXPENDITURE.
From Tps. Glenelg	$90.30	Wm. Rowe, lumber
" " Artemesia	54.81	Wm. Rowe, lumber
	$145.11	C. W. Rutledge, building sidewalk
		T. McNea, lumber
		Joe. Sproule, work
		Bank interest
		Haskett Bro's
	$145.11		$1

We the undersigned Auditors' appointed to Audit the accounts of the V of Markdale, for the year 1886, beg to certify that having examined the acc and vouchers for the same, find them correct with a balance due the Trea of nine cents, and the following accounts still unpaid:

R. G. Byden, $1.75
Thos. Mathews, 1.50
R. S. Rae. 6.20
C. W. Rutledge, 6.00

Total $15.45.

R. D. BIGGER, } Auditors
R. S. RAE, }

Markdale, Feb. 14th, 1887.

MARKDALE

SASH and DOOR FACTORY

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain tory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, every being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Batto

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to no Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every departmen would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Prompt

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undresse

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning d

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,

MARKDALE

FOR SALE.

For sale or to rent for a term of years—50 acres—all cleared well watered, good buildings, 40 acres free from stumps and stones, over which all kinds of machinery can be run 1½ miles from Markdale.

338-41 WM. BROWN.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart:—Late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

The Law Concerning Newspapers.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed his name, or another's, or whether he subscribed or not, is responsible for ment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publish may continue to send it until payment made, and then collect the whole amou whether the paper is taken from the off or not.

3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit m be instituted in the place where the paper published, although the subscriber may resi hundreds of miles away.

4. The courts have decided that refusin to take newspapers or periodicals from th post-office or removing and leaving them u called for, while unpaid, is prima facie evi ence of intentional fraud.

Partnership Notice.

Dr's SPROULE & BRODIE, ha entered into a partnership for t practice of their profession. Dr. Sprou will be found at his old office Turner Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his off Mathew's new block. 338

Flesherton.

Dr. Armstrong, who has been in the Old Country for over twelve months has returned to Canada, and with his wife are now visiting the home of his parents here.

Miss Maud Richardson returned home this week after a few weeks visit in the city of Hamilton and Toronto.

D. E. Wright recently sold out his business here to Mr. Anderson, and left on Monday last to take a situation in a mercantile house in St. Louis, U. S. Mr. Wright who is an energetic young man will no doubt make his mark in the land of Stars and Stripes; We wish him every success.

Runaway; a span of young horses owned by John Adams Esq., broke loose on Thursday last and started to run at a rapid pace up Collingwood St. when being headed off by some men, dashed under the verandah of the Flesherton Hotel carrying away several posts of the same, after a considerable run they came to a halt not much the worse for their scare, and no body hurt.

Considerable trouble has been experienced in making selection of site for the new school house to be erected in this place the coming summer. At the last meeting of ratepayers the old site was chosen. Since that a petition has been signed by a number of the ratepayers praying the trustees to call another meeting for the purpose of selecting another or better site for the handsome edifice to be erected; in compliance therewith, another meeting is called for April 1st when it is hoped the matter will be finally settled.

Mrs. J. W. Henderson of Toronto has been spending some days with her parents in this place.

Kimberley.

Several weeks have passed since my last correspondence, and nothing remarkable has even now occurred to note.

A little more than the usual excitement was experienced at the late elections.

The so called "Ross Bible" has been taken out of our schools, which caused some disputing

Mr. McKenzie, father of Benjamin McKenzie our blacksmith, has bought a lot here and is going into the coopering business.

The boys here started a boxing school in the Orange Hall. Some of them may develope into a Gilmore or John L. Sullivan or some such species of animal.

A shoemaker and Doctor would find a good opening here.

And now Mr Editor I wish in conclusion to express an opinion, viz.,—That we Canadians, as a rule are as sociable, charitable and democratic as any people in the world, though composed of various nationalities and creeds, but the harmony of neighborhoods is often sadly broken by politicians, newspapers and the clergy. Now this is not as it should be. We have clashing of interests sufficient without having those sensitive yet useless questions raked up for selfish and party purposes, and I believe if Canadians ever develope into a nation of united happy contented people, those extreme party bickerings will have to be buried, otherwise we will degenerate into a Despotic Government with a standing army to maintain order.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR.—Why "does it appear strange what a hub ub people make in reference to the so called "Ross Bible?" Protests have been and are being made against its use, and hence arises strifes and contentions. It was, secretly introduced by Inspectors, and used by teachers a year or more, before the people knew that such was the case. That there are good and sufficient causes for the protests against its use, is attested by the persistent efforts made to minimize them—throwing dirt in the eyes of the people. The question is not whether "99 out of every 100 ratepayers know what it contains," but whether knowing what is left out of the "Ross Bible," and the evident reasons for the excisions, they are justifiedin protesting.

How can anyone possibly arrive at the conclusion that, "If the lives of its opposers were squared by its teachings, they would make good citizens, perhaps much better than at present," when those passages teaching obedience to civil powers are carefully excluded from the Ross Bible? Those holding such opinions must be ignorant of the facts, or logic is one of the lost arts.

No Protestant can consistently or conscientiously, use, permit or justify the use of the "Ross Bible," if he be aware that the following passage is left out of it, For there is one God, one mediator also between God and men, himself man, Christ Jesus. Also Rev. 22 and 18 & 19 is struck out for a very evident reason.

Yours truly,
Docso.

Try Davis' new 30c, Japan Tea you will be convinced that it is a very superior article for the money, Special reduction for large purchases.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

Mr. Henry Johnston, of Inistioge, has purchased Alex. McDonnell's interest in the McCullough House, Dundalk, and has taken possession.

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. McLellan, of Melancthon, celebrated their golden wedding week before last.

Flesherton hankers after incorporation and a roller mill.

Toronto Cemeteries are being closed against Sunday funerals, except in extreme cases.

Mr. R. Truax, of Walkerton, is the Reform candidate in East Bruce; Mr. Cargill the Conservative. The election takes place on Saturday.

A man named David Hann was run down on the G. T. R. near Streetsville on Saturday night. His body was fearfully mangled.

A dissipated young man named Edward Tierney, near Trenton, shot himself last Friday.

A Tottenham magistrate recently fined himself $1 for allowing the snow to lie upon the sidewalk.

Fire in state prison at Jackson, Mich., on Saturday night caused a loss of $25,000.

Wm. Breese of Chatsworth has accepted a situation in a drug store in Detroit.

A writ is to be served on the Paisley Advocate for libelling the Royal Templars.

The Methodist Observer, printed in Bomanville, says that every member of the staff is a Methodist, even to the "devil." There are doubtless many devils in the Methodist Church, but they are not all there.

Fog & Masson, of Shelburne, are to have Marcicanos's Italion Orchestra from Toronto, to furnish music for their Spring Millinary, opening to-morrow the 1st April.

Shelburne Spring Show will be held on the 21st April.

Mr. F. H. Thompson, of Shelburne, and sister were recently thrown out of their cutter and severly injured while driving.

Wm. Hall, of the Shelburne planing mill has the contract for re-building the Queen's Hotel at Dundalk for McLean and Waters.

John Thompson, of Corbetton, received a severe cut in his foot recently.

Shelburne is to have a Mechanics' Institute right off.

Coulson & Stoddart, of Owen Sound, will run an accomodation stage between Owen Sound and Allenford this summer commencing 1st April. Fare 25c.

Wm. McComb and family of Holland township moved last week to the North-west.

The family in Chatsworth who was reported as dwelling in the same appartments with their cattle, have seperated and sent the cattle out to the country after a visit from the village police.

Owen Sound is preparing to celebrate on a grand scale in honor of the Queen's Jubilee.

James Noble, of the Royal Hotel, Meaford, has sold his noted trotter, Deadwood, to John Palmer, importer of Richmond Hill for $1,000.

The C. P. R. exhibition car has been exhibited at points along the Northern railway recently.

Measels are bad in Thornbury.

The banquet given recently at Clarksburg in honor of Dr. Sproule, M. P., and Capt. Rorke, M. P. P., was an entire success, and conducted on thorough temperance principles.

The report that Neil McColman ex-M. P. P. for East Grey had received an appointment as Light House Keeper at Collingwood, is contradicted.

The old hand still "Holds the fort" and is likely to for some time to come.

We are pleased to say that Rev. Mr. Cornish is able to resume pastoral duties after his recent illness.

The books of the absconded Treasurer of Bruce county have been audited and as far as can now be learned there is a shortage of $6000. Further developments are expected in this respect. A writ of attachment has been issued against Mr. Cooper's real and personal property and an expert accountant has been engaged to fully investigate the affairs of the office. When this is done a special meeting of the county council will be called to deceide what is to be done. Mr. Cooper was colonel of the 32nd battalion and a county magistrate.

—NEW—

Hardware.

To builders and those about to build your wants supplied at reasonable rates.

IN STOCK

☞ NAILS, GLASS, PUTTY, HINGES, BUTTS, SCREWS, DOOR HANDLES, TOWER BOLTS, CHAIN BOLTS, HAMMERS, CHISSELS, SAWS, BRACES, BITTS, CUTTERY, LAMPS, LAMP GLOBES, &c.

OILS, LEADS AND COLORS!

—all pure goods—

PAINTS ground and mixed any shade ready for the brush in quantities from one pint up, guaranteed free from all alkalies and other foreign substances.

Full Lines in Tinware at bottom prices.

CALL AND SEE US IT WILL PAY YOU.

Note the place the sign of the cross cutt saw.

E. MABEE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

To Sell or Rent.

LOT 15 con. 12 Holland, 124 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings, well watered by good well. 15 rods from school, one mile from Methodist Church, 7 miles from Markdale, good roads, 50 acres fall plowing done. A bargain in it. Apply to.

JAMES LOGAN.
Harkaway, P. O.

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for further particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
Holland Centre P. O.

338-48

Stock Taking

SALE

At the Toronto House,

Markdale.

SLAUGHTER PRICES FOR CASH.

Wm. Brown.

SEEDS

Seeds!

SEEDS!

FIELD & GARDEN

SEEDS!

—AT—

Stephen's

DRUG STORE.

Your's Respectfully,

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have re-moved to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

HAMPDEN

WATCHES

DURABLE-:-RELIABLE.

—ALSO—

Waltham, Elgin and Colombiers,

—IN STOCK—

American Clocks, Silverware, Wedding Rings.

☞ Watch repairing and fitting Spectacles a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,

A RELIABLE JEWELLER,
MARKDALE

XMAS GOODS.

NEW GOODS ARRIVING EVERY

—WEEK AT—

RUSSELL'S

Noted Jewellry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Consisting of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES, CLOCKS, JEWELRY, SPECTACLES, SILVER-WARE, FORKS, SPOONS, KNIVES, Fancy MIRRORS, ALBUMS, VIOLINS &c.

Any one looking for Xmas presents will do well to call at RUSSELL'S, Flesherton, a fine stock to select from, and prices very low. If your watch or clock wants repairing, RUSSELL'S is the place to take it: A satisfactory job every time, ☞ Remember,

JAS. G. RUSSELL'S

Noted Jewelry Store,
FLESHERTON.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRAITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE,

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 13, CON., 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation, well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY
Berkley.

31-t

TO RENT.

THE old and well known Pickell farm adjoining Flesherton, consisting of 100 acres, eighty five cleared, twenty fall ploughed. Splendid bank barn with spacious horse stable, stone cow stable, and never failing well, all underneath barn. Fine young orchard of 100 trees bearing well a good variety of fruit. Comfortable log house.

For terms apply to Wm. Brown, Esq., Markdale, or on the premises to

W. G. PICKELL.

WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE St., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes.

389-52

HEALTH.

Diagnosis of Infantile Diseases.

1. Congestion of the cheeks in children, except in cases of cachexia and chronic diseases, indicate an inflammation of a febrile condition.

2. Congestion of the face, ears and forehead, of short duration, strabismus with febrile reaction, oscillation of the iris, irregularity of the pupil, with falling of the upper lips, indicate a cerebral affection.

3. A marked degree of emaciation which progresses gradually, indicates some sub-acute or chronic affection of a grave character.

4. Bulbar hypertrophy of the fingers and curving of the nails, are signs of cyanosis.

5. Hypertrophy of the spongy portion of the bones indicates rachitis.

6. The presence between the eylids of a thick and purulent secretion from the Meibomian glands may indicate great prostration of the general powers.

7. Passive congestion of the conjunctival vessel indicates approaching death.

8. Long-continued lividity as well as lividity produced by emotion and excitement, the respiration continuing normal, are indices of a fault in the formation of the heart or the great vessels.

9. A temporary lividity indicates the existence of a grave acute disease, especially of the respiratory organs.

10. The absence of tears in children four months old or more suggests a form of disease which will usually be fatal.

11. Piercing and acute cries indicate a severe cerebro-spinal trouble.

12. Irregular muscular movements, which are partly under the control of the will during the hours when one is awake, indicate the existence of chorea.

13. The contraction of the eyebrows, together with the turning of the head and eyes to avert the light is a sign of cephalalgia.

14. When the child holds his hand upon his head, or strives to rest the head upon the bosom of his mother or nurse, he may be suffering from ear disease.

15. When the fingers are carried to the mouth, and there is, beside, great agitation apparent, there is probably some abnormal condition of the larynx.

16. The act of scratching or of pinching the nose in children indicates the presence of worms or some intestinal trouble.

17. When a child turns his head co n stantly from one side to another, there is a suggestion of some obstruction in the larynx.

18. A hoarse and indistinct voice is suggestive of laryngitis.

19. A feeble and plaintive voice indicates a trouble in the abdominal organs.

20. A slow and intermittent respiration accompanied with sighs, suggests the presence of cerebral disease.

21. If the respiration is intermittent but accelerated there is capillary bronchitis.

22. If it is superficial and accelerated, there is some inflammatory trouble of the larynx and trachea.

23. A strong and sonorous cough suggests spasmodic croup.

24. A hoarse and rough cough is an indication of true croup.

25. When the cough is clear and distinct, there is bronchitis.

26. When it is suppressed and painful, there is pneumonia and pleurisy.

27. If the cough is convulsive, it indicates whooping cough.

28. Sometimes one sees a dry and painless cough in the course of typhoid or intermittent fever, in the course of difficult dentition, or an attack of worms, under these conditions the cough is often due only to a bronchitis, which has been caused by the original disease.

Vegetable, Animal and Mixed Food.

J. Hartman relates his experience and impressions as follows: For 224 days he existed on vegetable diet alone, then for two months on animal diet, lastly for six months on a mixed diet. The results he gave in tables prepared by Prof. Valentine. He lived for 14 days on oats, grits and bread alone, then on beans and bread, etc. The increase and decrease in the food, drinking water, weight of the body, waste matter, and the influence of the one on the other were carefully given. The results are summed up as follows: While taking vegetable food the weight of the body increased markedly, however, not in a regular and continuous manner, but by certain substances there was an increase. Under animal food some show an increase, some a decrease in the body weight. The result of the mixed diet was still more complicated. He drew interesting conclusions from the results as to the organization of pathological changes from the effects of diet. Of most interest was his conclusion, viz: that a mixed diet is the most natural and reasonable food for man.

Curative Power of Water.

There is no remedy of such general application and none so easily obtainable as water, and yet nine persons in ten will pass it by in an emergency, to seek for something of less efficacy. There are but few cases of illness where water should not be given the highest place as a remedial agent.

A strip of flannel or napkin folded lengthwise and wrung out of hot water and applied around the neck of a child that has the croup will usually bring relief in ten minutes. A towel folded several times and quickly wrung out of hot water and applied over the seat of pain, in tootache or neuralgia, will generally afford prompt relief. This treatment in colic works like magic.

We have known cases that have resisted treatment for hours yield to this in ten minutes. There is nothing that will so promptly cut short a congestion of the lungs, sore throat or rheumatism, as hot water when applied promptly and thoroughly. Pieces of cotton batting dipped in hot water and applied to all sores and new cuts, bruises and sprains, is the treatment now adopted in hospitals.

Tea and Coffee to Children.

Against the practice of giving tea and coffee to children we cannot speak too strongly. Childhood is the period when the nervous activity is at its greatest. The brain is ever busy in receiving new impressions. Reflex action, co-ordination of muscles, and the special senses are all under a special course of training. The nervous system is pushed to its utmost capacity, and long is the list of victims that follows its over-stimulation. In these little people nothing but harm can come from the use of such cerebral stimulants as tea or coffee. Bad, then, as this practice is, let us as physicians be aggressive in its prohibition. Do not be satisfied by answering no, when asked as to its use, but let us educate the families with whom we come in contact that such practice is evil. I speak emphatically, because not only among the poor and uneducated, but among the rich who should know better, this practice is marvelously prevalent.

Who Knows?

BY JOHN NAPIER.

I grant her fair—aye, passing fair,
As lovely as a budding rose;
But is there soul behind that face,
A beauty 'neath that outward grace?
Who knows—who knows?

Does light of love beam from those eyes?
The love that in her bosom glows?
Or is the light that lingers there
Delusive, though it shines so fair?
Who knows—who knows?

Does that fair form a fairer charm,
A tender, loving heart inclose?
A heart whose tendrils, like the vine,
Would round the heart that loved it twine?
Who knows—who knows?

And should life's sky be overcast,
And gathering clouds around thee close,
Should fortune frown and false friends flee,
Would that heart still cling close to thee?
Who knows—who knows?

Or is she, can she ever be,
As fickle as the wind that blows
And veers, as if it were at play,
Trifling with all who own her sway?
Who knows—who knows?

But why a prey to doubt remain?
Why halt 'twixt hope and fear?—propose.
She may be waiting till you dare
To crown with love that beauty rare,
Who knows—who knows?

Sunrise and Sunset.

BY ROBERT BURNS WILSON.

SUNRISE.

Flame-hearted lover of the Earth - great Sun!
Rise from thy purple couch; Stretch forth thine arms
Through morning's parted curtains; Let the charms
Of waiting love—which it were death to shun—
Persuade thy clasp. Now hath the Earth begun
To loose her robes of mist; with mock alarms
She yields her beauty, which love's longing warms,
Forestalling the embrace thy kiss hath won.

Arise, great god of light and life, arise,
Enfold the fond Earth in the deathless glowing
Of thy fierce love; Bend from the shimmering skies
Which burn before thee in thine onward going.
No cheer have we and not of thy bestowing:
Thou art the joy of all hope-lifted eyes.

SUNSET.

Within thy burning palace in the West
Thou art awhile withdrawn. Yet doth thy face
Look from the closing portal for a space,
Back to the Earth, which thy dear love hath blessed:
While she with tears and soft sighs half-repressed
Beholds thee sinking in thy resting-place,
As with up-gathered folds of dewy lace
She hugs remembrance to her yearning breast.

Thy glory darkens, and the careful night
Hangs out the moon's pale lamp while yet the flush
On Evening's face—with thy departing light—
Turns from rose-pink to crimson, till the blush
Dies With the coming stars, and slumber's hush
Wraps thy warm bride, who waits thy waking Might.

Make Her Pillow Soft.

"Sir! are you the undertaker
That buries the pauper dead?
Then you are to fetch my Mary—
For that's what the doctor said.
You see, I am poor an' frien'less,
An' lame from a cruel fall,
An' the sickness an' the medicine
Has taken our money all.

"Ugh—ugh—excuse this hacking,
It makes me slow to speak,
I am troubled with a cough, sir,
An' both my eyes are weak;
It's sittin' up all night, sir,
A-watchin' at death's door—
Yes, yes! I know I'm tedious,
It's tedious to be poor.

"What do I want? Just wait, sir,
I'm comin' to that same.
What did my Mary die of?
Hunger and cold. Her name?
I've told her name—my Mary—
I'll set it down for you:
She died last night in my arms, sir,
We were alone—we two.

An' I want to ask a favor:
When you make my Mary's bed
Please—make—her—pillow—soft, sir,
Soft, for her achin' head.
I know it's done with the achin'
An' all that hurted it oft,
But 'twill comfort me a bit, sir,
If—you—make—her—pillow- soft."

The undertaker heard him
And silent turned away:
But he made poor Mary's pillow
With tender hands that day.
And often something choked him
As of rising tears—and oft
He heard through the tap of the hammers
"Please—make—her—pillow—soft."

His Mistake.

Aunt: Why have you broken off your engagement?

Niece: Because he got it into his head that I intended to marry him.

Where the Difficulty Lay.

A farmer, hearing that money was cheap in the city, came to see about it. He entered a bank, called for the cashier and said: "Mr. Cashier, is it true that money is abundant and cheap?" The cashier answered in the affirmative. "Can I get some?" queried the countryman. "Certainly," replied the moneyed man. "Well, just lend me a hundred dollars for six months." The cashier said: "You can have the money, we have plenty of it, but it is necessary for us to have collateral." The farmer winced and responded: "Collateral! What's that?" The matter was explained. Then the planter of the soil, illuminated on the subject of political economy, with a broad grin, rejoined: "Ah, I see how it is, Mr. Cashier. Money is plentiful and not high, but it is this collateral that is scarce and hard to get."

A Domestic Treasure.

A lawyer lately, boasting of the neatness and regularity of his wife, said, "If I get up in the night, however pitch dark, I can find my clothes, down to my gloves, all in their proper places. I was up this morning before daylight," he continued, putting his hand into his pocket for his handkerchief, "and——" Here he pulled out, not his handkerchief but his wife's nightcap!

Liberty, Equality, Fraternity.

Actress to washer-woman who has brought her bill: "How can you be so impertinent as to dun me in this way?"

Washerwoman: "Impertinent! What do you mean? Who are you, I should like to know? If I choose to pay sixpence for a gallery-ticket, you have to faint on the stage for my amusement!"

A French Judge's Call to Order.

Scene—A French court of assizes. Judge: "Prisoner, you have beaten this poor man so cruelly that he is dead."

Prisoner, vehemently: "He attacked me first. Besides, he was a rascal, and gave us much trouble on the farm. It is not my fault if he was an idiot."

Judge, with severity: "You should remember that idiots are men like you and me!

A Serious Case.

"Doctor," said a patient, "I'm troubled with insomnia, and I want you to do something for me."

Do you lie awake most of the night?" asked the physician.

"No, I'm all right at night, but I can't get any sleep during the day."

A Rhetorician.

Schoolmaster, to his wife: "My dear I wish you would speak more carefully. You say that 'Henry Jones came to this town from Sunderland?'" Wife: "Yes." Schoolmaster: "Well, now, wouldn't it be better to say that 'he came from Sunderland to this town?'" Wife: "I don't see any difference in the two expressions." Schoolmaster: "But there is a difference—a theoretical difference. You don't hear me use such awkward expressions. By the way, I have a letter from your father in my pocket." Wife: "But my father is not in your pocket. You mean you have in your pocket a letter from my father." Schoolmaster: "There you go with your little quibbles! You take a delight in harassing me. You are always taking up a thread, and representing it as a rope." Wife: "'Representing it to be a rope,' you mean." Schoolmaster: "For goodness sake, be quiet! Never saw such a quarrelsome woman in my life!"

Still Heart Whole.

Daughter—Father, did you really kick George, as you threatened to do?

Old Man—I did.

Daughter—Oh, father, how could you? You have broken his heart.

Old Man—No I haven't. I didn't come anywhere near his heart.

Of Home Development.

"When you have a cold spell," said a Manitoba man to a Torontonian, with a slight tinge of sarcasm, "you say it comes from Manitoba, and when you have a hot spell it comes from Manitoba. Where does your fine weather come from—Manitoba too?"

"Oh no," responded the Torontonian; "our fine weather is of a purely local origin."

A Duty Brigdet was not quite Prepared for.

Brigdet, who has been sent to crack some nuts in preparation for Mrs. Blank's little dinner-party, to be held during the evening, enters with a few badly cracked upon a plate and one hand pressing her face: "Faith an' indade, Missus Blank, I'll lose me place before I'll break me tathe a-crackin' any more o' thim nuts! Sure me jaw's all lame now as it is, so it is!"

What a Woman Did.

During the Crimean War, it required much suffering to convince conservative Englishmen that the routine way of doing things is not always the best.

Steamer-loads of troops were sent from England to Malta, the first rendezvous. The voyage was made in seven or eight days, yet each steamer carried an allowance of eight weeks' supply of hospital storea.

The explanation of the fact brought out the castiron routine of the service. In the days of sailing vessels it took eight weeks for a transport to sail from England to Malta, and the old routine could not be departed from.

Some of the general officers had been trained for years in the martinet school of discipline. The Crimean summer is intensely hot and its winter is excessively cold. The army regulations forced the men to wear the leather stock, no matter how blazing the sun, and to shave even when the winter's wind was bitterly cold.

Not until a year of suffering had been endured were the men allowed to leave off the terrible stocks, or to seek the protection of a full beard.

"Where there is much hair," said one general, "there is dirt, and where there is dirt there will be disease," and he compelled his men to shave when they were freezing.

In the midst of the terrible sufferings, when the men were dying from cholera and wanted the necessaries of life, a general issued an order directing cavlary officers to lay in a stock of yellow ochre and pipe clay, for the use of the men in rubbing up their uniforms and accoutrements.

When Florence Nightingale began her hospital work she was asked to walk in the routine paths. At the first step she took outside, she was stopped by a network of "red tape." She cut the "tape" at once and walked where she would.

A few weeks before she arrived, a surgeon of a transport ship had asked for the loan of three stoves to save the sick soldiers from dying of the cold. The store-keeper refused to let one go, unless he received a requisition, from head-quarters. As it required several days to get that document, the surgeon saw that scores of men were doomed.

The second day after Miss Nightingale's arrival, six hundred wounded were brought to the Sentari hospital. On the first day she had been delayed by "red tape." Taking a few Turks with her, she went to a store-house The guardian would not unlock it.

"Break open the door," said the gentlewoman to the Turks. When they obeyed she selected the supplies she needed and ordered the Turks to carry them to the hospital. A washing contractor returned the hospital linen in such a foul state that it could not be used. Miss Nightingale annulled the contract by establishing a washing-house, and refusing to send one article to the contractor.

The medical authorities turned a cold shoulder upon the gentlewoman. "She couldn't speak to all the sick men, you know," said a soldier in the hospital; "we lay there by hundreds. But we could kiss her shadow as it fell on our pillows."

"Before she came into the hospital," said another, there was cussin' and swearin'; and after that it was as quiet as a church.

ODD THINGS IN CHINA.

Interesting Facts Collated by a Civilised and Cultivated Ex-mandarin.

The highest ambition of a Chinese gentleman is to have a nice coffin and a fine funeral.

They feed their friends sumptuously when dead, but let them take care of themselves the best they could while alive.

The highest recommendation a man can have is in the fact of his having a wife.

A bachelor is likened to a counterfeited coin; he is looked upon with suspicion even by his own household.

Love-making is only done three days after marriage. It is not considered the safest way to get ahead of a rival, but the surest way to get a wife without losing much time.

A previous acquaintanceship between the male and female prevents them from marriage. For this reason a man seldom weds a girl of his own town. They are likewise prevented from marrying kins or namesakes. Joneses are not allowed to marry Joneses, nor Smiths to marry Smiths.

A girl is never considered anything else in her own father's house than an honored guest. She is neither responsible for the family's debts nor enjoys a share in its fortunes, as in the case of sons.

Daughters depend upon their husbands for fame and fortune, while sons depend upon the parents and upon themselves.

A man could borrow money on the strength of his having a son, but no one would advance him a cent if he had a dozen of daughters. The former is responsible for the debts of his father for three generations. The latter is only responsible for the debts of her husband.

When a Chinaman meets another he shakes and squeezes his own hands; covers his head. If great friends had not seen each other for a long time, after the mutual hand-shaking they would rub shoulders until they become tired. Instead of asking each other's health they would say: "Have you eaten your rice, where are you going, what is your business when you get there, how old are you, and how much did you pay for your shoes?"

Men wear long petticoats and carry fans, while women wear short jackets and carry canes.

Boats are drawn by horses, carriages moved by sails.

Old men play balls and fly kites, while children fold their arms and look on.

Schoolmasters have more power over young than parents. If within three years' schooling the child is not morally as well as intellectually reformed he is sent into another school.

Parents and spectators instead of the children are held responsible for crimes committed by the latter.

"It is much better to be ignorant and know how to live than to be learned and not know how to live. The principal object of a school is to learn how to live in tranquillity and happiness and nothing more." So say all Chinese scholars.

It is much lesser crime to steal your neighbor's ox than to steal his dog. The former is simply personal property, while the latter takes the place of a man—watchman.

If a Chinaman desires the death of an enemy he goes and hangs himself upon his neighbor's door. It is a sure cure to kill not only that particular enemy, but members of the entire family will be in jeopardy of losing their lives.

When a Chinaman desires a visitor to dine with him he does not ask him to do so, but when he does not wish him to stay he puts the question, "Oh, please stay and dine with me!" The visitor will then know he is not wanted.

A rich man's servant gets no salary, yet many are the applicants; while big salaries are paid to the servants of the common people but few make applications. The perquisites of the former, often more than tripling the salaries of the latter, are the sole reasons of these differences.

When a Chinaman expects a present and it does not come he sends one of lesser value.

To encourage honesty and sincerity, confidential clerks and salesmen in all branches of industries receive an annual net percentage of the firm's business besides their regular salaries.

WONG CHIN FOO.

Spoiling Children.

Coddling, pampering, and gratifying every wish of a child, is more the result of selfishness than love. A love that cannot see future good in present discipline, is both narrow and stupid. True love can deprive the present minute of pleasure for future hours of good and pure happiness.

"'I try so hard to make my children happy,' said a mother, one day, with a sigh in despair at her efforts. 'Stop trying,' exclaimed a practical friend at her elbow; 'do as a neighbor of mine does.' 'And how is that?' she asked, dolefully. 'Why, she simply lets her children grow and develop naturally, only directing their growth properly. She has always thrown them as far as practicable upon their own resources; taught them to wait upon themselves, no matter how many servants she had, and to construct their own playthings. When she returns home from an absence, they wait but one thing—their mother's kiss. Whatever is bought for them is bestowed when the needed time comes. Nothing exciting is allowed them at night, and they go to bed and sleep in a wholesome mental state that insures restful slumber. They are taught to love nature; and to feel that there is nothing arrayed so finely as the lily of the field, the bees, and the butterflies; that there is nothing so mean as a lie, nor anything so miserable as disobedience; that it is a disgrace to be sick, and that good health, good teeth, and good temper comes from plain food, plenty of sleep, and being good.'"

Let a child learn early that future good is worth the sacrifice of a momentary pleasure that will not bring lasting gain.

Of all mental gifts, the rarest is intellectual patience; and the last lesson of culture is to believe in difficulties which are invisible ourselves.

It is much easier to act firmly and bravely under a strong, impulse than it is to restrain an impulse when called upon to do so. Of all the battles of life. There is not one that requires so much real courage as that silent battle with self which every dutiful person finds it frequently necessary to wage.

"To Her Own Counthry."

Among the steerage passengers in a narder sailing from Boston to Liver
the June of 1886 was an old, old
The days were so pleasant, yet so mo that one was tempted to rove as far ship's limit allowed in search of inter one day some of the cabin passenger to see what they thought of the ste

The steerage people had come out sunshine, and were laughing and talki playing games, and amusing the much after the manner of the "first-passengers. There were sturdy young and pretty young girls, and humble going "home" on visits; and there plenty of room for all to be comfo since the steerage travellers to the old try are comparatively few; and the ov steamers are those which come to A bringing crowds of emigrants to pick gold with which our streets are suppo
be paved.

The steerage passengers in this June age seemed to be friendly and merry to "Every-body had a body," as the old says, with the one exception of the old woman, well on her eighties, who as though she might easily be a hu
She was all alone. People spoke to he and again, but they did not stay with and she sat there, solitary among the quietly looking forth into the far easter tance.

"She looks as mysterious as the Sp said a Boston girl, with the Boston gir
of being the Sphinx's near neighbour.

"What if we question her?" suggested other, "and find out what she expects off there where she's always looking?"

And so they "questioned her." Where she going? She was going home, she an ed, "to her own counthry, and she w to see the sight of it, shure, as soon a could."

That would not be for some days yet, was told; and then some one asked if sh not like America.

Oh yes, she liked America well en
She had lived there thirty years. But was home after all, and she was going t
"own counthry."

Had she, then, relations in Ireland?

No, she did not think so. She had heard from any of them for a long time, she thought they must all be dead by no

"Then what are you going there for?"
interested girl asked; and the answer ca strangely solemn, borne on the June warm and golden with life and sunsh

"To die!"

The poor old thing looked up as she s and a strange flash kindled her washed-out, witch-like eyes.

"Yes, mavourneen, I want to die in old counthry. My man was buried t before I went to America; and my father mother lie in their graves in County C and I cant die aisy in a counthry as never knew. Some friends in the State the money thegither to bring me as f
Queenston.

"But you've more than just that, sure something to take care of you when get there?"

"Sorry a bit, beyont this," and she pu out of her pocket a shabby little purse w hold an American quarter of a dollar, an English sixpence. "Niver a bit be this; but they won't see an ould woman s as has come home to die. I'll not want bite nor sup long," she added, feebly; to die I'm going there." The hearts of passengers, sailing in the soft June we over the smiling sea, were touched with and a purse was raised which would tak comfortably to her destination in Co
Cork, and provide for her for some tim come. She was touchingly grateful; h even if no one had been moved to help she was going home, all the same, to
"own counthry."

Ah, if so much strength and courage be born of love for a home on earth, why do hesitate to turn our feet, at whatever c toward that home eternal in the heav which, if we seek, we shall find.

Science of Spelling.

The question of spelling is a process thi never settled; spelling, like the other ences, being a progressive one. To this question settled would be exceedi desirable, yet to rely on such a pleasing pectation would prove an ignorance of origin of language. The growth of the tellect is the measure of the increase of vocabulary. In fact, the change is so that in a lifetime of a single individual, may have received a thorough education finds himself at last classified as an school gentleman." The construction language, including spelling, is a matte economy in expression, and science e where economizes. New subjects are cumulating and demanding new words their best expression, and as so many of new words are so very long, the pressure the simplest manner of spelling grows appreciable. All letters which are silen speech should be expunged from th written expression. Much of our spel is bewildering to every one, and especi so to children and foreigners who have b trained in other tongues. Telegraphy phonography are foremost in demand that letters and sounds shall exactly agr
We are outgrowing the days of Bab
The orthography of the past would seem have been constructed with a view to li ing learning to the few. The present lic spirit did not then exist. The sy of phonographic writing, which spell stri according to sound, regardless of old thography, are becoming so indisper that confusion will be forced to yield simplicity. Etymologists and antiquar who are tenacious of whatever is, will c
sider it absurd to remove absurdities, the scientific, simplifying process will go
The people and the press are gradually tering the rules of spelling, and dictiona only mirror the work.

To be well educated, in the present p gressed day of the world, demands one know so much that more expediti methods than our fathers and forefath had, become imperative. How many lions of dollars would be saved, in the in est of education, by simplifying the sp ing rules, has not yet been computed actly.

Men and women are not like leaves, bl about by every wind, or like clay, rece and retaining whatever impress is made on them. They have an inward force, abling them to control to a large extent influences that bear upon them—to wel some, to resist others, and not only p ly to receive, but actively to digest and assimilate that which they receive, so it becomes a very part of themselves.

DERS OF THE INSECT WORLD.

BY R. K. DUNCAN.

e commonest objects of nature have invested by the light of modern sci-, with charms unknown to, or appre-d by, the great mass of humanity. In r struggle for wealth or power few men ize the fact that these objects are being erned by a system of laws, vast, grand harmonious, controlling the earth, the the stars, the universe, from the upper-t height, to the lowest depth, yet omit-not the smallest iota, the tiniest atom, under their sway, o department of natural science so fully strates these marvellous laws as the class ecta. (In the estimation of earnest stu-ts of nature, this class occupies a very minent position in that wonderful book ature which is, as the great Lord Bacon d, "Vox Dei in rebus reveata," the word God revealed in facts, because none so ounds in usefulness and injury to man or clearly shows the working of that God to om "all that live and move and have ir being" owe their existence)

t is time that our people in general, and ecially the younger portion, were being de acquainted with a class of beings sur-nding us day and night, furnishing us h amusement, food, clothing, coloring sub-nces, and medicines, that they may be e to distinguish the useful from the injur-s, the harmless from the noxious, and to cover those which may furnish new ar-les for manufactures, commerce and do-atic industry.

Their real benefit or injury has been dis-vered, after indefatigable researches and ervation, by the Entomologist, who has tected man against them, or them against n. It was the Entomologist who discov-d their abodes, character, and duration life. It was he who taught mankind the that can be made of those which are ben-ial, and the only certain methods of pre-nting the baleful ravages of those which noxious. It is for this purpose that even smallest insects that live are collected, served with unwearied patience and care. The immortal Reaumere established upon estates nurseries for insects which he only paid servants for attending, but tched himself night and day. The result his observations is a work published in is called "Memoires des Insectes," which ounds in useful and curious information. General Count Dejean, an aide-de-camp to poleon Bonaparte, was an enthusiastic tomologist, who even availed himself of litary campaigns as expeditions for "bug-nting." He was continually collecting l fastening them with pins to his hat which s constantly covered with them. Na-leon and all his army at last grew accus-ed to seeing his hat thus singular-ornamented, even in battle. But the rits of these departed insects had their enge at last, for at the battle of Wag-m, 1809, he was precipitated senseless m his saddle by a cannon shot. Upon covering a little, and being asked by Na-leon if he were dead, he exclaimed, "No, ! I am alive, but alas ! alas ! my insects gone," and indeed they were, for his hat s literally torn to pieces.

Another lover of nature was Madame Maria bille de Merian, who at the age of fifty-r set out for equatorial America, where proved her passionate devotion to the dy of insects by hazarding her life, with-t a guide, among the swampy plains and rning valleys of Guiana. As she was an ist and an experienced engraver, she pub-hed several works, filled with plates repre-nting insect life, which were destined to augurate the introduction of art into natu-l history. Each plate is a drama in it-lf; near the insect, is seen the greedy lizard ening its dreadful month, or the ferocious ider waiting for it. The short life of in-cts is here shown in its entirety, with its ntinual struggles, infinite artifices, its pid end, and all the episodes of an exist-ce for which life, as in the case of man, is t a long and painful struggle. This he-ic and industrious female naturalist, who ntributed so much to the advancement of tural history of insects died at the ripe d age of seventy-two in 1707.

Let women, let young girls who are martyrs the ennui of a life devoid of occupation eruse her beautiful books, and learn from em how much a woman may do with the me which is now either unoccupied or de-ted to useless employments. To study ture in any of its phases, ought, it seems me, to give more satisfaction to the soul, ore strength to the mind, and cause more miration of, and gratitude to the Author nature, than doing a little crazy-patch-ork or indulging in that intellectual pursuit gossiping. Insects are divided, accord-g to the classification of the old authors, to nine distinct orders ; of these we shall ve time to take but two, viz., Coleoptera, Beetles ; and Lepidoptera, or Butterflies d Moths.

We shall commence by examining the COLEOPTERA.

In most collections of insects the Coleop-ra seem nearly always to occupy the first ace, because of their bright colors, their idity and the facility with which they n be preserved. Beetles undergo a per-ct transformation or metamorphosis. From e egg proceeds a soft-bodied grub or mag-t (larva) whose only occupation seems to like that of children in eating and grow-g, which it does to perfection ; but after time (in some cases three years) this ceases, d it changes into a cocoon covered with a in transparent skin, where, during a long ep, it changes, and bursts forth at last ith glistening wings to appear a respect-le object in the the fashionable world of ects. They are divided into three dis-ct clases, the Carniverous, Scaven-r and Herbiverous. The Carniverous etles are those which prey upon her insects. They are of the greatest ssible use to man, and afford a constant idence of Nature's gracious law of com-nsation, the one undoing what the other es, the injuries which one species would flict upon man are checked by the carniv-ous species, which prevent their super-undance and keep an even balance in e scale of being.

Carniverous insects par excellence—those hich are most formidable on account of eir voracity—are the Carabidæ. This mily, which is the most numerous of land oleoptera, consists of beetles provided with ng legs, and armed with powerful mandi-es suitable for the purpose of tearing their ictims to pieces. They are the lions d tigers among insects. It is a for-nate circumstance that these Carabidæ e very numerous as they destroy an im-ense number of small noxious creatures, ch as, weevils, caterpillars, etc., which are the pests of agriculture. The prejudice that leads ignorant farmers to exterminate them is much to be regretted. They should be protected and introduced in the same manner as toads in our gardens, or cats in our granaries. The experiment has been very successfully tried in France and there is no reason why it should not be as successful here as there.

M. Michelet says that "the Carabidæ,—immense tribes of warriors, armed to the teeth, which under their heavy cuirasses have a wonderful activity—are a perfect rural constabulary, day and night, without holidays or repose, protecting our fields. They never touch the smallest thing ; they are occupied entirely in arresting thieves, and they desire no salary but the body of the thief.

Among these beetles of prey we might mention the handsome caterpillar-hunter, which may be seen morning and evening running along the branches, seeking for their prey.

The Dystici or sharks, as they are often called, are large water-beetles, feeding altogether upon aquatic insects.

MITCHELL, Ont.

VARIETIES.

A grand dinner in China includes a vast number of courses. Eighteen or twenty would be respectable, but the number may reach two hundred.

This year is the fourth centenary of the establishment of the British Navy, the first English man-of-war, the Great Harry, having been launched in the year 1487, being the second year of Henry VII.

The fashion in France of hanging beads on tombs has almost done away with the use of everlasting flowers, which was formerly so general. The beads last longer even than the flowers that are named immortelles, and this is their chief recommendation.

The cravat got its name from the Croats, a regiment of whom, all throttled in cravats, arrived in Paris in 1600, and set the new fashion in neck-swathings. When Beau Brummel assumed the guardianship of fashion in this country, it was not considered fitting that a gentleman should travel with fewer than eighty cravats and an iron for smothing them.

There are five qualities of meerschaum used in the making of pipes. The best is known by its facile absorption of the nicotine juice of tobacco, which gradually develops into a rich brown blush upon the surface, and when this process is well advanced the pipe becomes almost invulnerable without being hard. A specimen of this kind has been sold at Vienna for fifty pounds, although it was not very highly carved.

The Pharmaceutische Rundschau gives this recipe for an excellent disinfectant. Four pounds of crude sulphate of iron, or two pounds of sulphate of copper, are dissolved in hot water, to which two ounces of sulphuric acid are added. Mix with the solution, while still hot, eight ounces of carbolic acid, filter, and put into bottles. When this powerful remedy cannot be applied in its fluid state, dry saw-dust thoroughly moistened with it may be scattered over the floor of the places to be disinfected.

Electricity has in its time played many parts, but to apply it to a conductor's baton has at any rate the superior merit of novelty. After the recent manœuveres of the German army, a serenade was given in honour of the emperor, and twelve hundred executants took part. It was pitch dark, and of course quite impossible for the bandsmen to see the conductor's beat. But science suggested an accumulator on the music desk connected with a poorly-covered wire secured along the conductor's stick, from the tip of which there shone a tiny electric light.

Black, gray, red, amber, purple, salmon, dove-coloured, and speckly-white marbles exist in various parts of Ireland, and might be worked with profit if transport facilities existed and skilled masons could be found. The best black marble in the world is found on the shore of Longh Corrib. Galway serpentine has long been famous. A peculiarly beautiful variegated reddish marble exists in Armagh ; another handsome marble has been largely worked at Churchtown and Little Island, county Cork; while in Kilkenny there are also marble quarries. There is not much white marble in Ireland of any quality ; but the coloured marbles are admirably suited for the internal decoration of buildings.

The milk-cart is not much used in Mexico but in place of it the Mexicans drive the cow into town and milk her where the market for milk is best. The scene at the lecheria or milking place is a peculiar one indeed. The calf is driven in with the cow, and, after it has coaxed the milk down, it is tied to the cow's neck, after which her hind-feet and tail are securely tied together so that switching, kicking, or running away is impossible. Don Jesus—pronounced "hasus"—begins to milk, while all the senoritas are at his elbow, demanding their supply first, and that in the sweetest and most persuasive language that mistresses and maids are accustomed to use. Though peculiar, this system has its merits, inasmuch as the article vended is entirely free from extraneous mixtures of water and chalk. Goats and donkeys are also milked.

Microscopic Possibilities.

Perhaps the most wonderful thing that has been discovered of late is the new glass which has just been made in Sweden, differing from ordinary glass in its extraordinary refractive power. Our common glass contains only six substances, while this Swedish glass consists of fourteen, the most important elements being phosphorus and boron, which are not found in any other glass. The revolution which this new refractor is destined to make is almost inconceivable, if it is true, as is positively alleged, that, while the highest power of an old-fashioned microscopic lens reveals only the one four hundred thousandth part of an inch, this new glass will enable us to distinguish one two hundred and four million seven hundred thousandth part of an inch. It makes one's hand ache to write these figures ; and who can tell what worlds within worlds may not be discovered with such an instrument as this? Magnified after this fashion, the smallest animalcule will be converted into a giant, and if the same refracting power can be applied to the telescope we shall have the moon brought to our very doors.

If a man be faithful to truth, truth will be faithful to him. He need have no fears. His success is a question of time.

TALMAGE'S FIRST CIGAR.

The Reverend Doctor Describes a Not Uncommon Experience.

The time had come in my boyhood which I thought demanded of me a capacity to smoke. The old people of the household could abide neither the sight nor the smell of the Virginia. When ministers came there, not by positive injunction, but by a sort of instinct as to what would be safest, they whiffed their pipe on the back steps. If the house could not stand sanctified somke, it may be imagined how little chance there was for adolescent cigar-puffing.

By some rare good fortune which put in my hands three cents, I found access to a tobacco store. As the lid of the long narrow, fragrant box opened, and for the first time I owned a cigar, my feelings of elation, manliness, superiority and anticipation can scarcely be imagined, save by those who have had the same sensation. When I put the cigar to my lips and stuck the lucifer match to the end of the weed, and commenced to pull with an energy that brought every facial musle to its utmost tension, my satisfaction with this world was so great my temptation was never to want to leave it.

The cigar did not burn well. It required an amount of suction that taxed my determination to the utmost. You see that my worldly means had lin ited me to a quality that cost only three cents. But I had been taught that nothing great was accomplished without effort, and so I pulled away. Indeed I had heard my older brothers in their Latin lesson say, omnia vincit labor; which translated means, if you want to make anything go you must scratch for it.

With these sentiments I passed down the village street and out toward my country home. My head did not feel exactly right, and the street began to rock from side to side so that it became rather uncertain to me which side of the street I was on. So I crossed over, but found myself on the same side that I was on before I crossed over. Indeed I imagined that I was on both sides at the same time, and several fast teams were driving between. I met another boy, who asked me why I looked so pale, and I told him that I did not look pale, but that he was pale himself. After some further walking, I sat down under the bridge near my house and began to reflect on the prospect of early decease, and on the uncertainty of all earthly expectations. I had determined to smoke the cigar all up, and thus get the full worth of my money, but was finally obliged to throw three-fourths of it away. I know, however, exactly where I threw it, in case I should feel better the next day.

Getting home, the old people were frightened, and demanded of me an explanation as to my absence and the rather whitish color of my complexion. Not feeling that I was called to go into particulars, and not wishing to increase my parents, apprehension that I was going to turn out badly, I summed up the case with the statement that I felt miserable at the pit of the stomach. Mustard plasters were immediately administered, and I received careful watching for some hours. Finally, I fell asleep, and forgot my disappointment and humiliation in being obliged to throw away three-fourths of my cigar.

DIAMOND SMUGGLERS.

Some Tricks of the Trade—Statistics of the Business.

Chambers' Journal gives some interesting stories of smugglers and their methods.

"Please to hold my baby whilst my husband helps me to open my trunk ; he will be quite good if you shake his rattle," said a lady passenger to the officer who was waiting to look over her travelling gear. And that officer good humoredly did as he was requested, shaking the rattle to the great delight of the little one. The rattle in question which, fastened to a ribbon, was tied to the child's waist, was filled with gems of great value, a mode of smuggling that at the time was too simple for detection. A clever female, attired in the costume of a Sister of Mercy, was passed over by the officer because she had no luggage worth examining. She possessed, however, a fine string of beads, which, with downcast eyes, she kept telling. Safe on land, she was affectionately welcomed by two persons dressed in costumes similar to her own. Need it be told that she was a smuggler, and that her beads were so constructed that each held a diamond weighing seven or eight carats? Another ingenious person hit upon the plan of placing a few precious stones in a toy kaleidoscope, which had been given to a child, who carried it ashore in safety. A number of homing pigeons kept in cages, and purchased at a village in Belgium and brought to the United States by the way of Paris and Havre, also played a profitable part, each of the pigeons being freighted with a cargo of exquisite gems concealed in quills, and carefully fastened to the message-bearing dove. An extensive system of diamond smuggling was at one time carried on from Canadian ground by the aid of homing pigeons. The discovery of this illicit trade was made accidentally by a farmer, who happened to shoot one of the birds, and on examining it found that there was fastened to its leg a quill containing a number of diamonds! A clue being obtained, the local habitation of the pigeon proprietors was discovered and their mode of business put an end to. The scheme, stated simply, was to fly every week or ten days a flock of a dozen or fifteen pigeons, each carrying about half-s dozen gems. As the duty on diamonds amounts to ten per cent. the trouble taken to smuggle these gems into the United States does not seem so very remarkable. The value of the precious stones honestly imported into the States is between $800,000,000 and $900,000,000 per annum, and it has been calculated that gems to half that sum escape payment of duty.

Female Beauty.

There is nothing so unfavourable to female beauty than late hours. Women who spend most part of the day in bed and the night at work or in dissipation have always a pale, faded complexion and dark-rimmed, wearied eyes. Too much sleep is almost as hurtful as too little, and is sure to bloat the person with a pallid and unwholesome fat. A gross and excessive indulgence in eating and drinking is fatal to female charms. The appetite should never be wasted during the intervals between meals on pastry, confectionary, or any other tickler of the appetite which gratifies the taste but does not support the system. Exercises is of course essential to female beauty.

NATURE'S GREAT FIREWORKS.

The Appearance of the Hawaiian Volcano from the Sea.

We copy the following graphic description of an eye-witness from the Hawaiian Gazette, February 15 :

On nearing the scene of the lava flow about 4o'clock in the afternoon on Saturday Jan. 29, our attention was about equally divided between the volumes of smoke issuing from the mountain side near the source and the constant jets of steam shooting into the air along the margin of the sea for perhaps a couple of miles where the fiery element seemed to be consuming even in its hitherto irresistible march. Upon close examination with my glass I could distinguish large masses of dark ashen-colored lava, slowly forced by the pressure exerted from behind, meet the heavy swell of the heaving ocean, and with a rolling plunge bury itself forever amid a seething mass of steam and foam, the product of the two greatest forces the earth contains. At three different places small streams of lurid molten lava could be seen pouring their living fire into the breakers as they dashed themselves into foam and mingled with the steam that shot many feet into the air above.

THE MIGHTY PACIFIC

But the growing darkness gradually changed the scene, and all eyes were now intently turned to the grand display on the mountain side. At first the eye could not wander from the cone which appeared to be the source, at an elevation of about 6,000 feet and about twenty miles distant from where we lay which sent up a constant solid which seemed larger than the steamer on which we floated, and variously estimated by the passengers at from 50 to 200 feet in height. Clouds of smoke filled the air around and above it, and at intervals of about a minute or so it would belch forth flashes of lightning to illuminate the sky, so that the very smoke itself seemed a lurid glare of sulphurous fire.

VOLUME OF MOLTEN LAVA

As the darkness of night closed around the rest of the mountain, the course of the lava became more and more distinct; now you trace its course until a few miles further down the mountain side you see it tumbling and pouring over a precipice, as a cascade that might easily be mistaken for another fountain connected with, and playing from, the regions of fire beneath. Then you follow it along a sweeping, but not tortuous channel, down the mountain side for miles without a break.

Now it is hid for a short interval by forcing for itself a passage under the lava that has already cooled and formed a black crust above; but, as if determined to brook norestraint, it again bursts in full view, a for a few miles more, and then again hides and reappears in the same way, until it is finally lost in the cracks and chasms of the hundreds of acres of smoldering lava piled along the flat bordering the sea below, and rolling large quantities of the latter into the sea, but itself only reaching the ocean in its molten state at three places, as stated before. The coal-black lava for a mile on each side, the belching fountain of lava above, the fiery river of lava coursing its sulphurous way to the sea, and the lurid glare of the smoky heavens closing around, formed a scene of sublime fiery grandeur, the like of which few on earth ever witnessed, and once seen can never be effaced from memory.

MAGNIFICENT RIVER OF FIRE

Fashions in Coffins.

There are fashions in everything nowadays, even in funerals, and as there are styles in garments, so also are there styles in coffins. One would think that the melancholy duty of burying the dead would be beyond the dictates of fashion to which nearly everything else in this world is forced to bow, but a stroll through the warerooms of some large manufacturing undertaker would quickly convince the doubter that even the house of mourning is ruled by the unyielding band of what the world calls fashion. Fashion said once that he who would be in style must be buried in a casket of beautifully polished rose-wood or other rare or costly wood with massive handles and trimming of silver. Then nothing but a slim purse suggested a departure from the ruling style. Now fashion says that a casket neatly and plainly covered with black cloth is the only really proper burial case, and this decree is as imperative as all others from the same source. Between these two extremes there have been many intermediate patterns, and fickle fashion will probably one day again order a change, and then the sombre casket of to-day will be a thing of the p t and irrevocably "out of style."

It is only in caskets for infants and young people that anything like latitude is permitted, and even then it is principally as regards color. White or the universal black are the colors prescribed, the former being the most used. For those who are bold enough to disregard the mandates of fashion there are a great variety of styles and colors available, some of them so novel as to be almost startling. For instance, an enterprising New York undertaker created quite a sensation the other day by conspicuously displaying in his window a cask covered with plush of the delicate shade known as Nile green and by its side another covered with light blue velvet. Without going to such extremes there are a great variety of shades and patterns of covering material. There are plushes, velvets and plain cloths in black, brown, blue old gold and numerous intermediate shades. Embossed and figured plushes are even included in the list of coverings.

QUEER THINGS ABOUT MONEY.

A Toronto gambler who had been playing in hard luck, borrowed a counterfeit silver dollar from a friend and made straight for the nearest saloon. He met with phenomenal success, and on quitting the game was $121 ahead. As he was leaving the place he boasted of his trick, and was at once ignominiously kicked into the street.

John Monroe, a young man living with his widowed sister in the northern part of Georgia, was digging a hole for a potato bin in his cellar the other day, when his spade broke open an earthen pot containing $1,480 in gold. The coin had been buried by his sister's husband during the war, and subsequently forgotten.

Some months ago a lady living in Butler, through fear of the depredation of tramps, put $110 in bank notes in a pasteboard box and buried it in the yard near the wood-pile Last week she went, out to get it and found that box and bills had been badly mutilated by lice. The has sent the notes to the banks which issued them for redemption.

SCIENTIFIC AND USEFUL.

Boiled linseed oil will keep pummel bottle from rusting if it is allowed to dry on them.

The Japanese Government paper mill is manufacturing pocket handkerchiefs and clothing of paper pulp containing a mixture of linen threads.

The water put into gasaliers is likely to become frozen or evaporate; a small quantity of glycerine should therefore be added to the water, as glycerine will not freeze.

If the manger or feed-box in stables be so foul as to emit a sour smell from any cause, it should be carefully cleansed and washed with a solution of soda or potash until perfectly sweet again.

An order has been issued in Lower Austria forbidding manufacturers and tradesmen to sell nickel-plated cooking vessels. It is stated that vinegar and other acid substances dissolve nickel, and that this, in portions of one seventh of a grain, causes vomiting, and is more poisonous than copper.

To make dry yeast : A practical recipe is to strain brewer's yeast until a moist mass is obtained. Place this in hair bags and press out till the mass is nearly dry. Then sew up in linen bags, and it is ready for transportation. It will keep for a long time, and is much used by bakers in the manufacture of the so called Vienna bread.

Professor Thomson has demonstrated before the New York Society of arts a novel application of electricity. By placing pieces of metal end to end under a forcible pressure, and passing an electrical current through them, perfect weldings are effected, even between metals otherwise incapable of being welded together, or between different metals. To weld steel of one and a half inch diameter, a current of six thousand amperes, having an electromotive force of half volt, was necessary. It is stated that the use of thirty-five-horse power for one minute will weld that thickness of steel without any blows or the application of other hea . Steel also may be welded in this way to brass.

The First Ruler of Japan.

The Chinese have an older civilization than the Japanese, but there is no doubt in the minds of statisticians at large that the latter people have the superior system of Government. They are endeavouring, at any rate, to keep abreast of the times and the advancement of the age. The history of Japan goes back about 2,600 years, and dates from the period when the orb of day proclaimed his dominion over the country. It is a very pretty tradition, which is believed by all loyal Japs, that the sun was the first Emperor in the land. Since that time no ruler has been arrayed in such splendour, not even the notoriously gorgeous Solomon of Eastern pride, nor the lilies of the field—even they present a comparatively modest appearance beside the effulgence of the first great, shining Emperor. But the sun lost his grip in some way and was deposed, and on the throne was placed Jimmu Tenno. No record exists of the sun having become angry at the proceedings or interposing objections. On the contrary, it is one of the greatest examples of returning good for evil that is on record. Instead of going off on a strike and, by, "dousing the glim" cutting off the illumination of the world, old Sol went right along shedding his beams with the same lavish and gratuitous spirit as before. The children of the sun who have from time to time sat upon the ancient throne have, according to native historians, got along about as well as the rulers of other nations, although it is alleged that the Mikado has always been a mere figurehead, and that the business and policy of the Government were conducted by the Ministers of State.

Self-Inflicted Misery.

Many of us fritter our lives away. Indeed La Bruyere says that most men spend most of their time in making the rest miserable. On the other hand, "if the heart be right," says the Imitatio Christi, "then would every creature be to thee a mirror of life, a book of holy doctrine." Most of us can be rendered very unhappy by unkindness, the loss, the faults, even the coldness of those we love ; but it is certainly true that no one was ever yet made utterly miserable except by himself. Marcus Aurelius wisely tells us to "remember on every occasion which leads thee to vexation to apply this principle—that this is not a misfortune, but that to bear it nobly is good fortune ;" and he elsewhere observes that "we suffer much more from the anger and vexation which we allow acts to rouse in us than we do from the acts themselves at which we are angry and vexed."

He Left Him to Think Over It.

It has often been a sportsman's fate to miss and marvel at what seemed unaccountably easy shots. The reply given by his stalker to a gentleman who, after a series of inexcusable misses, remarked: "Well, Donald, who's fault was it that time?" is admirable, and well portrays a sportsman's own feelings on such occasions. Quoth Donald, "Well, he wasn't more than a hundred yards, and it's not my fault you missed him; and it wasn't the fault of the stag, for he stood still enough ; and it's not the fault of the rifle, for I ken well it's a right good one ; so I'll just leave it to you to think it over to find out whose fault it was."

Shocking Profanity.

Dr. Sundel was a society-man who liked to air his Latin. He had taken an acquaintance to call on Mrs. Parvenu, and the man had never called again, and, when the lady saw the doctor, she asked him about it. "Ah, doctor," she said, "Where is your friend?" "Not my friend, madam," corrected the doctor ; "he was merely a quondam acquaintance." "Sir," exclaimed the lady, in horrified amazement, "I don't know the relation existing ; but, if you cannot express yourself in ladies' company without profanity, you had better follow your friend."

Major Stewart, of the Cascade coal mines, is now in Winnipeg. He says the output will soon reach 500 tons daily, and that the intention is to supply San Francisco and the Pacific coast.

Men talk much of the right of free speech and condem all attempts to fetter it. They should also respect the right of free silence, and visit with equal censure all attempts to violate it by inconsiderate and unbenevolent questioning prompted by curiosity.

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel, Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE.
The subscriber begs to inform the travelling public generally, that he has leased the above premises for a term of years, and hopes by catering to their comfort to merit a share of public patronage. Bar and Larder well supplied. Good stabling and attentive hostler.
D. McLEAN, Proprieto .

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. G. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
124ly

WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE;
Money Lender & Postmaster, Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at owest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Convevancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try the excellent remedy.
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.
TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
S. SOMANSON & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture,
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

NEW HARNESS SHOP.
R. CARNAHAN would respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of the surrounding country that he has opened a general harness shop on King street in the village of
HOLLAND CENTRE,
where he intends to manufacture and keep on hand a large stock of LIGHT and HEAVY HARNESS, long and short tugs, STRAW COLLARS, WHIPS, COMBS, BRUSHES, HARNESS OIL &c.
I will use only first class material and those requiring anything in the harness line will find it to their interest to call at the new harness shop and get prices before going elsewhere. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. Soliciting a share of public patronage. I am respectfully yours.
R. CARNAHAN.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.
First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool.
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.
BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS
Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.
Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.
For sale by all dealers.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT 131 con. 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.
342-ft

GROCERY, POVISION
—AND—
LIQUOR STORE.
A fresh stock of groceries just opened at
DAVIS'S
Store, bought for cash thus saving discounts, and will be sold for spot cash at rock bottom prices.

A fine Line of choicest uncolored Japan Tea just arrived intending purchasers will do well to inspect this Tea before buying elswhere as it positively is the best value ever offered in the town. 15 lbs. extra granulated sugar $1, other grades accordingly. Agent for the Liquor Tea Co. A valuable prize given with every six ½ lb. packages bought.

PROVISIONS!
Flour Bran, Shorts, Chop, Screenings, Oatmeal, Cornmeal, &c., &c.

LIQUORS!
Rye and Malt, Port and Native Wine, Brandy, Jamaica, Rum, Scoten Whiskey, the best in the market, also a choice lot Bottled Liquors in finest Brandies, Scotch and Irish Whiskeys, Superior Malt and 5 year old Rye. Parties requiring liquors for medicinal purposes will do well to give us a call as they may rely upon getting a good article.

Special Attention? I will pay the highest cash price for Timothy Seed.
A Call Respectfully Solicited,
W. L. Davis,
MARKDALE.

Markdale Roller Mill.
FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more
Flour always on Hand
To give in exchange.
'Baker's Patent' and best family flour for sale. Retail price per bbl. $4.50. Three barrels or more. $4.10 to $4.25.

SHORTS, per ton -	$13.00
BRAN, " -	10.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.
Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn

THE
Association Can't Stop Us.
HAVING PURCHASED A
FIRST-CLASS HEARSE.
Built by B. J. Mash, London, also having a large stock of Coffins, Caskets and funeral furnishings, we are prepared to supply the public in the undertaking line on the shortest notice.
A large stock of furniture always on hand at lowest living prices.
Having a first-class cabinet maker, we are prepared to make all kinds of furniture to order, also repairing done promptly.
COLEMAN & HAMILTON,
Next door to Knapp's store,
MARKDALE.

Holland Council.

Council met for the transaction of business.
Members all present, Reeve in the chair.
A communication from John Mc Donald asking $20 for village purposes was read.
Shute—Murray,—That the prayer of the above mentioned communication be granted that and the amt. be levied on the rateable property of the village of Chatsworth at the next levy of Taxes.—Carried.
Murray—Howey,—That Jas. Logan get an order for $5 on account road work performed.—Carried.
A petition was presented by Thos. Dixon and 19 others with regard to making No. 6, side road passible from the 10th to the 12th con.
Shute—Galbraith,—That the above petition be laid over for further consideration in order to get information whether the people in the vicinity will assist in opening the same.—Carried.
Howey—Galbraith,—That the Arbritator's report with regard to U. S. S. No. 8, between Holland and Sydenham be adopted and that a By-Law be prepared in accordance with the above report—Carried.
A petition signed by Carson Price and others asking for means to send David Shea to the Toronto Hospital, on account of ill health he being indigent was read.
Murray—Howey,—That the prayer of the above petition be granted authorizing the Clerk & Reeve to issue an order on the Treas. for Ten Dollars.—Carried.
The Trustees of S. S. No. 9, Holland, made application for the sum of fifty dollars to pay Teacher.
Shute—Murray,—That the prayer of the above petition be granted and to be deducted from the next years estimate.—Carried.
Shute—Galbraith,—That the Treasurers Statement with regard to the amt. of money in his hands be engrossed on the Minutes amounting to $1,776.00.—Carried.
Galbraith—Shute,—That the Bill of Sanitary Inspector be paid amounting to $1—Carried.
Galbraith—Murray,—That the Board of Health be paid $1.50 each pr. day for their services.—Carried.
Howey—Shute,—That By-Law No. 5, be read 1, 2 & 3 times and engrossed on the Minutes.—Carried.
Galbraith—Murray,—That the account of George Blythe be paid.—Carried.
Galbraith—Shute,—That the Collectors Salary be paid.—Carried.
Murray—Howey,—That James Ireton be appointed Pathmaster in place of M. Smith, and that he be authorized to have all obstructions removed off the road.—Carried.
—Howey—Murray,—That James Adams be appointed pathmaster for div No. 41.—Carried.
Galbraith—Deputy Reeve,—That the Clerk write the crown land Department in regard 6 road 42 con. 3 North East of T. & S. Rd.—Carried.
Shute—Murray,—That the Reeve and Clerk be a committee to look over the documents relating to the Deviations—Carried.
Murray—Galbraith,—That Messrs Galbraith and Shute be a committee to look after the town lines of Glenelg and Sullivan, and Messrs Murray and Howey the town lines of Sydenham and Euphrasia,—Carried.
Galbraith—Shute.—That the clerk notify the clerks of the townships interested with regard to the above appointment and request them to name a day to meet.—Carried.
CARSON PRICE, Clerk

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.
It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggists about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers, in the United States and Canada.

MARRIED.
Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, twenty five cents.
ON Wednesday March 23rd by the Rev J. Ward. Mr. George Samuel Taylor to Miss Isabella Bradey, all of Euphrasia.

Subscribe now for the STANDARD: there is good times acoming.

Death of a Venerable L

The following obituary no clip from the Kirkwood L Missouri, will be read with i by many of our readers who well acquainted with the de who was one of the first settler her husband, in Artemesia. Wright was indeed a most ho cheerful woman and a g christian. She visited friend Markdale, Flesherton and Collin the past summer:
"We regret to have to announce th the death of another one of our most ed citizens. Last Monday evening, 14th, Mrs. Francis M. Wright peacef joyfully passed to the world above, ma Wright, as she was familiarly c our townspeople, had been gradually all winter, but was not seriously i two weeks before her death, when sh attacked with senile bronchitis. Sh at the residence of her two sons, Alfr John Wesley, on Adam street, in this Grandma was in her 78th year, an never ill but twice during her life. was the mother of fifteen children, whom are still living. Five of them a the funeral; the others being so fa as to make impossible for them to reach She has thirty living grandchildren five great grandchildren. Her desc are scattered from the Pacific Slope t mouth of the St. Lawrence River. Sh a native of County Carlow, Ireland, an her native home with her husband and child in 1832, since which time she 50 years in Canada and 5 years in Kir She looked much younger than her y She was beloved by all who knew he her generous, good-natured and h disposition. The great love and respec manifest by the large number who v the house to tender their sympathy t bereaved family, and to bring floral o as tokens of their love. Many of the offerings were very beautiful. At the of the casket was a very large pillow of flowers with the inscription "Our Mo in the Centre of it. At the foot of the stood a beautiful floral representation o Gates Adjar, which was sent by the l ladies in the employ of her sons in St. L There were beautiful offerings from Chambers, Mrs. Hughes, Miss Wilson, others.
This death leaves a vacancy that w long and sadly felt in her sons' home, was so devoted to her family and they t Among the many sweet recollections of last hours will be her prayer when speech was very difficult. It was only words, but contained a world to her and children. It was, 'God bless my fam
Her family expected her to live fifteen twenty years longer, as her mother die the age of 98, her grandmother at 2 brother and sister at 86, and she le sister who was born on the first day of century.
Her husband the late Geo. L. Wr died in Canada in 1868. The family pur removing the remains to Oak Hill Cem and lay them beside his wife.
The funeral service were held on We day at the Methodist Church, and were ducted by Dr. Godbey, assisted by Rev. Lewis. The attendance was very large the ceremonies very impressive. After services at the church the remains were t to Oak Hill and there consigned to last earthly abode, which she req should be in Kirkwood, near her two y children.

BE ON YOUR GUARD
Don't allow a cold in the head to slo and surely run into Catarrh, when you be cured for 25c. by using Dr. Chase's Cat Cure. A few applications cure ins catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary cata 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure ch catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure Sold by all druggists.

Gardening Under Difficult

The Chinese are a very industrious peo and nothing is allowed to go to waste can possibly be utilized. As the Empire China is the largest on the Globe, and tains nearly half of the entire number o human race, the necessity of economy is apparent. They not only cultivate the but all the lakes, ponds and marshes gardens in which aquatic plants, su for food, are largely raised. Among the water chesnut is pre-eminent, and is to be of a very palatable and wholes nature. In a narrative of Lord Macart Embassey to China, it is related that lordship's attendants, in passing throug part of that empire, saw a man cultivat the side of a precipice, and, on examinin they found he had a rope fastended his waist, which was secured at the to the mountain, and by which he let hi down to any part of the precipice where yards of available ground gave him encou ment to plant his vegetables and his The whole of the cultivated spots, were at some distance from each appeared to be not more than half an and near the bottom of the precipice, hillock, he had a little hut, where he ported a wife and several children in hazardous manner.—American Agricul for April.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 344. MARKDALE, ONT., APRIL 7, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Publisher.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

GOOD-FRIDAY will be observed as a Holiday in Markdale.

FOR prepared Paints, the best and cheapest in the county. Call on Mabee.

HOT-CROSS-BUNS on Good Friday, at the Markdale bakery—Rooke & Joys.

CLOVER & TIMOTHY Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

FOR Hardware Novelties, the latest styles and newest designs at Mabee's.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

FOR Hardware, Stoves and Tinware. See Mabee at the sign of the cross-cutt saw.

Miss. Bella McKee of Glenelg returned from Newtonrobinson after an 8 week visit.

MR HUGH MCDONALD of Glenely, near Durham, gave us a friendly call on Saturday last.

FOR Pure Leads, Oils, Varnishes and Colors, they can be had at the sign of the cross-cut.

EUPHRASIA Agricultural Society Spring Show will be held at Rocklyn on Tuesday the 26th April.

HORSE TO SELL.—Six years old, sound and true, color black. Apply to Alex. Smith, Glenelg.

MRS. WRIGHT is now visiting her daughter, Mrs Hollingshead. The old lady is looking well.

MR. THOS. COOLEDGE from near Port Perry, formerly of Euphrasia, paid Markdale a visit this week.

MECHANICS see Mabee for your outfit, he will be pleased to give you good goods at right prices.

PETER MCARTHUR and family moved to Owen Sound from near Traverston this week.

AN Act incorporating Parry Sound as a town has passed its third reading in the Ontario Legislature.

EAST Grey Agricultural Society will hold their Annual Spring Show at Flesherton on Friday 22nd April.

Pebble spex, Crystal Lenses, and 4 colors in sun glasses. Call at W. A. Brown's Jewellry Store.

Oil Cake, the champion cattle food for sale at Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

Just received at J. G. Anderson's, new shirting, new prints, new dress goods. Choice goods at bottom prices for spot cash.

MISS LOVE is again in her position in S. Hill's Millinery Dep. and will doubtless be pleased to meet her old customers as well as new ones.

Permanent Pasture Seeds. Prof. Brown's formula and other popular kinds at the Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

HAMPDEN WATCHES.—My own name on—just received; Key and stem wind, will be sold close, cash or time. W. A. Brown, Jeweller.

MR, EDWARD LARGE of this village has been awarded the contract for building the Chatsworth new school house. His tender being $3,800.

A VERY large stock of new Tweeds & Worsteds, the best patterns opened this week, at M. Richardson & Co's, Flesherton.

THE expression "landholder's son" in the assessment law, Municipal Act, means, a son, step-son, grandson, or son-in-law, as the case may be, of the landholder.

M. RICHARDSON & Co's Millinery Show Room more attractive than evey all are invited to call and see the beautiful new goods in that line,

A long felt want supplied.—Prepared Paints ready for use—any quantity or shade—guaranteed pure; See them at Haskett Bros.

ARE you made miserable by indigestion, constipation, dizziness, loss of appetite: take Rejuvenator Bitters, sold by Smith the barber.

MISS BREMNER has landed, and if you ladies want a head-dress, she will be happy to meet you in W. J. McFarlands head-gear rooms.

GENTS FURNISHINGS.—New Hats (nobby) Shirts, Ties, Collars, Cuffs, Handkerchiefs, &c., in great variety at M. Richardson & Co's, Flesherton.

For Fleury and Wilkinson Plows go to Jackson's; price to suit hard times.

MARKDALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 75 to 76 cents; spring wheat 75 to 76; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 15 to 17; eggs 12; potatoes 50 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

MR. W. G. PICKELL, of Artemesia, has became a resident of Markdale, and will follow the cattle and horse buying business. We welcome him and family to our midst.

M. RICHARDSON & Co's (Flesherton) new stock of clothing opened this week is well worth inspection: Gents suits in the newest styles and latest patterns VERY CHEAP.

Timothy Seed wanted for which I will pay highest cash prices. W. L. Davis'.

MR. R. MCNALLY has moved into his new carriage building opposite the Markdale House, where he will be pleased to meet those in need of anything in his line. Adv. next week.

THE Methodist Observer comes to hand every week bristling with interesting church news from all parts of the Dominion. New subscribers wanted for the balance of '87 at 50 cents. Subscribe at this office.

FINED.—W. J. Sproule, sewingmachine agent, was last week fined $5 and costs—altogether $12.20—for insulting and abusive language to constable Noble while in discharge of duty.

FOR anything you want in the Hardware line go straight to the sign of the cross-cutt. We will be glad to see you. We will use you right. Mabee the Hardware.

Go to Jackson for land Rollers. Cheapest and best in the market. Call and be convinced.

THE Toronto Daily Mail has been reduced in price to $5.00 per annum. It still maintains its independence, and is being supported by liberal men on both sides of politics.

Mr. Michael Ryan will sell by public auction to-morrow, Friday the 8th, his farm stock implements &c., on lot 1, con. 6, Artemesia. Terms nine months on all sums over $10. Geo. Noble auctioneer.

THE usual peace and good order of our village has recently been seriously marred by profanity and indecent language by roughs on our streets: This should be stopped by making an example of individuals who thus wantonly violate the laws of order and decency.

CHEAP FARES.—The following reduced fares will be made for Easter Holidays, viz:—Between all stations on the C. P. R. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, April 7th, 8th and 9th, return tickets will be issued good to return up to and including April 12th for one and one third fair.

WHAT IS ALABASTINE.—It is a preparation of plaster-paris and other ingredients used for decorating and whitening walls and ceilings, is easily applied, will not scale nor rub off, and is cheaper and better than calcimine. You can get it at Haskett Bros.

NOTICE.—A public meeting will be held at Marsh's Hotel on this Thursday evening at seven o'clock for the purpose of considering the conversion of Rowe's Grist mill into a woolen factory. All parties interested in the advancement of the interests of the village are requested to attend.

IF our business men are in need of a fresh supply of printed letter heads, envelopes, bill heads, statements or any other such requisites, we will be happy to fill their orders now neat and promptly. We have a large stock of fine papers and a new lot of fashionable type just to hand, and fully prepared to turn out work equal to the city.

R. O. WHITBY is prepared to do all kinds of carriage painting; a first class job with the best material guaranteed. Now is the time to bring in your wheel'd rigs and have them re-painted for summer use. Shop over Hull's new cooper shop.

AUCTION SALE.—Mr. D. Wallace will sell by public auction on his premises, lot 5, con. 5, Euphrasia, on Wednesday the 13th April, his farm stock, implements, &c. Sale at 1 o'clock, Terms eight months on approved paper for sums over $10. Geo. Noble Auctioneer.

IT has taken the people of Flesherton twelve months to decide on a site on which to erect their new school-house and even yet all are not satisfied. Had they chosen to build in Markdale, we could have given them a grand choice of handsome, healthy and hill-less sites: perhaps they may yet.

Iron Harrows "spring tooth Harrows" Drills and seeders from the best manufactures in Ontario, at Jackson's.

CHANGED HANDS.—The City hotel in this village changed hands last week—Mr. McLean goes to Dundalk where he is re-building the Queen's Hotel which was formerly owned by Mr. Jas Reid, and was burned down over a year ago. Messrs M. Ryan and Jas Kelly of Artemesia, now "hold the fort" at the City.

THE Meaford Mirror says that Markdale markets have been from 4 to 6 cents above Meaford this winter for wheat and peas, and from 6 to 12 for barley, and that Meaford has lost trade seriously on that account. We were told recently by a farmer a few miles from Meaford that the difference was not only in the price of grain, but he said he could buy as much for $6 in Markdale stores as for $7 in Meaford.

WE like to see a man says an exchange, refuse to advertise in a home paper, and then try to get a share of the trade which it brings to the town. But above all things we like to see a rich miserly man who will not pay for his paper, always manage to be around in time to read the paper at the expense of a friend not worth a tenth of what he is. It looks so economical, thrifty and enterprising, you know,—yes, and dirty mean.

WE have received various offers of Agricultural and others papers to club with the STANDARD but generally declined all such; this week however we advertise a genuine good offer, which is open to all our subscribers who pay, or have paid in advance, as well as new ones. Read the announcement carefully; the Agriculturist is the best agricultural paper we have seen, and can be had together with those valuable books or portraits and the STANDARD all for $2.50.

MR. J. H. BLISS, of Traverston, is making things hum around his saw mill. He reports 180,000 feet of lumber (hardwood) already delivered at Markdale station for shipment, and about the same quantity cut during the winter of custom work; is now running the mill night and day, having two gangs of men employed. He expects to ship altogether this season 600,000 feet of lumber, and when the seasons' work is well through will erect a new saw mill, J. P. O'Hanly being the contractor for the erection of the same.

J. G. Anderson wants a large quantity of good roll butter and hen eggs.

L. Knapp has sold his trotting horse to Dr. Sproule.

Another assortment of gents furnishing just opened out at J. G. Anderson's.

Thursday 21st April is court day at Flesherton.

Bargains in all lines of goods at J. G. Anderson's.

ANOTHER.—Mr. Andrew Beattie has purchased a Canadian Draught Stallion (Lucky Lad) in Wellington County, which will be travelled in this district this season.

Boots & Shoes in great variety and good at J. G. Anderson's,

Mr, Thos. Gamey of Osprey has completed the assessing of that township for '87.

Cottonades, Shirtings, Denims Extra heavy at J. G. Anderson's.

We are pleased to see Mr. Mercer about again, after over six months confinement to the house with a broken leg. It was feared he would not recover sufficiently to get about without crutches but he is now recovering nicely, and his chances are good for a permanent recovery.

Samuel Miller got the end of one of his fingers jammed while loading logs some time ago and had to have the end taken off. He is about again.

Received this week at J. G. Anderson's new cottons, new dress goods, new window curtains IN NEWEST SHADES cheap for cash.

A reply to "Doceo" came too late for this week, but will appear next.

Next Saturday (9th) is Markdale Cattle Fair, and don't you forget it.

Town lots in Dundalk appear of little use according to the following which appeared in Saturday's Toronto News in the exchange adv. column:—"Will exchange lot in town of Dundalk for diamond ring or any useful article. Box 188, News."

Try Davis' new 30c, Japan Tea you will be convinced that it is a very superior article for the money, Special reduction for large purchases.

IF there be anything in politics which would degrade women, it is time for that thing to come to an end. The thing we wish chiefly to change is Government, and not woman. If there be anything in politics which would tend to degrade or stain the delicacy of the purest and best woman, it is something which ought not to exist, and which the presence of woman would tend to banish.—Senator Geo. F. Hoar.

FARMERS' ATTENTION.—There will be a public exhibition of a hay and grain unloader at Mr. Jas. Elliot's barn on the townline 1½ miles East of Markdale, on Saturday 9th of April, at 2 p. m. All parties that have used this rig acknowledge it to be the easiest and quickest way of unloading hay and all kinds of grain (loose or in sheaves.) Come and and see it work and judge for yourselves. Joe. & R. Buchanan.

B. B. B. ONE OF MANY. B. B. B.

Mrs. Agnes Black, of Orton, Ont., says. "For five years I have been a sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion. I tried one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and was getting better; I then bought three more and it has cured me."

COMING TO MARKDALE.—C. A. McRae, Esq., M. D., a gentleman of vast experience in the treatment of chronic troubles and undoubted skill as a physician and surgeon, and the oldest traveller representative of Dr. J. D. Kergan's Medical and Surgical Institute, of Detroit, Mich., will be in this town at the Markdale House, Thursday April 14th for the purpose of giving free consultation and opinion to all persons suffering from any chronic, private, nervous, malignant or hereditary disease. A visit paid the doctor cannot help but prove beneficial to those in need of medical or surgical assistance. On Friday & Saturday the 15 and 16 the doctor is at the Queen's Hotel, Owen Sound. If unable to call during above dates write to Detroit for the written opinion of Dr. Kergan and his International Medical Council. Address all letters plainly Dr. J. D. Kergan, Detroit, Mich., and there will be no delay or mistake.

S. Hill.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for past favors, I would solicit a fair share of trade in future feeling certain I can give you good goods at very low prices, and would ask my patrons and the public generally not to fail to give me a call and examine goods and prices, as my goods are purchased for cash in the best markets; I can offer my friends and patrons the best goods at the very

LOWEST PRICES,

and I trust by close attention to business to merit a fair share of public patronage in future as well as in the past.

MY MILLINARY

Department will be opened the 2nd week of April and will be filled with the latest NOVELTIES OF THE SEASON. And Miss Love who will have charge of this department will be pleased to meet her old friends and customers generally: Your requirements will be got up tastefully and cheap.

MY CLOTHING DEPARTMENT

is filled with Men's, Boy's and Youth's clothing, quality good, and prices low. Youth's Suits, $2.50 up: Men's Suits $6.00 up: Every line of clothing very cheap this season.

BOOTS & SHOES!

This department is filled with the finest goods in the market, from a plough boot to the finest Kid.

Ladies' and Gentlemen, Boy's Girl's and Children, call and be booted from a stock worthy of inspection.

Men's & Boy's HATS in great variety.

Ladies' call and see my Dress Goods, Prints, Mushns, Ginghams, Gloves, etc.

S. HILL.

The Telegraphic Signal.

John Mills, the hero of this sketch, was an engineer on a well known Canadian railway and had been for a long time in the company's employ. When the new engine "59" was completed and placed on the road, John was given charge of it, and he evinced a natural pride in his preferment. At one of the stations there was a young girl, a telegraph operator, between whom and the engineer there had sprung up a warm attachment, and whenever "59" came along, Kate generally managed to be at the door and exchange signals with her lover. One day the train was detained at the station, and the locomotive detached and sent up the road, to do some additional work, and Kate went along for a ride. As she listened to the sharp, shrill notes of the whistle, it occurred to her that she might teach John to sound her name in the Morse telegraphic characters, so that she could distinguish his signal from that of the other engines, whenever his train approached. The plan worked to a charm, and far and near the whistle shrieked K-a-t-e, until one day, as the operator stepped upon the platform, she overheard a conversation between two young men, and learned that they understood the signal and were laughingly wondering who Kate could be. Their means of communication having been discovered, they were obliged to discontinue it. In the meantime Kate had, by means of the telegraph, made the acquaintance of a young lady, in a distant city, but whom she had never seen, and to her she made known the fact that the secret had been discovered. Then her friend suggested a plan as brilliant as it was ingenious. It was simply to arrange a means of the telegraphic communication between the approaching train and the station, so as to ring a bell hidden away in the closet in Kate's office, engine "59" being the only one provided with means of completing the circuit, which was done by laying the poker upon the tender-brake so as to touch the wire in passing. Kate found an opportunity to acquaint John with the proposed plan, and in the meantime had found an abandoned wire which ran for a long distance close by the track, and which she proposed to use for carrying out her purpose. Good Friday came soon after, and John fortunately having a holiday, he and Kate went bravely to work, and before the day had ended the task was a complete success. The dramatic finale of their love episode is told in the following :

It was singular how absent-minded and inattentive the operator was on the day that the great scientific enterprise was finished. No wonder she was disturbed. Would the new line work? Would her little battery be strong enough for such a great circuit? Would John be able to close it? The people began to assemble for the train. The clock pointed to the hour for its arrival.

Suddenly, with startling distinctness, the bell rang clear and loud in the echoing room. With a cry of delight she put on her dainty hat and ran in haste out upon the platform. The whistle broke loud and clear on the cool, crisp air, and "59" appeared round the curve in the woods. The splendid monster slid swiftly up to her feet and paused.

"Perfect, John! Perfect! It works to a charm."

With a spring she reached the cab and sat down on the fireman's seat.

"Blessed if I could tell what he was going to do," said the fireman. "He told me about it. Awful bright idea! You see, he laid the poker on the tender brake there, and it hit the tree slam, and I saw the wires touch. It was just prime!"

But the happy moments sped, and "59" groaned and slowly departed, while Kate stood on the platform, her face wreathed in smiles and white steam.

So the lovers met each day, and none knew how she was made aware of his approach with such absolute certainty. Science applied to love, or rather love applied to science, can move the world.

Two weeks passed, and then there suddenly arrived at the station, late one evening, a special with the directors' car attached. The honorable directors were hungry—they always are—and would pause on their journey and take a cup of tea and a bit of supper. The honorables and their wives and children filled the station, and the place put on quite a gala aspect. As for Kate, she demurely sat in her den, book in hand, and over its unread pages admired the gay party in the brightly lighted waiting-room.

Suddenly, with furious rattle, her electric bell sprang into noisy life. Every spark of color left her face, and her book fell with a dusty slam to the floor. What was it? What did it mean? Who rang it? With affrighted face she burst from her office and brushed through the astonished people and out upon the snow-covered platform. There stood the directors' train upon the track of the on-coming train.

"The conductor! Where is he? Oh, sir! Start! Start! Get to the siding! The express is coming."

With a cry she snatched a lantern from a breakman's hand, and in a flash was gone. They saw her light pitching and dancing through the darkness, and they were lost in wonder and amazement. The girl is crazy! No train is due now! There can be no danger. She must be—

Ah! that horrible whistle. Such a wild shriek on a winter's night! The men sprang to the train, and the women and children fled in frantic terror in every direction.

"Run for your lives," screamed the conductor.

A short, sharp scream from the whistle. The headlight gleamed on the snow covered track, and there was a mad rush of sliding wheels and the gigantic engine roared like a demon. The great "59" slowly drew near and stopped in the woods. A hundred heads looked out, and a stalwart figure leaped down from the engine and ran into the bright of the headlight.

"Kate!"

"Oh! John, I—"

She fell into his arms senseless and white, and the lantern dropped from her nerveless hand.

They took her up tenderly and bore her into the station house and laid her on the sofa in the "ladies' room." With hushed voices they gathered round to offer aid and comfort. Who was she? How did she save the train? How did she know of its approach?

"She is my daughter," said the old station master. "She tends the telegraph."

The president of the railroad, in his gold-bowed spectacles, drew near. One grand lady in silk and satin pillowed Kate's head on her breast. They all gathered near to see if she revived. She opened her eyes and gazed about dreamily, as if in search of something.

"Do you wish anything, my dear?" said the President, taking her hand.

"Some water, if you please, sir; and I want—I want—"

"Are you looking for any one, Miss?"

"Yes—no—it is no matter. Thank you, ma'am, I feel better. I sprained my foot on the sleepers when I ran down the track. It is not severe, and I'll sit up."

They were greatly pleased to see her recover, a quiet buzz of conversation filled the room How did she know it? How could she tell the special was chasing us? Good heavens! If she had not known it, what an awful loss of life there would have been. It was very careless in the superintendent to follow our train in such a reckless manner.

"You feel better, my dear," said the President.

"Yes, sir, thank you. I'm sure I'm thankful. I knew John—I mean the engine was coming."

"You cannot be more grateful than we are to you for averting such a disastrous collision."

"I'm sure, I am pleased, sir. I never thought the telegaph—"

She paused abruptly.

"What telegraph?"

"I'd rather not tell, sir."

"But you will tell us how you knew the engine was coming?"

"Must you know?"

"We ought to know in order to reward you properly."

She put up her hand in a gesture of refusal, and was silent. The President and directors consulted together, and two of them came to her and briefly said they would be glad to know how she had been made aware of the approaching danger.

"Well, sir, if John is willing, I will tell you all." John Mills, the engineer, was called, and he came in, cap in hand, and the entire company gathered round in the greatest eagerness.

Without the slightest affectation, she put her hand on John's grimy arm, and said :

"Shall I tell them, John? They wish to know about it. It saved their lives, they say."

"And mine, too," said John, reverently. "You had best tell them, or let me."

She sat down again, and then and there John explained how the open circuit line had been built, how it was used, and frankly told why it had been erected.

Never did story create profounder sensation. The gentlemen shook hands with him, and the President actually kissed her for the company. A real corporation kiss, loud and hearty. The ladies fell upon her neck, and actually cried over the splendid girl. Even the children pulled her dress, and put up their arms about her neck, and kissed away the happy tears that covered her cheeks.

Poor child she was covered with confusion, and knew not what to say or do, and looked imploringly to John. He drew near, and proudly took her hand in his, and she brushed away the tears and smiled.

The gentlemen suddenly seemed to have found something vastly interesting to talk about, for they gathered in a knot in the corner of the room. Presently the President said aloud :

"Gentlemen and directors, you must pardon me, and I trust the ladies will do the same, if I call you to order for a brief matter of business."

There was a sudden hush, and the room, now packed to suffocation, was painfully quiet.

"The Secretary will please take minutes of this meeting."

The Secretary sat down at Kate's desk, and there was a little pause.

"Mr. President!"

Every eye was turned to a corner where a gray-haired gentlemen had mounted a chair.

"Mr. President!"

"Mr. Graves, director for the Province, gentlemen."

"I beg leave, sir, to offer a resolution."

Then he began to read from a slip of paper.

"Whereas, John Mills, engineer of engine number '59,' of this railway line, erected a private telegraph; and, whereas, he, with the assistance of the telegraph operator of this station (I leave a blank for her name), used the said line without the consent of this company, and for other than railway business;

It is resolved that he be suspended permanently from his position as engineer and that the said operator be requested to resign,—"

A murmur of disapprobation filled the room, but the President commanded silence, and the State Director went on.

"—resign her place.

It is further resolved, and is hereby ordered, that the said John Mills be and is appointed chief engineer of the new repair shops at Slawson."

A tremendous cheer broke from the company, and the resolution was passed with a shout of assent.

How it all ended they never knew. It seemed like a dream, and they could not believe it true till they stood alone in the winter's night on the track beside that glorious "59." The few cars the engine had brought up had been joined to the train, and "59" had been rolled out on the siding. With many hand-shakings for John, and hearty kisses for Kate, and a round of parting cheers for the two, the train had sped away. The idlers had dispersed, and none lingered about the abandoned station save the lovers. "59" would stay that night on the siding, and they had walked up the track to bid it a long farewell.

For a few moments they stood in the glow of the great lamp, and then he quietly put it out, and left the giant to breathe away its fiery life in gentle clouds of white steam. As for the lovers, they had no need of its light. The winter's stars shone upon them, and the calm cold night seemed a paradise below.

Face of Woman.

There are few women who, if they have exhibited the judgment and tact which generally command a certain measure of happiness in life, arrive at middle life without acquiring an expression of face which is often no bad substitute for actual beauty. Character and experience leave their mark upon the feminine countenance more conspicuously than they itself, and when a woman has passed the age of thirty her face proclaims, with increasing distinctness, whether she is a daughter of wisdom or folly.

A STRANGE TALE.

The Death of Rabbi Ben Horad—One of Mother Rabele's Stories.

Many years have past since I first heard this strange tale, but every detail is distinct in my memory. As a young man I lived in a large city near a synagogue, and many of my companions belonged to Jewish families. This story among many others was told to us by an old Jew, whom we called Mother Rabele. I only wish I could reproduce in words, as clearly as I recall to mind, the dramatic vividness and terseness of her phrases. For the time she was so absorbed in her story that we saw everything with a distinctiveness that left a lasting impression. It is impossible to forget Mother Rabele's stories.

Late one night just before going to bed the old sexton heard the soft incessant rap-rap-rap of his hammer, and a wierd feeling crept over him. In those times our people lived near the synagogue, and as in days of old the sexton went morning and evening from house to house of the little community and called the people to prayer by knocking three times on each door with his hammer.

Still on in the night the sexton heard that strange tap-tap-tap.

"That hammer will not let me sleep," he called to his daughter, who was restlessly turning on her bed in the next room. She too had heard the uncanny tapping.

"Some one of our people is about to die," she said with a shudder; and a cry of anguish wrung itself from her heart. "My God! It is the Rabbi!"

At the same instant the tapping of the hammer ceased, and some one knocked on the window and hurriedly called :

"Get up and collect the people to repeat psalms, for the Rabbi is dying!"

In the stillness of the night the well-known blows of the hammer at each door resounded again and again along the deserted street. With trembling heart the sexton's daughter heard the echo of her father's hammer, and as the sounds died away she felt as if the Rabbi had drawn his last breath. But the prayers of the people held back his departing soul, though the shadow of death still hung over him.

When morning dawned he still lived, but hope had departed from the hearts of the people, and they began to think unconsciously of the grave to be dug in the little burying ground. The company of young men who received daily instruction in the Talmud and the love of the Rabbi from his lips, mourned their beloved teacher as one already dead. "Ah! God," they said to one another, "Can we do nothing to preserve the Rabbi's life?"

"Let us collect years for him," exclaimed one. "Perhaps God will hear us." And then according to an old custom among our people one of the scholars went from house to house with a paper in his hand, and each one wrote down how many years, weeks or days of his life he would give for the dying Rabbi. The daughter of the sexton was standing at the door just as the student passed.

"And will you give nothing for the Rabbi?" he called to her.

"My life! My whole life I will give to him," she said sobbing.

"Shall I write it down?"

"Yes, write it down! write it down!" she cried passionately. And the youth entered Rachel's life on the paper. The self same hour the Rabbi began to grow better.

On the second day after, they carried the body of a young maiden to the old burying ground—it was the daughter of the sexton.

And the name of Rabbi Ben Horad was not stricken out of the Book of the Living. It was remarkable; at first, after his recovery the Rabbi was happy and full of life; with wonderful rapidity and completeness he became strong and vigorous. But, then, he again grew pale and gloomy; and people knew not why it was. They did not know that when the Rabbi sat and studied late at night over the Talmud there came floating into his room the sweet notes of song, and that when he opened the window he saw below the form of a beautiful maiden, whose smile gleamed through the vale of darkness.

"Now she can sing and is as free as a wondering bird," thought the Rabbi, and in the quiet night he wept over the silent leaves of his book. Once at midnight sorrowful moans resounded about the house, strange cries as if wrung forth by anguish. And soon after he heard the vague crying of a new born child. "She is saved the cruel pangs of motherhood!" exclaimed the Rabbi.

Every night he heard the low crying of the babe, and the beautiful cradle-songs of the mother. And the sorrow that weighed heavier and heavier on his heart, made him weep bitterly. As years went by he heard three times the cry of pain, as on that night. Then came a new-born babe, and the wondrous cradle-songs. For a long time it was quiet and peaceful with the Rabbi, yet once again resounded a beautiful exhulting song. "Now her first-born is celebrating the first of his thirteenth year; I have deprived her of this great joy." Again it was quiet for a long time, till after some years a new beautiful song floated into his window one night as he pored over his books.

"It is the betrothal of her daughter, and I have taken this happiness from her!" And a tear fell glittering upon the face of the Talmud, in which he was delving for the thousandth time. Now he heard the voice constantly, but never weeping or complaining; always in a splendid happy song. "She would have been a happy mother," groaned the Rabbi, in anguish of spirit, "and I cut off her beautiful life!"

So the Rabbi lived through the whole life the maiden's. Sometimes he even longed to have the wondrous melodies cease, and to hear instead the cries of pain, that he might know that she would have suffered, if she had lived. But they came not, and the Rabbi wept over his Talmud. "She would have been happy! She would have been happy!" he groaned.

Then he wished to die, the singing at night made his life hateful to him; but his prayer was not granted. He became old and decrepit; his people sank into the grave before him, even the children whom he had blessed at birth, became bed-ridden with age. They died but he could not. "When is the time!" he often cried in passionate anguish. How long must I live!"

At last one midnight a sad cry, as of one dying, rose to his ears.

"She is dead! She is dead!" cried the Rabbi. "God be thanked!"

Early in the morning his students found him lifeless among his books.

A man who is riding in Satan's chariot, and arrayed in Satan's purple, will not easily believe in Satan's existence.

The Architect and the Devil.

All over the north of Europe the greatest aversion is felt to be the first to enter a new building or go over a newly built bridge. If to do this is not thought everywhere and in all cases to entail death, it is considered supremely unlucky. Several German legends are connected with this superstition. The reader, if he has been to Aix-la-Chapelle, has doubtless had the rift in the great door pointed out to him, and has been told how it came there. The devil and the architect made a compact that the first should supply the plans and the second gain the kudos; and the devil's pay was to be the first who crossed the threshold when the church was built. When the building was nearly complete the architect's conscience smote him, and he confessed the compact to the Bishop. "We'll do him," said the prelate; that is to say, he said something to this effect in terms more appropriate to the century in which he lived, and to his high ecclesiastical office. When the procession formed to enter the minster for the consecration the devil lurked in ambush behind a pillar, and fixed his wicked eye on a fine fat and succulent little chorister as his destined prey. But alas for his hopes! this fat little boy had been given his instructions, and, as he neared the great door, loosed the chain of a wolf and sent it through. The evil one uttered a howl of rage, snatched up the wolf, and rushed away, giving the door a kick as he passed it that split the solid oak.

Bridget.

A gentleman who had engaged an Irish girl as cook and housemaid combined brought a live lobster from town with which to test her abilities as cook. Having given her careful directions how to cook it, he added, "Don't boil it too long, Bridget, or you will spoil its color." "All right, sorr, said the confident Bridget. When the lobster appeared on the table, it was jet black. "Hallo, Bridget," said the master of the house—"you have not boiled this so long as I told you!" "Oh, yes, sorr, I have, sorr! I did it just as ye towld me." "But," said he, "if you had, it would be red, not black." "Och, sure it did go red, an' I thought I had boiled it too long an' spoilt its color, as ye towld me not to, so I blackleaded it!"

The Federal Life Assurance Company.

(Toronto Globe, March 5th, 1887.)

The report of the Federal Life Assurance, of Hamilton, which appears in another column, should afford satisfaction to all who are interested in that company either as stock-holders or policy-holders. To stock-holders it indicates such success in increasing the company's business as must soon place a satisfactory margin to their credit, and to policy-holders it indicates public confidence in the company and a successful future. That the Holmans plan, which is a specialty with the Federal, is increasing in popularity as it becomes more widely known and better understood, is also indicated by the fact of the very rapid progress made by the company. A new business in excess of three and a quarter millions at its early age is truly marvellous. It is claimed by the Federal that no system practiced by any other company doing business in Canada gives guaranteed insurance at so low a cost.

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular. The second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East. Toronto Canada.

Husband (impatiently to wife)—"I told you I only wanted half a cup of tea, and, as usual, you've filled it up to the top. Don't you know what half full is?" Mother-in-law (grimly)—"She ought to know by this time. You've been half full often enough."

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

A woman thought she had struck the concentrated essence of spitefulness when she told her neighbor: "If you didn't wear a wig I'd like to pull your hair for you, you nasty thing."

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

"I wish I was a public house," said a loving woman to her husband. "Why?" he inquired, with some degree of surprise. "Oh, because you would run in eighteen or twenty times a day to see me."

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

"My dearest Maria," wrote a recently married husband to his wife. She wrote back: "Dearest, let me correct your grammar or your morals. You address me 'My dearest Maria.' Am I to suppose you have other 'dear Marias?'"

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness. Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

"Is this your fourth or your fifth marriage?" she asked in a loud voice of an old woman on the car. "Hush! Don't speak so loud. This is my fifth, but he's in poor health, and I may want to marry again."

A. P. 327.

DEAF—A very interesting 80-page book on Deafness, Noises in the Head, &c. How relieved. Sent free. Address, NICHOLSON, 177 McDougall St., New York.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

6 PER CENT. MONEY—INTEREST YEARLY —no commission; Mortgages purchased. R. H. TEMPLE, 26 Toronto Street.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B. N. A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

TEACHERS' AGENCY, Manitoba, Ont. Supplies teachers and Boards of Trustees freely, promptly, and without charge. Teachers for Manitoba, the Territories, and Ontario, should write for forms. Office of Public Instruction.

FOR SALE.—SEVERAL FIRST-CLASS IMPROVED FARMS for sale—in the County of Essex (called the garden of Canada); easy terms of payment. C. G. MARTEN, Leamington.

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the United States, Great Britain and all foreign countries. Handbook about patents and how to obtain them sent free. Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Causes. Established 1867. Marion & Marion, C. Eidout & Co., Managers.

PATENT SOLICITORS. THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada, CONSULTING ENGINEERS, TORONTO. G. C. ROSS, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Secretary.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt' fibrous lining. Tuition Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery. Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

EASTER CARD PACKETS By Mail—PACKETS of one dozen beautifully assorted Floral Birthday Cards, at 10c, 15c, 25c, 50c, 75c, and $1 per packet; also silk-fringed packets, 6 in a packet, 50c, $1, and $2 per packet cash to accompany order. A dozen packets of a kind, 20 per cent off. Matthews Bros. & Co., 93 Yonge St., Toronto.

DON'T READ THIS unless you want to make money. THE FIRESIDE WEEKLY is the best story paper in Canada, and contains the best and best stories of any paper published. Prize and great music premium. $2 per year. Secure the agency for your district. Agents liberally dealt with. Send for free sample copies and terms. Mention this paper. Address, THE FIRESIDE WEEKLY, 26 and 28 Osborne Street, Toronto, Ont.

AGENTS WANTED everywhere for "Bible Words," Sam P. Jones' Own Book—a collection of matchless sermons collected and edited under the author's own supervision, with an autobiographical sketch of the great Southern Evangelist; 39 chapters all new; full page engravings, and a steel plate portrait of the author. Remember, this book is only sold by subscription, through authorized agents. WILLIAM BRIGGS, Publisher, Toronto.

ILLUSTRATED CIRCULARS FREE. CANADIAN BUSINESS UNIVERSITY and Shorthand Institute, Public Library Building, Toronto. Specialties: Book-keeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, etc. Write for particulars. THOMAS BENGOUGH, Official Reporter York Co. Courts, President. CHARLES H. BROOKS, Sec'y and Manager.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS, Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

MANGLES, 3 kinds; Clothes Wringers, 3 kinds; Washing Machines, 3 kinds. Churns, Carpet Stretchers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS Co., Hamilton, Ont. Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

SEED GRAIN THAT over 10,000 per acre. Catalogue free. JAS. BOYD, Cedar Grove, Ont.

LADIES Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c. in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

SAUSAGE CASINGS

NEW SHIPMENT from ENGLAND Ex-Steamship "Norwegian."

LOWEST PRICES TO THE TRADE. We are sole agents in Canada for McBRIDE'S CELEBRATED SHERRY. Write for quotations.

JAMES PARK & SON Toronto.

R. SPENCE & CO.

Consumers will find it to their advantage to ask the trade for our make of Files and Rasps. Re-Cutting a Specialty. Send for price list and terms.

HAMILTON - ONT.

SEEDS— OUR SEEDS Satisfaction They are Fresh to name, and It you have not already received our catalogue, send for it.

ROBERT EVANS & CO., Seed Merchants and Growers, Hamilton, Ont.

PILES! Blind, Bleeding, and Itching, effectually cured by Medical Pile Remedy. Thousands of sufferers testify to the permanent relief from these and external Remedies. $1.00 per package. Ask your druggist for it, or will be sent by Mail postage paid. HUGH MILLER & CO. 167 King St. East., Toronto.

Wall Paper MANUFACTURERS M. STAUNTON & CO. Samples on application. TORONTO.

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

The Mutual Reserve Fund LIFE ASSOCIATION

The largest and most prosperous open Assessment Association in the world—desires active representatives in every section of Canada; liberal inducements. It has full Government Deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa. Correspondence solicited. Address, J. D. WELLS, General Manager, 65 King Street, East, Toronto.

Hamilton Scale. All Styles of Improved STANDARD SCALE

We make a Specialty of Hay, Stock, and Portable Platform Scales.

BEST IN THE MARKET.

Every one Guaranteed All Styles of Trucks.

Send for Illustrated Price List.

OSBORNE & CO., - - HAMILTON.

Bicycles

SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines. From $15 Up. New Catalogue Ready Soon. A. T. LANE, MONTREAL.

HEALTH.

The Cocaine Habit.

There is no doubt of the value of cocaine, when appropriately and guardedly used by physicians and surgeons. Dr. Hammond, of New York, lately read a paper on the subject before the New York Neurological Society, in which he expressed doubts as to the existence of a cocaine habit which could not be readily controlled by the will.

He had tested cocaine on himself, and the effects exhibited are of interest, though we take exception to his conclusion. He first injected one grain beneath the skin. It exhilarated him and make him feel quite happy, but he was sleepless after it almost until morning, and arose with a severe headache. This headache followed each trial.

The next night he injected two grains, and the same pleasant feeling followed accompanied by aninordinate desire to write. He wrote much, and thought at the time his work the best he had ever done, but found it in the morning to be disconnected nonsense, each sentence being complete in itself, but having no relation to the others.

He next injected three grains, and felt the same inclination to write, but restrained himself, and indulged in speech-making. Having at different intervals injected successively six or eight grains, he then injected eighteen. The effect was intense exhilaration, and inability for some hours to recall what he did. Next morning he found he had thrown his office into more or less disorder. There had, in each instance, been much palpitation of the heart, but this time it was greatly increased. His headache lasted two days. But he felt no disposition to commit acts of violence, and was not conscious of any habit.

It seems to us, however, that Dr. Hammond overlooked two important facts: First, that all such habits are formed gradually; and secondly, that temperament is an important consideration in the case, persons of a nervous temperament being specially susceptible.

In the discussion which followed the reading of the paper, Dr Mattison said he had had within a few months seven cases of the habit under his care, five of which were physicians. A physician, in attempting to write a prescription, wrote for a sheriff to come and take the patient to jail.

He had also himself noticed hallucinations and delusions. He thought the continued use of the drug more injurious than that of the morphine. His patients had gradually acquired their habits.

The President of the society referred to thirteen cases reported by a single German physician. In Pittsburg a prominent physician, who had formed the habit, became violent, and, under the delusion that he was being attacked by burglars, began firing right and left.

Insomnia.

On retiring for the night we are apt to carry our business with us, or we have some pet theory to further develop; it is wrong to permit any subject to take possession of us at such a time. Yet the surroundings are most favorable to mental activity. It becomes easy to think; it is a real pleasure. It is only to begin a train of ideas, or to find ourselves urged on as if by some unseen stimulus. There is an unaccountable vigor with our mental powers, not often present through the day. By and by we begin to realize that this ought not to be encouraged: so we desire sleep, but sleep is farthest from us. What is the remedy?

I have often risen and taken a bit of plain food, then fixed my attention on some other subject, and always with good results. But this remedy I feel is not a proper one; it is only directing the determination of blood from one set of organs to another; the whole body wants quiet rest.

Thus far my best means of relief is to absolutely pin my mind down to some single trivial object, as a view of running water, or counting a half dozen figures, over and over till all is forgotten.

Hygiene.

No chemist, however able, can analyze a taste. It has been proved over and over again that people are healthiest when they eat moderate quantities of what "tastes good."

The customrry privy of country and village houses is a plague spot, and a blot upon civilization. It is a retrogression from barbarism. It is a method worse than that of any beast of the earth. Its existence among civilized people is utterly inconceivable, although familiar as a fact. It is without the smallest excuse of necessity, of convenience, or of ignorance, wherever there is soil, and a cat to give lessons on the first principle of sanitary prudence and decency.

The multiplied appliances and complex ways of highly civilized life do not make for health and long life. The comparatively uncivilized do not suffer much from disease, and their offspring are not doomed to die in great part in their infancy. The simple habits of those who live close to nature are most favorable to real human welfare. To live close to nature, which in general means in accord with nature—that is the cardinal axiom which the doctor of hygiene would do well to specially inculcate.

Life is best sustained amid alternations of dryness and moisture. It is common to look on damp or rainy days as those of greatest exposure as to health. But the dry, arid, dusty atmosphere is in many respects more trying. On our pleasant days we are less on guard against the unseen and insidious forces of disease. We therefore believe that the attention of most persons, and especially of invalids, needs to be drawn to the perils of very dry weather both as they relate to the person, the ground, the water supply, and the effect of the dry air on conditions of health.

Surgeon Major Warburton says that in cases of ague, where quinine and arsenic, either separate or combined, exert little or no influence, he has found a grain or two of opium with ten or fifteen grains of quinine exhibited an hour or two before the expected paroxysm to act like a charm. If possible the patient should go to bed in a darkened room, he falls asleep or dozes, and the attack either does not come on at all or is greatly lessened in severity. The opium acting as a sedative on the vaso-motor system would thus appear to allow the quinine to exert its anti-periodic power unopposed.

It is a well-known fact that country people do not look to be and really are not so generally healthy as city people of the same rank in life, so far as material things go. And there is no doubt that this arises from their unsanitary modes of living, which are forced upon them by the conditions surrounding them and the lack of that knowledge and experience of other ways of life which would teach them to bend their condition to their needs. It is only necessary to use a little energy or better still, a little brains to count the seeming disadvantages of country life into positive blessings, or at the most not disagreeable circumstances.

The bite of a dog in health, is no more poisonous than the scratch of a pin. It will be well however, for those who have been bitten by a strange animal to have the wound at once cauterized. This, while unnecessary in the vast majority of cases, will have a salutary mental effect at least, and can do no harm if no good results. If a dog bites a person, under no condition should he be killed. Let the owner chain or isolate him, as he chooses, and permit the injured one to visit him from time to time for at least a week or more, and thereby be convinced that the dog is healthy. Thus will fear, the most prominent element in such cases, be eliminated.

Cold baths train the cutaneous vessels to contract and thus lessen the loss of heat when the body is suddenly exposed to cold; so, persons who have thus "hardened" themselves are less liable to "take cold," but are also able to endure greater degrees of cold than are those who have not so trained their cutaneous vessels. The time of taking a cold bath is a matter of importance; before breakfast being the usual time. This can be well borne only by the most robust; the best hour being midway between breakfast and dinner. When the system is fully braced to throw off the depressant effect of the cold water, and to rouse to that reaction which has to be insisted upon as a sine qua non, if the bath be not absolutely hurtful. A popular idea that the water should not be entered while the surface is warm needs to be exploded. The surface and extremities should be warm when a cold bath is taken, and exercise should be taken just previously, if necessary to effect this purpose.

JUBILEE NOTES.

Hamilton's Philharmonic Society will celebrate the Jubilee by producing with a large chorus, Hadyn's "Creation."

The Ottawa Free Press suggests as a simple, permanent, and inexpensive way of celebrating the Queen's Jubilee, that one of the streets of the Capital should be renamed Jubilee street.

Tuesday, June 21st, has been fixed as the official date for celebrating the Queen's Jubilee in the Dominion. All muncipalities and corporations are, however, at liberty to choose any other date if they prefer it.

Mr. Wiman says a large and influential committee are at work and an excellent programme is in progress. Liberal subscriptions are coming in and the celebration to be held in New York promises to be quite equal to any to be held in any British city.

Referring to the general desire not to let the Jubilee year pass without settling the Irish question, a cablegram says an admirable scheme has been submitted to the Government by three politicians, and will be referred to the Queen, who is bringing about a pour parler.

Evidently the Jubilee year is making the Queen democratic and again accessible. Already tradesmen, miliners, pastry cooks and artisans feel that a new impulse has been given to business by her drawing-rooms and re-entrance into society. The smiles of royalty seem to stimulate the business of London.

It has been found difficult to develop enthusiasm for the proposed bridge across the St. Lawrence at Quebec, so a local promoter has suggested thas the bridge be made "a memorial of Her Majesty's Jubilee." In other words Canada is invited to push the undertaking or to confess indisposition to honour the Queen. It might be as well to make all the proposed gigantic enterprises Jubilee affairs. There is the Prince Edward Island subway, and the Ottawa ship canal, the Huron and Ontario ship canal and the Toronto and James Bay railway. The idea of forcing upon the people a public work for which they do not crave in the guise of a memorial to the Queen is a form of loyalty which, happily, is not prevalent.

A Mining Romance.

A very curious story of mining romance comes from France. It appears that about a hundred years ago there was a flourishing silver-mine near St. Brieuc, employing nearly a thousand miners and their families, and sending down to the Cotes-du-Nord a rich stream of ore and bars every year. But in the midst of its prosperity came the "glorious" Revolution; the smelters hastened away, and the owners perhaps came under the guillotine—anyhow, the village and the workings were forgotten in the excitement; the huts tumbled into match-wood, the "pans" filled up, and Nature reclaimed the spot as her own with briar and knot-grass, and sowed bracken and bramble on the diggings, until tradition forgot their exact position. But even bad ink is better than the best memory, says Sancho Panza; and a hundred years after, on certain documentary suggestions, the neighborhood was explored, the mines rediscovered, and opened under the ownership of an English company. One of the first things they found was "a solid mass of pure silver reduced from the ores, and weighing many tons," which must have been left behind in the flight a century or more ago, and was buried in sand and ruins. Such a find is curious, even in the dramatic annals of treasure-trove.

Wasn't Caught Napping.

"Well, Mr Brown, how is your circulation to-day?" inquired the physician of an editor whom he had been visiting for some time.

The sick man raised his head cautiously, and asked:

"Doctor, am I very sick?"

"Oh, not so very."

"This isn't likely to be my last illness, is it?"

"Not at all; not at all."

"Fifty thousand copies daily," replied the editor firmly, as he laid his head back on the pillow.

No More Smiths.

Jones—"Have you a family, Mr. Smith?"

Smith—"I have two daughters."

"Have you no sons?"

Smith (sighing heavily)—"I have no sons to perpetuate my name. It will die with me."

YOUNG FOLKS.

Gain.

Character wins in the end, and all its sacrifices are turned into gains, and become the coin of life and of God. "Character is everything," said a statesman, when dying, and glancing back over an eventful life. "He that overcometh shall inherit all things," is an eternal law.

A paper passing under our eye brings an illustration of the truth before us in a pleasing manner.

"Shine, sir?"

And a bright, manly-looking lad of nine summers stepped up to a gentleman in the old Grand Trunk Depot, Toronto, and casting his large brown eyes up into his face, asked, "Shine, sir?"

"I want my shoes polished," said the gentleman.

"Then, I would be glad to shine them, sir," replied the boy.

"Have I time to catch the Montreal train?"

"No time to lose, sir. I can give you a good job before it pulls out."

"Certain of it?"

"Yes, sir. Shall I?"

"Yes."

And in a pair of seconds the bootblack was down on his knees, and placing his box in operation was at work.

"Don't let me get left," said the gentleman.

"I won't, sir," replied the boy, as he plied both brushes with rapidity.

"What's your name?"

"Paul Fay."

"Is your father living?"

"No, sir, he is dead—no one but mother, I and the children. The train is going, sir."

The gentleman reached his hand in his pocket, and drawing out a silver half dollar handed it to the boy, who pulled out a lot of change, and began to count out the cerrect amount. The gentleman moved off toward the train fearing, he would get left, and before the little fellow could get to him the train pulled out.

Two years later the same gentleman was called to Toronto on business. He had forgotten the little bootblack and his forty-five cents change.

As he wandered up the street the second day after his arrival, he was approached by a lad who said:

"Were you ever here before?"

"Yes, bubby," was the reply.

"When?" the boy asked.

"About two years ago."

"Didn't I shine your shoes at the Grand Trunk Depot?"

"Some boy did."

"Well, I am the boy, sir, and I owe you forty-five cents. I tried to get to the train, but I couldn't—honestly I couldn't—and here is your money. I was afraid I would never see you again. I didn't intend to keep your money;" and saying this, the boy pulled out a lot of change, and, taking forty-five cents, proffered it to the gentleman.

The letter—written from a Southern city—which relates the above incident with its pleasant sequel, mentions the recent death of Mr. ——, one of the most upright and honored citizens of that city. He was the boy who many years ago blacked the gentleman's boots at the Grand Trunk Station—and returned the "change."

The fact that the gentleman was so pleased with little Paul that he adopted him and educated him, only adds a circumstance to the biography of a boy who probably would have grown up a good man without the aid of wealthy friends. One act of simple integrity illustrated his character—and his sacrifice to principle was gain, here and eternal.

A Cat's View of Life.

This is the very worst world that I ever got into. I declare a cat can't do a single thing, but what some one gets after it. This morning, when I woke up I felt thirsty. As I like fresh water, I was just ready to take a cool drink from the bucket, when I heard "'scat!"

Well of course I had to run. As I could not get the water, I went to the spring-house. There was a nice pan of milk on the table. I took a drink from this pan. Before I knew it, Mary Jane gave me an awful slap.

I ran into the yard and stayed there till I felt hungry. Then I tried to catch a mouse or a rat in the barn, but none came out.

I went into the dining-room to see what I could get to eat. No one was there, so what could I do but to help myself. As I could not see what was on the table, I jumped upon it.

There stood a plate of meat. Now I like meat, but do not get it often. So I was eating finely when quick as thought I was thrown out of the window.

I think the girl treated me very rudely. Don't you think so?

By this time I felt tired, and as the baby lay in a very soft bed, I thought I would lie down beside her.

What did that baby do then but scream, and her father came to see what was the matter.

I saw I had better get out of the way. He threw his slipper at me. I heard him say, "Jack, if you don't make that cat stay in the barn, I'll drown her."

When I heard that, I thought it best to go to the barn and stay there. I don't dare go near the house for fear of being drowned.

Now I ask you, my friend, if this is not a hard world for a cat to live in?

The Rat as a Trader.

Studies in natural history, calculated to excite the wonder of a young student, abound in the western regions of America. I know I was vastly entertained during a trip through Arizona and New Mexico by my own observation of the mountain rats, popularly known there as "trading rats." I used to lie awake sometimes in order to watch their pranks by the light of my camp-fire. Their antics and gambols reminded me of young kittens at play. They often appear to be at a game of "tag." They look like common rats, save that they are lighter in color, their tails shorter and thicker and their noses less pointed. They live in hollow trees and in the rocks. But the very funny thing is that though they are born thieves, little kleptomaniacs every one, they always return something in the place of every article taken away; and a queer thing, too, is the fact that they rarely steal articles of food. One night I felt a slight stir about my head. Cautiously opening my eyes I saw one of these rats tugging manfully at my saddle which I was using as a pillow. As the saddle was one of the California style and weighed about thirty pounds the effort of the little rascal seemed to be very ambitious for an animal of his size. They take away cartridges, knives and forks, or anything else they can carry. I have been told by an old prospector that he had a whole outfit of such things "traisted" (i. e. stolen) in one night and that various objects were returned in their place. Articles taken from one place have been found in a shanty twenty miles distant. I met one day at a railroad station an old ranchman who lived at least twenty miles from the road, and chancing to speak of these rats he said: "I found in my 'shack' the other day quite a collection of spoons, forks and knives hid under a pile of rubbish that had been brought there by the little thieves. Where they came from I don't know, but I do know they carried off in turn a whole box of 45-75 Winchester cartridges." I laughed and replied: "Well, I have your cartridges and you probably have my spoons, for out of a dozen I have only two left. And as the cartridges will not fit my Sharps 40-70 they are no use to me; so if you will bring the spoons to Flinn's store I'll see that the cartridges are left there and you can get them." The exchange was affected in the course of a few days and the spoons proved to be mine and the cartridges his.

What She Did.

Many stories are told of the courage of the women of that early generation who first broke ground in the forests of this country. They were in constant peril from wild beasts and from hostile Indians, but with heroic patience endured hardships, labor and disease.

An example of another kind of courage is preserved by the descendants of Christiana Dickson, the wife of one of the first settlers of Ontario. She was a small, blue-eyed, low-voiced woman, extremely timid by nature; on only one point was she resolute: she had a horror of drunkenness.

She lived in the days when the use of liquor was universal. Whisky was as common a drink as water among these hardy, hard-working pioneers A temperance or abstinence society was unheard of.

But when her sons were born, she resolved, as far as she could, to put a stop to whiskey-drinking in her home. Her husband being absent from home, her brothers called for the help of the neighbors, according to the custom of the time, to put up a barn needed on her farm. They all assembled and went to work, while she prepared a great dinner. After an hour or two, whiskey was asked for. One of her brothers came to the house for it; she refused to provide it, to make her friends drunk.

Her other brothers, and at last an elder in the church, came to reason with her; to tell her that she would be accused of meanness. Without a word, the little woman went out to the barn, and baring her head, stepped upon a log and spoke to them in a faltering voice:

"My neighbors," she said, "this is a strange thing. Three of you are my brothers, three of you are elders in the church, all of you are my friends. I have prepared for you the best dinner in my power. If you refuse to raise the barn without liquor, so be it. But before I provide whiskey to give to you, these timbers shall rot where they lie."

The men angrily left the work and went home; the little woman returned to the house, and for some hours cried as though her heart would break. But the next day every man came back, went heartily to work, enjoyed her good dinner, and said not a word about whiskey.

Afterwards the use of whiskey at barn-raisings was discontinued in the county. Her sons grew up strong, vigorous men, who did good work in helping to civilize and Christianize the world; their descendants are all of a high type of intellectual and moral men and women. If she had yielded this little point, they might have degenerated, like many of their neighbors, into drunkards and spendthrifts.

Our stout-hearted pioneer forefathers redeemed the land, and drove out the wild beasts and serpents: but there are still vices and malignant customs to be conquered, and for the work we need women of high souls and gentle spirits, like Christiana Dickson.

STATISTICS.

The population of Ireland has within the last fifty years fallen from 8,000,000 to 5,000,000.

The annual number of parcels circulating through the post, commencing in August, 1883, at about 18,000,000, was, in the first complete year of the calendar, 1884, 22,000,000, and in 1885 nearly 26,000,000.

The total production of wheat in 1885 in the United States was 24,500,000 quarters, valued at the sum of £55,000,000, as against 37,250,000 quarters in 1884, valued at the sum of £66,000,000. The average yield per acre in 1885 was not more than 6 bushels.

Out of a total population of the world of some 1,430,000,000, only 430,000 000 at the outside can be reckoned as in any sense or form professing Christians, the remaining, 1,000,000,000 being made up of Jews Mahometans, Buddhists—of whom there are some 500,000,000—and other heathen.

There are estimated to be nearly 100 places in the Black Forest where the manufacture of clocks and watches forms the staple industry. Ninety years ago the production was about 75,000 annually; in 1808 it was 200,000; in 1880 it reached as much as 1,800,000, nearly 500,000 being sent out from one place.

Last year, 146,459 English, 25,363 Scotch, and 61,297 Irish—233,119 in all—emigrated from the United Kingdom for places beyond Europe. In the preceding year the numbers were—English, 126,260; Scotch, 21,367; Irish, 60,017—total British, 207,644. There has been an increased emigration of Englishmen to the United States, British North America, Australasia, and all other places, but a diminution in the numbers of Scotchmen and Irishmen who went to Australasia.

In 1870 the telegraph-companies handed over to the British Government 42,370 miles of land-wires and 1,622 miles of cable-wires, irrespective of the railway-wires, connecting together 2,488 telegraph-stations. At the present time the Post-Office has no less than 153,153 miles of wires, including submarine wires, in communication with 5,097offices. Thus the mileage has been trebled, and the stations doubled. In addition to this, the railway-companies have about 70,000 miles of wires, making a gross total of 223,153 miles; and the weight of iron wires employed is no less than 50,150 tons.

To-Morrow.

BY JOHN [illegible]

[illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
One day absent—say, "Fed, to-morrow!"

Make friends to-day for use to-morrow,
Take a step to give a kind sorrow,
And from their friendship sweetness borrow
To bless each day and crown each morrow.

Make love to-day!—make more to-morrow!
You'll have to spare when others borrow!
'Twill be an antidote to sorrow
Should it perchance arise to-morrow.

Henry Ward Beecher.

BY WM. YOUNG.

Why do we weep? He is not dead,
Heir of eternal spring,
Earth holds the form, the soul is fled,
And God's own angels haste to bring
Heaven's choicest flowers to deck his head.

For such a life, for such a close
Why do we mourn?
That voice of joy that early rose
To cheer men's souls shall still be borne
On winds of love from his repose.

Still where false pride and bigot zeal
Hell's mitred warriors dim the light,
The incense sprung from Beecher's grave
Shall gather champions for the right.

Well might the few who knew his worth
With flowers crown his homely hearth,
And dress their city in the pall
Of death, despair, remorse and all
The woes that mortals know.

Such was his life—a guiding star
When Envy, following Avarice's track,
Usurped God's sway in human hearts
To paths of peace to turn their back.
A pathway marked by joy and love
Enclosed by strife around, above;
Peace to his ashes, when in times' slow course
God's holy praise sounds from each home at eve,
And joy, not sadness marks the road to Heaven,
Then shall men praise his most exalted plan
To leave on earth the impress of a man.

Bethesda.

BY L. A. MORRISON.

Read John v. 1. to 14.

Bethesda: fountain by the gate!
In thought I view thy porched side,
And scan the helpless throng that wait
The moving of thy placid tide;—
The Angel's presence in the "Pool,"
With hope, his coming may make whole.

How long, in weariness and pain,
These fettered ones have waited here!
Bound by disease's galling chain,
With scarce a hope and many a fear,—
Waiting the "Movin · of the Pool,"
That one, perhaps, may be made whole.

And as I scan the weary throng,
I see a Stranger passing near,
Who moves with quiet grace along,
And drops a word of kindly cheer
To one—the weariest one of all—
Waiting, so long, to be made whole.

I see the eager upturned eye;
I hear him say "I have no friend
To put me in." A swift reply
Comes from the Stranger, and the end
Of weary waiting by the "Pool:"
"Go sin no more, thou art made whole."

Oh, earthly remedies for sin!
How impotent ye are to save!
Ye are as feeble, lite to win,
As vain Bethesda's troubled wave:
Ye seem to help the sin-sick soul,
Yet none but Jesus can make whole.

None but the Christ—strong Son of God—
Can conquer death, or pardon sin.
Oh, sound His praises all abroad,—
Invite the world to enter in ·
And wash in Israel's fount; each soul
That washes there, is cleansed and whole.

A Forest Dream

BY J. R. WILKINSON.

Bare and gaunt the forest standeth,
Reaching out so wide and high;
As if mutely supplicating
Mercy of an angry sky.
Oh! such hollow, weirdly voices
Issue from its solemn aisles;
As if lonely forest phantoms
Mourn the loss of summer's smiles.

I have sought the dim, old forest,
And its still familliar ways;
Frozen streams, dark glens and bowers,
Dear to me in childhood's days,
All is silent, and forsaken,
Leaf and flower lie cold and dead;
Mute appealing to the memory,
Telling of a day that's fled!

I have known when summer's mantle,
Fair, and sweet, as poet's dream,
Cover'd in a wild profusion
These old haunts with rustling green.
Then the forest aisles were merry
With melody the song birds made;
And its gentle echoes follow'd
Every stream, and fragrant glade.

Then I sung with boyhood's rapture,
Leapt, and shouted in the dell;
Till the golden hush of sunset
With its silent shadows fell
O'er the hills, that wrapt in dreaming
Watch'd the moonrise on the sea;
Where the wavelets danc'd and murmured
Low voiced and mysteriously.

Life was one long dream of gladness,
All unknown the future lay;
Ah! the years have brought deep sadness;
Summer's merg'd in winter's gray,
And I wander, lone and weary,
Grieving o'er the faded past;
As the snowflakes flit around me
Borne upon the wintry blast.

A Sailor's Duty.

An old North Sea skipper who was asked to buy a number of life-belts for his vessel's use waxed eloquent in the sublimity of his contempt. "Take 'em away!" said the old "salt." "Don't let me see such long-shore rubbish on my decks. I don't want no life-belts, nor no smelling-salts, nor no eau-de-Cologne, nor no feeding-bottles or fans aboard of me. Them as sails in my ship has got to stick to her as I do; and, if she goes down, why, I expect them in duty bound to go along with her!"

At the end of 1885 there were 395,000 licensed establishments for the sale of drink in France, besides 26,000 in Paris. The proportion to the number of inhabitants averaged about one to 95; but in the department of the Nord there was a drink-shop for every 46 inhabitants, which represents one to 11 adult men. The number has increased by 40,000 since 1880, when the law which required authorisation to open a new wine-shop was abolished.

In most men and women there is a reserve fund of sentiment and feeling which is inexhaustible; the dreams of youth do not fade entirely out of the sky even of those who are unfaithful to their early ideals; they still remain along the horizon line like the memory of a beautiful day. However men and women may distrust and restrain the expression of their deeper feeling, they are always eager to hear and quick to answer the honest utterances by another of that which lies silent and hidden within themselves.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Publisher.

MARKDALE, APRIL 7, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Several hundred emigrants arrived at Winnipeg last week.

—Capt. John Ellison, Collector of Customs at Stratford, died suddenly last Saturday.

—Mr. Cargill has been re-elected in East Bruce by a majority of 145. His majority in the previous election was 370.

—Col. Goldie and Mr. Mathews, V. S., representing the Imperial authorities, are now in Canada buying horses for the British Army. They want at least 300.

—A suit for $100,000 damages is entered against the Grand Trunk road for the accidental killing of Jumbo, Barnum's great elephant. His owners claim that he was worth $50,000 per year for show purposes.

—A Bill is now before the Legislature of the State of Rhode Island which provides that cars shall be lighted either by gas or by electricity, and that no fires shall be allowed in a train, excepting in a locomotive furnace. This should not be a state but a federal bill, and Canada should have a similar one.

—The Lock built and maintained at Sault Ste. Marie by the United States is the largest in the world, but it is now considered too small to accommodate the tremendous trade that passes through it. An effort is being made to get a new lock built still larger in every way. During the last ten years the traffic through the canal has increased four-fold.

—The Construction of the Canadian Pacific and Grand Trunk Sault Ste. Marie branches will open up a considerable stretch of by no means bad farming lands in the vicinity of Bruce mines, St. Joseph Island, and the Garden River. It will also bring the Manitoulin isles within easy reach, by train. of all Canada, and the necessity of preserving these beautiful remains of the wilderness from desecration is therefore increased.

—Three Persons, a man and two women, were severally sentenced to two years' imprisonment by Mr Justice Armour, of the Court of Queen's Bench of Ontario, at the Toronto Assizes, for the henious crime of enticing a young woman to enter a house of ill-fame. It is something to know that under Canadian law and before a Canadian court of justice it is possible to secure the punishment of the procurer, and it is lamentable that the punishment meted out to these evil-doers, should not be more in accordance with the gravity of the crime. Had these three procurers been common thieves they would have received a much more severe sentance, and no theft can have so pernicious an effect upon the individual wronged and the community as the theft of a woman's honor.

—The Presidental Election takes place next year, and already the politicians are booming their favorite candidates. So far, President Cleveland appears to have the best chance of securing the Democratic nomination. It is true he will have the opposition of the wire-pullers and the office-seekers, who resent his noble condemnation of spoils system, as well as many more respectable people among the Democrats who have other favorites. But it is generally felt that the President should have a second term, and that he would have the support of many mugwumps among the Republicans. Governor Hill, of New York, is the strongest rival for the Democratic nomination. His qualification is that he could carry New York. The most prominent Republican candidate is undoubtedly Mr. Blain. He is the "magnetic" candidate, the eloquent and pleasing orator, the upholder of the jingo policy, which is a popular one in the United States. If he became President and carried his principles into practice, there would be non-intercourse between the United States and Canada before he had occupied the chief magistrate's chair twenty-four hours. The power which Congress has entrusted to Mr. Cleveland, who may be confidently expected to wield it moderately and wisely, would in Mr. Blaine's hands be used with indiscretion.

Flesherton.

Mrs. Symonds (Sister of our townsman W. Barnhouse) who has been residing in our village for the past few months, left for her home in British Columbia on Saturday last. Mrs. S, who came from the south in delicate health returns home very much improved.

Dr. Armstrong received a call by wire on Thursday last to attend a patient in Toronto; the Dr. went forward on first train.

The open council Royal Templars entertainment on Tuesday of last week was well patronized, the town hall was crowded to the doors. The program was well sustained the Rev. Mr. Ferrier of Maxwell delivered a very interesting lecture.

The social under the auspices of the Ladies' Association of the Methodist church held in that church Friday evening last was a very pleasant affair. There was a good turn out, the provisions plentiful and good and the program interesting. Proceeds $17.00 we believe to be applied in furnishing and fitting up the Choir gallery in the Church.

At a meeting of rate payers of the Flesherton S. Section held some time ago, the site of the old school house was chosen on which to erect the new school house: Not being satisfactory to all, a petition was signed by numbers of rate payers asking the trustees to call another meeting for the purpose of selecting site; in compliance therewith another meeting was called on Friday last when the site on Mr. Flesher's property on the elevation oppcsite the old school was chosen. Mr. Flesher has numerous objections and not willing that said lot should be used for that purpose. The trustees are now authorized by the section to take possession and build thereon. We expect to see the new building pushed forward at an early date.

The scholars of our public school have formed a Society known as the Flesherton Mapel Leaf, spelling Society and have secured very neat badges for members of the society. They have already challanged a neighboring school for a spelling match, which is to take place on Thursday (to-day.) It will cool their ardour if some of School S. No. 6 small boys should spell them down.

Very spirited horses in this locality—another runaway team caused some excitement for a few minutes on Monday evening, no harm done.

A good opening—Is some body anxious for office? Election of Trustee for this S. Section on Saturday to fill the vacancy made by W, Pickell's removal from this place.

Herbert Strain, Esq., one of our village boys well and favorably known here, has launched out in mercantile life for himself in Dakota, U. S. His brother Josiah intends leaving here in a few days to join his brother in the west.

Mr. T. Patton of Toronto preached in the Methodist Church here on Sunday morning last.

TAMARAC
ELIXIR
NATURE'S REMEDY.
FOR COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS
THROAT & LUNG COMPLAINTS
INSTANT RELIEF. POSITIVE CURE

The Law Concerning News papers.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed in his name, or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

2. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted in the place where the paper is published, although the subscriber may reside hundreds of miles away.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post-office or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Subscribe now for the STANDARD: there is good times acoming.

THE LATEST!

New Carpets
—AT—
McFarland's.

New Lace Curtains
—AT—
McFarland's.

New Tweeds
—AT—
McFarland's.

New Boots & Shoes
—AT—
McFarland's.

New Ties & Hats
—TA—
McFarland's.

NEW JUBILEE HANDKERCHIEFS
—AT—
McFarland's.

New Black & Colored Silks at
McFarland's.

My European buyer advises large purchases in New Dress Goods, Muslins, Gloves, Laces, Silks, Parisols, Plushes, &c., &c. Which will exceed all former efforts in style price or quality.

TEA! TEA! TEA!

Two extensive Shipments of pure Japan Tea's received direct from Japan over the C. P. Railway, via British Columbia. Is it not to your interest to purchase your Tea from Headquarters rather than through Peddlers who get their supplies from 3rd class Houses in Toronto or elsewhere, and charge an exhorbitant price to cover expenses in travelling around from house to house. Save your money and come direct to McFarland's the largest Tea Dealer in Grey County.

W. J. McFARLAND,
Direct Importer.

MARKDALE
SASH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,
FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed
Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,
MARKDALE.

Stock Taking
SALE
At the Toronto House,
Markdale.
SLAUGHTER PRICES
FOR CASH.
Wm. Brown.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart:—Late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.
Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

Partnership Notice.

DR'S SPROULE & BRODIE, have entered into a partnership for the practice of their profession. Dr. Sproule will be found at his old office Turner's Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his office Mathew's new block. 333-46

To Sell or Rent.

LOT 16 con. 12 Holland, 194 acres, 100 cleared, good buildings, well watered by good well. 15 rods from school, one mile from Methodist Church, 7 miles from Markdale, good roads, 90 acres fall plowing done. A bargain in it. Apply to.

JAMES LOGAN.
Harkaway, P. O

Unparalleled Offer.

No. 1.—The Markdale Standard..... $1.00
No. 2.—The American Agriculturist (English or German), 1887..... 1.00
No 3.—The A. A. New Poultry Book, for everybody. 256 pages. 100 Illustrations. Most complete work ever published..... 1.00
No. 4.—Engravings. "Home of our Farmer Presidents," 11x18. issued during 1887. Each worth..... 1.00
No. 5.—The same issued during 1886, forwarded post-paid, in a tube prepared for the purpose. Each worth..... 1.00
No. 6.—Articles describing the Engravings of the "Home of our Farmer Presidents," written expressly for this purpose by James Parton, Donald G. Mitchell (Ik Marvel,) printed on tinted paper.

Companion Portraits.

No. 7.—A magnificent portrait of General Grant from his last sitting. Grand Cabinet size, 18 by 24 inches, and engraved at large expense, especially for subscribers to this combination, and supplied to no other persons. Price. 1.00
No. 8.—... supurb steel plate engraving of General Logan, 12 by 16 inches in size, from a photograph by Brady' elegantly mounted on heavy, highly finished paper suilable for framing or for the centre table. Price. 1.00
No. 9.—A magnificent portrait of Henry Ward Beecher. Full cabinet size, engraved expressly for the subscribers of this combination by the new process direct from a negative taken by Falk, after Mr. Breecher's recent return from Europe. 1.00

Total..... $8.50

We will furnish all the above post-paid for $2.50
Send six cents to 751 Broadway, New York, for mailing you specimen copy of the American Agriculturist, English or German, specimen proofs of the engravings, and specimen pages of Poultry Book.

AUCTION SALE
—OF—
VALUABLE FARM PROPERTY,

In the Township of Glenelg, in the County of Grey, there will be sold on Wednesday,

20th day of April, 1887,

at 1 o'clock in the afternoon at the Markdale House, in the village of Markdale, by virtue of Powers of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage, which will be produced at the Sale, the following property. Under Mortgage from Angus Leitch. lot 8 in the 12 concession of the Township of Glenelg. in the County of Grey, containing 100 acres more or less.

The following improvements are said to be on the premises: About 50 acres cleared, having erected thereon log house, log barn, and log stable.

TERMS:—15 per cent of the purchase money to be paid down at day of sale. For balance terms will be made known at time of sale.

For further particulars apply to
JONES BROS. & MACKENZIE.
Solicitors, Toronto Street, Toronto.
Or to JOHN LYONS, Esq., Markdale.

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for further particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
333-34 Holland Centre P. O.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

Mr. Josiah Gamey, of Osprey, is visiting friends in Ohio, U. S.

A Court of Foresters has been organized in Dundalk recently.

The Dundalk Herald has donned a new and handsome heading.

Rev. Dr. Aylsworth, of Mt. Forest, has received the unanimous request of Grace Street, Methodist Church, St. Thomas, to be their Pastor the next three years.

REMARKABLE.—There have been many remarkable cure of deafness reported from the use of Yellow Oil. The proprietors of this medicine have a large number of such testimonials. It is the great household remedy for pain, inflammation, lameness, and sorness of every description, and can be used internally and externally.

Wm. Coe, of Mulmur, poisoned himself by taking strychnine on Thursday the 4th March. No reason are assigned for the rash act. He was twenty odd years old, and married less than a year.

The extension of the C. P. R. from Teeswater through Riversdale, Kinloss, Glammis, Tiverton, Underwood and North Bruce to Port Elgin is talked of.

The bill to incorporate Thornbury as a town has passed its third reading: The Thornbury Standard recommends Mr. Andrew Grier for Mayor, and Mr. Neil McColman for Reeve, of the new council.

B. B. B.—IN WORKING ORDER.

"My husband was troubled with dyspepsia for more than four years. Two experienced physicians did him no good. We got discouraged, until we read of Burdock Blood Bitters; he took only two bottles and now he is as well as ever, and doing heavy work all the time." Mrs. Richard Rowe, Harley Ont., B. B. B. has cured the worst cases of chronic dyspepsia.

The population of the county of Glengarry is estimated at 5,500, of which about 5,000 are Macs, and of these about 1,000 are Macdonalds and McDonnels; there are also a large number of Camerons and Campbells.

Mr. C. A. Fleming, of the Northern Business College at Owen Sound, has received a bronze medal for an exhibit of Plain and Ornamental Penmanship which he sent to the Colonal Exhibition at London last year.

CURE FOR INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.—Procure from your druggist a bottle of Hagyard's Yellow Oil and use according to directions. J. D. Cameron, of Westlake. Ainslie, Cape Breton, was cured by this remedy after all other treatment had failed It may be taken internally for coughs, colds, sore throats etc., etc.

Alexander Webster, Esq., formerly of Priceville but recently of Cookstown has moved to Teeswater, there to assume control of a saw mill; so says the Chronicle.

Mr. Chas. Grant, of Thornbury, received a diploma and bronze medal from the Colonal Exhibition in London, for his collection of grain.

A PROFITABLY LIFE.—Few men have accomplished the same amount of work and good in this world as the celebrated Dr. Chase. Over 500,000 of his works have been sold in Canada alone. We want every person troubled with Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Headache, Kidney or Urinary Troubles, to buy a bottle of Dr. Chases Liver Cure. it will cure you. Medicine and Receipe Book $1.

There is a decided improvement in the Chesley Enterprise last week.

The Meaford By-Law to raise $2,500 for the erection of a fire-proof fire hall, has been carried by a majority of 11.

Archie Hill, formerly of this place and lately of Meaford is going to Clayner to enter business with his father, who is also a tailor.

WHERE THE DANGER LIES.—The chief danger from taking cold is its liability to locate upon some internal organ, as the lungs, the pleura, the bronchical passages, etc. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam loosens and breaks up the cold allays irritation and often prevents or cures pulmonary complaints.

A hotel in San Francisco which cost $50,000 was destroyed by fire last Friday. No insurance.

Two freight trains colided on the Michigan Central Railroad near St. Thomas last Saturday, killing two brakemen and completely wrecking two engines and seventy-six freight cars.

The Flesherton W. C, T. U. has instituted a course of Saturday readings on hygiene alchol and its effects on the human system.

CLIPPINGS.

COMMENDABLE ENTERPRISE.—We learn that Mr. C. A. Fleming has purchased the large stone building on Scrope Street known as Kennedy Bros. Furniture Factory, and will commence immediately to fit it up to meet the requirements of his Business College. It will probably be ready for occupation early in the summer. We wish our enterprising young townsmen every success in his new venture, and that the Northern Business College, of which he is the Principal, will continue to gain, as it deserves to do, an ever.widening reputation as one of the finest institutions in Ontario for the advantages it offers for obtaining a first-class practical education.—[O. S. Times.

B. B. B. A SENSE OF DUTY. B. B. B.

"I should not think it right did I not give my testimony of what B. B. B. has done for me. I was troubled with biliousness. I took one bottle—It gave immediate relief. I can recommend it as a sure cure for biliousness." Minnie Smith, Orillia, Ont.

PATENTED.—Mr. A. G. Hunter has been awarded a patent for his "Automatic Orator" for the Dominion of Canada. We wish the "Orator" success. —[Dunkalk Herald.

The C. P. R. as an Ontario Road.

With many Ontario people the impression has for years prevailed that the Canadian Pacific Railway is something that has to do with the North-West, also with the Eastern Province, but not much with this one. But a contemporary puts in a correction showing the number of miles of the Canadian Pacific Railway now in operation, thus:

In Ontario	1984
" Manitoba	771
" The N. W. Territories	751
" British Columbia	520
" Quebec	272
Total	4303

This looks as if it were something of an Ontario road, after all.

Just now there are 192 miles in course of construction, of which 122 are in Ontario and 70 in Quebec. The whole annual outlay of the road is six millions and a half of dollars, four millions of which goes for wages, which seems to be keeping the money in the country to some extent.

New Hints on House Cleaning.

From several years of observation of the different methods employed by women in their annual house cleaning, we are convinced that most of them make themselves a great deal of unnecessary hard work when putting their "house in order." The usual way is, to go at it as if the fate of the nation depended on having it done at a certain time "Taking it leisurely," is something they do not seem to think of. "Moving" is always dreaded by the men-folks. and house cleaning, as a general thing, is about as bad. We know one woman who has completely revolutionized the old system. She begins with the closets. She empties one at a time, cleans it and its contents, returns them to it, and goes on to the next, never hurrying the work, and consequently never making herself sick by overdoing, as so many women do every spring. When the closets are in "apple-pie order," she begins with the rooms, taking those up-stairs first, one at a time, and working her way down to the cellar. There is no bustle, no confusion, no "picked-up" meals, and, consequently, no out-breaks of wrath on the part of the men-folks, who would not know that house cleaning was going on if they were not asked to help move heavy furniture out of one room into another now and then and carry out the carpets, or bring them in after they had been beaten and aired. When the house is cleaned in this leisurely fashion, it is easy to get the men to help put up shades and curtains, because they do not get "out of sorts" from the general topsy-turvy condition of things. When the work is completed, the woman of the house is not "all used up." She may be tired—without doubt she is—but she soon "rests up," and is "all right again," while in many cases the woman who cleans house in the old fashion, pays for her over zealous ambition by sickness brought on by not "going slow," and working according to her strength.—[American Agriculturist for April.

SOUTHERN ASTHMA CURE

DOUBLE TREATMENT IN EACH PACKAGE

INSTANT RELIEF FOR ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS

BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF PRICE SAMPLES, 25c.; REGULAR SIZE, $1.00

ADDRESS FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

An X ellent selection of Cuts for Horse Bills at the Standard Office.

The Spring Assizes.

A LIGHT DOCKET.

The Assizes opened here on Monday before Judge O'Connor. Usually the Spring Assizes are interesting, as indicated by a heavy docket. On this occasion it was quite the reverse, there were no serious cases, no one on trial for his life, neither was there any one likely, as the saying is, to get "set down" for perjury or any one of these heinour crimes, that the newspaper man always dreads.

Judge O'Connor in addressing the Jury, complimented the County on the absence of crime, as shown by the small number of cases before the Court, He said "It is an indication to my mind that you are a healthy community, prosperours sober and industrious that the people have enough to do to mind their own business, and consequently have lost no time in meddling with the affairs of others. Crime arises from various causes, not unfrequently from indolence, and very often from over indulgence in strong drink. The fact that you have such a few causes to bring before the court, indicates to me that your people have been free from these causes, and representing, Mr Foreman of the Jury as you do, a population over, I believe 70,000 people, I deem it my duty to congratulate you, and hope that a similar state of affairs may continue to exist in this locality."

The following is a list of the Grand Jury: —Nicholas Read, Foreman; John Moffat, Andrew Dinsmore, Wm. Stewart, George Edwards, David Christie, John Douglas, Sr., Chas. Watt, Wm. Westaway. John Reid, John Nicholas, Robert Moffat, Robt Lynn, jr., Donald Robertson, jr., John W Vickers, Alex Pringle, Donald McDonald, Matthew Ramage, John W. Morrow, John Street.

CUNNINGHAM vs VANDUSEN.—An interpleader action. Goods having being seized under an execution against Samuel Gainor his sons and one Cunningham the Mortgagee from the sons, claimed the goods. The Jury found the goods belonged to the sons. Masson for the plantiffs; Kilbourn for the defendants.

JONES vs SULLIVAN.—This case, Mrs. S. A. Jones sued one Timothy Sullivan for the balance owing to her on a sale of lumber; the defendant counter claimed for damages for non-completion of contract. Judgement for the plantiff for $400. Kilbourn for plantiff; Masson for defendant.

CARSON vs MCBRIDE.—This was a case of slander in which the defendant justified the slander. Judgement for defendant Kilbourn for plantiff; J. W. Frost for defendant.

The prejury cases against Albert Porter and Mrs. Causby were thrown out by the Judge before going to the jury.—[O. S. Advertiser.

Honor Roll.

Honor Roll S. No. 5, Glenelg for March

4th Class—Lizzie White, Maggie White, Mary Symmes.

3rd Class—James Duncan, Robbie Burnett, Catherine Morris.

2nd Class—Robbie White, Johnnie Duncan, Newton Bell.

II Pt. Sr.—George Symmes, Eddy Burnett, Mary E. Morris.

II Pt. Jr.—Alfred Bell, Maud Walker, Ralph Watson.

1 Class—Jessie Duncan, Lizzie Symmes.

AGGIE WHITE,
Teacher.

HEAD QUARTERS

FOR

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand; also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

SEEDS

Seeds !

SEEDS !

FIELD & GARDEN

SEEDS!

—AT—

Stephen's

DRUG STORE.

Your's Respectfully,

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

IN returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have re-moved to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,

R. S. RAE,
Markdale

HAMPDEN

WATCHES

DURABLE-:-RELIABLE.

—ALSO—

Waltham, Elgin and Colombiers,

—IN STOCK—

American Clocks, Silverware, Wedding Rings.

☞ Watch repairing and fitting Spectacles a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,

A RELIABLE JEWELLER.

XMAS GOODS.

NEW GOODS ARRIVING EVERY

—WEEK AT—

RUSSELL'S

Noted Jewellry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Consisting of GOLD and SILVER WATCHES, CLOCKS, JEWELRY, SPECTACLES, SILVER-WARE, FORKS, SPOONS, KNIVES, Fancy MIRRORS, ALBUMS, VIOLINS &c.

Any one looking for Xmas presents will do well to call at RUSSELL'S, Flesherton, a fine stock to select from, and prices very low, If your watch or clock wants repairing, RUSSELL'S is the place to take it: A satisfactory job every time, ☞ Remember,

JAS. G. RUSSELL'S

Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

OWEN SOUND

MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRAITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE,

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 13, CON., 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation. well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY
31-t Berkley.

TO RENT.

THE old and well known Pickell farm adjoining Flesherton, consisting of 100 acres, eighty-five cleared, twenty fall ploughed. Splendid bank barn with spacious horse stable, stone cow stable, and never-failing well, all underneath barn. Fine young orchard of 100 trees bearing well a good variety of fruit. Comfortable log house.

For terms apply to Wm. Brown, Esq., Markdale. or on the premises to

W. G. PICKELL.

WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE St., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush

HOUSEHOLD.

Children's Habits.

We all have our theories upon the prope management of children, and those of us who have the opportunity to exercise them are sometimes surprised that they do not work as we expect them to. The best children in the world are said to be "old maids' children," and it is a well-known fact that none are so free to advise and give sound doctrine on the management of the little folks as those who have never had any to practice on. As our practice has to be all upon the boys, we have a few pet theories that we have not often seen advocated, and we are quite ready for an argument with any one who will question our position in the matter.

We believe a boy will grow to be a better man and husband if he is taught that some little duties fall to his share in keeping the home tidy. We call to mind a little boy of six or seven years old, who will put the furniture all to one side of the room, take the carpet sweeper, and "brush up" the sitting-room as well as his mother can, and it is often a great help to her.

A boy's clothes will last much longer if the habit is formed of hanging them all up on a chair when he goes to bed. Generally they are left in a heap on the floor or cast to the four points of the compass. A child that is very young can be taught to hang up its clothes so that they will be smooth and well-aired in the morning, and he will think it fun to do it.

And in the morning, to hang up the night-shirts, throw open the bedcloths, and push the window up, will not only "help mother" very much, but make the daily task of strenghtening the "boys' room" a much easier one and it will teach the boys themselves to be better guests in other homes, and more tidy men when they are in possession of homes of their own.

There are many things which are neglected in the home education of boys, which should be taught to them as to their sisters and when sickness comes, domestic upheavals in the kitchen, or any unlooked for emergency, the boy's strength, if aided by a little skill, will help tide over the difficulty and give most efficient aid.

Household Hints.

In ventilating a room, open the windows at top and bottom. The fresh air rushes in one way, while the foul air makes its exit the other; thus you let in a friend and expel an enemy.

Lace may be washed by winding it around bottles or sewing it on muslin and boiling it in soft water with white castile soap. It should be rinsed in soft water after removing it from the suds.

Nothing is better for a sore throat than a gargle of salt and water. It may be used as often as desired, and if a little is swallowed each time it is used it will cleanse the throat and allay irritation.

A damp cloth enveloping the broom head will be found desirable in removing the dust from a carpet in a room where there may be many small articles to catch the dirt raised by an ordinary sweeping.

Preserving jars should be stood on their heads for at least an hour after sealing, when the liquor will escape if the jar contains air. Cranberry jelly mixed with cold water makes a refreshing drink for the sick.

Salt, in doses of one to four teaspoonfuls in half a pint to a pint of tepid water, is an emetic always on hand. This is also an antidote to be used after poisoning from nitrate of silver while waiting for the doctor to come.

Silver should be washed with a chamois skin, saturated with silver soap, each time after use, thus avoiding a general cleaning. Windows should never be washed while the sun shines upon them, as it is impossible to polish them without leaving blue streaks.

To clean kid gloves rub them with very slightly dampened crumbs of bread. Or scrape French chalk upon them while on the hands and wash them in a basin containing diluted spirits of ammonia. Some gloves can be cleaned with milk, with rice pulp or with turpentine.

If you are troubled with moths in your feather beds boil the feathers in water for a short time; then put them in sacks and dry them, working them with the hands all the time. Silk dresses should never be brushed with a whisk broom, but should be carefully rubbed with a velvet mitten kept for that purpose only.

Disease often lurks in a dirty dishcloth, a greasy sink, an unclean teakettle and a poorly-ventilated oven. Flannel should be washed in hot soapsuds, and rinsed in hot water containing soap enough to soften it a little. A carpet-sweeper is invaluable in a dining-room where small children eat, but should never be used for general sweeping.

If the feet are tender or painful after long walking or standing, great relief can be had by bathing them in salt and water. A handful of salt to a gallon of water is the right proportion. Have the water as hot as can comfortably be borne. Immerse the feet and throw the water over the legs as far as the knees with the hands. When the water becomes too cool, rub briskly with a fresh towel. This method, if used night and morning, will cure neuralgia of the feet.

To prevent the juice of pies soaking into the under crust, beat the white of an egg and brush the crust with it. If the oven is too hot when baking place a small dish of cold water in it. Well-ventilated bedrooms will prevent morning headache and lassitude. Powdered rice, sprinkled upon fresh lint and applied to fresh wounds, will stop bleeding. A tallow candle or piece of tallow wrapped in tissue paper and laid among furs or other garments will prevent the ravages of moths.

Choice Recipes.

White Cake.—White of four eggs, one half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, two and one-half cups of flour, one teaspoonful of baking powder.

Sponge Cake.—One half pound of sugar, three eggs, one-quarter pound of flour, one teaspoon of baking powder, one-quarter cup of sweet milk. Bake in slow oven.

Cream Slaw.—Shave fine one-half head of cabbage; take three tablespoons of thick, sweet cream, three tablespoons of sugar, salt and pepper to taste, one-half pint of vinegar. Mix thoroughly.

Doughnuts.—One cup of sugar, one cup of sweet milk, two tablespoonfuls each of butter and lard, three eggs, three tablespoonfuls of baking powder, flour enough to roll well. Cut into shape and fry in boiling lard.

Fruit Juice for Invalids.—Take grape juice and sweeten to taste; put in bottle and tie a thin cloth over the mouth of the bottles; let stand till done working; put in clean bottles, cork and set in cool, dark place.

Lemon Pudding.—Take the yolks of six eggs well beaten, with a quarter of a pound of sugar; take a quarter of a pound of butter melted in as little water as possible; keep stirring it till cold; then mix all together with the juice of two lemons and the grated peel. Cover the dish with a thin puff paste, pour in the mixture, and bake it for half an hour.

Orange Wafers.—Beat the yolks of four eggs very light; stir into them one-half pound of white sugar, one-quarter pound of flour, the juice of one lemon, grated rind of a half one, and the white of the eggs, beaten to a stiff froth. Drop this batter from a teaspoon upon buttered paper and bake in a quick oven. Spread orange marmalade on the under-side, and place two together.

Cocoanut Biscuit.—Remove the shell and dark skin from a fresh cocoanut and grate it. Simmer it slowly for half an hour in a quart of milk and then squeeze all the milk from the nut in a strong towel. Add to the milk one gill of compressed yeast, or one gill of liquid yeast, a teaspoonful of salt, and flour enough to make a soft dough; let it rise until light, and then knead, prove, and bake in form of small loaves or biscuits.

Bachelor's Pudding.—Take a quarter of a pound of apples, finely minced, a quarter of a pound of currants, the same quantity of fine bread crumbs, and two ounces of sugar. Mix these all thoroughly with three well-beaten eggs, flavoring the whole with a little essence of lemon and grated nutmeg. Pour the mixture in a butter mold and boil for from two and a half to three hours. Serve with a wine sauce made as follows: Sweeten a gill of good melted butter, adding a glass of sherry wine and flavoring with a little grated orange peel. Stir the sauce well and serve hot.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

Previous to the opening of the meeting Brother Gardner, Sir Isaac Walpole and Waydown Bebee were seen in earnest conversation around the President's desk, and when the triangle sounded it was pretty well understood throughout the room that some matter of gravest importance was on the tapis. One individual seemed to feel even more than a lively curiosity. This was Brother Process Davis, a member of about six months' standing. He jammed himself into a corner and tried to appear as small as possible, and when inquiries were made about his sore heel he let on that he had an awful toothache and didn't want to talk. Scarcely had the meeting opened when he was called to appear at the President's desk. The look of terror which came to his face as he rose up proved that he regarded the matter in a very serious light, and he suffled up the long aisle like one gonig to execution.

"Brudder Process Davis," said the President in very solemn tones, "at one of our weekly meetins last fall, an' as we war' about to disperse to our homes. r Is aac fllalpole diskibered dat his umbreller was missin.' It was an umbreller wid a white bone handle, an' it was an heirloom in his fam'ly His gran'fadder had walked under dat umbreller, an' it had kept de rain off his fadder, an' he himself had owned it fur nigh upon thirty y'ars. It had been left in kyars an'on steamboats an' on de front doah steps, an' nobody had took it. He had brung it down heah 200 times, an' it war' allus waitin fur him when he got ready to go home. At las' some one stole it—some humane hyena laid his desecrated paws on dat sacred relick an' bore it off. We made ebery effort to find it, but de hunt was in vain. Den we settled down to wait fur Justice. She nebber sleeps. She sometimes does a good deal of foolin' around, an' dar am sometimes a mighty long wait between de ackts, but she nebber sleeps. She didn't go to sleep dis time. She war' lookin' fur you, an' yesterday she oberhauled yon. You had Sir Isaac's umbreller under yer arm. Heah am de libin proof to convict you! You ar' de hyena who stole it, an' you ar' now bofo' de bar of Justice! Prisoner, how do you plead?"

Process stood there with his mouth open and could not reply. The sudden shock seemed to have paralyzed him. His guilt was as plain as the hind buttons on a coat.

"De pusson who will steal an umbrellar under any sarcumstances," continued the President, "desarves condine punishment. In dis case you stole it from a fellow-member of a society, an' you added de sin of lyin' to your crime. Your name will be crossed off our books, and you will enter dis hall no mo' forever. De carryin' out of de rest of de sentence am left to Giveadam Jones an' Hercules Johnson."

The prisoner was removed to the anti-room, and about a minute later Paradise Hall was shaken from roof to cellar. This was followed by a bumping sound on the stairs leading to the alley, and this again by the sound of feet making a rush for life. Brother Process Davis will doubtless remain in Canada during the rest of his life.

TOO BAD HE'S TOO OLD.

The Secretary then announced the following application for membership:

I, Nathaniel De Coursey, a colored citizen of Charlottetown, P. E. I., approving of the principles an aims of the Lime Kiln Club, do hereby offer myself as a candidate for membership. I am 70 years of age, and my health is A1. Berean Veritas. I am subject to neither corns, bunions, pneumonia nor rheumatism. My occupation is that of teamster. They boys shout "Caw!" "Caw!" at my old hoss, thus endeavoring to convey the impression that the crows have a bill of sale on him. But Lord bless you, it would give Giveadam Jones a headache to hear that 'ar hoss chewing hay. If any one is foolish enough to think that his teeth are no good they are woefully mistaken. I guess he's good enough for another season anyhow.

I am a true born British subject of the Canadian type; but am in perfect accord with Brother Gardner on the fishery and chilblain questions, and I have the highest respect for all his rulings, whether relating to science or matters pertaining to the Constitution and by-laws of the club.

I am a member (in apparent good standing and condition) in the Methodist Church, and I chew nigger-head tobacco. I do not particularly hanker after hen-roosts or watermelons unless under exceedingly favorable circumstances.

I celebrate Dominion Day and the Fourth of July by getting full—of good resolutions. But my highest aim and roblest ambition in life is to get initiated into the Lime-Kiln Club, and then get a dispensation from Brother Gardner and organize a branch here for the benefit of Pop. Flat and other worthy colored citizens. If, however, Elder Toots, Waydown Beebe, Samuel Shin or Shindig Watson should drop any black beans in the ballot box the night of the election, let them beware! I will start for Detroit as soon as the "Northern Light" runs in the spring gentle Annie, armed with a razor that never opened an oyster or cut a corn, and will wipe out the whole trash. That's the kind of a British subject I am. So I say let them beware!

Should I, however, have the extreme honor of being elected I presume the initiation ceremony will have to be conducted by telegraph, as I cannot very well appear in person. So I just wish to ask that the club will kindly not turn too much electricity on the battery, as the shock might be too much on my constitution and by-laws.

For further information respecting my character or temperment I refer you to Wm. Corish, Superintendent of Smelt Fisheries for the harbor.

(Signed) Nat De Coursey.

This 18th day of March, 1887.

Under the constitution of the club no candidate over 45 years of age can be admitted to membership. Under this rule, therefore, the above application was rejected, but the President added:

"If de applicant has a lecktur on the subjict of de 'Dark Aiges,' or any odder aige, or he kin deliber an address on philosophy or astronomy, we shall be glad to make terms wid him to come here."

THEY CAN TRY.

The following communication was then read:

Montreal, March 14, 1887.

Brother Gardner:

I am, as your rolls will show, a member in good standing of the Lime Kiln Club. When I made my application I understood that every member of the club was passed into all circuses free of charge. As the circus season will soon be open please notify me if I am correct in my suppositions.

Very truly,

Comeback White.

"De Seckretary will write to Brudder White," said the President, "to de effeckt dat while all circuses orter pass members of dis club, some of 'em refuse to do so. In case dey pass, de member will of co'se walk right in, in case dey doan' pass, he will of co'se walk right out. It won't do no hurt to try de man at de doah. If he replies dat dey had better make a skip, dey kin be satsified dat he would turn away a Congressman jist de same. We will now disorganize de meetin'."

Contented With Little.

When Lord Macaulay entered Parliament, he was a poor man, dependent on a limited college income, and on the fifty or sixty guineas received from his brilliant articles in the Edinburgh Review. But no man was ever more cheerful, or less inclined to repine over his straitened condition.

He was a welcome guest at the table of Lady Holland, and in the houses of eminent Whig nobles; but his daily letters to his sisters contained not a word of envy at their superior wealth, or of murmuring at his own lot. He never allowed himself to incur any debt, and had no longing for indulgences beyond his income.

When in later life he had accumulated a small fortune from the savings of his lucrative office in India, and from the magnificent returns from his history, he delighted to recall the struggles of his early life.

He would recount to his nephews and neices the days when, after a fierce debate of twelve or fifteen hours in the House of Commons, he would walk home by daylight to his chambers, and sit down to a cheese sent to him by a constituent from Wiltshire and a little substantial food, and feel supremely contented.

Where Women Manage the Matrimonial Canoe.

The Rev. Thomas Brydges, a missionary in Tierra del Fuego, in the large island of Onisin, among the Ona and the Yagbons, mentions a curious circumstance with reference to the people, illustrating the influence of environment on the acquirement of habits. Between men and women their is a fair subdivision of labour. Among other things, the men make and fit up the canoes, but the women are the rowers. The result is that the women are good swimmers, but the men cannot swim at all. The reason is that often on the coast there is not a single tree to which to fasten the canoes. The women therefore, after landing their husbands, have to row the canoes to a spot where a good deal of seaweed has been massed together, in order to moor the canoes thereon; after which operation they are compelled to swim back. So, also, when the canoe is wanted, the woman has to swim out for it and row back for her husband.

Badly Translated.

Horace Greeley used to write a miserable scrawl. One day he sent the following to the Iowa Press Association—"I have waited till longer waiting would seem discourteous, and now decide that I cannot attend your Press meeting next June, as I would do. I find so many cares and duties pressing on me that, with the weight of years, I feel obliged to decline any invitation that takes me over a day's journey from home." Out of this the recipients, in consultation assembled, made—"I have wondered all along whether any squirt had denied the scandal about the President meeting Jane in the woods on Saturday. I have hominy carrots, and R. R. ties more than I could move with eight steers. If eels are blighted dig them early. Any insinuation that brick ovens are dangerous to hams gives me the horrors."

Safe, Sure, and Painless.

What a world of meaning this statement embodies. Just what you are looking for, is it not? Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor—the great sure-pop corn cure—acts in this way. It makes no sore spots; safe, acts speedily and with certainty; sure and mildly, without inflaming the parts; painlessly. Do not be imposed upon by imitations or substitutes.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont.
Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address
H. MacCORMICK, Principal.

135 ACRES EXCELLENT LAND FOR SALE. Lot 9, Con. 23, McGillivray, Middlesex Co.; clay loam; 100 acres clear; good frame buildings; orchard, spring creek, gravel road 3½ miles to Parkhill Town; price, $5,000, $1,00 down, balance 6 per cent. interest. Rare bargain; immediate possession.
100 ACRES—Lots 34, 25, Con 2, South Durham Road, Artemesia, Grey County; 20 acres clear; $1,200, $200 down, balance 6 per cent.
DR. McTAGGART, London, Ont.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO.
Manufacturers of the highest grade of
SILVER PLATED WARES.
Steel Knives, Spoons, Forks, Etc.,
A SPECIALTY.
ALL GOODS GUARANTEED.
TORONTO, CANADA.

CANADA PERMANENT
LOAN & SAVINGS COMPANY.
INCORPORATED, A.D. 1855.
Subscribed Capital, $3,500,000
Paid-up Capital, 2,300,000
Reserve Fund, 1,180,000
Total Assets, 3,381,615
OFFICE:
Company's Buildings, Toronto St., Toronto.
SAVINGS BANK BRANCH.
Sums of $1 and upwards received at Current rate of interest, paid or compounded half-yearly.
DEBENTURES.
Money received on deposit for a fixed term of years for which Debentures are issued, with half-yearly interest coupons attached. Executors and Trustees are authorized by law to invest in the Debentures of this Company. The Capital and Assets of the Company being pledged for money thus received, depositors are at all times assured of perfect safety.
Advances made on Real Estate, at current rate, and on favorable conditions as to re-payment. Mortgages and Municipal Debentures purchased.
J. HERBERT MASON, Managing Director

CONROY'S IMPROVED

CARRIAGE TOPS
Are famous for their style, convenience, durability and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. At the leading Carriage Builders sell them.
Factory: 407 King West, TORONTO.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

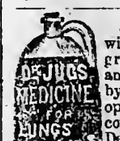
BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

THE National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

J. L. JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING ST EAST
TORONTO.

SNOW DRIFT THE FAVORITE
THERE IS NO BETTER! BAKING POWDER
The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford, Ont.



MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated Ware
Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish
HAMILTON, ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships
Sailing during winter from Portland and every Saturday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly.
For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love, Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allan, Brown & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. & A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

I CURE FITS
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

SPANISH BLACKING

THE KING OF BLACKING
SOLD EVERYWHERE

JUGS MEDICINE FOR LUNGS LIVER & BLOOD
June 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed the opinion that she could not live. I commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine December, 1884, and after taking a few bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties.
J. M. Roddick, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto.

SHARP'S BALSAM

For Croup Whooping Cough Coughs & Colds
SOLD ON ALL RAILWAY TRAINS.
Wholesale through IRA CORNWALL & Co., 162 St. James Street, Montreal.

BRICK MACHINES
—WITH ALL THE—
LATEST IMPROVEMENTS.
SPRING PRESS BOX, - WHITE OAK POSTS, - AND IRON BRACES.
Over 500 of our Machines now in use and no complaints. Prices and Terms to suit buyers. Send for circular.
The E. & C. GURNEY CO.
TORONTO, ONT.

Farmers and Threshers
USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN

PeerlessOil
NINE GOLD MEDALS—Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE, for your Wagons and Horse Powers.
Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by
SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO.

THRESHERS, SAW-MILLERS, OWNERS OF LIGHT POWER
KEEP YOUR POWER AT WORK BY PURCHASING
Shingle Machine, Chopper or Veneer Machine
SMALL INVESTMENT.
EASILY MANAGED.
Good profits, quick returns.
BRANCH WORKS: ST. PAUL, MINN., U. S. A.

This Cut represents our Patent Shingle Machine and Jointer.
Special Catalogues for each department. When writing state wants. New Saw-Mill Catalogue just finished.
WATEROUS ENGINE WORKS CO., BRANTFORD, ONT.

RIFT AND SPRAY,

OR,

LOVE AND VENGEANCE AMONG THE SMUGGLERS.

THE MOST FASCINATING OCEAN ROMANCE SINCE THE DAYS OF COOPER AND MARYATT.

CHAPTER XXXVII.—GERALD TAKES LEAVE OF HIS PRISON.

Grace was fully aware of the grounds on which Gerald was committed, with Martin and Joseph, to prison, and well she knew that the man Thomas Wright had been suborned by Dolan to give that false witness against Gerald which might prove his destruction.

Never until then had she truly felt how dear Gerald was to her, and it was rather an idea springing out of the exigency and excitement of her mind than one sanctioned by her reason that induced her to determine to go to the caverns to try and procure such testimony in Gerald's favor as should have the effect of releasing him at once on the morrow.

It was just before the occupation of that ravine by Lieutenant Anderson and his party that Grace reached the narrow entrance, the position of which she knew, but which she had only once been through.

Here it was that in the darkness she got so tangled and torn with the brambles that choked up the ravine and almost covered with an impenetrable barrier the narrow cleft in the chalk, which, by a circuitous passage, led to the sea cave.

One of the smugglers was on duty in this narrow passage and he challenged Grace so soon as he heard that some one was making a way through the brambles.

"It is I," said Grace. "Do you not know me?"

"Yes. Why, this ain't the right sort of way for you, miss, to come into the old place. You should always take a boat."

"Yes, I know. Let me pass."

"Oh, yes; all right. Why, how flurried she does look, to be sure. What's amiss now, I wonder?"

The man replaced the lighted lantern, with its face to the wall of the narrow passage and resumed his solitary watch.

How Grace sped with the pirate crew, and with Dolan, we are already aware. And now once more we shift the scene and take the reader to the prison in which Martin, Joseph and Gerald were confined until the morrow.

The prison was one only used for persons who were committed for re-examination and the principles on which it was conducted were anything but strict. It was a small, dilapidated building, on the outskirts of the town, and was very inefficiently taken charge of. It was toward the dusk of the evening that a loud knocking at the door of this jail aroused its keeper from a nap he was enjoying, after a glass of something and water—the something never having paid its duty to the excise, notwithstanding the majority of persons consigned to that little miserable prison were sent there for smuggling, or complicity in smuggling.

"What now?" was the gruff and surly demand of the prison keeper at the little wicket.

"You shall order me in," said a voice, which the man at once decided, in his own mind, belonged to a citizen of the grande nation, so thoroughly French was it in tone and manner.

"Order you in? What do you mean? I don't want to order you in."

"One prisoner to see one order. Take him?"

"Lord bless me! what idiots these here foreigners are, to go on speaking in the way they do, when plain English is so very easy. What's that? Oh! let's see; an order to admit—to admit Monseer—no, Mounseer—Mounseer Mocquet to see Gerald—Gerald Nobody. Oh! I recollect now. It's the pirate-lad, that's going to be hanged. Well mounseer, I see Mr. Tickley has signed the order.

"Oui!"

"There, now; he says 'we.' Why can't he say yes, like a Christian! Oh! come in, do."

With a look of disgust on his face, at the obstinacy of people who will not speak "plain English," the jailer opened the gate, and our old friend, Captain Mocquet, walked into the prison, with his usual courteous bow.

"Mille mercis, monsieur!"

"Oh! be quiet now, do. Don't be going on with French gibberish here—don't. Come this way."

"Oui!"

"There he goes with his 'we' again."

The man led the way into a room which—but that its only furniture consisted of a piece of plank, laid over two tressels, and a housecloth for a covering to it—presented none of the usual desagremens of a prison.

"Ah?" cried Captain Mocquet, when he saw this room, "c'est drole! I was took in here myself, when one vaisseau Francaise was took by one English fleet, commanded by Nolson!"

"By who?" roared the jailer. "Well, I never! He calls Nelson 'Nolson.' Get out! O you idiot!"

Bang went the door of the room, and then Gerald, who was lying on the board on the tressels, sprang up and was in a moment in the arms of Monsieur Mocquet.

"Mon cher Gerald, you shall listen. As one proverb Anglaise shall say, a bad wind blow everybody to good. Bah! Marie did go—for invitation—at Grace. Mais, she one letter—Mademoiselle Grace was leave one letter. He was open—mais, que voulez vous! Bah!"

"What do you mean, Captain Mocquet? (Heaven's sake, tell me—what of Grace?"

"Marie was go to the admiral now to see Grace and all was confused. She bring away to me one billet. He is here—I bring him to you. Bah!"

Captain Mocquet upon this produced a small, open note; and by the light of a miserable candle that the jailor had left with them, he read the following words:

"If I do not return soon, seek for me at the cavern in the cliff. My errand there is, to try to save Gerald, who is innocent."

"The cavern!" cried Gerald. "Grace back to the cavern—my Grace? Oh, God! he will kill—madness, madness! Oh! my Grace—my poor Grace; she is lost—lost! And I here—I not able to fly to her rescue! Open—open? Let me ont—I will come back again—let me out! As there is a God in heaven, I will come back again!"

Gerald hammered with his fists against the door of the room and the jailer roughly opened it and put in his head.

"What's the row, now? Can't you and the Frenchman agree for five minutes?"

"Let me out! I pray you to let me out—I will come back again. Indeed I will."

"That's cool," said the man, as he slammed the door shut.

"Stop! hold! I—what you say, Monsieur Gerald? Ah! I have him!"

"What—what?"

"I shall take off my clothes and you shall put on your clothes; and my clothes shall be my clothes and your clothes shall be somebody else, and I shall go out as myself and you shall stay away as yourself and make one escape! Ah!"

Through all this confusion Gerald guessed that Monsieur Mocquet proposed a change of clothing, and that he, Gerald, should make his escape in his, the French captain's apparel. Gerald caught the idea with delight.

"Yes—yes," he said, "we are both of a height. You are very good, Monsieur Mocquet. I thank you with all my heart. It will surely succeed—only I am so much darker than you are. That is a pity."

"Voila!" said Monsier Mocquet, as he at once lifted from his head a wig that he wore and which Gerald never looked at him sufficiently to detect.

"Capital!" said Gerald; "that will do. Oh! my poor Grace! Why did you venture again into the power of that dreadful man? I must, and will, try to save you. Try—try, do I say? No—no. It is no trial; I will save you, or perish with you!"

The change of clothes with Captain Mocquet was very quickly effected, and the wig transferred, to the head of Gerald, together with the rather eccentric cap that the French captain wore over it.

Then Gerald shook hands with Mocquet and thanked him twenty times and knocked loudly on the panel of the door.

"Speak," he said, "Captain Mocquet—when the man comes speak and say you wish to go."

Gerald blew out the light just as the jailer opened the door of the room.

"Well, what now?"

"I shall walk himself out," said Mocquet.

"Ah, rubbish! Walk himself out, indeed! Come along, do Nol-son! What a go, Nol son! Ah, you idiot! Come on—come on, do. There, be off!"

The outer gate was opened and the jailer pushed Gerald very unceremoniously out into the street. In another moment some one clasped him in their arms and the voice of Marie sounded in his ears, saying something in French, in which he heard his own name. There was a little miserable street lamp close at hand, and Gerald turned his face toward it; and then Marie knew him. She had mistaken him for her father, for whom she had been waiting.

"Gerald! Gerald!"

Gerald pointed to his clothes and the wig, and then to the prison. Marie understood him in a moment.

"Bon! bon!"

She slid her arm in that of Gerald and looked compassionately and gently up into his face. Then before they could either of them say another word, or move from the spot, a heavy hand was laid upon the shoulder of Gerald, and a voice said:

"What cheer, young sir? How's this? Ain't you in limbo? Why, Miss Clifford sent me here to this stone jug, with something of all sorts in the eating and drinking line, for you and your messmates, and here I find you outside with this little pinnance alongside of you."

"Ah! I recollect you," said Gerald, "I saw you at the Admiral's. You are in his service?"

"Rayther."

"And your name?"

"Call me Jack. It's a good purser's name, that."

"Then, Jack, I am sure you will not betray me. The French captain, Mocquet, has changed clothes with me so that I have escaped from prison, and as I hear that Miss Grace Morton has gone back to the caverns in the cliff, which I suppose you know of by this time, I want to go and perish there with her or save her."

"That's right! And the little pinnance here?"

"This is Captain Mocquet's daughter, Marie. She was waiting here for her father."

"Your sarvent, miss. Hark you, youngster, I don't like a many folks, but I do like you. Lord bless you, I took to you so soon as I saw you make sail into the hall and your figure-head warms my heart to see it. Let's take this little pinnance to the admiral's house. Miss Clifford will see to her, and then I'm with you, I'm under orders to hoist a signal-light on the flag-staff, then I'm with you. Come on, my hearty. We will show them yet what a man-o'-war's-man can do. My service to you, miss. This here's the way, and if so be as they hang your father, I'll be a father to you, miss, and if a British tar ain't a better prize than a Frenchman, I don't know what is so. Don't you be a open the scuttles of your pretty eyes, miss, and a crying. It will all come right."

Marie looked at Jack and at Gerald, quite innocent of all that was said, but as Gerald gently led her along, she followed his impulse, and they all reached the admiral's house. Then Gerald pointed to the house and to Jack and placed Marie's hand in Jack's, so that she understood she was to go there.

And Marie shook Gerald by both hands and then pressed one of them for a moment to her heart and went into the admiral's house with Jack, who soon returned with a lantern and some cordage in his hands.

"Now for it—you come along Mr. Gerald, and as we go I'll tell you all the plan of the affair. Lord love you, the pirates are going to be cut out to-night. It will be a blue jacket affair altogether: Come on."

Jack lit the signal lantern and then he and Gerald went down to the beach, where the cottages were. They had had a very long "confabulation," as Jack termed it, and had resolved upon a course of action, which, in its results, brought them both in very critical circumstances into the thickest of the affray in the pirates cavern.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.—TRUE LOVE REWARDED.

By a combination of circumstances which he had battled against in every possible way, but over which he had at last evidently had no control, Dolan found himself at bay and in that very cavern of the cliff from which he had so fully expected to escape, leaving the crew of the Rift to encounter all the dangers of discovery.

The position of the villain had originally been to leave the cavern himself, and thus by shielding its existence from discovery at once secure the Rift and its crew from all danger there caught together.

But he had seen cause, or fancied that he saw cause, to modify that arrangement.

It was that modification that was the real destruction of Dolan, and involved him in the common fate of his associates.

When the first round shot from the Spray dashed into the sea cave, the smugglers felt that their secret was known and that it would be a fight for life or for death with them now.

Had Dolan not been then and there in the caverns, they would at once have jumped to the conclusion that he had betrayed them to the Spray, but they could not in the face of his presence do so, since then he was a prey to the common danger.

The yells, shouts, cries and imprecations that filled the cavern transcended anything that could be imagined, and the scene of confusion that ensued baffles all descriptive power.

Some of the crew were for at once bringing the guns of the cutter on the opening in the cliff and so defending the place like a fort against the force, be it what it might that was without, while they had a shot left to hurl defiance with.

Others sought at once safety in flight toward the small opening in the ravine, which they had a hope, although but a faint one, might be unguarded; but from where they were soon repulsed by finding the whole ravine filled by Lieutenant Anderson's men

A third party were for surrendering, but these were overruled by the other sections, and amid the panic the loud voice of Bowline rose high:

"Life and death!" he shouted. "You will all swing, my mates, if you are taken. Fight the Philistines!"

"Ay, ay! Fight! fight!" was the responsive cry.

"One good cheer, then, to let them see we are alive. Hurrah! hurrah!"

"Hurrah!" arose with a wild and echoing cadence—the cheer of the ruffian crew within the cavern; and then another round shot came from the Spray, dashing into the opening and tearing along the deck of the Rift.

Shrieks and groans testified to its destructive powers, and then Bowline cried out:

"Down with the sails. Down with the covering of the cavern! They know it now and it is only in our way!"

He made a rush himself and the pulleys and cords creaked and the sails that blocked the crevice in the cliff were moved aside just as another bright flash and then a roaring sound proclaimed another gun from the Spray.

"Down all!"

The crew of the Rift flung themselves prostrate, and the missile flew harmlessly over them, striking the chalk at the further end of the cavern, from whence it fell into the water.

"Now give it them!" cried Bowline. "One shot for the honor of the Rift."

By dint of great personal exertion, he and some of the crew slewed round the guns of the Rift, and brought them to bare upon the bay. The Spray was pretty distinctly seen the by flash of her guns.

"Fire!" cried Bowline; and as he spoke, the Rift's guns opened a cannonade which at once created the affair into a battle. Then it was that with a wild rush down the slippery steps that led from the upper cavern to the sea-cave, came Dolan. Clasped in one arm he held Grace, and in the hand that was free he bore aloft a sword, the bright blade of which gleamed like a flame in the scintillating light of the torches in the various niches of the cavern.

"The Rift and the black flag forever!" he shouted, in a voice hoarse with rage. "Who fires on the Rift? Death—death to the Philistines—a boat—a boat here! I will fight to the last. Ha! ha! We shall see yet!"

He sprang into a boat, and a couple of the men in a few seconds placed him on board the Rift, and then Grace, in screaming accents, called for help.

"Father—father! Oh! father, save me!"

"Lights!" roared Dolan. "Lights—Japan lights, here. Bengal lights. Quick, two, three, more of them. We will see what we are about, my men. Ah! Well done that."

Bang, came another shot from the Spray, and the mast of the cutter, which had been before hit, at once went by the board and fell trailing with all its hamper over the side of the Rift.

"The blue lights! Quick with them. I will save you all yet."

"Help, father, Gerald! Save me! He will kill me! He has sworn it. Help! oh! help!"

"Fire!" roared Bowline, and two more guns of the Rift sent forth their flaming voices to the night air.

One of the shots hit the Nautilus, and tore a couple of her planks to pieces. The other flew past the schooner, and made the man at its wheel feel faint from its proximity to his head. Then, those of the crew of the Rift who had heard Dolan's words distinctly, and had faith in his powers of mischief, and of means to save them, brought the Bengal lights he called for and more than four or five soon blazed from different parts of the smuggling cutter.

Bang!

Another shot from the Spray.

Dolan's face was covered with blood, for a splinter from the side of the Rift had torn past his cheek, and inflicted an ugly gash.

The blue lights irradiated the whole cavern with their beautiful flame, and amid a vapor that came from them, and which looked like some softly tinted, purple cloud at sunset, Dolan rushed to the bows of the Rift and there, as the smoke from the guns curled about him—there, as the blue lights placed him in strong relief against the sides of the cavern—there amid the shouts of the living, the screams and cries of the wounded, and the groans of the dying, he held up Grace.

He held her up with both his arms.

He held her up to the height that those arms could go, and hoarse, and yelling with pain and rage, he shouted:

"A figure-head for the old Rift—a new figure-head! Behold her—Grace Morton! Fire, fire! Hit her in the eyes you love, and scatter to the damp air of these caverns the blood and brains of the girl you seek! Ha! ha! Fire now! Fire yet again! Behold the Rift—behold her sea cavern, in which she has defied the battle and the storm—behold her new figure-head of life, and it was an awful sight to see Dolan [illegible] very bow of the forward [illegible] of the Rift, holding that young girl aloft in his arms, with her fair face turned seaward, and her long hair floating down over her neck and shoulders—over his hands and arms—over his face, and smearing itself in the blood that came from the gash he had received from the splinter.

She might have been seen a mile off—so closely was she defined and relieved by the now brilliant and beautiful lights in the cavern.

She screamed aloud; and then there was an answering cry, and the Nautilus dashed forward, as if instinct with life, to the entrance of the cavern.

"I am here—here to save—here to avenge! God bless me now!"

It was the voice of Captain Morton who was horrified and amazed to find the daughter whom he believed to be in safety at the house of Admiral Clifford there in that cavern, in the arms and in the power of the villain Dolan.

"Father—father!"

"I am here, Grace—my Grace. Mercy!"

"Ha!" laughed Dolan. "It is my turn now."

There was one more flash from the twenty-four pound gun on board the Spray. They had not clearly seen, in consequence of the smoke that enveloped them, what was going on in the sea-cave. Captain Morton dashed himself bodily against the helm of his little yacht, and she swung into the course of the shot, which tore through her slender sides, and left her almost a wreck, at the entrance of the sea-cave.

"Fire!" shouted Dolan—"fire!"

A couple more guns were fired from the Rift. They passed over the Nautilus and struck the Spray, on board of which a drum was heard to beat to cease firing; for Lieutenant Green had just seen the critical situation of the Nautilus.

Then, as the smoke began to curl away, Captain Morton, in a loud voice—but one the tones of which sufficiently portrayed the agony of his soul—called out:

"Monster! Unheard-of villain! give me my daughter! Fight, if you will; but fight as man should fight, and not with the blood of children! Give me my child!"

"Ha, ha!"

"What is it you ask? Oh, speak! Say what you will have, as the price of my heart's treasure, and it is yours! Spare her—spare her?"

"You would have spared me?"

"Father—father!"

"I am here—I am here? I come!"

"One step nearer toward Dolan, and I dash her to death upon the full head of the cutter. She is at my mercy!"

"Your mercy? Have you mercy?"

"No; but I will make terms: Let me go free—free from the cavern and I will not harm a hair of her head. Let me go free, taking with me who I like and what I like!"

"All—all," cried the crew, who surmised the fatal shots from the Spray. "Save all!"

"And the Rift?" cried Bowline.

"Find a hostage for yourselves!" said Dolan.

A yell of rage arose from the crew, and Dolan saw his new danger; for they advanced along the deck of the Rift toward him with threatening gestures. He hastily corrected the damaging impression by calling out:

"Safety to all and to the Rift. Grant that and the girl is yours; or, otherwise, she dies!"

"Father; he will kill me!"

"My child—my Grace! Oh, this is terrible! All—all I grant! All—all you ask!"

"The boats!" cried several of the crew of the Rift.

A couple of well-armed boats from the Spray now pulled up to the mouth of the cavern. In one was Mr. Green in command and in the other Mr. Royle.

"Board her!" cried Lieutenant Green—"board her at once, my men, and she is yours!"

"No, no!" shouted Captain Morton. "No—spare me—spare my daughter!"

"Your daughter, sir? Good God!"

They all saw the perilous position of Grace, and firmly and rigidly—feeling no fatigue in the wild excitement of his rage and fear—Dolan still held her up in the bow of the cutter.

"I make my terms," he cried. "Do you agree? Safety for me and mine—for me, for my crew and for the Rift, or death to the girl."

"I dare not," said Lieutenant Green. "Hold, Dolan—for that, I suppose, is your name—if you have any hope of mercy here or hereafter you will surrender that girl to her father here, who made no war against you and is foreign to all these proceedings of ours. Be a man, if you be a smuggler and a pirate."

"Consent—consent to my terms or she dies!"

"I consent—you know I consent."

"Villain!" cried Captain, Morton "even now you dare not carry out your threat. The coward looks out at your eyes, and you dread that I should tear your false heart from your breast, if you so much as injured a hair of my darling's head. Monstrous villain, have at you now."

The crippled Nautilus had drifted by the tide so far into the sea cave that it was comparatively close to the bows of the Rift, and then Captain Morton made from the deck of his own little vessel one terrific leap and half fell, half lit upon the bulwarks of the Rift.

The pirates raised a wild cry and Captain Dolan, clasping one arm round the waist of Grace, sprang with her over the other side of the Rift into the sea. There was a rush of pirates upon Captain Morton, and there was a rush of the boats' crews from the Spray to board the Rift, and a terrific hand-to-hand conflict ensued.

Captain Dolan swam with his right arm free, and Grace held firmly in his left. Amid the roar of the fight, the smoke from the discharge of pistols, and in the dire confusion of those few minutes of strife, he reached the steps that led to the inner cavern, and made good his footing on them.

"I have her still," he gasped; "I have her still. She will save me yet; let them all perish—I shall save myself yet as the price of her safety, or I will kill her."

He reached the top of the flight of steps; he turned one moment to look at the wild fight below, and he raised a cry of triumph. It was his last.

Grace was torn from his arms and the voice of Gerald was patent to his ears as he cried:

"No—no, villain that you are! [illegible] thanked!"

Dolan uttered a cry of rage and made a rush upon Gerald; but there was the flash of the steel blade of [illegible] and Jack, who was close to Gerald, said quietly:

"Avast, there, you lubber. What's in the wind now that you want to steer foul of other folks? There you go. It's a good thing, Master Gerald, you know the way into this caboose of a place by the plateau, as you call it."

The blade struck Dolan in the centre of the forehead and he fell backward headlong down the steps into the sea.

The cries and shouts ceased on board the Rift and the pirates were beaten. A few only, half stunned and bleeding, yet lived upon the deck of the cutter. Then Captain Morton, with frantic cries, called upon the lieutenant to aid him in searching for Grace, and she heard the tones of that newly found and so newly lost father, and from the protecting arms of Gerald she called out:

"I am here, father—I am here, and safe. Gerald has saved me!"

There was an instant leap into a boat, and once more father and daughter rushed to each other's arms. The men of the Spray, with torches, ran through the caverns, and soon there was a loud shouting, and they brought to the sea-cave what looked like the dead body of a woman; but it was Mrs. Wagner, who still had some life in her. And so soon as she came into the sphere of the torch-lights, she called out, in a raving voice:

"The boy—the boy! Where is the boy Gerald? Where is Admiral Clifford! I cannot die yet. Oh, where is he?"

"I am here," said the admiral, standing up in a boat. "What would you with me?"

"Gerald is your long-lost son! The man Dolan was by you captured nearly twenty years ago, and on your testimony transported. He came back, and turned what he is, and stole your infant boy. His object has been to make him a pirate, and for you to judge him to death. You will find the child's clothes in the cavern. Help me! Oh Heaven! I am dying! Pardon—pardon—par—"

The guilty spirit fled; and then, with a cry of such heart joy as he never in this world expected to hear uttered, Admiral Clifford embraced Gerald, his long-lost, much-mourned boy.

Our tale is ended. Before leaving the cavern in the cliff the admiral and Captain Morton, with tears of joy, placed the hands of their children one in the other.

The few pirates who survived were sent to the penal settlement. Captain Mocquet and Marie went to France with the best wishes of their friends. Martin and Jones were liberated on Gerald's evidence in their favor. Captain Morton took into his own yacht the boy Charles whom he had encountered on the beach and made a man of him. In two years from these events a still very youthful pair were mated at the Church of the Holy Trinity at Falmouth, before a large assemblage of British and American officers, and then set sail for New York.

The names of the bride and bridegroom were Grace Morton and Gerald Clifford!

Were they not happy, and did they not, in many a year after, reveal to each other and to their children the story of "The Rift and the Spray?"

[THE END.]

The "Elephant in the Moon."

In the early days of the telescope many absurd mistakes were made in the use of the new instrument, and many "discoveries" announced which have not been confirmed by the studies of astonomers who have lived since.

In the sixteenth century, an English observer, Sir Peter Neal, who possessed a telescope and was very conceited about it, gave out that he had discovered "an elephant in the moon." The discovery made quite a sensation, and Sir Peter had the satisfaction of hearing his elephant in the moon talked about on every side.

One day, a gentleman who had some knowledge of the use of telecopes, and was incredulous about the elephant, obtained the favor of looking through Sir Peter's telescope, and seized the opportunity to search the instrument. Presently he came to Sir Peter, holding a fly between his finger and thumb.

"Well, what is it?" said Sir Peter.

"Nothing, sir, but your "elephant in the moon!"

The fly had crept into the telescope in such a way as to suggest an elephant to the amateur astronomer, who kept his instrument trained on the moon. The incident soon became as widely known as the discovery, and the "elephant in the moon" became a by-word, signifying the same as a "mare's nest." Samuel Butler wrote a poem on the subject.

The term "a mare's nest," by the way, probably has no other history than is contained in a story current among the country people throughout the United States.

In the days when negro slaves were first imported into America, a young slave, who had in his short residence here never seen a pumpkin, but had picked up something of the language of the country, happneed to see a mare lying down in the edge of a field by the side of a little heap of ripe yellow pumpkins.

It occurred to him that the pumpkins must be eggs that the animal had laid.

He looked in amazement for a moment, and then ran to his master as fast as his legs could carry him.

"Comee quick!" he exclaimed; "me find mare's nest—comee quick!"

The story of the comical "find" spread rapidly enough, and since that time any discovery which some person regards as very strange or important, but which other people are disposed to make light of, has been called a "mare's nest."

Bad Signs.

It is a bad sign to dream about money. It is the sign you want some.

It is a bad sign to believe you are a great man. It is a sign the furnace needs coaling.

It is a bad sign to dream about music. It is a sign your back yard is infested with cats.

It is a bad sign to dream you are in heaven. It is a sign that you are dying to become an editor.

Some photographs of a recent thunderstorm in France are said to indicate that the normal form of lightning discharges between the clouds and the earth is that of an irregular spiral.

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curity.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

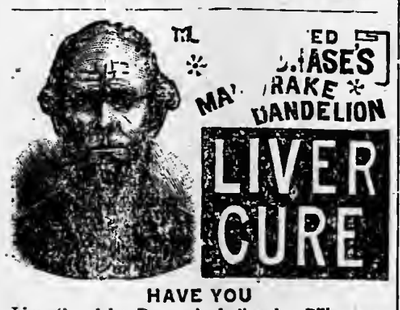
J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the prac tice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

CITY HOTEL,
MARKDALE.
The subscriber begs to inform the travelling public generally, that he has leased the above premises for a term of years, and hopes by catering to their comfort to merit a share of public patronage. Bar and Larder well supplied. Good stabling and attentive hostler.
D. McLEAN, Proprieto .

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT. Markdale.
1241y



WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence otd stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Monev Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at owest rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Convevancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain rem dy.
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.
500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.
TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P, O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises. or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

NEW HARNESS SHOP.
R. CARNAHAN would respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of the surronnding country that he has opened a general harness shop on King street in the village of
HOLLAND CENTRE,
where he intends to manufacture and keep on hand a large stock of LIGHT and HEAVY HARNESS, long and short tugs, STRAW COLLARS, WHIPS, COMBS, BRUSHES, HARNESS OIL &c.
I will use only first class material and those requiring anything in the harness line will find it to their interest to call at the new harness shop and get prices before going elsewhere. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. Soliciting a share of public patronage. I am respectfully yours.
R. CARNAHAN.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.
First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool·
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE

BILIOUSNESS,	DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA,	DROPSY,
INDIGESTION,	FLUTTERING
JAUNDICE.	OF THE HEART,
ERYSIPELAS,	ACIDITY OF
SALT RHEUM,	THE STOMACH,
HEARTBURN,	DRYNESS
HEADACHE,	OF THE SKIN,

And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT 131 con. 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres. about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further par-

GROCERY, POVISION
—AND—
LIQUOR STORE.
A fresh stock of groceries just opened at
DAVIS'S
Store, bought for cash thus saving discounts, and will be sold for spot cash at rock bottom prices.

A fine Line of choicest uncolored Japan Tea just arrived intending purchasers will do well to inspect this Tea before buying elswhere as it positively is the best value ever offered in the town. 15 lbs. extra granulated sugar $1, other grades accordingly. Agent for the Liquor Tea Co. A valuable prize given with every six ½ lb. packages bought.

PROVISIONS!
Flour Bran, Shorts, Chop, Screenings, Oatmeal, Cornmeal, &c., &c.

LIQUORS!
Rye and Malt, Port and Native Wine, Brandy, Jamaica, Rum, Scotch Whiskey, the best in the market, also a choice lot Bottled Liquors in finest Brandies, Scotch and Irish Whiskeys, Superior Malt and 5 year old Rye. Parties requiring liquors for medicinal purposes will do well to give us a call as they may rely upon getting a good article.
Special Attention? I will pay the highest cash price for Timothy Seed.
A. Call Respectfully Solicited,
W. L. Davis,
MARKDALE.

Markdale Roller Mill.
FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.
Flour always on Hand
Flour $3.80 to $4.20 per. bbl.
SHORTS, per ton - $12.00
BRAN, " - 12.00
The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.
Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn·

THE
Association Can't Stop Us.
HAVING PURCHASED A FIRST-CLASS HEARSE.
Built by B. J. Mash, London. also having a large stock of Coffins, Caskets and funeral furnishings, we are prepared to supply the public in the undertaking line on the shortest notice.
A large stock of furniture always on hand at lowest living prices.
Having a first-class cabinet maker, we are prepared to make all kinds of furniture to order, also repairing done promptly.
COLEMAN & HAMILTON.

SHOT BY A SQUAW.—On Tuesday evening the 29th March, Edward O'Hagan age about 27, engaged as night watchman at White River station, C. P. R. about 245 miles east of Port Arthur, and one McDougall, Indian trader of the same place—thought to be Jas McDougall, formerly of Markdale—went out to an Indian camp some six miles north of the railroad for the purpose, it is said, of collecting furs. McDougall got into a dispute with the Indians and it is supposed that O'Hagan went to his assistance, when a squaw picked up a gun and shot him through the head killed him instantly; McDougall barely escaped with his life and retured to the station where he and the agent collected a number of men and went after the remains, which were brought to the station The deceased's father, who lives in Toronto was notified and came for the body.

CONSUMPTION CURED.
An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a similar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh Asthma and all throat and Lung Afflictions also a positive and radical cure for nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases. has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to allwho desire it, this receipe, in German, Franch or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Send by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper W. A. NOYES 149 Power's Block Rochester, N. Y.
334-86 E. O. W.

SEE IT? To learn to read the following so as to make good sense, is the mystery:—
I thee read see that me.
Love is up will I'll have.
But that and you have you'll
One and down and you if.
Also the following.
y y u r, y y u b: I c u r y y for me.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, twenty five cents.

BIRTHS.
MCFARLAND—In Markdale, on the 1st April, the wife of Mr. Andrew McFarland, of a daughter.

MARRIAGES.
WALTER—ANDERSON,—On the 1st April, by Rev. A. Thibadeau, at the residence of Mr. Lyman Anderson of Holland Centre, Mr. Fredrick Walter to Miss Etta Anderson, both of Holland Centre.

For Sale or Rent.
Good large comfortable dwelling, with stable, also hard and soft water on the premises, on Sydenham street near Presbyterian Church.
344- Apply to B. Coleman

The Markdale Standard
Is issued every Thursday, by
C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,
TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.
Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.
Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.
Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1
No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.
THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Society Directory.
Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78, meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.
Markdale A. O. U. W, No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.
MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.
Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Markdale Church Directory.
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.
CHRIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.
METHODIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer

A Runaway Horse upon a Moving Flat Car. Driver Killed.
ELORA, April 2,—As a train on P. R. composed of freight and flat and several passenger coaches, was proaching a crossing a mile Hillsburg, on the Elora branch day afternoon, a man was seen road attempting to control a horse tached to a sleigh. The train was ning at the rate of ten miles an and just as it reached the crossing horse jumped forward and landed knees on the flat car. The driver thrown under the wheels. The was stopped immediately and when man was taken from under it, it discovered that he had been fatally jured. It was ascertained that his was Phillips from Blyth in Huron C a Crimean veteran aged 55 years. died this morning at 9.15 Strange say, the horse was not injured in any and the sleigh remained intact. body was shipped to Blyth. No blame was attached to the train hands.

I have used Dr. Jug's medicine for a bad cough that settled on my lungs and good results. Can recommend it to all so affected.
T. E. KING, Grocer, W stock. Sold by A, T & Co.

A Bruce Swamp Mystery.
TARA, April 2—Last Monday a young man named Griffith, who had been on a visit to his mother, reached his employer's house in Arran Township exhausted and appearently dying. His throat was cut and his clothes saturated with blood. The wound was sewed up by Dr. McNamara and the boy made comfortable, otherwise, after which he related his adventure. He said that when he was returning home on Saturday night through a swamp some distance on the side of his mother's place he was set upon by a tall man who wore a light smock. His assailant knocked him senseless, carried him off to a shanty in the swamp, took his money—a $20 bill—from him and then cut his throat, inflicting a gash some eight inches in length. The lad lay in a shanty all Monday morning, when he made an effort to reach home, with the result already noted. The scene of the deed of assault was visited by many people, who found it such as he described. though there were no signs of a struggle on the road where he said the man first attacked him. In the shanty there was a pool of blood, but no evidence of more than one person having been there. Some held that the case was one of attempt suicide and not murder, but the respectable character of the young man and the fact that he was known to have a $20 bill in his possession gain credence for his story. No trace of the highwayman, if such there was, can be discovered.

BE ON YOUR GUARD
Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333

Honor Roll.
S. S. No. 5, Holland, for the month of March.
High School Reader—Maud Fannin, Emma Hewitt.
Fourth Reader—Bertha McKenzie, Effie Searle, Frank Hamilton.
Third Reader—Martha Freeborn, Wm. Searle, Morton Hewitt.
Second Reader—Andrew McKenzie, Sarah Mathews, John S. Hamilton.
Part Second—Robert Freeborn, Nancy White, Davis Freeborn.
First Reader—Frances Mather, Willie Freeborn, Mary White.
L. A. SMITH, Teacher.

ENJOY LIFE.
What a truely beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of Mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraging and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will restore them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint are the disturbing causes of seventy five per cent, of the maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart and other distressing symptoms

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 345. MARKDALE, ONT., APRIL 14, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Publisher.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICE—In these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

30 DAYS!

30 DAYS!

For 30 Days Only, there will be a great discount sale of

Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, Spex, &c.,

Do not miss it but come early and secure some of the bargains before they are gone, only for 30 days, positively, as we are giving you 25 per cent, off on all cash sales over $1.00. The finest make of Nicol Alarm Clock actually selling at RUSSELL'S NOTED JEWELERY STORE for only $2.00, while they are $2.50 to $2.75 elsewhere and the finest assortment of Fine Plated Chains only $1.60 which are generally sold for $2.25 to $2.50. RUSSELL'S is the place you can get bargains, nobody can compete with us. Come and see for yourselves, we will not pay your milage or give you meals as a catch, but will sell you goods a great deal cheaper than you can get elsewhere and remember the only place to get your Watch repaired properly is at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

Thursday 21st April is court day at Flesherton.

FOR Hardware Novelties, the latest styles and newest designs at Mabee's.

CLOVER & TIMOTHY Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

FOR prepared Paints, the best and cheapest in the county. Call on Mabee.

IF you want a nobby head-dress for your feet, go to McLeod's shoe store.

Mr. Bell the Glenelg assessor is in Markdale this week.

Wm. McLoughry Artemesia assessor is on the war path.

Two mortgage sales of farm property in this paper. Look them up.

MAXWELL Spring Show will be held in that village on the 27th April.

Just received some beautiful sets of dishes and glassware at S. Hill's.

COUNTY of Grey Summer Entrance Examinations are advertised this week. See for yourself.

Ladies' when you are in town with Butter and Eggs, call, we will give you bargains, S. Hill.

Another large consignment of Teas very cheap, my house is noted for the best teas in town, S. Hill.

FOR Hardware, Stoves and Tinware. See Mabee at the sign of the cross-cutt saw.

EAST Grey Agricultural Society will hold their Annual Spring Show at Flesherton on Friday 22nd April.

Pebble spex, Crystal Lenses, and 4 colors in sun glasses. Call at W. A. Brown's Jewellry Store.

Oil Cake, the champion cattle food for sale at Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

A good comfortable brick residence and handsome lot for sale cheap. Enquire at this office.

MECHANICS see Mabee for your outfit, he will be pleased to give you good goods at right prices.

LEN. COX of this village cut his left hand severely last Saturday while chopping.

REMEMBER you can get Bran, Shorts, Henfeed the same price at Bensons, as at the mill, it saves you half an hour trouble, give us a call.

IF we judge from the notices recently going the rounds of our exchanges, the Flesherton Advance has two anniversaries in the year, the 1st April and July.

MARKDALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 75 to 76 cents; spring wheat 75 to 76; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 15 to 17; eggs 11; potatoes 50 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

FOR anything you want in the Hardware line go straight to the sign of the cross-cutt. We will be glad to see you. We will use you right. Mabee the Hardware.

FOR Oatmeal, "Corn meal" "Wheat meal" graham flour pot and pearl barley Bensons is the place to go, they will do better for you than any one in the town.

WALL PAPERS.—The finest assortment in central Grey. Over 3,000 pieces to select from at prices to suit the times, from 5 cents to 75 cents per roll. Call at Dinsmore's, Markdale.

An Irish magistrate asked a prisoner if he was married. "No," replied the man. "Then," said his worship, amid peals of laughter, "it's a good thing for your wife.

ACCORDING to the Government Report there were in Grey County in 1885 1,486 births; 757 males and 729 females; 419 marriages: 543 deaths, 286 males and 257 females.

An irate female seeks admittance to editor's sanctum. "But I tell you, madam," protests the attendant. "that editor is too ill to talk to any one today." "Never mind; you let me in; I'll do the talking."

An exchange says, taking it all around the men who have the most to say against a newspaper are those whose accounts remain on the publisher's books unbalanced, and there is more truth than poetry in the statement.

FOR SALE.—One horse three years old and one mare in foal, would take stock in part pay for same. Apply to

J. HICKLING,

Lot 38 & 39 con. 8, Artemesia, Maxwell, P. O.

MR. MARSH of the Markdale House has erected already this spring an addition of forty feet to his stabling, which will be used during summer season as an agricultural implement house and in winter as a stable.

THE finest stock of glassware grocery milk pans, crocks, flour pots, hanging baskets &c., to be had at Benson's and will be sold cheaper than by any one in the trade. Remember we mean what we say. Call and see for yourselves.

A full stock of oranges, lemons, candies of all descriptions, nuts, figs, dates, raisins, biscuits of all kinds, canned goods, a few chests of that thunder, lightening and blue blazes tea left yet, the best value in town, try it, every person is getting it now.

WHAT IS ALABASTINE.—It is a preparation of plaster-paris and other ingredients used for decorating and whitening walls and ceilings, is easily applied, will not scale nor rub off, and is cheaper and better than calcimine. You can get it at Haskett Bros.

As the season is now opened for the sale of Bacon. Benson of the Belfast house is to the fore with a few cases; remember he will not be undersold by any one in the trade and if there is a cut to be given they are the boys that will give it to you, they are decent little chaps.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. J. W. Benson, who was superintending a grain crusher at Mr. J. Hickling's, Artemesia, last week, got his arm badly crushed. He was attending the machine when his jacket caught in the gear and drew his arm in, Dr. Kirr was sent for and dressed the wound and he will probably recover. The machine, which was drove by a span of horses, was stopped suddenly by the arm entering the machine.

Ladies' call and get the latest Millenry novelties at S. Hill's.

Eggs went down the past week, especially on Sunday.

Have you seen those beautiful fast colored prints, bring your Butter and Eggs and get some of them, S. Hill.

J. G. RUSSELL, of Flesherton, makes an important announcement this week. Read it on first column.

AN English Church is to be erected at Berkeley this summer. Some $800 is already subcribed.

JAS. MILLER our new Provision and Feed Store man is doing an increasing business from week to week. Read his notice in this paper, and give him a call.

R. MCNALLY, Carriage Maker is now fully prepared to supply the wants of the public in his line. Read his announcement in this paper.

HENS! Hens!! Hens!!! All kind of hen eggs wanted at McLeod's shoe store in exchange for boots and shoes.

IF you pay cash for boots and shoes, try McLeod's; his boots give great satisfaction for the money.

EUPHRASIA Agricultural Society Spring Show will be held at Rocklyn on Tuesday the 26th April.

FOR Pure Leads, Oils, Varnishes and Colors, they can be had at the sign of the cross-cut.

A long felt want supplied.—Prepared Paints ready for use—any quantity or shade—guaranteed pure; See them at Haskett Bros.

HAMPDEN WATCHES.—My own name on—just received; Key and stem wind, will be sold close, cash or time. W. A. Brown, Jeweller.

Permanent Pasture Seeds. Prof. Brown's formula and other popular kinds at the Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

Good Friday was observed as a Holiday in Markdale. The weather was delightful. There was appropriate service in the English Church.

GENTLEMEN, I am clearing out beautiful tweeds, worsteds and panting, very cheap, also straw and felt hats, call and realise, S. Hill.

Always a large stock of Boots and Shoes on hand. I pay cash for my goods. I cannot be undersold, S. Hill.

SINCE the alteration in the parish, services will be held every Sunday morning and evening in the English Church in this place, and at Berkeley every Sunday afternoon.

W. MCLEOD is determined to turn out a class of work that cannot be surpassed in the county, and to that end has secured the services of his brother D. McLeod who cannot be beaton on sewed work. Call early.

Miss Blades, Dress and Mantle maker of Holland Centre wishes to intimate to the ladies of the surrounding district that she will open next week a fine new stock of fashionable goods. Orders promptly filled.

EGGS FOR HATCHING.—Samuel Coleman, Jr., Markdale, P. O. has for sale eggs from the Champion Strain of Light Brahmas at $2, per 13 eggs, S. C. White Leghorns $1, for 13. White Pekin Ducks 50c. for 13. Also Fowl for sale cheap. 345-8

MARKDALE Spring Show will be held in this village on Saturday the 23rd April commencing at 1 o'clock. The bills are out announcing the same, and attention is directed to the extensive prise list. $69 in cash being offered for Stallions and Bulls besides a card of merit for seed grain and agricultural implements.

MR. MARSHELL the dentist makes regular trips to Markdale the 1st and 3rd Wednesday of each month for the practice of his profession. He gives satisfaction and has a paying practice here. Next Wednesday, the 20th, will be his day, and it will be well to have the teeth fixed up for the early rhubarb.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

BACKWARD spring weather this week.

PLOWING has commenced in Queen's Valley.

IMPORTED, a large supply of English filled Shoe Uppers at McLeods custom shoe shop. made up to order on short notice—workmanship cannot be surpassed.

Timothy Seed wanted for which I will pay highest cash prices. W. L. Davis'.

WE have received various offers of Agricultural and others papers to club with the STANDARD but generally declined all such; this week however we advertise a genuine good offer, which is open to all our subscribers who pay, or have paid in advance, as well as new ones. Read the announcement carefully; the Agriculturist is the best agricultural paper we have seen, and can be had together with those valuable books or portraits and the STANDARD all for $2.50.

Go to Jackson for land Rollers. Cheapest and best in the market. Call and be convinced.

A NEW STYLE of boys' trousers has been invented witha copper seat, sheet-iron knees, rivited down the seams, and waterproof pockets, to hold worms for fishing.

Iron Harrows "spring tooth Harrows" Drills and seeders from the best manufactures in Ontario, at Jackson's.

SPEND less than you earn and you will be rich.

MR. JOHN WHITBY, of Artemesia, has decided to retire and come to Markdale to reside. We are glad to have such men come to live in our town, and hope there are more to follow.

'Try Davis' new 30c, Japan Tea you will be convinced that it is a very superior article for the money, Special reduction for large purchases.

B. B. B. ONE OF MANY. B. B. B.

Mrs. Agnes Black, of Orton, Ont., says. "For five years I have been a sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion. I tried one bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and was getting better; I then bought three more and it has cured me."

"Notice" To Farmers, Those that have to buy their "Flour" this summer. Can buy it at Benson's, the Belfast House, the same price as at the mill, and every lb. guaranteed, both Ford's & Plewes' kept on hand. Liberal inducements made on over one barrel lots.

IT'S a mistake to say that a woman's crowning glory in her hair. At this season of the year it is her new Spring bonnet.

The attendance at the Young People's Social in the Lecture Room of the Methodist Church on Wednesday evening last was good, and a highly enjoyable time spent. The amusement crused by seeking the mate to each ticket was heartily enjoyed. Refreshments was provided and a short program rendered, and though it had the name of "A political social" there was an entire absence of politics more than the name.

THE Markdale Junior Lacrosse Team has been re-organized under the name of "The Conquerors," with J. Wilson, Capt; Sec. R. Douglas; Treas. L. Robertson; Managing Com.—S Coleman, R. Dinsmore and W. Mathews.

SPRING has now fairly opened and the snow has speedily dissapeared, and it will be the duty of every householder to make a general "clean up" around his premises. Our village is naturally very healthy, but if the accumulations of the long winter which have been buried in snow is not thoughly disposed of, the effects may break out in diphtheria or some other virulent disease. If every one does his part a great good will be accomplished and it may be, a sad calamity thus averted.

We omitted last week to mention a visit to this part, by Mr. Geo. Caswell, formerly of Glenelg but now of Bruce Co., near Kincardine. He has not visited his old home for 14 years, an would not recognize a building in Markdale. We are glad to say our old acquaintance and school-mate is now a prosperous farmer.

MR. JAMES PLEWES, father of our respected citizen Angus Plewes, died at his home, Dunedin, Simcoe Co. last Sunday, age 65 years. The old gentleman accidentaly fell into a mill pond and was nearly drowned. He regained consciousness, but only lived six hours. Deceased was a man of high education and fine intellect, had read much and had a remarkable memory. He lived in Markdale some two years but moved to Dundalk one years ago where he resided until a few weeks since when he moved to Dunedin.

A half dozen of our young men drove to Meaford where some of them were billed to take part in a Concert under the anspices of Victoria Lacrosse Team of that town on Monday night. The roads were in a shocking condition as they always are at the breaking up of sleighing. The concert was a decided success, and the boys were well used by our sister towns people.

Personals.

MRS. CHAS. RICHARDS moves this week to Rochester, there to join her husband where they have decided to reside.

MRS. RUTLEDGE Sr. returned last week after a prolonged visit to Aurora and Toronto.

Frank Porter, our head teacher, went home for Easter.

Miss Stewart of the Normal School visited Markadle this week.

Sam. Douglas, teacher spent his Easter Holidays at home.

Herb Brown, George. Bowes, Robt J. Brown and Willie McFarland were home from Owen Sound High School for their Easter eggs.

Fred Cornish of Toronto spent Easter Holidays with his parents in Markdale.

Mr. Gimby, a former teacher here, but now studying medicine, visited friends here this week.

Charlie Lawrence and W. A. Brown spent Easter in Toronto.

Miss Eliza Boyd left last week to keep house for a young man at Parry sound "for better for worse."

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Morrow of Chatsworth spent Easter in Markdale.

Capt. Madill visited Markdale this week.

Mr. Thos. Mann returned on Saturday from a three months visit to England.

Dr. Sproule, M. P. left on Tuesday evening for Ottawa to attend parliamen Mrs. Sproule accompanied him.

DR. BRODIE, and P. McCullough, Barrister, spent Easter with friends down east.

MR. WM. TAILOR of Parry Sound district visited his brother-in-law Thos. Mathews this week.

Mrs. McDonald, of Tottenham, is visiting her parents here this week.

Miss McNally, of Owen Sound High School, spent Easter with her parents in Markdale.

HEALTH.

Health Teachings.

It is certainly an encouraging sign of the times to see health publications prosper. In the first settling of the country people made their walnut pills, gathered their own roots and herbs and doctored themselves with fairly good results. But as population became denser and the medical practitioner nearer they were led to believe that those mysterious remedies of which they knew nothing were more potent for good than the simple remedies they had been accustomed to; and in this connection it may be said that the less they knew about the remedy and the more mystery surrounding it the greater their faith in its healing powers.

No one ever thought of trying to find a cause for his ailment. When he became sick it was a special interference of Providence to punish him for his wickedness. If a child was sick it was a punishment sent upon the parents for their wickedness. When one died, it was said that his time had come; "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, etc.," were the words of minister; and thus were the responsibilities of persons thrown upon the Almighty. Notwithstanding there is much more enlightenment now, there are yet many people, who are always dosing, expecting medicine to bring back the vitality they are losing by constantly violating nature's laws.

If people who are constantly swallowing medicine could know the true effects of the substance they swallow, they would certainly renounce them forever, and if they knew how little science there is in therapeutics, they would have less faith in the medical practitioner. Hear what some of them say who have learned how little a thing it is, and are bold enough to say so.

Prof. Alonze Clark, M. D., of the New York College of Physicians and Surgeons, says: "All our curative agents are poisonous, and, as a consequence, every dose diminishes the vitality of the patient."

Prof. Joseph Smith, of the same school, says: "All medicines that enter the circulation, poison the blood in the same manner as do the poisons that produce diseases."

Dr. Evans, Fellow of the Royal College, London, said: "The medical practice of our day is, at the best, a most uncertain and unsatisfactory system. It has neither science nor common sense to commend it to confidence."

Prof. Gregory, of Edinburg, Scotland, to a medical class said: "Gentlemen, ninety-nine out of every hundred medical facts are medical lies; and medical doctrines are, for the most part, stark, staring nonsense."

Dr. J. Mason Good, author of the Book of Nature, says: "The science of medicine is a barbarous jargon, and the effects of our medicines on the human system is in the highest degree uncertain, except indeed that they have destroyed more lives than war, pestilence and famine combined."

Many more could be quoted but perhaps this will suffice for the present. In times past doctors killed people with the lancet and calomel; and chemical laboratories and have succeeded in compounding poisons no less fatal in their effects, but with names which the ordinary individual may not comprehend.

Your physician will dose you in silence as long as you pay him to do so.

Whenever a scientific system of medication is established and generally taught, Othello's occupation will be gone, and sick people will become scarce.

To this end let all health journals contribute by teaching people that they are responsible for their sufferings, and to avoid them by obeying the immutable laws of nature.

Colds.

We generally try to fight a sudden cold with heat or hot applications, to induce perspiration or the opening of the pores of the skin, that the cold may thus be broken up. Of late years many medical men have advanced new theories and methods to treat colds which are in direct opposition to the old ways, and which seem almost dangerous in their daring. An eminent physician writes as follows, logically upon the subject, and would be quite certain in any case of coming up to the motto of the whole medical profession, which since the days of Æsculapius has been, "Kill or cure":

As soon as oppression of the chest, obstruction of the nasal ducts, and unusual lassitude indicate that a "cold has been taken," its influence should at once be counteracted by the purest and coldest air available, and the patient should not stop to weigh the cost of a day's furlough against the danger of a chronic catarrh. In case imperative duties should interfere, the enemy must be met after dark by devoting the first half of the night to an outdoor encampment before a wide-open window. If the fight is to be short and decisive, the resources of the adversary must be diminished by a strict fast. Temporary abstinence from food is the most effective and at the same time the safest method for eliminating the morbid elements of the system. Toward the end of the year a damp, sultry day—catarrh weather—is sometimes followed by a sudden frost, and at such times I have often found that a six-hours' inhalation of pure, cold night air will free the obstructed air passage, so that on the following morning hardly a slight huskiness of the voice suggests the narrowness of the escape from a two-weeks' respiratory misery. But, aided by exercise, outdoor air of any temperature will accomplish the same effect. In two days a resolute pedestrian can walk away from a summer catarrh of that malignant type that is apt to defy half-opened windows. But the specific of the movement cure is arm exercise, dumb-bell swinging, grapple-swing practice, and wood-chopping. On a cold morning (for, after all, there are ten winter catarrhs to one in summer) a woodshed matinee seems to reach the seat of the disease by an air line. As the chest begins to heave under the stimulus of the exercise, perspiration becomes freer as it becomes deeper and fuller, expectoration ceases to be painful, and the mucus is at last discharged en masse, as if the system had only waited for that amount of encouragement to rid itself of the incubus. A catarrh can thus be broken up in a single day. For the next half week the diet should be frugal and cooling. Fruit, light bread, and a little cold, sweet milk is the best catarrh diet. A fast day, though, is still better. Fasting effects in a safe way what the old-school practitioners tried to accomplish by bleeding; it reduces the semi-febrial condition which accompanies every severe cold. There is no doubt that by exercise alone a catarrh can be gradually "worked off." But indoors it is apt to be steep, up-hill work, while cold air, even before the season of actual frosts, acts upon pulmonary disorders as it does on malarial fevers—it reduces them to a less malignant type. A combination of three specifics—exercise, abstinence, and fresh air—will cure the most obstinate cold.

For Baldness.

If the hair begins to come out, cut it short at once. The object of this is to lessen the weight of the hair, which is the immediate cause of its falling out, the weakened roots not being strong enough to support the weight of long hair.

Every morning, shampoo the scalp with a soft brush and cold water, and rub until red with the ends of the fingers.

If there is dandruff, cure by tri-weekly shampoo with castile soap or white of egg, applying afterward a mixture of equal parts of castor oil and alcohol.

Many persons on coming from church complain of headache. This is caused by the action of the impure blood on the brain, due to the accumulation of carbolic acid gas in the air of poorly ventilated churches. The pernicious effect upon the brain and nervous system is very aptly illustrated by the drowsy, listless attitude of the scholars in a poorly ventilated school room as compared with the bright and animated appearance of the children in a neighboring room that has been carefully ventilated. Careful attention to the ventilation of churches and schools will prevent much of the inattention and sleepiness that is observed during the afternoon service or session.

Unselfish Love.

Very noble virtues are often to be found among savages,—a fact which gives us the hint that men for whom civilization has done little are yet capable of showing their kinship with angels. A story comes from New Zealand, proving that a savage may not only make practical use of the religion to which he has become a convert, but that he is capable of the love which is greater than death.

It was at the beginning of the eruption of a volcano there, that a Maori named Molie, with his wife Mary and their two little boys, sought refuge in their whare, or hut.

"Mr. Fairbrother" (the missionary) "has taught us to pray to God and Christ of the Cross," said Molie, so they knelt down and prayed. Soon the roof was smashed in with the lava, heated stones and mud. To save the life of the elder boy, the father wrapped him in a shawl, and placing him on the ground, knelt over him so that the lad should not receive any hurt from the falling lava and stones.

All through the early morning the Maori had his hands and knees on the ground, to provide an effectual shelter for the little one; he did not mind the lava which found a resting place on his back, so long as his boy was safe.

At the same time the mother was trying to protect the other little boy, but her efforts were in vain, and in the silent struggle with the elements the lava overpowered the mother and child, and killed them both. Molie, finding it getting dark, and the lava very heavy on his back, made a desperate effort to fling it off, and, taking up his little one, called to his wife to be quick and follow, when, to his horror, he found that both his dear ones had silently died by his side.

They were afterwards dug out. The mother was in a sitting posture, with her arms extended over her babe to protect it from the sand-drift.

Though the suffering love of the father saved the elder boy, the dying love of the mother was not able to keep death from her child. Both had done what they could, in forgetfulness of self.

A Highland Echo.

In the course of last summer some strangers of disctinction were induced to visit a wild and unfrequented retreat in a distand part of the Highlands, chiefly from the report they heard of an echo, remarkable for the clear and distinct nature of its reverberation. On reaching the spot from whence the trial of its powers is usually made their guide put his hand to the side of his mouth and bawled out with the lungs of a Stentor a salutation in Gaelic, which was repeated with a precision that seemed beyond the expectations of the party.

One of the gentlemen, by way of trying the strength of his voice, put his hand to the side of his mouth in the same manner as his guide, and called out:

"How far are we from home?"

These words, much to the surprise of their guide, were also repeated, when poor Donald with a simplicity which brought a smile over the faces of all present, exclaimed:

"You may think it strange, gentlemen, but this is the first time I ever heard our echo speak English."

"I have no doubt," said the gentleman, "but it can repeat other languages if you put it to the test," and instantly bawled out some brief questions in French, Spanish and Italian.

Donald looked more dazed than ever.

"Well, I must say, that's very queer: my own father and my own self have known that echo for more than seventy-years, and we never knew it use no language but Gaelic before."

"Your echo is more learned, then, than you supposed?" said the gentleman, laughing, though at a loss whether to impute Donald's remarks to archness or simplicity.

"You may say that, but we can tell you, sir," said the poor fellow, with an expression of earnestness that was highly amusing to those present, "as the echo has never been out of the country; where can she have got all her education?"

Decidedly Cool.

"Will it be convenient to settle this bill?" asked a collector of a business man he approached.

"Now that is what I should say was cool—decidedly cool," answered the merchant, as he ran his eye over the items.

"Anything wrong, sir?" inquired the man, solicitously.

"Well, it's rather a cool affair all through," responded the merchant, as he paid the account.

It was an ice bill.

FARM.

Grain Troughs for Sheep.

Take the country through, and a large amount of valuable grain is lost every winter through the lack of having suitable places in which to feed. It is impossible to feed upon the ground, without a loss, unless perhaps one has hogs to follow the sheep to gather up the grain that is worked into the dirt or snow. The sheep is a dainty animal and will not eat grain unless clean.

The quadruple trough, though not new, is the best I have used, and for the benefit of those you may wish to make a supply of them, I will give the dimensions of mine. For each trough I take three boards twelve feet long, one a foot wide, the other two about five inches wide. Set one of the narrow boards on its edge and lay the wide one flat on the top of it (lengthwise of course), so that the narrow one shall stand just one side of the middle of the wide one, and so nail it fast. Now set the other narrow board on as its edge and place the wide one as before, except the other side up, and the other side of the middle, and nail as before.

The trough part is now completed. Saw off the ends square, and to them nail on boards fourteen inches square, so that the center of the four flanges comes in the center of the end pieces, and it is done. The advantage of this kind of trough is that you can always have a clean place to feed in.

When it snows or rains and freezes, you need no broom to sweep or clean it out with, for you have four perfect troughs in one, and if the upper one is full or filthy when you come to feed, with ease you can turn up the next one, clean, and ready for use, and the sheep cannot upset it.

It is best to have enough troughs so that all the animals can have room to feed. The stouter of the flock will make a dash and keep the weaklings away if possible; therefore I keep my sheep divided and find that it pays to do so.

Coughing Horses.

A horse may cough from having taken cold, and he may cough also through the injurious influence of dusty hay. A correspondent who has been watching for the cause of the winter trouble in his horses, says that he has become convinced that the trouble comes, in his case, from clover hay, and more particularly through the manner of feeding it. His custom, like that of many others, has been to let the animal draw the hay down through a rack, thus stripping off the fine dust, which was drawn into the lungs in respiration and produced the cough. He believes the remedy for this trouble to be in giving the animal his feed in the natural way, i. e., allowing it to gather the food from the level at its feet. Since changing his racks to mangers the writer says he has had no further trouble with coughing horses.

Notes And Comments.

Barley as well as oats should be sown early.

Whatever important crop the farm best produces, let that take the lead, regardless of fluctuations in prices.

It pays better to have board or other walks about the premises. One should lead from the house to each outbuilding.

Cellars should be cleaned, drains opened; in fact, if we open our eyes we find a vast amount of work which ought to be done this month.

The Japanese reduce their manures to a liquid before applying, it is said, and are careful about saving all substances that will strengthen the soil.

Kerosene is better than crude petroleum for the softening and clearing out the gummed and hardened oil in the boxes of mowers, reapers and other farm machinery.

An oft-recurring question among farmers is, what is the average yield of straw to an acre? The Pennsylvania farmers believe the average crop of rye straw to be one ton.

The value of a manure depends upon the amount of plant-food present, and upon the availability of that food, as determined by its solubility, and the state of chemical combination in which it exists.

Lands that are overstocked, not only yield less food, but the animals pasture upon them make a less yield in beef or milk than when the stock is in proportion to the capacity of the lands for producing food.

As soon as the frost is out of the ground the work of building new and repairing old fences should be attended to. If new stakes and posts are to be driven into the ground they should be well seasoned and dipped into gas tar. Thus previously prepared they will last enough longer to more than pay the extra expense.

Rolling winter wheat and meadows as soon as the frost is out, is a short operation that pays as well as anything a farmer can do. The constant freezing and thawing has raised the roots of grass and winter grain above the surface, and nothing but the use of a heavy roller will set them back where they will take hold and grow.

Ground that is well underdrained can usually be plowed during this month, but clayey soil not underdrained is usually too wet. Much damage is done every year by plowing before the soil is sufficiently dry. If the ground be covered with a light snow, it will enable the farmer to sow grass seed more evenly; clover and other seed should be sown this month.

Wanted a Wink.

"Gwine to be any cholera heah dis summer, boss?" he was asking on the market yesterday.

Can't say. Are you interested?'

"I ar'. Ize got to move, an' Ize got my choice between rooms down cellar an' rooms in de attick. If de cholera's comin' Ize gwine up whar' I kin git de ventilashun. If it ain't den Ize gwine down cellar an' save fifty cents a week. If you see anythin' in de papers please gimme de wink."

Said a friend to a bookseller: "The book trade is affected, I suppose, by the general depression. What kind of books feel it most?" Pocket books," was the laconic reply.

A London lecturer says: "Not one woman in ten thousand has room inside her clothes for the rise and fall of her ribs in breathing." We believe he's about correct, for we notice that a great majority of women at the opera breathe outside their clothes from a small neck of open space just below the chin.

PEARLS OF TRUTH.

All the world is but an orphanage, so long as its children know not God, their Father; and all wisdom and knowledge is only more bewildered darkness so long as you have not taught them the fear of the Lord; not to be taken out of the world in monastic sorrow but to be kept from its evil in shepherded peace.

Said a railroad conductor to his wife, a pious woman, and her piety respected by her unconverted husband:—"We need Sunday so badly. No one can tell how lonesome and homesick and desolate I feel sometimes while passing along through the cities and villages and hearing the church-bells ringing Sunday morning and Sunday evenings."

The love of the world takes away from men a desire after and relish for heavenly things. None of the bidden guests were kept away by any occupation in itself sinful, while yet all became sinful because allowed to interfere with higher objects, because the first place, instead of a place merely subordinate is given to them.

A young lady about to be married, being on friendly terms with the clergyman who was to perform the wedding ceremony, made him promise that on her first Sunday at church after her marriage he would preach an appropriate sermon. The promise was given, and on the Sunday appointed he preached from the text from the Psalms: "And there shall be an abundance of peace as long as the moon endureth."

Do you feel that you could do more, pray more, or give more, and are tempted not to do it? Look at it again in the light of Gethsemane and Calvary. How the treasures and pleasures of earth pale, like the rushlight before the glorious noontide sun, as we think of the appeal of the great Apostle, who himself had sacrificed all for Christ: "Ye know the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, though he was rich, yet for your sakes became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich."

If your home is not happy, why, and who is or are responsible? are questions for every member of the family beyond childhood to consider. We should not be satisfied with anything less than positive happiness, in the tabernacle of home, made sacred by the altars of love. This can be had in spite of poverty and sickness, disappointment and sorrow, losses and crosses, age and loneliness. Her blessed presence will abide though all these things be against her, but will flee from anger and selfishness, indifference and fault-finding, hypocrisy and sin. One sweet spirit can keep her hovering about, but only by the invitation of the majority will she come in, and by the courtesy of the controlling powers will she become a permanent guest.

A Suspicious Livery Stable Man.

There is a livery stable keeper in Halifax who is very careful to whom he hires his turnouts.

One Sunday afternoon a young married man called at the livery stable and wanted a horse and buggy.

"Who is going along with you?" asked the livery stable man.

"I am going to take my wife's mother out for her health, and you can put a hatchet and a spade in the bottom of the buggy, as I wanted to bring in some young cedar trees to plant out at the cemetery."

"My buggies are all engaged, and if they were not you would have to pay $200 buggy hire for one afternoon."

"Why, how's that?"

"Because I don't want to be hauled up as a witness every time the court meets."

"Witness! About what?"

"And then you will be taking a charge of venue because public sentiment is down on you here, and I don't want to be attacked by the sheriff as a witness, travel forty miles and be fined $40, and then be blackguarded by three or four lawyers."

"Why, what are you talking about?"

"That's all right. I don't say you ain't justified, but I ain't no fool. When a man wants to take his mother-in-law out in the country for her health, with a hatchet and a spade, and talks about planting things in the cemetery, I know all I want. My buggies are hired for a year in advance. Just take your custom to some rival house. When I hire a buggy, I hire a buggy; and when I hire a hearse, it is a hearse. I don't want to do any business what's not legitimate."

Hotel Reckoning.

A traveller, who has been much about the world, and is familiar with the different ways of doing things, gives the following account of how they keep the reckoning and make the bills at hotels in Portugal:

Here, when the traveller asks for his bill, the landlord pleasantly rubs his hands together, and answers, "Whatever your excellency pleases to give." This will not do at all, for the traveller is sure to offer too much or too little, and to be thought either a spend-thrift or a niggard; so he has to make a speech, thank the landlord for his courteous confidence, and beg for a detailed statement.

Then the landlord, politely deprecating anything of the kind, is slowly persuaded to check off the various items upon the fingers of his hand, with a long argument before each successive finger is done with and doubled down.

"What does it come to?" asks the traveller, taking out his purse at last, when the hand and the account are finally closed.

"Why, bless us! Did his excellency not add up?"

His excellency having been incapable of this act of mental arithmetic, the addition is gone over again, from the little finger backwards, with a finger or two, perhaps, representing forgotten items, brought into account from the other hand; and the sum total is gladly paid, and host and guest part mutually content, the guest well knowing that he has not been over-charged more than, perhaps, a thumb and one or two fingers.

A Bad Beginning.

"I want to be an angel,"
Sings the maiden in the choir;
She pines for wings, and thinks she'd like
To twang a golden lyre.

But if she'd note the costumes
Of maidens of to-day,
She'd surely see that angels
Would never dress that way.

For instance, take the bustles,
Such as you'll daily meet;
Now, wouldn't they look queer, if worn
Upon the golden street?

So girls, if you're in earnest,
You see you started wrong;
And if you're not why don't you quit,
And sing some other song?

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"De case of Brudder James Warren, Miner Hill, Texas, will be fust took up," said Brudder Gardner as he opened the meeting and winked to Elder Toots to push another empty herring box into the ring. Brudder Warren claims dat he am bewitched an' he has written to dis club to ask it to sunthin' to drive de evil speerits away. He has got to sich a pass dat de witches ride his ole mule outer de ba'n at night and trip him all ober de kentry, an' Brudder Warren feels speerit hands passin' ober his face an' pullin his h'ar o' nights. Dis club will do sunthin' fur him. If he war a local member we'd cure him in about ten minits. As he am an honorary, an' fur away, we shall strike his name off de books an' send him a notis dat he am a bounced man.

"I hev repeatedly referred to dis matter of superstishun, an' if members can't be enlightened dey kin be fired out. De day of ghosts, hobgoblins an' witches has passed away, an' de cull'd man who can't believe it has no bizness in dis club. Mebbe dere was a time when witches went chasin' round de kentry on an ole raw-boned mule, and people hab to death an' leavin' a trail of fiah an' smoke, but things hav changed. De wedder hain't right fur 'em now, an' de purleece giv 'em de collar an' send 'em to de work house.

"Mebbe speerit hands hev bin laid on Brudder Warren, but I doubt it. I guess Tennessee whisky had a good deal to do wid it. All o' you jist listen to me when I say dat de fust complaint of speerit hands in Detroit will be followed by a scene to make somebody's heart ache! Be keerful how unknown hands pull yer ha'r. De member of dis club who sees a witch had better keep powerful quiet about it or he'll be turned ober to de Kickin' Committee to be dealt wid. De Seckretary will write to Brudder Warren dat we hev dun sunthin' fur him, an' notify our branches at Chattanooga an' Knoxville dat he has bin fired."

EXCULPATED.

The Chairman of the Committee on Internal Harmony then announced his readiness to report on the case of Trustee Pullback vs. Whalebone Howker. The two members lived in adjoining cabins, and were considered friends as well as neighbors until Trustee gave a molasses candy-pull and invited a score of friends and left Mr. and Mrs. Howker at home to chew the cud of reflection instead of his candy. Howker appealed to the club, under by-law 98 defining fraternal feeling, and the case has been hanging for several weeks. The Chairman now reported:

"We not only interviewed all de parties but we ate some of de candy. While we would incouraige a fraternal feelin' among members, an' while we believe dat members orter do mo' fur each odder dan fur outsiders, we mus' declair' our belief dat a member am not obleeged to invite another member to de sanctity of his home. In this case Brudder Pullback knowed dat Brudder Howker had sore eyes an' a bad cough, and dat his wife was hard o' hearin' an' given to de habit of spittin' on de stove. Deir presence could not hev added to de eclat of de occashun, an' it was fur better under sarcumstances dat dey be left out. We would an' do unanimously absolve Brudder Pullback from any evil intent."

On motion of the Rev. Penstock the report was accepted. He said he was glad the case had come up and been officially acted on, as he lived in the midst of many members of the club, and had been greatly annoyed at their interpretation of friendly feelings. He would lend a brother member a flat iron sooner than an outsider, but when it came down to giving a party he should invite and leave out whom he pleased.

MANY THANKS.

Dr. Christopher Columbus Johnson, an honorary member of the club at Mobile, forwarded a communication in regard to spring tonics, and gave the following reciept for preparing what he calls, "Johnson's Liver Annihilator":

"Water one gallon.

"Alcohol one quart.

"Put in sassafras root, peach-stone, tonka beans, persimmon buds, New Orleans molasses and tar to suit the taste, and keep in a dark place for one week. This is warranted to cure perspiration of the liver in three days."

The Secretary was ordered to return the heartfelt thanks of the club, and various members will at once prepare the tonic.

A BUSTED BRANCH.

An official communication from the city authorities of Toronto revealed a sad state of affairs in conection with the branch club of that place. It was established a year ago with eighty-two members, being admittered to work to the thirty-third degree and confer the order of the Golden Chicken. The President was a hotel waiter, with eyeglasses and a diamond pin, and there was the sum of $34 in the treasury at the very first meeting. The branch has been making regular reports, claiming an increased membership and a great deal of enthusiasm, and everything was supposed to be all right until a telegram was received that the President had absconded. Then inquiries were set on foot and an astounding state of affairs was developed. The branch was $200 in debt, two-thirds of the members were dodging the law, and the society had been used to cloak much evil-doing. Giveadam Jones was instructed to leave for Toronto on the night train and seek to recover the charter and seals and bring back the names of such honest colored people as desire to become members of the Detroit club.

Frigidity.

Just at twilight the other evening a young man on a Windsor ferry met a lady acquaintance tripping onto the boat. He walked aft with her and found her a seat, remained a moment and then excused himself to speak to a man whom he had left in the bow. After he had finished his chat he returned, plumped down in a chair drawn closely to the one where he left her, and turning in the half light to the lady at his side said, interrogatively:

"Well, Jennie, I suppose you have been very lonely without me?"

"Sir!" said a voice, in freezing accents, "I do not know you."

And she didn't. His friend, finding it cold, had gone into the cabin.

"I don't see how you get so much news into your paper," said the village clergyman to the village editor, "seeing that you have no local reporter." "Oh, that's easily explained," replied the editor; "my wife belongs to three sewing societies in the village, and she has an excellent memory."

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE

BY FRED. M. WHITE.

CHAPTER I.

The shades of evening had commenced to l; already the slanting sun shining rough the open window glittered on the ray of crystal glasses, turning the wine thin them to a blood-red hue. The re-ains of an ample dessert were scattered out the bare polished table, rich lusciousoking fruits and juicy pines filling the air
th their fragrance. A pleasant room,
th its panelled walls and quaint curiosities,
th here and there a modern picture fram-
; and again other works standing upon els or placed against the wainscot. From e Corso below came the sounds of laughter
d gaiety; while within, the delicate scent the pines was overpowered by the odor of bacco which rose from the cigarettes of e three men sitting there. They were all ung—artists evidently, and from the ap-arance of one of them, he was of a differ-t nationality from the others. Frederick axwell was an Englishman, with a passion art, and no doubt had he been forced to in a living by his brush, would have made me stir in the world; but being born with e traditional silver spoon in his mouth, his rtation with the art never threatened to come serious. He was leaving Rome in a w days, and the dessert upon the table as the remains of a farewell dinner—that ston, dear to every English heart. A ndsome fair-haired man this Englishman, clear bright cheek and blue eyes con-sting with the aquiline features and olive-ed complexions of his companions. The an with the black moustache and old velt painting-jacket, a man with bohemian amped on him indelibly, was Carlo Visci, so an artist, and a genius to boot, but rsed with that indomitable idleness which the bane of so many men of talent. The her and slighter Italian, he with the melcholy face and earnest eyes, was Luigi lvarini, independent as to means, and sessed, poor sool! with the idea that he as ordained by Providence for a second ribaldi.

There is an infinite sense of rest and com-rt, the desire to sit silent and dream of easant things, that comes with tobacco ter dinner, when the eye can dwell upon e waxlights glittering on glass and china,
d on the artistic confusion the conclusion
f the repast produces. So the three men t listlessly, idly there, each drowsily en-ged, and none caring to break the delious silence, rendered all the more pleasing om the gay girlish laughter and the trip of tle feet coming up from the Corso below.
t no true Briton can remain long silent;
d Maxwell, throwing his cigar out of the indow, rose to his feet, yawning. "Heigh-
! So this pleasant life is come to an d," he exclaimed. "Well, I suppose one moot be expected to be always playing."

Carlo Visci roused himself to laugh gent-
. "Did you ever do anything else, my iend?" he asked. "You play here under nny skies, in a velvet painting-jacket;
en you leave us to pursue the same ardu-
s toil in the tall hat of Albion's respectality, in the land of fogs and snows. Ah!
s, it is only a change of venue, my philospher."

"Not now," Salvarini corrected gravely.
Remember, he has vowed by all in his ower to aid the welfare of the League.
hat vow conscientiously followed out is ndertaking enough for one man's lifetime."

"Luigi, you are the skeleton at the east," Visci remonstrated. "Cannot you e happy here for one brief hour without reinding us that we are bound by chains we annot sever?"

"I do not like the mocking tone of your ords," Salvarini replied. "The subject too earnest for jesting upon.—Surely, axwell, you have not so soon forgotten
he solemnity of the oath you took last ight?"

"I do remember some gibberish I had to epeat, very much like the conspirators' horus at the Opera," Maxwell returned ith a careless shrug. "It is not bad fun laying at sedition.—But for goodness' ake, Luigi, do not keep harping on the me string, like another Paganini, but ithout that wizard's versatility."

"You think it play, do you?" Salvarini sked almost scornfully. "You will find stern reality some day. Your hour may ot come yet, it may not come for years;
ut if you are ordered to cut off your right and, you will have to obey."

"Oh, indeed. Thanks, most earnest outh, for your estimation of my talent for bedience.—Come, Luigi! do not be so Casandra-like. If the worst comes to the orst, I can pitch this thing into the Tier." He took a gold coin from his pocket s he spoke, making a gesture as if to throw through the open lattice.

Salvarini stood up, terror written in very line of his face, as he arrested his outstretched arm. "For heaven's sake, axwell, what are you thinking of? Are ou mad, or drunk, that you can dream of uch a thing?"

Maxwell laughed as he restored the coin o his pocket. "All right, old fellow. I uppose I must honor your scruples; though, mind you, I do not consider myself bound
o do anything foolish even for the League."

"You may not think so; indeed, I hope ot; but time will tell."

Maxwell laughed again, and whistled care-
essly, thinking no more of the little episode.
The League, the coin, everything was forotten; but the time did come when he in is hour of need remembered Luigi's words, nd vividly realised the meaning of the look on his stern earnest face.

Visci looked on at the incident, totally unmoved, save by a desire to lead the conversation into more pleasant channels.
"When do you leave, Maxwell?" he asked.
"I suppose you are not going for a few
days?"

"In about a week probably, not sooner.
I did not know I had so many friends in Rome, till I was going to leave them."

"You will not forget your visit to my little place?" Genevieve will never forgive me if I let you go without saying good-bye."

"Forget little Genevieve!" Maxwell cried.
"No, indeed. Whatever my engagements may be, I will find time to see her; though,
I daresay, the day will come when she will forget me easily enough."

"I am not so sure of that; she is a warm-hearted child. I tell you what we will do;
and perhaps Sir Geoffrey and his daughter will join us. We will go down the day after to-morrow, and make a day of it.—
Of course you will be one, Luigi?"

It was growing dark now, too dark to see the rich flush that mounted to the young Italian's cheek. He hesitated a moment before he spoke. "With pleasure, Carlo. A day at your little paradise is not to be lightly refused. I will come gladly."

"You make a slight mistake, Visci, when you speak of Genevieve as a child," Maxwell observed reflectively. "She is seventeen—a woman, according to your Italian reckoning. At anyrate, she is old enough to know the little blind god, or I am much mistaken."

"I hope not," Visci returned gravely. "She is quick and passionate, and somewhat old for her years, by reason of the seclusion she keeps. But let the man beware who lightly wins her heart; it would go hard with him if I crossed his path again!"

"There are serpents in every paradise," Maxwell replied sententiously; "and let us hope little Gen. is free from the curiosity of her original ancestress. But child or not, she has a woman's heart worth the winning, in which assertion our silent friend here will bear me out."

Luigi Salvarini started from his reverie. "You are right, Maxwell," he said. "Many a man would be proud to wear her gage upon his arm. Even I—— But why ask me? If I was even so disposed to rest under my own fig-tree, there are ties which preclude such a blissful thought."

Maxwell whistled softly, and muttered something about a man drawing a bow at a venture—the words audible to Salvarini alone.

"I am tied, as I told you," he continued coldly. "I do not know why you have drawn me into the discussion at all. I have sterner work before me than dallying by a woman's side looking into her eyes——"

"And not anything like so pleasant, I dare swear," Maxwell interrupted cheerfully. "Come, Luigi; do not be so moody. If I have said anything in my foolish way to offend you, I am heartily sorry."

"I am to blame, Maxwell, not you. You wonder why I am so taken up with this League - if you will listen, I will tell you. The story is old now; but I will tell it as best I can remember."

"Then, perhaps you wait till I have found a seat and lighted my cigarette," exclaimed a voice from the background at this moment. "If Salvarini is going to oblige, I cut in as a listener."

At these words, uttered in a thin, slightly sneering voice, the trio turned round suddenly. Had it been lighter, they would have seen a trim, well-built figure, with head set well on square shoulders, and a perfectly cut, deadly pale face, lighted with piercing black eyes, and adorned by a well-waxed, pointed moustache. From his accents, there must have been something like a sneer upon his lips. But whatever he might have been, he seemed to be welcome enough now as he drew a chair to the open window.

"Better late than never," Maxwell cried. "Help yourself to wine, Le Gautier; and make all due apologies for not turning up to dinner."

"I will do so," the new-comer said languidly. "I was detained out of town—No; you need not ask if a pair of bright eyes were the lode-stars to my ardent soul, for I shall not tell you; and in the second place, I have been obtaining your permit as a Brother of the League. I offered up myself on the shrine of friendship; I lost my dinner, voila tout;" and saying these words, he put a narrow slip of parchment in Maxwell's hands.

"I suppose I had better take care of this?" the Englishman answered carelessly. "I get so exasperated with Salvarini, that I came near pitching the sacred moidore out of the window. I presume, it would not be wise?"

"Not if you have any respect for a sound body," Le Gautier returned dryly. "I gather that Luigi has been talking largely about the sacredness of the mission. Well, he is young yet, and the gilt of his enthusiasm does not yet show the nickel beneath, which reminds me. Did my ears deceive me, or were we going to hear a story?"

"It is no story," the Italian replied, "merely a little family record, to show you how even patriots are not exempt from tyranny.—You remember my brother, Visci? and his wife. He settled down, after fighting years for his country, not many miles from here. Living with him was his wife's father, an aged man, universally beloved—a being who had not a single enemy in the world. Well, time went on, till one day, without the slightest warning, the old fellow was arrested for compliance in some so-called plot. My brother's wife clung round her father's neck; and there, in my brother's sight, he saw his wife stricken brutally down by the ruffianly soldiers—dead; dead, mind—her only crime that little act of affection—killed by order of the officer in charge. But revenge followed. Paulo shot three of the scoundrels dead, and left the officer, as he thought, dying. Since then, I have never heard of Paulo.—And now, do you wonder why I am a Socialist, with my hand against all authority and order, when it is backed up by such cowardly, unprovoked oppression as this?"

For a time the listeners remained silent, watching the twinkling stars as they peeped out one by one, nothing to be seen now of each but the glowing tip of his cigarette as the blue smoke drifted from the casement.

"You do not think that your brother and Paulo Lucci, the celebrated brigand we hear so much of, are the same men?" Visci asked at length. "People have said so, you understand."

"I have heard such a tale," Salvarini replied sardonically. "The affair created quite a stir in the province at the time; but the peasants do me too much homage in connecting my name with so famous a character. Our Italian imagination does not rest at trifles."

"Pleasant for the officer who ordered them to strike down your brother's wife," Le Gautier drawled, as he emitted a delicate curl of smoke from his nostrils. "Did you ever hear the name of the fellow?"

"Curiously enough, his name is the same as yours, though I cannot be sure, as it is five years ago now. He was a Frenchman, likewise."

"Moral—let all Le Gautiers keep out of Paulo Lucci's way," Maxwell exclaimed, rising to his feet. "We do not pay you the compliment of believing you are the same man; but these brigands are apt to strike first and inquire after. Of course, this is always presuming Salvarini's brother and Paulo Lucci are one and the same, as far as the Villa Salvarini. Who says ay to that proposal?—The ayes have it."

They rose to their feet with one accord, and after changing their coats for something more respectable, trooped down the stairs.

"You will not forget about Friday?" Visci reminded. "I shall ask Sir Geoffrey and his daughter to come. We are going down to my little place on that day.—Will you make one, Le Gautier?"

"A thousand thanks, my dear Visci," the Frenchman exclaimed; "but much as I should like it, the thing is impossible. I am literally overwhelmed in the most important work."

A general laugh followed this solemn assertion.

"I am sorry, Visci returned politely. "You have never been there. I do not think you have ever seen my sister?"

"Never," Le Gautier replied with an inexplicable smile. "It is a pleasure to come."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

HOUSEHOLD.

Kitchen Notes.

Hot water is the best thing that can be used to heal a sprain or bruise.

The rooms of a house need ventilation in the daytime, as well as the night; in the winter as well as the summer.

A little ammonia and borax in the water when washing blankets keeps the flannel soft and prevents shrinking.

Burning coke in the kitchen and laundry stoves saves many a big coal bill and makes a better fire for such purposes.

Castors made of leather are a new invention, sure to prove useful. A solid leather castor will save many a rug or carpet.

FRIED TRIPE.—Roll the boiled tripe, cut in squares, put in egg, then in cracker crumbs, and fry to a nice brown. Serve with catsup.

Housekeepers should not fail to keep a bushel or two of charcoal in the house with which to make a bed of coals for broiling. Try it and see the difference it will make in your steak or chicken or ham.

A simple remedy for neuralgia is to apply grated horse-radish, prepared the same as for table use, to the temple when the face or head is affected, or to the wrist when the pain is in the arm or shoulder.

Do all farmers' wives know that a quart of buttermilk and a teaspoonful of saleratus, stirred up with buckwheat flour makes the best pancakes? When done, steaming them in a covered dish improves them very much.

A NICE WAY TO COOK CHICKEN.—Cut up the chickens, put into a pan, cover with water and let stew as usual. When done make a thickening of cream and flour; add butter, pepper and salt. Have ready a nice short cake, baked and cut in squares. Lay the squares on a dish and pour the chicken and gravy over them while hot.

DRIED APPLE CAKE.—Two cups of sweet dried apples, soak over night and chop; two cups of molasses, and let it simmer over two hours; when cold add one cup of sugar, two eggs, one-half cup of sour cream, sour milk and butter, two teaspoonfuls of soda, four cups of flour, four teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, and one teaspoonful of cloves and one nutmeg.

SAGO PUDDING.—One cupful of sago soaked in cold water until soft. Add four quarts of scalded milk. Sweeten to taste, and add a little salt. Let it cool, and when ready to put in the oven, turn in three well-beaten eggs, but do not stir the mixture when you put the eggs in. Bake three-quarters of an hour. Flavor to taste. Tapioca, same as sago, only use five eggs.

VEGETABLE SOUP.—Put into a saucepan a piece of butter the size of a walnut; when it is very hot put three onions sliced and a half-dozen celery leaves; stir until they reddden, then add a half teacupful of flour and when this is red, (take great care that it does not burn), pour in one pint of boiling water, stirring slowly all the while, then add one quart of cold water and simmer for an hour. Season with salt and pepper and serve, very hot.

Nothing is better for a sore throat than a gargle of salt and water. It may be used as often as desired, and if a little is swallowed each time it is used, it will cleanse the throat and allay irritation. Salt, also used in doses of one to four teaspoonfuls in half a pint to a pint of tepid water, is an emetic always on hand. This is also the antidote to be used after poisoning from nitrate of silver, while waiting for the doctor to come.

BIRD'S-NEST PUDDING.—Pare four good-sized sour apples, stew until soft. Make a batter of one cup of milk, butter the size of an egg, two and one-half cupfuls flour, two heaping teaspoonfuls baking powder, a pinch of salt. Pour over the stewed apples and bake in a hot oven.

Sauce for the Above.—One egg beaten light, one cup of sugar, one-half cup hot water, one sliced lemon, one tablespoonful cornstarch. Boil until it thickens.

Lemons may often be used as a good household medicine. They are undoubtedly very excellent for biliousness. Lemons, however, should not be taken in their pure state, as their acidity will injure the teeth and the lining of the stomach. The proper way is to take the juice of one lemon in a cup of water, without sugar. The best time to take such a dose is before breakfast or just before retiring. Lemonade is an excellent drink in summer, and can be used with benefit by every one.

Here is an excellent recipe for chicken croquettes, which are so popular now and so frequently served with salads at evening parties: Boil two medium sized chickens until they are very tender, chop them fine, add one pint of cream, almost half a pound of butter, with a liberal allowance of salt and pepper. The easiest way to shape these is to press some of the mixture firmly into small moulds, or shallow cups will do; fry them in hot lard until they are brown: some cooks prefer salad oil to butter, but clarified butter gives a much more agreeable flavor and a better color.

TOMATO CATCHUP.—Take any quantity of very ripe tomatoes, cut them in slices and put in layers in a deep jar, sprinkling salt between each layer. Use two ounces of salt to each quart of tomatoes. Set the jar in a warm place, and let it stand for rthree days giving the fruit a gentle stir now and then. At the end of that time press the tomatoes through a sieve, measure the juice, and to each quart add an ounce of black pepper, a dozen cloves, a blade of mace, a teaspoonful of powdered ginger and half an ounce of allspice. Boil these ingredients for twenty minutes; pour the catchup while warm into hot bottles, and when quite cold cork them securely and store in a dry place. A wineglassful of this catchup stirred into half a pint of melted or good gravy may be used instead of tomato sauce if the latter is not at hand.

TOMATOES STEWED WHOLE.—Take as many fresh tomatoes as are likely to be required, and after the stalks are removed place them in a stew-pan with some finely chopped onion, salt, pepper, and a few small pieces of butter. Put the lid on the pan and set it on the stove where the contents may simmer gently for a quarter of an hour. After this pour over enough good brown stock to half cover the tomatoes. Stew them slowly until done sufficiently. When quite soft, but not at all broken, take out the tomatoes and arrange them neatly on a very hot dish; thicken the sauce with a teaspoonful of flour, mixed to a smooth paste with a little cold water; le tit boil two or three minutes after the thickening is added, then pour it round about (not over) the tomatoes, and serve with finger pieces of nice crisp toast inserted here and there between the fruit.

STUFFED TOMATOES.—Take a sufficient number of ripe tomatoes and cut a thin slice from the stalk of each. Remove the insides, being careful not to break the outside of the fruit. Press the tomato pulp through a sieve and mix it with a little pepper and salt, two ounces of ham previously cooked and finely minced, an onion chopped very small, two tablespoonfuls of sifted bread crumbs, a few sprigs of fresh parsley well washed and shred fine, and a well-beaten egg. Mix these ingredients thoroughly together, and fill the tomatoes with the mixture. Place them, with the cut side uppermost, in a baking-tin; cover the tops with seasoned bread crumbs, and bake in a brisk oven for half an hour. Send a little good brown gravy to table in the dish with them. For a change the tomatoes may be filled with any kind of cold meat, poultry or game, finely minced and pleasantly seasoned. Prepared in this way they form a most delicious delicacy.

PICKLED TOMATOES.—Take two dozen small ripe tomatoes, prick each one in two or three places, and carefully preserve the juice that flows from them; keep it in a covered vessel until wanted. Put the tomatoes in layers in a deep earthen jar, and sprinkle a little salt between each layer. Place a cover on the jar, and let it remain undisturbed for three days. On the fourth day remove the tomatoes from the brine, wash them thoroughly, and dry them very carefully. Put them into jars and add the juice that flowed from them at first. Boil as much vinegar as will entirely cover the tomatoes with half an ounce of cloves and a tablespoonful of mustard seed. The vinegar should be allowed to get cold before being poured into the jars. If desired, some onions cut into very thin slices, or some celery finely minced, may be added to the tomatoes. The pickle will be ready to use in a fortnight. The jars must be tied down and stored in the usual way.

A Fortunate Victim.

The reader is warned against supposing that the following anecdote establishes any precedent for lying and deceit, but it is a very good joke on the commanding officer:

The Emperor Paul of Russia was seated in his arm-chair enjoying an after-dinner nap. It was a hot summer's day, and the windows of the ground-floor at Gatschina had been thrown wide open. In the adjoining room sat a few ladies of the court engaged in a whispered conversation. A pert young officer of the gaurds looked in at the window as he passed, and was about to address the ladies when he was given to understand by signs that the emperor was asleep in the next room. The officer said in a low voice: "Don't betray me; I am going to have a lark," and creeping toward the open window of the adjoining apartment he uttered the long-drawn shout of the sentries, "Flushay!"

The next moment he disappeared in the shrubbery and got away without being perceived. The emperor started out of his sleep, and was highly incensed at the trick which had been played upon him. The ladies pretended not to know who had committed the offence. The emperor sent for the general in command, and ordered him to produce the culprit within an hour. He questioned each one of the sentries but to no purpose. There was no trifling, however, with an order of the Czar Paul, and in his distress of mind the general called out a young soldier and said to him, "I will give you two hundred rubles if you will confess that you were the shouter. The emperor will probably dictate a punishment, but what do you care for that?" The soldier, a spirited young fellow, consented, pocketed the two hundred rubles, and punctual to the time appointed, the commandant took him to the emperor. The latter had in the meantime forgotten the whole affair and his anger had cooled down. Looking at the soldier he sa' ',

"Splendid vo , give him three hundred rubles!"

It Wasn't His Castle.

Many stories are told of the nervousness of new soldiers under fire. The old German general, Blucher, is said to have allayed the fears of a timid officer as follows:

Blucher, tired of watching the French army from the terrace of the castle of Brienne, went to dinner. Among the guests was a volunteer, who was so incommoded by the noise of the French balls going through the castle and the cracking of the panels in the walls over his head that he kept changing color, and moving his chair here and there, as if he wished to avoid the falling of the ceiling. As all eyes were directed to this restless person, the marshal called across the table to him,

"Does the castle belong to you?"

"To me? No!"

"Then you may be quite easy. The castle is solidly built; the cost of repairs will not be considerable and, at any rate, you will not have to pay for them."

Polson's Nerviline.

Hundreds who have experienced the wonderful power of Nerviline in subduing pain have testified that it is the most potent remedy in existence. Nerviline is equally efficacious as an internal or an external remedy. Polson's Nerviline cures flatulence, chills, spasms, cholera, cramps, headache, sea sickness, summer complaints, &c., &c. Nerviline is sold by all druggists and country dealers. Only 25 cents a bottle. Try it.

The Federal Life.

(Hamilton Spectator, March 3d 1887.)

The annual report of the Federal Life Assurance Company has been published, and should be read by every person interested, directly or indirectly, in life insurance. Hamilton people will be gratified to know that the two life assurance companies having their head offices in this city are the two companies which have lead all others doing business in Canada in respect of the amount of new business put in force during each of the years 1885 and 1886. The report indicates that the SPECTATOR was correct a year ago, when it said that "magnificent as has been its record for 1885, it has strength and energy for even better results during the present year." The business written in 1885 was $2,304,500, while the applications received in 1886, were for $3,538,300 of insurance, and the new insurance granted, was $3,258,000. The Company's aggregate insurance in force jumped up from $2,696,456 at the end of 1885, to $5,241,677 at the end of 1886. This was truly a magnificent increase, and betokens a degree of public confidence that might well inspire the congratulatory remarks that were made by the stockholders at the annual meeting. The new business of the Company is again far ahead of what it has ever previously been for a corresponding period of the year, and the prospects are, that much better results will be attained during the current year than ever before.

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular. The second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East. Toronto Canada.

A young man who has been jilted a half-dozen times is going around trying to organize a love insurance company.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

Fish are generally found in schools, and like all scholars, they are inclined to play hookey."

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes. Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 King Street West Toronto Canada.

"How did this man lose his hair, papa?" "Eating pie, my dear. He's pie bald."

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

Always prepared for death—The undertaker.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A. P. 328.

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

6 PER CENT. MONEY—INTEREST YEARLY —no commission; Mortgages purchased. R. H. TEMPLE, 23 Toronto Street.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont.

Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc., mailed free. Address M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS, Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100 —according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

LADIES Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

SEED GRAIN THAT yields over 100 bush. per acre. Catalogue free. JAS. BOYD, Cedar Grove, Ont.

THE ALBANY STEAM TRAP CO.'S

SAUSAGE CASINGS! NEW SHIPMENT from ENGLAND Ex-Steamship "Norwegian."

LOWEST PRICES TO THE TRADE. We are sole agents in Canada for McBRIDE'S CELEBRATED SHEEP CASINGS. Write for quotations. JAMES PARK & SON Toronto.

SPECIAL BUCKET RETURN TRAP.

The Celebrated Hancock Inspirator.
Gresham's Automatic Re-starting Injector.
Morrison's Automatic Sight Feed Lubricator.
Engineers' & Plumbers' Supplies of every description. Send for circulars.
JAMES MORRISON, 75 & 77 Adelaide St. W., TORONTO.

Bicycles!

SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines, From $15 Upwards. New Catalogue Ready 1st April A. T. LANE, MONTREAL.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Publisher.

MARKDALE, APRIL. 14, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES

—Dominion parliament opened yesterday. Wednesday.

—Great Britain has acc eded to Russia's demands, and a settlement of the Afghan boundary has been effected.

—A company has been formed (chiefly Americans) with a capital of $5,000,000 for the porpose of developing the iron mines on the Kingston and Pembroke Railway between Kingston and Renfrew.

—The new Dominion Parliament is composed of 65 Lawyers, 36 Merchants, 33 Farmers, 22 Doctors, 10 Lumber Merchants, 6 Journalists, 5 Manufacturers, 5 Traders, 4 Notaries, 4 Shipowners, 2 Civil Engineers, 2 Mill Owners, 2 Contractors, 1 Banker, and 8 Gentlemen.

—The new C. P. R. station at Montreal, to be built this summer, will have a frontage of 500 feet, and will be 90 feet wide and 500 feet long. The main tower will have a frontage of 90 feet on Windsor street and 75 feet on Donegana street, and the height from the sidewalk to the comb ing of the roof will be 204 feet. There will be six stories for offices in the tower,

Flesherton.

The vacancy in the public school, trusteeship caused by the removal and resignation of W. G. Pickell Esq., was filled on Saturday last by the election of George Swanton Esq., to that honorable position, the choice was a good one, Mr. Swanton takes a deep interest in educational matters, his daughter now in attendance is the farthest advanced pupil in the Flesherton public school.

Our town presented quite a Sunday like appearance all day good Friday, business suspended, every thing and every body quiet and orderley.

Religious services were conducted in the Methodist Church at eleven a, m.

Monday last fair day here was fairly well patronized but few cattle changed hands.

A horse trade or two took place when both parties got the best of the bargain. Geo. Glassford sale of new furniture passed off very well.

This Morning (Tuesday) two deaths have been reported to us not far from our village from inflamation of the lungs, the first being Mr. J. Hazard a stout young man 23 years of age after only a few days illness.

The second Mr. Geo. Caldbeck over 60 year of ege one of the pioneers here after a brief illness passed peacefully away to his reward

Hannah's Hotel Flesherton Station was the scene of an ugly quarrel on Wednesday last between Alex. Hannah proprietor and Jas. Carson of Eugenia. It is said both men were drunk and in the struggle cut each other about the head and face in a shameful manner, Carson received severe punishment in the face.

There are many reports current about this quarrel, so far as we can gather we understand Carson went to Hannah's Hotel on Tuesday evening, had tea then and remained all night, during which time both he and Hannah got under the influence of liquor. After breakfast Wednesday morning Carson left the Hotel but during the forenoon returned again when both men became quarrelsome and Hannah received some cuts in the face.

About 3 o'clock in the afternoon they got into a quarrel again when Hannah (it is said with a screw driver) bruising Carsons face in a shocking manner. Carson was afterwards driven to Flesherton when Dr. Christoe dressed his wounds, and he was removed to his home in Eugenia. A warrant was issued for Hannah's arrest and constable Pearce arrived from Owen Sound the next morning, Hannah was then not to be found but on Saturday morning went to Owen Sound and delivered himself to the proper authorities; he was allowed to return to his home by the first train.

Mr. Thos. Bates of Sault St. Marie is at present visiting with his mother in this place.

E. K. Richardson Esq., is also home from High School spending the week with his parents.

Dr. Christoe and Aaron Munshaw will have recourse to the law courts for assistance in settling a little difference re. goods. House sold by the former a few days ago.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

Thornbury becomes a town on the 2nd of May, and the nomination of the new council will take place that day.

The Hanover Post and Flesherton Advance has been exchanging courtesies recently—over the left.

John Robinson of Dundalk has secured a position on the Toronto Police force.

A petition is being largely signed in Dufferin County for the repeal of the Scott Act.

A deputation from Dufferin County waited on the Attorney-General last week urging the removal of Police Magistrate Munro of Orangeville from office.

Mr. Edward Stone, of Artemesia, is going to British Columbia, to locate near New Westminster.

WHERE THE DANGER LIES.—The chief danger from taking cold is its liability to locate upon some internal organ, as the lungs, the pleura, the bronchical passages, etc. Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam loosens and breaks up the cold allays irritation and often prevents or cures pulmonary complaints.

Capt. and Mrs. Collins, of Collingwood celebrated their golden wedding last week.

A PROFITABLY LIFE.—Few men have accomplished the same amount of work and good in this world as the celebrated Dr. Chase. Over 500,000 of his works have been sold in Canada alone. We want every person troubled with Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Headache, Kidney or Uninary Troubles, to buy a bottle of Dr. Chases Liver Cure, it will cure you. Medicine and Receipe Book $1.

B. B. B. A SENSE OF DUTY. B. B. B

"I should not think it right did I not give my testimony of what B. B. B. has done for me. I was troubled with biliousness. I took one bottle—It gave immediate relief. I can recommend it as a sure cure for biliousness." Minnie Smith, Orillia, Ont.

CLIPPINGS.

Mr. W. G. Pickell, and family have removed to Markdale. Mr. Pickell and his esteemed family will be very much missed by the people of this place. Especially will he be missed in the Church and Sabbath School, in both of which spheres he has for many years been an active and faithful worker.—[Advance.

MAIL CONTRACT.—The contract for carrying the mail between Durham and Chatsworth has been awarded to Norman McIntyre. If Durham has to have stage service it should be good and Norman has every facility for running it creditably. The Walkerton and Priceville stages are simply reminders of the past.—[Chronicle.

SILL LIVING.—Nineteen days ago last Monday, Mr. Bell, of Bell's Corners, Proton, was in Dundalk and on his way home his team ran away. They got unhitched from the sleigh and disappeared at a rapid rate. Since that time search has been made for them in all directions and they were found on Monday in one of the Proton swamps. The night they escaped considerable snow fell, thus covering their tracks. When found they were still living and likely to get around all right. Seven or eight feet of the lines were frozen hard to the ground and the bits being in their mouths they were unable to get loose. They had eaten the bark and small limbs off all the trees within their reach, and were in an emaciated condition. They were nineteen days without food.—[Shelburne Free Press.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh; 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333-83

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known Ask your druggists about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in the United States and Canada.

THE LATEST!

New Carpets —AT— McFarland's.

New Lace Curtains —AT— McFarland's.

New Tweeds —AT— McFarland's.

New Boots & Shoes —AT— McFarland's.

New Ties & Hats —AT— McFarland's.

NEW JUBILEE HANDKERCHIEF —AT— McFarland's.

New Black & Colored Silks at McFarland's.

My European buyer advises large purchases in New Dress Goods, Muslins, Gloves, Laces, Silks, Parisols, Plushes, &c., &c. Which will exceed all former efforts in style price or quality.

TEA! TEA! TEA!

Two extensive Shipments of pure Japan Tea's received direct from Japan over the C. P. Railway, via British Columbia. Is it not to your interest to purchase your Tea from Headquarters rather than through Peddlers who get their supplies from 3rd class Houses in Toronto or elsewhere, and charge an exhorbitant price to cover expenses in travelling around from house to house. Save your money and come direct to McFarland's the largest Tea Dealer in Grey County.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE GARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY, Proprietor.

Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business, and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine, which will lift the stone carry it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited

R. McNALLY.

MARKDALE SAsH and DOOR FACTORY

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,

MARKDALE

The Law Concerning News papers.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed in his name, or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted in the place where the paper is published, although the subscriber may reside hundreds of miles away.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post-office or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Subscribe now for the STANDARD, there is good times acoming.

Unparalleled Offer.

No. 1.—The Markdale Standard.....
No. 2.—The American Agriculturist (English or German), 1887.....
No. 3.—The A. A. New Poultry Book, for everybody. 256 pages. 100 Illustrations. Most complete work ever published.....
No. 4.—Engravings. "Home of our Farmer Presidents," 11x18, issued during 1886. Each worth.....
No. 5.—The same issued during 1886, forwarded post-paid, in a tube prepared for the purpose. Each worth.....
No. 6.—Articles describing the Engravings of the "Home of our Farmer Presidents," written expressly for this purpose by James Parton, Donald G. Mitchell (Ik Marvel,) printed on tinted paper.

Companion Portraits.

No. 7.—A magnificent portrait of General Grant from his last sitting. Grand Cabinet size, 18 by 24 inches, and engraved at large expense, especially for subscribers to this combination, and supplied to no other persons. Price.
No. 8.—A superb steel plate engraving of General Logan, 12 by 16 inches in size, from a photograph by Brady elegantly mounted on heavy, highly finished paper suitable for framing or for the centre table. Price.
No. 9.—A magnificent portrait of Henry Ward Beecher. Full cabinet size, engraved expressly for the subscribers of this combination by the new process direct from a negative taken by Falk, after Mr. Beecher's recent return from Europe.

Total.....

We will furnish all the above post-paid for.....
Send six cents to 751 Broadway, New York, and we will mail you specimen copy of the American Agriculturist, English or German, specimen pages of the engravings, and specimen pages of the Book.

...URE FOR ...
...procure from your ... Dragyard's Yellow ... according to direction... of ...stlake, Ainslie, Cape Breton, was ...ed by this remedy after all other ...atment had failed. It may be taken ...ernally for coughs, colds, sore throats ..., etc,

...the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR,—In your last issue "Doceo" undertakes to give his opinion why those protests against the "Scripture Readings" are taking place. also to give his suppositions why certain passages are left out, and lastly to state that no Protestant should use, permit or justify the use of the "Scripture Readings."

I do not write for the purpose of crossing swords, with "Doceo" for there is no use arguing with a man who finds fault with a book of selections because some parts of the text have been omitted, but there are some persons in this neighborhood who really do not know why and how the "Scripture Readings" were selected and put in our Public Schools.

Previous to 1885 the Bible was read in 55 per cent of our Schools, the various denominations were not satisfied with this, so representatives from the Anglican, Methodist and Presbyterian Churches waited on the Attorney General with their resolutions for obligatory reading of passages of Scripture. The Provincial Association of Teachers also recommended that the Minister of Education make selections of Scripture for daily exercise; complying with their wishes the Hon. M. Ross engaged Mr. W. H. C. Kerr to compile selections and submitted the proofs for revision to a committee composed of leading divines of the various churches, they appointed a sub-committee consisting of Archdeacon Boddy, Rev. Provost Body, Rev. Dr. Burton, Rev. Dr. Dewart, Rev. Dr. Laing, Rev. H. D. Powis, Rev. Dr. Sutherland, after this they were also sent by the compiler to Arch Bishop Lynch, who could find no fault but changing "which" to "who" in Lord's Prayer.

The "Readings" were then distributed gratis to the School Trustees and Teachers.

Was this secretly?

Commenting on the Readings the Toronto "Mail" Dec. 24th, 1884, states "The Minister of Education is to be congratulated upon having adopted for use in common schools a series of readings from the Old and New Testaments, the extracts adopted in this compilation are such as Christians of every denomination, have ever agreed to accept as the plain word of God. Mr. Kerr has done his work out of love and done it well, avoiding not only those parts upon which the sects split, but also those upon which it would be easy to start a raging controversy."

"Doceo" objects to some parts left out and quoted a verse; Does he know that the same verse is in the Douai Bible? What advantage is it then to Roman Catholics? Does the church of England dishonor the Bible when it leaves out in its readings or lessons the 38th Chap. Genises or the first eight Chapters and most of the 9th Leviticus also 17th and 18th; also first 5 Chapters Numbers, why none of 22nd Chap. Deuteronomy a little of 23rd and not a word of the 25th, why do they leave out in reading in public 17th, 18th, 19th, 20th and 21st Judges, why is Ezekiel cut and carved, why is 26rd Chap. not read. why is Hosea cut up?

Was the Bible dishonored in olden times when a family considered themselves rich if they had a copy of one of the Gospels or Epistles? Do the International S. S. Lessons dishonour the Bible, are the Bible truths given in the, Readings any less the word of God?

Why are the Readings in such prominence to-day? because they were used as a party-cry to stir up the sects and races at the late Elections, trying to make this free Canada of ours a little Ireland.

"Doceo" should be generous and call the look at least by its right name he will find the 13th Chap. Corinthians is all there I may also state the compiler and revisers of the Scripture Readings think themselves as good staunch Protestants as "Doceo" and his ilk.

Trusting you will excuse me for this rather long letter.

T. L. M.

REMARKABLE.—There have been many remarkable cure of deafness reported from the use of Yellow Oil. The proprietors of this medicine have a large number of such testimonials. It is the great household remedy for pain, inflammation, lameness, and soreness of every description, and can be used internally and externally.

Weather variable.

Snow nearly all gone.

Miss Ella Kerr is home for Easter Holidays.

Mr. R. Coutt's little girl had her arm broken above the elbow by falling off a chair.

Mrs. W. J. Wright has been ill with inflammation but is recovering.

B. B. B.—IN WORKING ORDER.

"My husband was troubled with dyspepsia for more than four years. Two experienced physicians did him no good. We got discouraged, until we read of Burdock Blood Bitters; he took only two bottles and now he is as well as ever, and doing heavy work all the time." Mrs. Richard Rowe, Harley Ont., B. B. B. has cured the worst cases of chronic dyspepsia.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL, INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHARTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller.
MARKDALE.

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS.

NOTICE is hereby given that the next examination in the County of Grey for Entrance to Collegiate Institutes and, High Schools will be held on the

4th, 5th, and 6th days of July '87

at Owen Sound, Meaford, Durham and Markdale respectively, commencing on the 4th, at 1:30 p. m.

The examination papers in literature will be set from the following lessons in the authorized reader:—1. The Vision of Mirza 2. The Death of Little Nell. 3. The Bell of Atri. 4. Dora. 5. The Changeling. 6. The Two Breaths. 7. A Forced Recruit at Solferino. 8. National Morality.

The Drawing Book will be No. 4 or No. 5 of the Drawing Course for Public Schools.

The History required will be "Outlines of English History," the outlines of Canadian history generally, with particular attention to the events subsequent to 1841, the municipal institutions of Ontario, and the Federal form of the Dominion Government.

THOMAS GORDON,
Inspector.

Owen Sound, 6th April, 1887. 345

AUCTION SALE

—OF VALUABLE—

FARM PROPORTY.

Under and by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Registered Mortgage, which will be produced at time of Sale, and upon which default in payment has been made, there will be offered for sale by Public Auction, at the Markdale House, in the Village of Markdale, in the county of Grey, on

Thursday, April 28th,

A. D. 1887, at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon the following valuable land and premises, viz:

Lot No. forty in the fourteenth concession of the Township of Artemesia, containing one hunderd and ten acres more or less.

This is a valuable farm property. On the premises are said to be erected a good dwelling, barn and farm buildings.

TERMS:—Ten per cent to be paid down at time of sale; for balance, terms liberal, and will be made known at the Sale. For further particulars apply to

JOHN LEYS,
Solicitor Toronto.

Stock Taking SALE

At the Toronto House,

Markdale.

SLAUGHTER PRICES FOR CASH.

Wm. Brown.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

It Cures

CATARRH, Cold in Head, HAY FEVER.

STOPS Droppings from Nasal passages into the throat and excessive expectoration caused by Catarrh. Sent pre-paid on receipt of price, 50c. and $1. Address

EASY TO USE.

FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confidence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart:—Late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

THE GROUP OF REFORM LEADERS

JUST ISSUED BY

GRIP

Is attracting a great deal of attention and is selling well. It is a finely executed lithographed sheet size 18 x 24 inches; suitable for framing; showing portraits of Hon. E. Blake, Hon. O. Mowat and other Leaders of the Liberal Party. We have also Conservative Leaders.

A companion group, same size as the above, showing Sir. John Macdonald and other leaders of Conservative party.

Mailed to any address on receipt of 25c. each.

A copy of either group is sent free to every one paying $2 for Grip for one year in advance.

LAST WEEK'S GRIP

Has a double page Cartoon, "A Phrenological Chart of the Head of the Country," It is, without doubt, one of the best that has ever appeared in Grip.

☞ $2 a year, $1 for six months, 5c. a copy. Address.

The Grip Printing and Publishing Co.,
TORONTO, ONT.

SEEDS

Seeds!

SEEDS!

FIELD & GARDEN

SEEDS!

—AT—

Stephen's

DRUG STORE.

Your's Respectfully,

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have re-moved to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

HAMPDEN

WATCHES

DURABLE--RELIABLE.

—ALSO—

Waltham, Elgin and Colombiers,

—IN STOCK—

American Clocks, Silverware, Wedding Rings.

☞ Watch repairing and fitting Spectacles a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,
A RELIABLE JEWELLER,
MARKDALE

OWEN SOUND MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,

MANUFACTURER OF

MARBLE AND GRAITE

MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,

Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED

3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,

MARKDALE,

FUNERAL FURNISHINGS

supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse

for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—

FURNITURE

In Stock at bottom prices.

PICTURE FRAMING

Done on short notice.

ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 13, CON., 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation, well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY,
Berkley.

31-t

WM. BREADNER.

Carpender and Builder

GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

Partnership Notice.

DR'S SPROULE & BRODIE, have entered into a partnership for the practice of their profession. Dr. Sproule will be found at his old office Turner's Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his office Mathew's new block. 333-46

AUCTION SALE

—OF—

VALUABLE FARM PROPERTY,

In the Township of Glenelg, in the County of Grey, there will be sold on Wednesday,

20th day of April, 1887,

at 1 o'clock in the afternoon at the Markdale House, in the village of Markdale, by virtue of Powers of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage, which will be produced at the Sale. the following property. Under Mortgage from Angus Leitch. lot 8 in the 12 concession of the Township of Glenelg. in the County of Grey. containing 100 acres more or less.

The following improvements are said to be on the premises: About 50 acres cleared, having erected thereon log house, log barn, and log stable.

TERMS:—15 per cent of the purchase money to be paid down at day of sale. For balance terms will be made known at time of sale.

For further particulars apply to

JONES BROS. & MACKENZIE.

Solicitors, Toronto Street, Toronto.

Or to JOHN LYONS, Esq., Markdale.

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for fur her particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
Holland Centre P

338-81

A Bouquet of Violets.

BY NORA LAUGHER.

"I am truly sorry, Oliver, for I had quite set my heart upon you marrying Madeline; but I suppose it cannot be helped, lad. Young people should please themselves. I only hope you have chosen wisely, and that Miss St. Hilda will make you a good wife."

"I have not yet asked her to marry me, father, for I want you to see her first. I hate to displease you by marrying against your wish; but I assure you that when once you have seen Aimee St. Hilda you will love her almost as much as I do. I really am sorry, dad, that I cannot marry Madeline, the fact is we have been so much together we are more like brother and sister."

"Well, my boy, it shall never be said that Harold Ingoldsby stood in the way of his only son's happiness; whoever you marry shall have your old father's love."

"And I, in return, will never vex you by marrying a girl you dislike. But I am sure when once you have seen Miss St. Hilda all your doubts will vanish. She is a sweet, true girl, nothing vain and coquettish about her. She will make a loving daughter to you and a kind friend to Maddie. I am going to drive her to Rosedale to-morrow to call upon her aunt, Mrs. Barton, could we not call at the bank too? I am anxious for you to see her. You have only to see her to love her dearly."

"Well, well, Oliver, as you wish; bring Miss Aimee. I trust for your sake I shall like her."

The old gentleman turned aside his head to hide the look of sorrow revealed on his benevolent face as the thought of Madeline Vernon, the little adopted daughter he had hoped to see his son's bride.

The Ingoldsbys, father and son, wealthy Toronto bankers, were walking briskly—for it was a cold March morning—from the bank on Wellington street to the Union Station. The elder to take the cars to London.

As they neared the corner of Bay street, Oliver Ingoldsby bethought himself of a particular message he had forgotten to bid the head clerk despatch to Montreal. Grasping his father's hand affectionately, and bidding him a hasty good morning, he hurried back to the bank.

The old gentleman looked proudly after the tall, manly form of his son, and gave another deep sigh as he again thought of Madeline—the little Scottish child, whom his beloved wife had adopted the year before her death fifteen years ago—now a lovely, dark-haired, brown-eyed lassie of eighteen summers, the pride of his heart and sunshine of his home.

After procuring his ticket for London, Mr. Ingoldsby took a seat in the cars. Shaking the light snowflakes from his coat, and turning down the high beaver collar, he drew from his capacious pocket the Morning Globe, and with his gold-rimmed spectacles on his nose, proceeded to read the latest suggestions made by the aldermen in reference to the Queen's jubilee.

Somewhat interested in what he was perusing, he did not, at first, notice the approach of a tall, stylishly dressed girl, who took her seat directly in front of him. She was accompanied by two other young ladies evidently come to start her upon her journey.

In all probability Mr. Ingoldsby would never have given these three young ladies a thought had not their loud and unceasing chatter disturbed him. He was preparing to betake himself away from their noise to a seat at the other end of the car where he could read in peace when the name Aimee St. Hilda arrested him.

"Aimee St. Hilda," said one of the young ladies, "you are just the very luckiest girl in the city of Toronto! Why, I'd give one of my ears, and new diamond earring into the bargain, to be engaged to such a real handsome fellow as Oliver Ingoldsby."

"Handsome indeed!" replied Miss St. Hilda, with a shrug of her sloping shoulders." I don't call him at all handsome. He's dark and I detest dark men. He is not half as good looking as Bernard Lascelles. You know whom I mean, girls; that adorable blonde fellow I told you I met at the Montreal Carnival and who has corresponded with me ever since. You see, my dears, Oliver has money and that's what I am going to marry. Bernard is just lovely, but alas! he is so poor he could not afford to keep me in gloves and I don't believe in love in a cottage."

"But are you really engaged to Mr. Ingoldsby?" asked the third, a quieter looking girl who had scarcely spoken before.

"Well, really, Alice," said Miss Aimee, testily, "since you wish facts I will give them to you. He has not asked me to marry him yet; but you bet it won't be long first. I've regularly hooked him, he's just dead in love with me. He said one day that he would never marry against his father's wish; but that he knew he would love me dearly. I have never seen the old gentleman. Both he and Oliver are dead set against flirting, so I guess I had better take care what I am about for a time."

"O, my, yes, Aimee! I guess you'll have to behave a little differently until you have quite hooked him. We must be off. Come Alice, hurry up, dear. By-by, Aimee, ma chere, we'll meet the cars you return by to-night," and the two girls hastened on to the platform.

"What a blessing that I have overheard this conversation," thought Mr. Ingoldsby. "I trust I shall save Oliver now from his blind infatuation. But perhaps slang is the worst feature of the case, the girl may have some redeeming points. Why not try to make her acquaintance now, and give her a fair trial for Oliver's sake?"

Mr. Ingoldsby's kind heart was heavy as he again thought of his modest little rose-bud, Madeline, whom he knew loved his son so truly.

"Ah! how will the blow strike her? Poor, poor little Maddie! And yet, for the lad's sake, I must be just."

He gave a groan of horror as he tried to think how he should best proceed.

At last, nerving himself to the trying ordeal, he let his paper fall from before his face.

Immediately in front of him sat Miss Aimee St. Hilda, a remarkably handsome girl, enveloped in a long seal sacque. A heavy fringe of hair, profusely bleached and banged, reated upon her white forehead and surrounded a jaunty little seal jockey cap, ornamented with humming birds.

"Humph!" thought the old gentleman, "she would be very pretty if she had not such a bold look and if she would wash the paint off her cheeks. Upon my word, girls had more sense when I was young."

Miss St. Hilda lowered her bright, dark eyes to the depths of her dainty little humming-bird ornamented coal scuttle, coquettishly raising them the next instant to find herself—as she thought—still observed admiringly.

This went on for some seconds. Miss St. Hilda, by that time coming to the conclusion that she had decidedly made a "mash," unfastened from her brooch-pin a bouquet of violets which she audaciously pressed to her lips with a sly side glance at her elderly admirer.

Then Mr. Ingoldsby blushed—yes! positively blushed—at what he contemplated doing.

Taking from his pocket a large, white cambric handkerchief, which he flourished across his face, he marched boldly to the next seat and sat down by the side of its fair occupant.

Soon they were, to all appearances, upon the best of terms, and by-and-by the bouquet of violets adorned the elderly gentleman's coat.

"Thank goodness she's gone!" breathed the old banker, as he, after handing his new acquaintance out of the cars at Hamilton, waved his handkerchief slightly in answer to some kisses thrown by the small gloved hand. "I suppose if I had been ten years older, and not a hair upon my head, or a tooth left in my ancient jaws, it would have been all one to Miss Aimee. Mashing and flirting seem daily food to some women, though, thank God, I think I can now save my boy from marrying such a one."

Late that evening upon his return from London, the good old gentleman's blushes almost dyed his white whiskers, when, seated by the cheerful fire in the cosy drawing-room of his home, at the crescent, he related to Oliver his morning adventure and showed him the bunch of violets which still adorned his coat.

Oliver laughed immoderately at the old banker's comical account for, of course, he had not heard the lady's name, and indeed did not suppose that his father knew it.

The following afternoon as Mr. Ingoldsby sat in his private office at the bank on Wellington street, awaiting the arrival of his son and Miss St. Hilda, he took from a glass of water on his desk the bouquet of violets and carefully placed them in his coat. No sooner had he done so than Oliver Ingoldsby entered "Father, this is Miss St. Hilda whom I have so often spoken of. I trust you will welcome her.—Why, Aimee, what is the matter?"

Miss St. Hilda's face—as much of it as was untouched by art—grew very white as she recognized Mr. Ingoldsby, and as he replied, "Oliver, this cannot be the sweet, true, womanly girl whom you spoke about to me, for this—this is the identical young lady I met on the cars, who gave me this bunch of flowers, after slangily talking of the rich young man, whom she did not love, but had "hooked" and intended to marry. Although I did not tell you before, his name, she said, was Oliver Ingoldsby."

. . . . . .

Well, Oliver is to marry Madeline in the fall, and I can safely assert that they will be one of the happiest and most devoted couples in Toronto.

Miss Aimee St. Hilda will never forget or forgive her elderly admirer, to whom, during their interesting flirtation, she presented with a bouquet of violets that March morning on the cars.

An Oculist's Test.

In a large factory in which were employed several hundred persons, one of the workmen, in wielding his hammer, carelessly allowed it, relates the Pottery Gazette, to slip from his hand. It flew half-way across the room, and struck a fellow-workman in the left eye. The man averred that his eye was blinded by the blow, although a careful examination failed to reveal any injury, there being not a scratch visible. He brought a suit in the courts for compensation for the loss of half of his eyesight, and refused all offers of compromise. Under the law the owner of the factory was responsible for any injury resulting from an accident of this kind, and, although he believed that the man was shamming and that the whole case was an attempt at swindling, he had about made up mind that he would be compelled to pay the claim. The day of the trial arrived, and in open court an eminent oculist retained by the defence examined the alleged injured member, and gave it as his opinion that it was as good as the right eye. Upon the plaintiff's loud protest of his inability to see with his left eye, the oculist proved him a perjurer, and satisfied the court and jury of the falsity of his claim. And how do you suppose he did it? Why, simply by knowing that the colours green and red combined made black. He prepared a black card on which a few words were written with green ink. Then the plainiff was ordered to put on a pair of spectacles with two different glasses, the one for the right eye being red and the one for the left eye consisting of ordinary glass. Then the card was handed him and he was ordered to read the writing on it. This he did without hesitation, and the cheat was at once exposed. The sound right eye, fitted with the red glass, was unable to distinguish the green writing on the black surface of the card, while the left eye, which he pretended was sightless, was the one with which the reading had to be done.

On the Double Quick.

He was a very sleek stranger, and he addressed old Farmer Hornypalm in the very smoothest of accents.

"Yes, sir, I'm selling this patent right, but only to the very best of men, and I can let you have it on the very easiest of terms."

"What air they?"

"Why, all you have to do is sign this paper, agreeing to pay us seventy-five per cent. of the price received for the machines—you reserve the remainder as commission.

"Do you see that gate?" queried the farmer, pointing to his yard gate.

"Oh, yes, sir!"

"Wal, I'm gwine in fer the ole muskit, but ef you kin make that gate agiust I git back to the door, you'll be purty well out o' range." He made it, and several seconds to spare.

Nothing Mean About Him.

Lawyer: I shall have to charge you fifty dollars for my services in the case.

Client: But the amount involved is only forty dollars.

Lawer: Well, make it forty, then. I'm always willing to do the fair thing.

GOSSIP ABOUT WOMEN.

In India there are four females to every three males.

In India there are four females to every 1,000,000 of women.

"A woman's union" has been organized in Denmark with a membership of 1,459 working women.

In the local elections recently in Massachusetts the women all turned out and worked against the saloons.

Ouida's largest pecuniary returns have resulted from her story "Under Two Flags." "Moths" is second in order.

Mrs. Parnell, the mother of the Irish leader, is said to have wrecked her fortune in Wall street speculation. Her inherited means were considerable.

A South Carolina woman has a record of seventeen children in nine years of married life. The first one was a solitary voyager, but the others came in pairs.

Ex-Empress Eugenie has applied to the city government of Naples for permission to enter the hospital as a nurse, and care for the soldiers wounded at Massowah.

Miss Alice Longfellow is one of the officers of the Society for the Collegiate Instruction of Women, and is often at the Harvard Annex building, where, they say, she is regarded by the students with a love almost amounting to reverence.

Mrs. Henry Wood's grave is in Highgate Cemetery, near those of George Eliot, Pareps Rosa, Frederic Maurice, George Vandenhoff, H. Crabb Robinson, Alaric A. Watts, Lord Lyndhurst and the father, mother and little daughter of Charles Dickens.

It may be interesting to know that the word "lady," which has been overworked of late years, is now tabooed by polite society, and "woman" is the proper parlance. "Gentlemen friends" is also boycotted. "Men that I know" has taken its place. This is sound sense.

According to the Moniteur de la Mode the Princess of Wales is the best-dressed woman in all Europe. She does not always dress in the latest style, and never looks like a fashion-plate. But she arranges her hair to suit her face; wears her bonnet to harmonize with the shape of her head, her dresses and mantles fit her to perfection, and altogether she is perfect.

The most celebrated attachments in history were all inspired by women in whom the vulgar would have found some defect, Cleopatra, Joanna of Naples, Diana of Poictiers, La Valliere, Mme. Pompadour—in short, most of the women whom love has rendered celebrated—were not without imperfections and infirmities, while most women whose beauty is described to us as perfect have been finally unhappy in their loves. This apparent caprice must have its cause. Perhaps men live by sentiment more than by pleasure; perhaps the charm, wholly physical, of a beautiful woman has its bounds; while the charm, essentially moral, of a woman of moderate beauty is infinite.

Faint Heart.

There are men who could walk up to a cannon's mouth with perfect composure, but who subside into speechless embarrassment in the society of a woman. Just why she proves so formidable, they would probably find it diffitult to state, but the fact remains. Doctor Haldane, a professor of Saint Andrew's University, was a most estimable man, possessed of a pleasing person and a handsome competency, but he was well advanced in life before he could make up his mind to marry. He would fain have had a wife, but was too bashful to seek one.

Finally, however, he fitted up his house afresh, and rumor reported that he was about to change his state. The popular voice was right, for, on a certain day, the good doctor was seen at the house of a lady for whom he had long been supposed to entertain a liking; he wore a new coat, and, in great agitation, was wiping his "weel-pouthered head" with a snowy handkerchief, when the door was opened.

As soon as he was shown in, and saw his hostess calmly knitting, his courage oozed out at the tips of his fingers, and he sat down upon the edge of his chair in such a state of confusion as to arouse the compassion of his friend.

"Weel, doctor," she said, endeavoring to put him at his ease, "hae ye got through a' your papering and painting yet?"

[A clearing of the throat, preparatory to speech, but not a word uttered.]

"I'm told your new carpets are just beautifu'."

[A further choking, and a vigorous effort to speak, terminating in miserable silence.]

"They say the pattern o' the dining-room chairs is something quite out o' the way. In short, that everything aboot the house is perfect."

Here was an opportunity too good to be overlooked. The doctor advanced his chair, raised his eyes furtively to her face, and said, with an inflection which no ear but one wilfully deaf could have misinterpreted, "Na, na, Miss Jean. It's no' quite perfect. It canna be that, as long as there's ae thing wanting."

"And what can that be?" asked the imperturbable spinster.

Utterly overwhelmed by her blindness to his meaning, the poor man beat a hasty retreat, caught up his hat, and in tones of blighted hope, gasped out his declaration, "Eh! dear! eh! Well, 'am sure! The thing wanting is a-a-a side-board!"

General Manager Manvel, of the St. Paul, Minneapolis and Manitoba Railway, says that the company will construct this year 580 miles from Minot, Dakota, to Great Falls, Montana, and 90 miles from Great Falls to Helena, Montana. To accomplish this great work track layers will work eight hours, working three gangs in the 24 hours, of 8 hours each. A powerful electric light will be used for construction by night, enabling the company to complete five miles per day, and finish the entire work by the 25th Nov. next. A telegram just received says track laying commenced on the extension to Battineau from Rugby Junction on main line on 6th April.

Butter making is rapidly being reduced to a science, and the farmer who wishes to produce an article which will command the highest market price must have the latest appliances for its manufacture. The "Victor" Churn, manufactured by the Hamilton Industrial Works, has proved itself one of the best inventions of the age for the manufacture of butter. Under ordinary circumstances it will produce butter in five minutes, giving a better quality and larger yield than any other churn. Information as to the price and merits of this churn can be had by applying to the manufacturers.

FOR SALE.—SEVERAL FIRST-CLASS IMPROVED FARMS for sale—in the County of [illegible] (called the garden of Canada)—convenient to [illegible]. C. C. RANEY, Lemington.

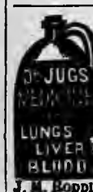
EASTER CARD PACKETS By Mail—PACKETS of one dozen beautifully assorted Easter or Birthday Cards, at 10c, 15c, 25c, 50c, 75c, and $1 each packet; also silk-fringed packets, 6 in a packet, at 50c, $1, and $2 per packet: cash to accompany order. A dozen packets of a kind, 20 per cent off. Matthews Bros. & Co., 93 Yonge St., Toronto.

THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD), OF LONDON, ENG. Capital, £200,000. Dominion Government Deposit, $56,000. Head Office: 72 King St. East, Toronto. Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts. A. T. McCORD, Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTUR'G CO.

CLOTHES WRINGERS, 10 kinds; MANGLES 3 kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS Co., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

CONQUEROR'S IMPROVED



CARRIAGE TOPS

Are famous for their style, convenience, durability, and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. All the leading Carriage Builders sell them. Factory: 407 King West, TORONTO.

FOR ONE CENT

FARMERS, who want to settle their family around them. Tenant Farmers, who want a home of their own. Mechanics, wanting big pay. Capitalists, wanting safe investments. Business Men, who want to strike a business boom. Ambitious Men, who want a home and start in life—send postal card with address to J. M. HUCKINS, 96 King Street West, Toronto.

JUGS MEDICINE LUNGS LIVER & BLOOD

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties. J. M. BODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto.

THERE IS NOTHING LIKE IT

SPANISH GLYCERINE AND OIL DRESSING

A BEAUTIFUL WATERPROOF. A PATENT LEATHER POLISH FOR BOOTS, SHOES & RUBBERS —SOLD EVERYWHERE—

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my Infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

SNOW DRIFT THE FAVOURITE

THERE IS NO BETTER! BAKING POWDER

The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co. Brantford, Ont.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Anti-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery. Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

R. SPENCE & CO. Consumers will find it to their advantage to ask the trade for our make of Files and Rasps. Re-Cutting a Specialty. Send for price list and terms. HAMILTON - ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships. Sailing during winter from Port and every Tuesday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly. For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO. MANUFACTURE ONLY FINEST Silver Plated Ware. Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish. HAMILTON, ONT.

SHARP'S BALSAM Croup Whooping Cough COUGHS & COLDS

SOLD ON ALL RAILWAY TRAINS. Wholesale through IRA CORNWALL & CO., 162 St. James Street, Montreal.

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

The National Electro Stereotype Co. 23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO. All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

J. L. JONES WOOD ENGRAVER 10 KING ST. EAST TORONTO

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N.

The Annual Meeting Takes Place on the 12th APRIL

When the Profit Results of the Third Quinquennium will be Announced.

SIR W. P. HOWLAND, C. B., K. C. M. G. ..... PRESIDENT.
HON. WM. McMASTER, WM. ELLIOTT, ESQ. ..... VICE-PRESIDENTS.
J. K. MACDONALD. ..... MANAGING DIRECTOR.

ONTARIO PUMP CO., (L'TD) TORONTO, ONT.,

Manufacturers of Wind Mills, Feed Grinders, Haying Tools, IRON and WOOD PUMPS, AND A FULL LINE OF Railway, Town, Farm, and Ornamental Water Supply Material.

Geared Windmills, for driving Machinery, Pumping Water, etc., from 1 to 40 horse power. Send for Descriptive Catalogue.

THE RELIEF OF MICHILIMACKINAC. 1814.

BY A. E. BULGER.

Shortly after war was declared by the United States of America against Great Britain in 1812, a small party of English soldiers, consisting of about 30 men of the 10th Royal Veteran Battalion, with a few hundred Canadian voyageurs and Indians, under the command of Captain Roberts, proceeded to attack the American post on the Island of Michilimackinac. Having surprised the garrisons, the Americans surrendered, and the fort was immediately taken possession of by Captain Roberts and his little band of soldiers. The loss of this post was considered by the Americans as a most unfortunate event, as it virtually gave to the British the control of that immense territory inhabited by the Western Indians —being along what was then the west frontier of the United States, from Sandusky, on Lake Erie, to the Mississippi river, termed the "Michigan, Illinois and Indiana countries," which has since been divided into five different States, viz, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa. The importance of Michilimackinac, as a military post, was not overrated. It's natural features, it's elevated position—being high inaccessible rock on every side except the west—pointed it out as a most important military possession—"a fortress, built by nature for herself," "the key of the Western country," the value of which both the contending powers were fully cognizant.

After Michilimackinac was taken by the British, only a small detachment of soldiers were left to guard it. The isolated position of this garrison, as the war continued, was particularly trying, there being no settled inhabitants on the Island, except a few Canadians engaged in the fur trade, and, with the exception of a visit from these men, or the chiefs of the various bands of Indians who frequented the Island, there seldom occurred anything to cheer, or enliven the monotonous and lonely hours which were passed by this garrison. But a time was at hand when their position was to be changed into one of intense excitement and alarm. Towards the latter end of 1813, an Indian runner arrived at the fort with intelligence that the Americans were making preparations to retake Michilimackinac, and a large force would be sent for that purpose as soon as practicable. On receiving this information, an express was immediately despatched to "Head Quarters," by the officer commanding at Michilimackinac, with an urgent appeal for relief to be sent to them; as they were not in a position either to stand a seige, or to successfully resist—without some reinforcement—the attack of the large force which, it was stated, would be sent against them. In the meantime, every effort was made by the garrison to strengthen the fort in case of an attack before assistance arrived. When this was done, that gallant little band of soldiers waited within that isolated post—hundreds of miles from where any immediate relief could reach them—the arrival of the enemy.

Before, however, the express from Michilimackinac could reach Kingston, the intentions of the Americans respecting that post were already known there; and so alarmed were the authorities of the safety of that place—the only stronghold which they had, at the time, on the Western Lakes—that an expedition was ordered to be fitted out with all possible speed, and despatched by the shortest route to its relief.

At Kingston, where the expedition for the relief of Michilimackinac was ordered to be fitted out, a great deal of speculation was indulged in, as to whom would be chosen to take part in this arduous undertaking. The nature of the service; the difficulties the troops would have to encounter, in the wild and desolate country through which they had to pass; (a new route of nearly six hundred miles having been chosen,) were fully discussed, and soon became a subject of general interest amongst the troops in the town. Nothing definite, however, could be ascertained in regard to the exact time the expedition was to leave Kingston. Active preparations were pushed on until the beginning of February, 1814, when, everything being them in readiness, a small party of workmen, including boat-builders, were sent on in advance.

Almost immediately after their departure the relieving party, consisting of ten officers and two hundred picked men, exclusive of twenty artillery men, with a Lieutenant and 20 men of the Royal Navy, left Kingston under the command of Lieut. Colonel Robert McDouall, of the Glengarry Light Infantry (formerly of the 8th or King's Regiment,) who had been especially selected by Sir George Provost for this important service. Beloved by his soldiers, a more gallant officer, a braver man, could not have been chosen to fill the duties of this arduous command.

The troops commenced their march in severe wintry weather, and, as they advanced they had to open the roads through the woods for the conveyance of supplies; and having proceeded upwards of two hundred and fifty miles into a wilderness, they halted in a magnificent forest of pine on the bank of the Nottawasaga river. Here they erected a temporary covering of huts; and with timber cut down and prepared on the spot, the men aided in the construction of twenty-nine large boats; four of which, were made to carry each a carronade. Having previously loaded the flotilla with stores and provisions, they embarked on the 22nd of April to descend the Nottawasaga river—the ice in the upper part of which being still firm, a channel had to be opened through it, to the extent of about 30 miles,—and on the night of the 24th they excamped on a most dismal spot upon the north-eastern shore of Lake Huron; and on the following morning (the 25th) commenced their perilous passage across that lake, covered as it was as far as the eye could reach by fields of floating ice.

Day after day and night after night the men toiled incessantly in opening a passage through the ice, and, notwithstanding the danger to which they themselves were exposed by the constant, and at times, terrific storms, accompanied by violent gales, which so agitated the immense body of floating ice that surrounded them everywhere—and which threatened ever moment to crush the boats to pieces—they nevertheless succeeded in working their way through it, with the loss of only one boat. For nineteen days it was nearly one continued struggle with the elements, during which time the dangers, hardships and privations to which the men were exposed, were sufficient to discourage the boldest amongst them, and at times threatened the total destruction of the flotilla.

The stormy and unfavorable weather, which had almost unceasingly [illegible] from the moment they commenced their [illegible] Lake Huron, having [illegible] pushed on with all possible speed, it being apprehended that the Americans might, from their more southern [illegible], arrive at Michilimackinac before them. It may therefore be imagined what the feelings of the soldiers were, when on arriving within sight of Michilimackinac on the morning of the 18th May, they beheld the flag of their beloved country still proudly flying over the fort which was built on the lofty heights of that lone and highly prized Island, for the preservation of which they had undergone so much suffering and hardship. To the men tired and worn out by the excessive toil and privations which they had endured working for their lives in the floating ice, through which they had effected a passage, a distance of nearly three hundred miles, the sight of Michilimackinac on this occasion was hailed with every expression of delight and thankfulness. Within its sheltering walls they expected to soon find a resting place to repose their weary limbs.

* * * * *

But to return to the little garrison at Michilimackinac. An anxious and trying time was passed by the soldiers during the winter of 1813-14. Everything had been done during that period to make their position as strong as possible. Two months had slowly passed since word had reached them that relief would be sent. But as yet there was no sign of it. Matters were in this state on the approach of spring. The ice in the lake had already commenced to break up, and float away. To make matters worse, information had just reached them that the Americans would leave early in April, so that they might now arrive at any moment. What an anxious and trying time was now passed. Day after day the soldiers were kept constantly on the lookout for the expected relief, but evening after evening closed again with the same disheartening intelligence. "No sign of it." All hope was now abandoned and fully prepared for the worst, that gallant little band determined to defend the fort to the last, and rather than let it fall again into the hands of the Americans,—on some of the guns of which were inscribed, "Taken at Saratoga," and on others, "taken from Lord Cornwall is," etc.,—they intended to spike the guns, and blow up the fort, and endeavour to make their escape to St. Joseph.

This was the exact position of affairs at Michilimackinac, when, on the evening of the 17th of May, the lookout party reported that the long expected relief was in sight. The news spread like wild fire throughout the fort, and very soon everyone turned out to gaze at the approaching boats; which could hardly be seen, and looked like so many dark objects in the distance far out on the Lake. Anxiously indeed was their advance watched by those in the fort until in the darkness of the night they were lost sight of. The 18th of May, 1814, was a red letter day in the history of Michilimackinac. At an early hour every one was up and anxiously awaiting the arrival of the reinforcement. A guard of honor, small though it was, marched down to the shore. From the fort the near approach of the boats was watched with indescribable interest, and when Lieut.-Colonel McDouall landed on the Island, the cannon on the heights pealed forth a salute in honor of his safe arrival, and the gallant men who accompanied him, the echo of each gun breaking in upon the awful stillness of the surrounding neighbourhood with startling effect.

MONTREAL, Que.

The Cowardice of Animals.

Not long since the writer saw a dealer in live animals open a box containing an anaconda, take the reptile by the throat, and calmly examine its mouth, opened though it was in rage, to look for cancerous tumors. Then from adjoining shelves he took python after python, each about ten feet long, and examined them in like manner. Only last week at the place of another dealer a big, powerful Syrian bear, a type known for its ferocity, was subdued without the firing of a shot. The bear broke through iron bars half an inch thick, and, standing up with his back against a cage of monkeys, thrust his terrible paw threateningly toward three keepers gathered about him. He didn't have a chance to use them, however, for he was belabored with clubs until glad to get back again into his cage.

On a pedestal near the gate of the Cincinnati zoological gardens there recently stood the stuffed figure of a donkey which, when alive, stood the attack of a lion and beat him off. The lion, it seems, had broken out of his cage and escaped to a wood near by. On a grassy hillock adjoining a donkey lay stretched in placid slumber—a slumber that was rudely disturbed by the lion, who, in a few bounds was upon him. When the donkey felt the great mass of flesh descend upon him as if from the clouds, he was stunned and indignant, but not frightened, perhaps because he had never read any of the wonderful stories about the lion. He quickly recovered from the blow, and, rising, shot out both hind feet at the same time and caught the lion squarely in the forehead. Badly hurt, the lion skulked off and later the donkey died of the wound he received at the onset.

Lonely.

In these days of railroads and telegraphs it seems impossible that any civilized people can be cut off from newspapers and post-offices. But the little island of Kilda, north of Scotland, has a regular communication with the mainland only once a year. The agent of the owner visits the island once a year to collect rents, and carries with him a package of letters and newspapers.

There are now only six families on the island, composed of seventy-three persons, and the number is gradually diminishing. Their fare is made up of barley bread, eggs, and sea-birds. Fish abound in the waters, but the islanders do not like them as food, and catch them only for sale.

They weave rough clothing and blankets, and sell them to pay rent. In the summer they cultivate gardens, collect birds and eggs for winter stores, and fish for trade. But these poor people, while fighting a hard battle for life, are contented with their lot. Crime and intemperance are unknown among them, and courts are never held. All the adults are members of the Church of Scotland, and know a large part of the Bible by heart. A minister resides among them, and holds regular services on Sunday, and during the week. This little world is in strange contrast to the busy life of the nineteenth century.

[illegible]

BY [illegible]

This [illegible] custom of offering eggs at the Easter festivals is shrouded in mystery. But to all Christians these emblems are peculiarly suggestive, while the Romans, whose year began at this season, gave them as New Year's gifts; the Jews placed eggs on their Passover table, and the Druids frequently used them in their mysterious ceremonies.

The ancient Finns believed that the world itself was developed from an egg, which a mystic bird laid on the lap of a mythical god, who attempted to hatch it in his bosom. Accidentally, however, he let it fall into the water; when it was broken, the lower portion of the shell became the earth, the upper part the sky, the liquid white being transformed into the sun and the yelk into the moon, while the small fragments of scattered shell were changed into bright and glittering stars.

A Russian meets his friends on Easter morning with the greeting, "Christ is risen," and presents an egg, while, strange to say, a Mohommedan does very much the same thing.

In the earlier days of the fourth century, the Easter eggs were artificially colored, though at that time they were not allowed to be eaten during Lent. As this was the season of year, however, when eggs were most plentiful, they were stained with a variety of gaudy colors and given to the children as a means of amusement.

The royal roll of the time of Edward I. records the purchase of four hundred eggs, which were boiled, stained, or covered with gold-leaf, and, after being consecrated, were distributed to the royal household on Easter morning.

A beautiful bit of historic romance is given us by a French writer in connection with what is known as the marriage aux œufs, between the lovely and fascinating Marguerite, of Austria, and Philbert the Handsome, Duke of Savoy. In the early springtime, when the fields were changing their white, wintry dress for the gorgeous habiliments of green, and when the trees of the forests were arraying themselves in their leafy covering, the royal lady had made a pilgrimage into the charming district of Bresse, lying on the western slope of the Alps. Here she set up her small but hospitable court at the castle of Brou. Surrounding the castle was a celebrated hunting ground in which, shortly afterwards, the handsome Philbert went shooting. Hearing that the fair princess was at the castle, he repaired thither to pay her homage.

It was Easter Monday, and a village festival was in progress; high and low, rich and poor, meeting to dance upon the green. A hundred eggs were scattered on a level space covered with sand, and a peasant lad and lass, holding each other by the hand, came forward to execute a pretty dance of the country, for, according to a very ancient custom of Bresse, if they succeeded in going through the dance without breaking an egg, they were considered affianced, and not even the parents dare forbid the union. Three couple had successfully accomplished the feat and retired amid the hearty plaudits and hearty "well-wishes" of the spectators, when Philbert, of Savoy, radiant with youth and happiness, appeared on the scene and bowed before the high-born Chatelaine, beseeching her hospitality. Doubtless it was quickly granted, and later, as the games proceeded, the Duke proposed to his young hostess to essay with him the merry dance of the eggs. "How beautiful they looked," exclaims the old writer, "as they stepped forward, hand in hand," while the crowd shouted, "Savoy and Austria! Savoy and Austria!"

In the ancient church the celebration of Easter lasted eight days. After the eleventh century the time was limited to three days, and in later times, generally two days. It was formerly the favorite time for performing the rite of baptism. The courts of justice were closed, alms were dispensed to the poor and needy, slaves were released from bondage, and the rigidities of Lent being passed the people gave themselves up wholly to enjoyment, hence the day was called the "Sunday of joy."

To the Christians of to-day Easter means the glorious consummation of the most stupendous event in the history of the world, the triumph of Christ over the last enemy—death. Joy at the rising of the natural sun, and at the awakening of nature from the death of winter becomes joy at the rising of the Sun of Righteousness.

A Lesson in Lion Taming.

Those of our readers who expect to make lion taming a profession will read this item with interest and will doubtless profit by the hint which it gives:

A German tamer of wild beasts always entered the cage dressed in a gaudy Hungarian costume, with large top boots. The moment he appeared the lions fled back with terror and cowered down in a corner, whence they were with difficulty dislodged. It was evident that the very sight of him inspired them with terror. How was it done? His plan has at least the merit of being original. He obtained a lay figure which he dressed up in the attractive costume he was in the habit of wearing. The very features were closely imitated, so were the proportions and build of the man. The disguise was so perfect that even human beings might have mistaken the make-up for the original. The figure was introduced into the cage and made to stand upright at first, but after awhile it was knocked over, when with a bound the lions rushed with open jaws on their prey. Suddenly they began to howl for pain and withdrew to a corner with bleeding mouths and tongues. The manikin was covered all over with sharp iron spikes, concealed under the brilliant uniform! Twice the tamer tried the experiment; the lions did not move the second time. He then commenced his course of training, attired in a costume similar to that of the wooden figure, though he had never entered a cage before.

Fogg—"I've been writing something here, but I don't know whether to publish it or not. What do you think of it?" Brown (after looking over a few pages)—"To be frank with you, I don't believe anybody but a fool would buy such a book; certainly no body but a fool would ever read it." Fogg—"Thank you; I'll publish it. The man who writes only for wise men is a fool; he who writes for fools is a wise man. He has a hundred readers to the other's one."

Patience!

BY [illegible]

[illegible] giant in [illegible] strength
[illegible]
[illegible]
Patience—strive hard! Step by step we go
Till truth at last the haven of our hopes!
Drop by drop—then hidden springs o'erflow
And rush in torrents down the mountain slopes!
One by one our moments swiftly fly
To form the deathless history of the past!
Then patiently pursue thy purpose high
While genius, hope, and emulation last.
Patience is true greatness!—e'en though defeat
Seem imminent, yet patience still is sweet!

God's Measure.

BY L. A. MORRISON.

"And God saw everything that he had made, and behold it was good."—Gen I, 31.

"Very good," is the measure at last:
With Creation's labor ended,
The nights and days of uprearing past,
When the "finished work" sublime and vast Shines out in the beauty and smile of God,
The shadows all are blended
With the glorious light of a perfect morn,
When from God's conception a World was born.

"Very good." 'Tis the measure of love:
Who saw its sublime fruition:
The glad new Earth, and the Heaven above;
The sweet-voiced lark, and the cooing dove;
The infinite life in the air and sea,
Their wondrous, God-sent mission:
And the crowning glory of all the rest,
Man, "After His Likeness" supreme and blest.

"Very good:" 'tis the measure again:
Though Sin with its dark defiling
Had bondaged to Death, the race of men
With a bitter hate, beyond human ken;
And Earth seem'd receding away to the night,
Out of the light and the smiling
Then Jesus a Ransom for sin was made,
And "Finished Redemption" by Love displayed.

"Very good:" 'tis the measure of life,
Each mortal life before Him
He knows the toiling, the weary strife
And bitter pain, with which earth is rife;
But he knows that each faithful heart will bow
And gratefully adore Him,
When at last they come to the light above,
In the "Finished life" of Eternal Love.

A Love Letter.

BY NETTIE REED.

Your face	Your tongue	Your wit
So fair	So sweet	So sharp
First bent	Then drew	Then hit
Mine eye.	Mine ear.	Mine heart.
Mine eye	Mine ear	Mine heart
To like	To learn	To love
Your face	Your tongue	Your wit
Doth lend.	Doth teach.	Doth move.
Your face	Your tongue	Your wit.
With beams	With sound	With art
Doth blind	Doth charm	Doth rule
Mine eye.	Mine ear.	Mine heart.
Mine eye	Mine ear	Mine heart
With life	With hope	With skill
Your face	Your tongue	Your heart
Doth feel.	Doth fear.	Doth fill.
O, face,	O, tongue,	O, wit,
With frowns	With check	With smart
Wrong not	Vex not	Wound not
Mine eye.	Mine ear.	Mine heart.
This eye	This ear	This heart
Shall joy	Shall bend	Shall swear
Your face	Your tongue	Your wit
To serve.	To trust.	To fear.

I Love to Muse.

BY ARCHIE MACK.

I love to muse in twilight hours
To think of times gone by,
To freely roam through mem'rys bowers,
And absent forms supply.
To conjure up those faces bright,
That once were ever near,
Though now they've vanished from my sight,
They are the none less dear.

CHORUS.

Though forms may vanish, time ne'er will banish,
The thoughts we cherish of friends so true,
We'll love them ever, forget them never,
Oh, naught can sever or add thereto!
For the friends we love are ever near,
While mem'ry lasts our lives to cheer.

Years may whiten the locks of youth,
Stern Death some friend may claim,
But oh may time ne'er dim the truth
Of those we love to name!
May every link be bright and strong,
That glows in Friendship's chain,
Then, then we'll raise our heartfelt song
Again, and yet again.

CHORUS.—Though forms may vanish, etc:—

EVIL EFFECTS OF A MISTAKEN PHILOSOPHY.

BY ISAIAH RYDER, M. D.

The case is reported from Liverpool of a Mrs. Berry poisoning her mother and daughter, who were insured respectively for £200, and £10, in order to get the insurance. She was executed and buried in the "Murderess" graveyard, close beside the remains of Catherine Flannigan and Margaret Higgins, who were executed at the same place three years ago for poisoning Higgin's husband.

In speaking about her child she said:—"Do you know that beautiful poem of Longfellow, 'Resignation?' That poem expresses my feelings as regards poor Edith." Then she took up the book and began:—

"There is no flock, however watched and tended,
But one dead lamb is there!"

She then read the whole poem with an eloquence which, with its surroundings, the solicitor said was truly awful. She called his special attention to the line:—

"There is no death! What seems so is transition;"

and said she should like to have that placed on the gravestone of poor Edith, her daughter.

This account illustrates the effects of the generally accepted idea in theological circles that death is but a transition to a higher and better life, in cases where conscientiousness and the moral and religious sentiments are weak.

Mrs. Berry, like Flannigan and Higgins, wanted money, and, though she evidently had no ill-feelings against either her mother or daughter, she concluded that they would be better off in a state of eternal happiness than here where toil and trouble are the common lot. The same idea is also expressed in her dying words, "Those whom I love best are already gone. I look upon death now as a five-minutes journey by train, and when I get out of the train at the other station, the first one to meet me on the platform will be my daughter Edith."

If their lives had not been insured there would have been no apparent inducement to have poisoned these victims, the life insurance business having originated upon the basis of an expectancy of death.

The Bible generally, and the Saviour specifically, teaches that a destructed corpse—a decomposed body—is not a fit subject for a resurrection: vide His sermon on the mount, Matt. 7:13-14; also Rev. 20: 6, 14 & 15. A proper understanding of these texts clearly establishes my contention, the generally accepted theological interpretation notwithstanding.

HOME AND GENERAL NEWS.

The three persons concerned in the attempt to assassinate the Czar in St. Petersburg on the 13th ult. have been hanged.

The Russian Government has placed at the disposal of the police £37,000, to be used in unravelling the Nihilist conspiracy.

A strong feeling in favour of the resuscitation of the Dominion Board of Trade is said to prevail among the different local boards.

A French explosive which will explode before anyone is ready for it has just killed off seven French soldiers. It must be a success.

H. T. Bush, owner of the victorious yacht "Coronet," has sent $500 of the premium won in the race to the Beecher monument committee.

All the boot and shoe manufacturers of St. Rochs, Quebec, are said to have so many orders on hand that they are working night and day to fill them.

The rumour that a new Dominion electoral district will be carved out of the Nipissing district at the coming session is stated to be without foundation.

Three cases of Asiatic cholera have been discovered at Buda Pesth, and the nature of the malady in each case has been clearly established. Much alarm prevails.

The roof of a church at Lingwagloesa, Sicily, fell without warning, during service on Sunday, burying one hunderd persons, forty of whom were killed and injured.

Gabriel Dumont is reported as saying that in the late rebellion the half-breeds lost five men at the Duck Lake fight, and none at Fish Creek, where they had only 47 men.

Mr. J. Rusho, of Grindstone Island, near Kingston, while attempting to rescue his horse, which broke through the ice, lost $1,500 which he was taking to the bank.

It is reported the Ameer of Afghanistan is seriously alarmed over the discovery that a number of native tribes are combining against him, and has appealed to the Indian authorities for help.

For the purpose of inducing English farmers to emigrate to Canada, the Department of Agriculture have decided to exhibit specimens of Canadian grain at all the county fairs in England this summer.

Mr. Justice Mathieu, of Montreal, has granted $500 damages to James Tracey in an action taken by him against the Canadian Pacific Railway for having lost two fingers while working in their service.

Prof. Max Muller, judged by his titles, is probably the most distinguished man in England to-day. He has more than 40 honorary suffixes to his name, but he does not use all of them in his ordinary correspondence.

General Strange states that the winter in the Northwest has been the hardest for many years, and the cattle have suffered severely. On his ranche the cattle increased to the remarkable extent of 87 per cent., but many of the increase did not thrive.

The Attorney-General of British Columbia states that the Local Government has commenced an action against the Canadian Pacific Railway Company to recover $250,000, amount of the bond guaranteeing the completion of the line to Coal Harbor by December 31st, 1886.

A woman named Marie Soum is under arrest at Toulouse for drugging her cousin, Bertrande Salage, and then cutting the form of the cross on several parts of her body for the purpose of exorcising an evil spirit, the woman Soum believing that she was under her cousin's malign influence.

At an examination the other day a certain professor of Columbia College electrified the students by remarking in an audible tone to one of the assistants that he could not find his hat anywhere, although he was "almost sure" that he had brought it to the college with him that morning.

When James Gordon Bennett was in Pau the other day, a talkative nuisance at the club was boasting to him of his wonderful shooting experiences. Seeing no other way to escape a tragic fate, Mr. Bennett yawned and said: "I, myself, had a narrow escape the other day. I shot at a wild boar, and, missing him, killed my dog. The boar at once turned and brought back the body of my dog, laying it at my feet." The story-teller retired.

Supt. Fisher, of the French Cable company, has arrived at Halifax from New York and is arranging for the immediate construction of land lines connecting their cable at Sydney with Montreal, so as to give Canada a cable service independent of the United States. This land line will tap all leading cities and towns between Sydney and Montreal, where it will give French cable connection with Canada Pacific telegraphic systems, also an additional connection with New York by way of the Baltimore and Ohio lines. Mr. Fisher says competition of the French Cable Company will make it exceedingly lively for the "cable pool."

A Lucky Dog.

A great deal has been done during the last few years to ameliorate the condition of aristocratic dogs. They now trot about under warm blankets at the end of bright chains, instead of being left to their own devices as in degenerate days of old. We have never heard, however, of a dog as lucky as the French cur described in this paragraph:

Baron de Jouarre, who died in Paris a few days ago, bequeathed the whole of his fortune, amounting to 150,000 francs, to "Tiger," his faithful Danish mastiff. According to the provisions of the will a family residence is to be purchased in one of the suburbs, in which the dog is to take up his quarters. A male attendant and a charwoman are appointed to look after the dog and keep the house in order, and will be paid for their services an annual salary of 2,000 francs each, together with free lodgings. Every little contingency has been provided for. A small sum has been set apart for the apothecary and the veterinary surgeon; every year Tiger is to be furnished with a new rug, and in spring and summer with fresh collars of elegant design. At the demise of the noble animal 1,000 francs are to be spent on a gravestone and the house, and the capital to become the property of the Society for the Protection of Animals.

A Hamilton paper asked: "Is there a wife in the city to-day who makes her husband's shirts?" The following answer was received by return mail: "I do, but he won't wear them."

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c
Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curity.

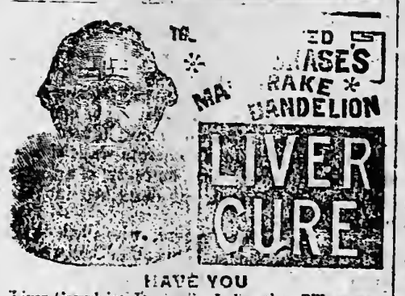
WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the prac tice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
124ly



WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence otd stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at west rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

For Sale or Rent.
Good large comfortable dwelling, with stable, also hard and soft water on the premises, on Sydenham street near Presbyterian Church.
344 Apply to B. Coleman

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint is only with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other healing vegetable herbs and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500 000 SOLD Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada one year. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 800 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.
TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
E. T. HENDERSON & CO., Sole Agents, Hamilton

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calcomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

NEW HARNESS SHOP.
R. CARNAHAN would respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of the surronnding country that he has opened a general harness shop on King street in the village of
HOLLAND CENTRE,
where he intends to manufacture and keep on hand a large stock of LIGHT and HEAVY HARNESS, long and short tugs, STRAW COLLARS, WHIPS, COMBS, BRUSHES, HARNESS OIL &c.
I will use only first class material and those requiring anything in the harness line will find it to their interest to call at the new harness shop and get prices before going elsewhere. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. Soliciting a share of public patronage. I am respectfully yours.
R. CARNAHAN.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.
First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool.
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.
BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS
Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.
Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.
For sale by all dealers.
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT 131 con. 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. E. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orillia.
342-3

GROCERY, PROVISION —AND— LIQUOR STORE.
A fresh stock of groceries just opened at
DAVIS'S
Store, bought for cash thus saving discounts, and will be sold for spot cash at rock bottom prices.
A fine Line of choicest uncolored Japan Tea just arrived intending purchasers will do well to inspect this Tea before buying elsewhere as it positiyely is the best value ever offered in the town. 15 lbs. extra granulated sugar $1, other grades accordingly. Agent for the Liquor Tea Co. A valuable prize given with every six ½ lb. packages bought.

PROVISIONS!
Flour Bran, Shorts, Chop, Screenings, Oatmeal, Cornmeal, &c., &c.

LIQUORS!
Rye and Malt, Port and Native Wine, Brandy, Jamaica, Rum, Scotch Whiskey, the best in the market, also a choice lot Bottled Liquors in finest Brandies, Scotch and Irish Whiskeys, Superior Malt and 5 year old Rye. Parties requiring liquors for medicinal purposes will do well to give us a call as they may rely upon getting a good article.
Special Attention? I will pay the highest cash price for Timothy Seed.
A. Call Respectfully Solicited,
W. L. Davis,
MARKDALE.

Markdale Roller Mill.
FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.
Flour always on Hand
Flour $3.80 to $4.20 per. bbl.
SHORTS, per ton - $12.00
BRAN, " - 12.00
The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,
He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.
Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

THE Association Can't Stop Us.
HAVING PURCHASED
A
FIRST-CLASS HEARSE.
Built by B. J. Mash, London, also having a large stock of Coffins, Caskets and funeral furnishings, we are prepared to supply the public in the undertaking line on the shortest notice.
A large stock of furniture always on hand at lowest living prices.
Having a first-class cabinet maker, we are prepared to make all kinds of furniture to order, also repairing done promptly.
COLEMAN & HAMILTON,
Next door to Davis' store.
MARKDALE.

The Markdale Standard
Is issued every Thursday.
C. W. BUTLER, Markdale, Ont.
TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.
Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 yr.	6 mo.	3 mo.
Whole column	$60 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	8 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	5 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.
Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.
Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1
No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.
THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Society Directory.
Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78. meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.
Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.
MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.
Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Markdale Church Directory.
PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.
CHRIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.
METHODIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. H. Cornish, Pastor; G. S. Bowes, S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection: Mrs. T Hill, Secretary.

Directory.
MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.
Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.
Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, J. Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.
COUNTY OFFICIALS.
Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace. W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gaie, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N. Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. J. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.
DIVISION COURT CLERKS
No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Monthly Fairs.
Orangeville—The second Thursday in each month.
Dundalk—Tuesday before Orangeville.
Flesherton—Monday before Orangeville.
Markdale—Saturday before Orangeville.
Durham—Third Tuesday in each month.
Chatsworth—Monday before Durham.
Holland Centre—Saturday before Chatsworth
Priceville—Monday before Durham.
Hanover—Monday before Durham

Post-Office Directory.
MARKDALE.
The P O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.
Mails closed as follows, viz:
C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m
TRAVERSTON.
Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.
HARKAWAY.
Friday, 12:30 noon.
For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.
W. J. McFARLANE, P. M.

An Xcellent selection of Cuts for Horse Bills at the Standard Office.

Markdale, April 1[illegible]
To the Editor of the STANDARD.
DEAR SIR.—Spring is now a[illegible] and fast ripening into summer, [illegible] fore I deem this a favorable opp[illegible] to discuss the conduct of our [illegible] band. I will, with your per[illegible] make a few remarks pro. and [illegible]
Two years ago a petition was [illegible] sented to our villagers and [illegible] signed, brass instruments were [illegible] chased and a band consisting of [illegible] members organized. These [illegible] ments were paid for and a balan[illegible] in the treasury by our village, [illegible] ask, what benefit have we d[illegible] from the band since its organiz[illegible] very little indeed. During the summer of its existence under leadership of Prof. Jones, the would "trot" down to the corner a piece of music for the edificat[illegible] the people who happened to be [illegible] ing near by, and then retrace [illegible] steps to the band-room; and occ[illegible] ally they would form into rank, [illegible] two-a-breast down mill St. to [illegible] irregular beat of the drum.
Our surrounding small [illegible] have fairly good brass bands to [illegible] of, and why not have one organ[illegible] here on good basis and conduct[illegible] strict principles.
Because our band was ordered to play on the streets the first [illegible] they appeared last summer on acc[illegible] of sickness, it hurt their dignity [illegible] they would not, "under any cond[illegible] ation" play on our streets again.
To the band we would simply [illegible] they need our support, and w[illegible] it they cannot possibly exist. If [illegible] meet us half way, we will have m[illegible] at least once a week during the [illegible] mer months—say Saturday even[illegible] and their treasury will look bri[illegible] in the future than it has in the p[illegible]
Boys, put your heads tog[illegible] work in harmony and with a wi[illegible] we will reciprocate,
Yours Truly
KLAUD I W[illegible]

Euphrasia Council.
The council met pursuant to adjour[illegible] on the 25th March, members all pres[illegible]
Minutes of last session of council r[illegible] confirmed.
The treasurer was ordered to remit [illegible] Reeve of Artemesia, $21.00 being the [illegible] award of Arbitrators in case of land [illegible] by Artemesia and Euphrasia, corpo[illegible] from Hugh Walton, for road purposes.
R. Dunlop clerk, was appointed [illegible] Inspector to the Local Board of heal[illegible] a By-law passed accordingly.
The Reeves orders were issued [illegible] Treasurers to pay as follows, viz.
To Mr. Erskine 65 cents to pay fo[illegible] for hanging lamps and lock for clerk's [illegible] in the Town Hall.
George Crabtree $1.50 ladder requi[illegible] Town Hall; Timothy Breadner $20,[illegible] for board and lodging of W. P. Carm[illegible] digent.
R. Dunlop $40.00 part salary [illegible] year: William Kernan $3.00 statute [illegible] performed in error; Hugh Curry $1.[illegible] for hanging lamps in hall.
William McConnel Esq., $10,00 [illegible] applied for relief of Robert Robertson [illegible] ed and indigent.
Council adjourned until the last [illegible] ih April.
R. DUNLOP, cle[illegible]

CANADIAN PACIFIC R[illegible]
OWEN SOUND BRANCH
TIME TABLE.
Taking effect Monday, July 28th, 1[illegible]

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.
Toronto....Leave	7 45am
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "
Orangeville. Arrive	10 05 "
Orangeville. Leave	10 20 "
Orangeville Jun	10 32 "
Shelburne	10 58 "
Dundalk	11 22 "
Flesherton	11 47 "
Markdale	12 02pm
Berkeley	12 14 "
Holland Centre	12 23 "
Chatsworth	12 38 "
Owen Sound	1 05 "

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.
Owen Sound	5 40am
Chatsworth	6 10 "
Holland Centre	6 25 "
Berkeley	6 34 "
Markdale	6 47 "
Flesherton	7 02 "
Dundalk	7 26 "
Shelburne	7 51 "
Orangeville Jun	8 22 "
Orangeville. Arrive	8 30 "
Orangeville. Leave	8 45 "
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "
Toronto....Arrive	10 55 "

For Fleury and W[illegible] inson Plows go to J[illegible] son's, price to suit [illegible] times.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 346. MARKDALE, ONT., APRIL 21, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Publisher.

Local and Other Items.

NOTICES in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cts a line for the first insertion and five cts a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

30 DAYS!

30 DAYS!

For 30 Days Only, there will be a great discount sale of

Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, Spex, &c.,

Do not miss it but come early and secure some of the bargains before they are gone. only for 30 days, positively, as we are giving you 25 per cent, off on all cash sales over $1.00. The finest make of Nicol Alarm Clock actually selling at RUSSELL'S NOTED JEWELERY STORE for only $2.00, while they are $2.50 to $2.75 elsewhere and the finest assortment of Fine Plated Chains only $1.60 which are generally sold for $2.25 to $2.50. RUSSELL'S is the place you can get bargains, nobody can compete with us. Come and see for yourselves, we will not pay your milage or give you meals as a catch, but will sell you goods a great deal cheaper than you can get elsewhere and remember the only place to get your Watch repaired properly is at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

CLOVER & TIMOTHY Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

Farmers buy your land rollers from Jackson.

GLOVES all shades and sizes at J. G. Anderson's.

MR. JOHN KAY has been home spending a few weeks with his parents.

Harrows ! Harrows ! ! Iron and spring tooth at Jackson's.

SUGAR making is became almost a thing of the past in this district.

Just received some beautiful sets of dishes and glassware at S. Hill's.

MAXWELL Spring Show will be held in that village on the 27th April.

A case of L. C. Bacon, just to hand at J. G. Anderson's.

For calsomines or wall finish of any kind. The best to be had at Mabee's.

CLOVER and Timothy seed just to hand at J. G. Anderson's.

For calsomine brushes, wall brushes, paint brushes &c., see Mabee's.

IF you want a nobby head-dress for your feet, go to McLeod's shoe store.

Get your plow repairs from Jackson. Old metal taken in exchange.

A full and complete line of Groceries always on hand at J. G. Anderson's.

AN EASTER GIFT.—Mr. Samuel Douglas was presented with a bouncing boy by his wife on Easter Sunday.

JUST received at J. G. Anderson's New Parasols, New Dress Goods, great value.

Try our crown stove polish, its a daisy; no dust, no dirt, no brushing; Mabee has it.

Our Police Trustees would do well to inspect the side walks and repair dangerour places—A stitch in time saves nine.

1,000,000 doz., of eggs and 2 tons of butter wanted at Davis' for which the highest market price will be paid.

31—clocks just opened out, will be sold close, as I bought them, right W. A. Brown Jewellery.

PLOWS! Plows ! Sod, General purpose and Jointer—Fleury and Wilkinson's make, at Jackson's.

Ladies' call and get the latest Millenry novelties at S. Hill's.

A good comfortable brick residence and handsome lot for sale cheap. Enquire at this office.

Ladies' when you are in town with Butter and Eggs, call, we will give you bargains, S. Hill.

Another large consignment of Teas very cheap, my house is noted for the best teas in town, S. Hill.

Oil Cake, the champion cattle food for sale at Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

Always a large stock of Boots and Shoes on hand. I pay cash for my goods. I cannot be undersold, S. Hill.

HENS! Hens!! Hens!!! All kind of hen eggs wanted at McLeod's shoe store in exchange for boots and shoes.

IF you pay cash for boots and shoes, try McLeod's; his boots give great satisfaction for the money.

EUPHRASIA Agricultural Society Spring Show will be held at Rocklyn on Tuesday the 26th April.

FOR Pure Leads, Oils, Varnishes and Colors, they can be had at the sign of the cross-cut.

Have you seen those beautiful fast colored prints, bring your Butter and Eggs and get some of them, S. Hill.

ROCKLYN is likely to have a lodge of A. O. U. W. organized this summer—A wise act.

WM. JACKSON the implement agent is becoming deservedly popular with the farmers, and is doing a good business.

Permanent Pasture

Seeds. Prof. Brown's formula and other popular kinds at the Medical Hall A. Turner & Co.

C. A. JOHNSTON, in Montgomery's old stand, has opened a resturant where hot meals can be had at all hours, for 15 cents.

GENTLEMEN, I am clearing out beautiful tweeds, worsteds and panting, very cheap, also straw and felt hats, call and realise, S. Hill.

FOR SALE.—One horse three years old and one mare in foal, would take stock in part pay for same. Apply to

J. HICKLING,

Lot 38 & 39 con. 8, Artemesia, Maxwell, P. O.

MARKDALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 75 to 76 cents; spring wheat 75 to 76; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 14 to 1 ; eggs 11; potatoes 50 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

FOR Oatmeal, "Corn meal" "Wheat meal" graham flour pot and pearl barley Bensons is the place to go, they will do better for you than any one in the town.

REMEMBER you can get Bran, Shorts, Henfeed the same price at Bensons, as at the mill, it saves you half an honr trouble, give us a call.

STACKS of Cottonades, piles of Shirtings, heaps of Prints, just opened out at J. G. Anderson's, cheap for cash or mercantile produce.

BRING on your Butter, Eggs & Cash, and get some of those lovely Dress Goods now being offered at J. G. Anderson's.

CASH buyers will find meat in Sarjeant Bro's meat market as cheap as in any other market in Canada. Prime Bacon, Hams and other smoked and dried meats, as well as all kinds of fresh meats in season.

NEWS of the death of Jas. Galbraith, of Toronto, formerly of this place, came to his friends by wire on Tuesday. We have not learned further particulars

MR. ANDREW WALKER of Mt. Pleasent farm, Holland, sold a pair of fat steers last Monday to W. G. Pickell, cattle dealer of this village for $180.

THE weather has been cold and backward the past week but is now warming up. Considerable ploughing has already been done.

MRS. CORNWALL of this village moves this week to Toronto where Mr. C. has been employed for some time past, and where they will reside.

REMEMBER the Spring Show on Saturday next. Entries are already coming in and we expect to see a good exhibition of stock animals.

A fresh stock of meals have just been opened at Davis' which will be sold at a very small advance on cost as he will not be undersold.

PREPARE for May 1st, Baskets, bait cans, poles, lines, hooks, sinkers, reels, etc., the only complete stock of fishing tackle in town, at W. A. Brown's Jewelery store.

A Walnnt case, 10 stop, Karn Organ, new, beautiful instrument, fine tone, will be sold below regular price, and one years time given to good mark, call at W. A. Brown's store.

Jas. McDougall, formerly of this place was not the McDougall who figured in the row at White River Station, C. P. R. a short time ago in which O'Hagan was shot by a squaw.

THERE is a great breadth of fall wheat this year in the surrounding destrict, and it is looking remarkably well generally.

We learn wisdom from failure much more than from success. We often discover what will do by finding out what will not do; and probably he who never made a mistake never made a discovery.

Why is the upsetting of a gentleman's dinner table like a great Political crisis? Because it is the breaking up of china, the upsetting of grease, and the downfall of turkey.

"I thought you were born on the 1st of April," said a Benedict to his lovely wife, who had mentioned the 21st as her birthday. "Most people would think so from the choice I made of a husband," she replied.

EGGS FOR HATCHING.—Samuel Coleman, Jr., Markdale, P. O. has for sale eggs from the Champion Strain of Light Brahmas at $2, per 13 eggs, S. C. White Leghorns $1, for 13. White Pekin Ducks 50c. for 13. Also Fowl for sale cheap. 345-8

W. McLEOD is determined to turn out a class of work that cannot be surpassed in the county, and to that end has secured the services of his brother D. McLeod who cannot be beaton on sewed work. Call early.

Davis has constantly on hand a full supply of Ford's and Plewes' flour of the finest quality, if it is not right bring it back and your money will be refunded. Special reduction will be given for large lots.

Allen's "Sink hole" is now in a dangerous condition for public traffic. It is a shame and a disgrace for the County to allow such a dangerous piece of road on such a public throughfare to remain from year to year without remedy.

IMPORTED, a large supply of English filled Shoe Uppers at McLeods custom shoe shop. made up to order on short notice—workmanship cannot be surpassed.

A grand entertainment will be given in the Methodist Church, Flesherton, by Miss Mittie Fraine, Elocutionist, on the evening of the 28th inst. Admission 15 cents.

S. DAMUDE, Esq., of Flesherton, District Deputy Grand Master of the A. O. U. W. for Dufferin, Grey and North Bruce intends visiting every lodge in his jurisdiction the comming summer.

J. H. Carson, implement agent, will occupy the building recently erected by Mr. Marsh, where he will keep a large display of farm implements on sale.

Parties having fat cattle sheep or hogs to dispose of will please let me know. W. G. Pickell, Markdale.

As the season is now opened for the sale of Bacon, Benson of the Belfast house is to the fore with a few cases; remember he will not be undersold by any one in the trade, and if there is a cut to be given they are the boys that will give it to you, they are dacent little chaps.

THE finest stock of glassware grocery milk pans, crocks, flour pots, hanging baskets &c., to be had at Benson's and will be sold cheaper than by any one in the trade. Remember we mean what we say. Call and see for yourselves.

A full stock of oranges, lemons, candies of all descriptions, nuts, figs, dates, raisins, biscuits of all kinds, canned goods, a few chests of that thunder, lightening and blue blazes tea left yet, the best value in town, try it, every person is getting it now at Benson's.

MRS. KAY, wife of Mr. Alex Kay, shoemaker of this place passed away on Monday last at the ago of 43 years. Mrs Kay was a great sufferer for several months past and bore her sufferings with patience and Christian resignation. The funeral took place on Tuesday. Sermon in the Presbyterian Church by Rev. A. Wilson next Sabbath at 11 a.m.

Davis is to the front, with a new brand of oat meal, the steel cut, try it once and you will use no other, also a fine brand of Corn Meal just to hand, in fact anything in the Provision line may be procured at Davis' at prices which cannot be beaten, and if the trade mean to cut prices, he aint like a fellow that can't stay with them.

I have a few chests of that notorious uncolored japan tea left which I have sold at 30c. per lb and it has been pronounced by those who have used it to be better value than any Tea sold in town for the money—probably you ask why we can sell cheaper than those in trade? the answer is simply because we are satisfied with half the profit. W. L. Davis.

AT the annual vestry meeting held in Christ Church Markdale on 11th inst., the following officers were elected for the ensuing year. Clergyman's Church Warden B. Coleman; Peoples Church Warden Sam'l Coleman; Sidesmen S. Hill, W. Douglas, Thos. Elliott. Oswald Walker, W. J. Stephens, A. Turner; Delegate to Synod B. Coleman; Vestry Clerk R. D. Bigger.

A fighting Quaker was encountered lately by one Tanner, a saloon keeper in Alliance, Ohio, who endeavored to assault the Friend a noted Prohibitionist. The Quaker warded off the blow and choked Tanner severely, saying: "When thee has enough say so; if thee can't speak nod thy head." The head was soon nodded, and Tanner now mourns the loss of $15 fine, and suffered a bad choking, and still didn't whip the Quaker.

MUSEUM.—A visit to Master Fred. Moffat's museum will convince the visitor that he a genius of rare taste and accomplishments in carving and scroll work in wood. His work-room is completely encircled with handsome specimens of useful and fancy articles—birds, beasts and scores of dosigns showing remarkable ingenuity.

MISS IDA MAY JIMBY died on Friday morning last after an illness of some three months. She bore her sufferings with christian fortitude, and passed triumphantly to her reward at the premature age of 22 years. The funeral took place on Monday and was largely attended. Her remains were conveyed to Markdale Station, (by her request, members of Markdale Methodist Church Gospel Band acting as pall bearers) thence by rail to Owen Sound, where numerous friends and acquaintances paid the last tribute of respect to the departed, following the cortege to the cemetry. The funeral sermon will be preached next Sunday at 2:30 by Rev. Mr. Hosking, in Ebenezer Church, Town line; The Gospel Band, who visited her frequently during her illness, will act as choir.

Look for W. J. McFarland's new adv. this issue. It begins with steamship terminates with a railway train and abounds throughout with new, fashionable and select merchandise.

We notice, in walking over the side walks, that the places requiring repairs are in nearly every case where the foundation is not solid. When the foundation is not firm it is impossible to keep the planks nailed.

Why pay rent for a dwelling when you can have one of your own in a choice situation built to order, on short notice and very easy terms. Apply to M Armstrong, Markdale.

M. & W. Armstrong are running their saw mill now in full blast, and turning out from 8,000 to 10,000 feet of lumber daily. They expect to run night and day next week.

TO LET ON SHARES.—The cropping of 25 acres, M. Armstrong.

DR. JUG'S Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

Who will say this country is poor when one of our merchants—W. J. McFarland—has paid out in hard cash for Wheat.....$ 16,000
Barley....." 7,100
Peas....." 11,000
Oats....." 8,250
Butter....." 12,500
Pork....." 6,600

Total.....$ 61,450.

Sixty one thousand four hundred and fifty dollars besides tons of poultry, and other produce not here mentioned, during this season now closing.

"Notice" To Farmers,

Those that have to buy their "Flour" this summer. Can buy it at Benson's, the Belfast House, the same price as at the mill, and every lb. guaranteed, both Ford's & Plewes' kept on hand. Liberal inducements made on over one barrel lots.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truely beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of Mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraging and worn out with diseases, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them free from disease, as when born. Dispepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy five per cent, of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents Try it.

Card of Thanks.

To MR. R. C. WYLD, General Agent Ontario Mutual Life Assurance Co., of Waterloo.

DEAR SIR:—

Allow me to thank the President and Directors thro' you, for the prompt and courteous manner in which they have settled the claim to me as administrator for the late R. H. Whitby, under a policy held by him, and to wish the Company and yourself every success.

Yours very truly,

JOHN WHITBY,

In the Sugar Camp.

BY JULIA A. SABINE.

"Goin' to make sugar this year, neighbor Dunlap?"

The speaker was a young man of perhaps twenty-two or three. He stood carelessly upon his empty sled, directing his oxen by word, or now and then the merest touch of the whip, while he turned partly around to address the man whose sled followed close behind. He was a handsome young fellow and even the the voluminous, and somewhat ill-fitting wraps with which he was encumbered, could not conceal the easy grace of his well developed figure.

It was bitterly cold. The sled runners creaked upon the snow, icicles hung from the patient oxen's nostrils, and the two men, returning from the village whither they had gone with sleds heavily loaded with wood a few hours before, stamped their feet and slapped their benumbed hands, to keep the circulation up.

"Wall, I dunno, Norman," replied the elder man. "Why?"

"I thought if you wan't goin' to use your place this spring, mebbe we might fix up a trade, so's that I could work it along with mine."

"Wall, p'r'aps we can; stop and have a bite of supper as you go along, and we'll talk it over."

"Not to-night," returned the younger man. "I'm obliged to you, but my supper will be waitin' for me. I'll come over by an' by, if you're goin' to be at home."

"Not much danger of my goin' out agin this cold night," returned Mr. Dunlap. "Come over, come over, and bring your sister along. We'll all be glad to see you." And then he turned in at the gate of his own farmyard, and Norman Chellis, who lived half a mile farther on, urged his oxen to a quicker pace.

Farmer Dunlap chuckled to himself as he unyoked his oxen and gave them a plentiful supper. He thought he could see how things were going. He did not for an instant suppose that Norman Chellis would have any desire to take his sugar place, if it were not for the opportunity such an arrangement would give him for making love to Hetty Dunlap, the farmer's one child, and he was well pleased to let such love making go on. For Norman Chellis was a fine young fellow, sensible, kind hearted, a good farmer, and well to do. He owned a well stocked farm, free from incumbrance, and it was no secret that his sister, who kept house for him, was to be married in the fall.

The two farms adjoined, and Farmer Dunlap often thought that if they could be combined by the marriage of Hetty and Norman, it would be a "very handsome property."

As he pushed back his plate, after eating a hearty supper of roast pork and apple sauce, finishing with a huge piece of mince pie, the farmer said, carelessly to his wife:

"I guess Norman'll be over after a spell. He kinder wants to work our sugar place this year, along with his'n; and he said he'd come and talk it over bime by, so I told him to fetch Abbie aloug."

"What does he want of our sugar place, I'd like to know?" said Miss Hetty, with a toss of her pretty head, while the color deepened on her cheek.

She understood very well why he wanted the sugar place and, sly puss that she was, felt a little thrill of triumph, as she admitted the reason to her own heart,

"That's his business, not mine," said her father deliberately. "You must ask him, if you want to know."

And Hetty tossed her head again and made a great noise clearing away the supper dishes, as she declared "It was nothing to her."

The family had seated themselves in the sitting-room, the "work" being "all done up" before the expected guests arrived. Hetty had brought from the cellar a heaping dish of Baldwins, and polished them till their rich red cheeks shone. In the cool pantry a huge pitcher of cider was waiting, and a corn popper and some ears of popcorn lay upon the kitchen table.

Mrs. Dunlap settled herself in her favorite seat before the fire with her knitting work, while Hetty opened her piano and played some of her father's favorite airs. For Farmer Dunlap could refuse this one ewe lamb nothing, and when she set her heart upon a piano, the piano was bought, although he sold one of his finest Morgan horses to raise the money.

While Hetty was playing, there came a knock at the door, and the farmer, nothing doubting that his guests were waiting, hastened to light a candle and let them in. He found, however, that the singing master from the village had walked out to make a friendly call. Now when a young man walks two miles, with the mercury below zero, to call upon a pretty girl, it argues that he is pretty far gone, and the farmer ushered this unexpected visitor in, with a sense of grim amusement as he thought of his coming discomfiture.

Hetty received the new comer with great cordiality, and the two were chatting very merrily when Norman and Abbie Chellis came in, a little later. Norman frowned, as he saw the singing teacher so comfortably established by Hetty's side, and for a few moments a little stiffness settled over the group. There was no good feeling between the two young men. Hetty had gone to the singing school all winter in company with Norman and Abbie Chellis, but Norman had felt obliged to admit that Hetty seemed to care much more for Mr. Thornell's society than she did for his, during the intermission and the brief time for chatting before the opening of the school. Then, too, Mr. Thornell led the choir, so Hetty, who was at the head of the trebles, stood next to him on Sundays, often looking over the same book, while poor Norman, who was a bass singer, was forced to take a back seat, literally as well as figuratively.

It had seemed to him lately that he could never get a chance to see Hetty by herself, and when this evening, on which he had counted so much, he found his rival already in possession of the field, he felt that it was very hard.

Farmer Dunlap took possession of him at once to talk business and settle about the sugar place, a very easy matter, when each man was so desirous of the same result. In fact, the difficulty seemed to be that it was too easy, until Mrs. Dunlap, hearing her husband say:

"Just let us have what we need for our own use, and I shall be satisfied," to which young Chellis replied:

"No, no. I just want enough to make up what I have promised to deliver in Boston, and you can have the rest," thought it was time to interfere.

"Now, father," she said, "that aint no kind of a way to do business. If Norman wants the sugar place, let him take it on the same terms anybody else would—half an' half. You to furnish buckets and spouts, and so on, and he to furnish labor."

So Mrs. Dunlap having cut the Gordian knot, the matter was speedily settled, and Norman was free to join the group of young people by the piano.

For a time they sang glees and quartettes, their voices harmonizing sweetly. Then they adjourned to the kitchen, where they popped corn and frolicked until they were tired, and were glad to come back to the sitting room and sit down and quietly to eat their apples.

"Name my apple," said Hetty, suddenly, to Abbie Chellis, who responded promptly:

"Very well, I'll name it Mr. Thornell."

Hetty bent gravely over her plate to count the seeds, and the singing-master drew near to help her. Norman was sure that he slyly abstracted one or two; but Hetty was unconscious of it, if it were so, for a real blush deepeded the color on her cheek, as Thornell said triumphantly:

"Eight, they both love."

"I'm going to take another," said Hetty, pettishly; "name this one, Abbie."

"Norman," returned Abbie.

And again Hetty counted the seeds, as if it were a matter of life and death. Norman bent forward to make sure there was no cheating this time. He knew it was nonsense, mere child's play, and yet he felt strangely anxious for the result. His heart beat furiously, his breath came quickly, and when Hetty announced with a nervous laugh:

"Five, I cast away," he felt unaccountably depressed.

It was soon nine o'clock. Abbie put on her shawl and nubia, while Norman went out to get his horse. Farmer Dunlap urged Thornell to "spend the night." "It's a long cold walk to the village," he said, "and we've got a plenty of beds."

Norman Chellis, coming in to say the horse was ready, did not half like the idea of his rival's sleeping at the Dunlap farm, and he volunteered, cordially enough, to drive him to the village.

"Abbie can wait here," he said, and Abbie assured him of her entire willingness to do so.

But the singing teacher declined both offers and as the merry jingle of Norman Chellis's sleigh bells died in the distance, he set out on his long, cold walk in the opposite direction.

He thought over the events of the evening as he strode rapidly over the crisp snow path. If Norman felt depressed, he was far from being elated. Hetty, it was true, had shown him marked favor, but he was by no means sure of her preference. And it was of vital importance to him that he should win her. Difficulties were closing around him on every side. If he could only stave them off until Hetty was his wife, he knew that farmer Dunlap would help him for his daughter's sake, and once free from his entanglements he would lead a new life. He had lived fast, had done many things which he ought not to have done, but he was not entirely bad, and although in his mannish selfishness he was willing to appropriate Hetty and her patrimony to himself, he said aloud, as he walked on in the bright starlight:

"I do love her, and please God if I win her, I will make a good husband."

"What possessed you to ask the singing master to stay to night?" said Mrs. Dunlap, when she had her husband to herself. "Can't you see that he's dangling after Hetty? I, for one, don't want to give him no chances to cut out Norman. I don't half like him, with his white hands and black beard and soft ways."

"Well, well, mother," said the farmer, "there ain't no harm done, since he didn't stay, and I don't believe Hetty is such a fool as to like a finified fellow like him, with his airs and graces, better than she does Norman Chellis, that she's known all her life."

"That's just the trouble," said Mrs. Dunlap. "Girls don't know their own minds, and they're always taken with something new."

But Hetty lay, far into the small hours, asking her own heart which of the two wooers she loved, and her heart was noncommittal, and would not answer.

It was in the latter part of February that the young people met at Farmer Dunlap's. It proved to be the last "cold snap" of the season. Spring came on rapidly after that. The singing school closed with a grand concert which put a pretty little sum into the master's pocket. Norman Chellis had his two sugar places in operation, they being virtually but one, since it was all one piece of woods and even the fence, which once marked the ordinary line between the farms, had been mostly pulled down. He was having a famous "run of sap." Daily he carried casks of syrup to the Dunlap house, and consulted with Hetty as to clarifying and sugaring off, and all the details of the sweet process. But he made no progress toward getting his heart's desire. A barrier seemed to have risen between them, and he felt that he was indeed losing ground.

Thornell, freed from the care of his singing school, was at the farm constantly. He was singing or playing with Hetty and reading poetry to her every day and frequently. at dusk, they walked to the sugar camp together, driving poor Norman nearly wild with jealousy.

The young people were gay and happy. Never was clear amber syrup so delicious, never did it wax so delightfully on such clear, white snow. The doughnuts, which Abbie and Hetty had fried to eat with the hot sugar, as antidote to too much sweetness, were crisp and light. Everything was as it should be. A casual looker-on would not have thought that any heavy hearts were hidden in that laughing crowd, but Norman Chellis was utterly wretched, the singing master was ill at ease, and even Hetty Dunlap's merriment was a little forced.

The sugar camp lay in a little valley, sloping to the east, lying behind the Chellis and Dunlap farm-houses, and about midway between them. A low hill on the north hid the Chellis farm-house, and another on the south, the home of the Dunlaps Foot-paths leading over these hills made "short cuts" to the houses, while the cart road, going straight down to the high-way, was much longer route.

"Can t we have a sugaring off?" asked Hetty on one of her visits to the sugar place. "Don't you think it would be nice, Norman? We can have a whole load of people from the village, and Abbie and I can cook up a lot of things, and we'll eat hot sugar out here in the woods and have supper in the camp."

Norman was in such a frame of mind what if Hetty had asked him to lie down and let her walk over him, he would have done it unhesitatingly. So, although the poor fellow felt little enough like merry-making, he assented and began making plans for the frolic at once. And so it happened that, a few days later, the sugar camp rang with merry voices of young people, and a gay throng walked about among the grand old trees.

Mrs. Dunlap had negatived the proposition to eat supper in the woods. "No, no," she said, "eat your sugar and doughnuts up there if you like, but when it comes to regular meals, you want to have 'em where you can sit down to a table and be comfortable."

So Martha Jackson, the "help," and Mrs. Dunlap gave up the day to the preparation of an ample meal, and Abbie Chellis sent over her own hired girl in the afternoon to lend a hand, knowing that there would be nothing for her to do at home. And so it happened that the Chellis house was closed and left alone.

The day wore on and it was nearly dusk when Hetty and Mr. Thornell drew away from the merry group and sat down on the trunk of a fallen tree, apart from the others. Norman Chellis watched them moodily. Poor fellow, his heart was sore. He had hardly had a chance to speak to Hetty all day. He could not conceal from himself that she had avoided him. And now to see her so willing to accord to his rival what was denied to him, was more than he could bear. In the dim light he could see Thornell wrap her shawl more closely about her and draw much nearer her side than he had ever dared, nay, Norman was sure he even possessed himself of her hand under her shawl. That hand which he would have given worlds to have held in his for a few moments. He could not bear it, and muttering something to Bill Stevens, his "hired man," about going to see if there was any sap left in the buckets, he strode wrathfully away from the camp, over the hill toward the south, even in his pain and soreness choosing instinctively the path that led to his darling's house.

"Land, you needn't do that," called Bill. "I've just ben all 'round and got the hull. 'Taint more'n an hour ago."

But Norman did not seem to hear. He hurried away out of sight and hearing and stood disconsolately in the fast deepening twilight leaning against one of the tall maple trees. He saw a woman running towards him through the path from the Dunlap house. He wondered vaguely who she could be, and then, as she drew nearer, he saw that it was Martha Jackson. She came up to him breathless and panting.

"Oh, Mr. Chellis," she gasped. "Sheriff Stebbins is at the house, an' two men. They want Mr. Thornell. He's done something awful, I dunno what, and they'll be right along to arrest him. An' I run up the back wa to tell you 'fore they got here, an' now I must scoot back as fast as I kin, 'fore they mistrust where I've been." She drew her shawl over her head and hurried away, leaving Norman dazed and confused.

Then, as his ideas began to arrange themselves, a fierce joy filled his heart. He should see his rival humbled to the dust. This man who had stolen his heart's desire from him, was a criminal, a felon, and he had dared to love Hetty. Ah, Hetty! His heart gave a great throb. She loved Thornell. Her life was bound up in his, and now her happiness must be wrecked. Poor little girl. He could not save her from her fate, but perhaps he could warn Thornell in time for him to escape the officers of the law, and so spare her the pain of knowing that the man she loved was occupying a prison cell. All his bitterness had left him. His whole heart was full of pity and tenderness for Hetty and his one desire to save Thornell, by means of the information Martha Jackson, in her eagerness to be first to tell the news had given him. He raised his eyes and Thernell stood before him.

"I was just going to look for you," he said. "The sheriff is after you. You know best why," and even in the dim light he could see the singing master whiten to the lips, and he knew it was no false charge that was brought against him. "Listen to me. Follow alone this hollow till you come to the big pine. Then cross over to the other side of the camp. You'll be so far up nobody'll see you. Then strike into the footpath that leads down to my house, go into one of the barns when you get there and wait till I come. I'll find a way to help you out."

Without a word Thornell obeyed, and Norman sauntered leisurely back to the camp, coming round the hill just as Farmer Dunlap came up the cartroad. He had left the sheriff at a little distance, he too having it in his heart to spare Hetty the sight of the arrest. As carelessly and unconcerned as possible he asked:

"Where's the singing master?" and a dozen voices answered at once, "here," "there," "he was over yonder a minute ago," "where did he go to?" &c.

"He was sitting by Hetty, the last time I saw him," said some one.

"He went from me around the checkerberry knoll," said Hetty.

Several run to call him but came back saying he was nowhere in sight.

"Are you sure he went that way?" asked the farmer.

"O, very sure," returned Hetty, wearily, "I sat right here and watched him out of sight."

"You came from that side, Norman," said the farmer, "did you see anything of him?"

"Yes, I saw and spoke with him, but I didn't look to see which way he went," which was literally true.

"Well, mother wants all you young folks to come right down to supper now. I'll see if I can't hunt up Thornell. You run along, all of you," and as the young folks trooped off by the footpath, the sheriff and his deputies came in by the cart road. A hurried consultation followed. It was evident the bird had flown. A path led from the direction in which Thornell had disappeared to another road, leading to a different part of the town. It was decided that he must have taken this path.

"Mabbe he got wind of my coming," said the sheriff, "but I think its more likely he meant to clear out to-night anyway. We'll follow up this track, much obleeged for the help you gin us," and the sheriff, who seldom had an arrest to make and didn't half like the business, marched on.

Farmer Dunlap, returning to the camp, found Norman down on hands and knees before the masonry which held up one of the huge pans for boiling sap.

"Why, Norman," he exclaimed, "why aint you down to the house with the rest of the young folks?"

"I didn't see as I can go," answered Norman. "Look here, see how this brick work is settling. I won't hold up till morning. I've got to go right off and get a mason to see to it. Bill must rake the fire out, an' I'll get a man here to-night if possible. Can't afford to stop boiling when there's such a run for sap as this."

Farmer Dunlap concurred in this. Norman promised to come in by and by, and the two separated, leaving the camp alone with Bill Stevens to watch the boiling kettles.

Norman hastened to his own house. He had a deep respect for the majesty of the law, and was by no means sure he was doing right in helping Thornell off, but the thought of Hetty and the misery in store for her, nerved him to push on his undertaking.

He found the singing master waiting in the horse barn. Hurriedly, and in silence the two men fed the stock and put things in order for the night. Norman harnessed Black Bess, his fastest horse, into his most roomy sleigh.

"You'd better come into the house and get a bite," he said.

"Thanks, I couldn't eat," was the answer, "but where are you taking me?"

"I've got to go toward the Centre to get a mason," answered Norman. "I'll put you in the bottom of of the sleigh and cover you up with robes, and I'll leave you at that little station, near Long Bridge. The train from the south will be along in an hour and you can board it and be half way to the States before they get back from the Mills, where they are looking for you."

The plan worked well. When Thornell shook himself free from the fur robes he said, "I don't know how to thank you for this. I am bad enough, but not quite lost," then he hurriedly told a tale of temptation and weakness, and how, in an evil hour, he had forged his employer's name to a check to raise money to meet his most pressing liabilities.

"I have never had a happy moment since," he went on, "and I swear to you that, if it were not for my poor mother, I would go back now, give myself up and take the consequences of my crime."

"And Hettty," said Norman involuntarily. The singing master looked at him curiously.

"That's it, is it?" said he. "I wondered what made you so fond of me all at once. It was on Hetty's account it seems. Well, I don't mind telling you that you are all wrong there. I don't suppose you will take me back and deliver me up now, even if you do know that Miss Hetty said 'No' to me, very decidedly, not five minutes before I found you in the woods this evening."

He turned abruptly away and the two men never met again. But Norman found his mason and arranged for the work to be done, feeling as if he trod on air. Black Bess flew over the ground on her homeward way, and it was not late when he reined up before Farmer Dunlap's door. Still, the guests had all gone home, and the farmer had just finished telling Hetty the story of Thornell's disgrace as Norman came in. Hetty looked pale and frightened. She knew no gradations in crime, and it seemed to her she had been polluted by her acquaintance with a man who might have been sent to prison. Some instinct told Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap to leave the two together, so they slipped away, and when Norman sat down by her on the sofa and drew her close to his side, saying, "My poor little girl," Hetty fell to crying on his shoulder as if it were the most natural thing in the world to do. Gently he soothed her and told her the story of Thornell's flight and his own hopes and fears, while she, resting quietly in his arms listened without a word until he said:

"But it's all right now, isn't it dear?"

Then she raised her head and said:

"But I must tell you, Norman, how bad and foolish I have been, for I really thought I cared about him, he was so handsome, you know, and had such pleasant manners." Norman winced a little. "And I meant, I really meant to say yes, when—if he asked me. But this afternoon, somehow, I could not, and I don't know how it was, only I seemed to understand all at once that I had been all wrong and that—that—I had—loved you all the time."

The Poet Tennyson's Home-life.

Every now and then curious little stories leak out about Lord Tennyson's life and habits. Tennyson's home in the Isle of Wight is a modest one; he has only one manservant in the house but it is as comfortable and pleasant as most households of the same class. It is the poet's manners and customs which give it its individuality. It is understood that visitors do not disturb the great man's ways, and that he behaves in precisely the same manner when he has company as when he has not. Every morning, in hail, rain or snow, the poet dons his frouzy cap and his frouzier slouch hat, and promenades for an hour or so, none daring to disturb him. Every day at dinner a bottle of port is placed before the host, and Tennyson retires with it (generally when dessert comes on), and leaves his guests at the dinner table. The poet is to be found in the study wth his bottle by his side, and a huge dock-glass holding a pint. This is filled half with port and half with water, and the bard solemnly fills and refills till bottle and glass are empty.

Only Forty Years Ago.

The steel pen did not come into use until the forties. The goose quill was used in writing up till 1850, and the pen makers and pen menders were a regular institution. They went about the country making and mending pens for the farmers and merchants. The schoolmasters generally did this, and it was quite a perquisite. They could make and mend the pens after their day's school teaching was done, and "mother, the school teacher is coming to-night to make and mend the pens, prepare him a bed," was a common announcement among the farmers forty years ago. To make or mend a pen well was considered a great accomplishment, and the writer worked long and patiently to acquire it. I can still make a quill pen with the best of them, and you can have it stiff or limber just to suit your hand. "Blotting was sand" used and the blotting paper of to-day was wholly unknown. To fold a letter neatly was an accomplishment few possessed There were then no envelopes and all letters were sealed with a wafer or sealing wax. A careful practice in folding and sealing letters was taught in night schools, and I remember a schoolmaster who made quite a little fortune at it.—American Paper

A BOOTBLACK PREACHER.

Strange Adventure of a Theatrical Manager in New York.

A writer in a New York paper tells how Gillmore, a theatrical manager in that city, had an unusual experience the other evening. They left the bar, near the theatre, and went in to the bootblack's sanctum under the stairs to have their nether extremities "fixed." This was done in a most methodical factory way by the venerable negro in charge—but the visitors noticed that religious books and pictures occupied prominent positions there.

One of the visitors remarked, "I took you for a bootblacks' nest, but it seems to be a regular Gospel shop."

"The proprietor moistened a shoe with his breath, and drove his brush vigorously over its surface. The gaslight danced with figured shades to the softened strains of theatre's music. Gillmore touched him on the shoulder with the tip of his umbrella. 'Uncle,' he said; 'do you black boots or preach God here?'

"'With all due respect, sir, I do both,' said the meek negro, without a particle of Ethiopian dialect.

"Gillmore looked nonplussed, but he struck a quaint stream of inquiry, and followed it to its logical sequence. 'Which pays the best?' he asked as he withdrew his right foot from the iron pedal.

"'The Almighty Father, sir,' was the humble reply. 'He is the paymaster of the universe, sir. His workmen never strike for wages. He declares a dividend of love and peace every night and morning, sir. It sends sunshine into the heart, lifts the cloud from the brow, and it lightens the heavy burden on the road of life, sir.

"Gillmore blinked and began to whistle. He seemed disturbed in mind. The old man was again silent. He had bent himself to work on the left foot, with a brush in each hand, and he was running both brushes with the regularity of a piston rod. The manager of the theatre made another break.

"'Brother Johnson,' said he, 'I suppose you read these books when you're all alone here?'

"'With all due respect, sir, I never was alone,' was the humble response.

"'A man as pious as you pretend to be ought never to copper the truth,' Gillmore dryly observed.

"'I don't understand you, sir,' the negro replied.

"'To copper the truth, means to lie,' said Gillmore. 'Don't you know anything about faro?'

"'I know that he was drowned in the Red Sea, sir; but I didn't know that it was for lying. The Good Book says it was because God hardened his heart, sir.'

"'This won't wash,' Gillmore continued. 'You're double banking me. Come now. Didn't you just tell me that you were never alone, and isn't that a lie? Every man is alone sometimes.'

"'With all due respect, sir, I told you the truth,' the blackamoor answered. 'I am never alone. God is 'always with me. Not a man is out of His presence. He is always with you, sir. The preachere wouldn't accept your invitation to see the play, sir, but God accepted it. You might not have seen Him, but He is there every night, sir. He watches and guards you better than He watched and guarded the Brooklyn Theatre, sir.'

"The old man had put a final gloss on the manager's shoes, as he stood, brush in hand, in the rapture of a religious fervor. He turned a stream of fiery exhortations upon his questioner. Gillmore sat as though spell-bound. Such imagery, metaphor, warmth, sincerity and eloquence he had never heard before. Tears welled from the darky's eyes as he warned the manager, in pleading tones, to flee from the wrath to come. It was probably the most condensed revival sermon that was ever delivered. The whole plan of salvation was covered in less than five minutes. Gillmore was paralyzed. He seemed fascinated by the rude sophistry of the negro. No psychologist ever had a man more completely in his power. The sinner was fairly on the point of conviction and contrition when a blair of trumpets from the heart of the theatre broke the spell. Satan had played in some of his fine work, and Gillmore was again adrift on the sea of sin. He drifted away right nobly, however.

"'That's worth a half dollar tome,' he said as he dropped the coin in the old man's palm and disappeared without waiting any politics.

"Four days afterward I met Henry Clair, late superintendent of the Metropolitan. On hearing the story he said that the boot black was a regularly ordained minister of the Gospel. His name is the Rev. E. G. Thomas, and he has a church, as Clair put it, 'up country somewhere.'

"'He is the happiest man in the city,' Clair continued. 'He makes enough by blacking boots to run his church and support his family. He's the most pious man I ever saw. He never eats even a bit of cheese without saying grace, and he is singing psalms and praying all day long.

"I saw the Rev. Mr. Thomas a day or two afterward, and asked him whether it was true that he was the happiest man in the city. "'I would be,' he replied, 'if I could only be the means of saving the soul of Mr. Gillmore. He needs the saltpeter of salvation powerful bad, sir—powerful bad.'"

According to the Pall Mall Gazette Mark Twain's income from royalties from his English publishers is over £1,000, or $5,000 a year.

The total area of land under hop-cultivation throughout the world is estimated at about 300,000 acres, of which nearly a fourth are in Bavaria.

Stamps of the value of £10,000,000 sterling are always kept in the custody of one of the officials at Sumerset House. The yearly issue of stamps numbers about 2,000,000,000.

Physician—"Now, my little fellow, you must take this medicine like a man. Your father doesn't grumble, does he, when he has to take medicine?" "Oh, no," said the little fellow, "but then he takes his in beer water and sugar."

It is stated that the consumption of distilled spirit increases yearly in France in an alarming manner, having doubled itself within forty years, and being to a great extent substituted for wine. The relative mild drunkenness occasioned by wine is given place to the intoxication produced by distilled liquors containing a higher proportion of propylic, butylic, and anylic alcohols. "Fortified" wines are also rendered dangerous by the introduction of the higher alcohols.

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE.

CHAPTER II.

Without the city walls, hidden by the umbrella pines, and back from those secluded walks where young Rome takes its pleasure, stood the Villa Salvarino, almost under the shade of the walls, and hard by the gate of San Pancrazio. In the more prosperous days of the Eternal City, it might have been, and indeed was, the residence of some great Roman family; but aristocracies decline and families pass away; and the hanghty owners were by no means averse from making a few English pounds by letting it to any traveller who had the inclination or the means to spend a few months there. The present tenant at this bright Easter-time, Sir Geoffrey Charteris, of Grosvenor Square, London, W., and Haversham Park, in the county of Dorset, Baronet, Deputy-lieutenant, and Justice of the Peace, was a man of long descent. The pale azure fluid in his veins was not the blood of us poor mortals; his life-giving stream had been transmitted through succeeding generations from a long line of gallant warriors and gentle dames; from fearless ancestors who followed their sovereign at the call to arms, marched with Richard of the Lion-heart to the Holy Sepulchre, and maybe crossed swords with the doughty Saladin himself. The title, conferred upon a Charteris by the Black Prince in person after the glorious field of Crecy, had known no tarnish as it passed down the long line of great and good men, soldiers, statesmen, and divines, to the present worthy representative of all these honors. Not that he had greatly distinguished himself in any field, save as an Under-secretary in a short-lived inglorious Ministry, where he had made a lasting name as the most incompetent individual ever appointed to office, though he dated every subsequent event and prefixed every after-dinner story by an allusion to the time when he was in the Earl of Mudcleton's Ministry.

The reception rooms of the villa were crowded when our friends arrived. It was a kind of informal after-dinner reception, attended by most of the English visitors lingering after the Carnival, with some sprinkling of the resident aristocracy; for Sir Geoffrey liked to gather people round him, birth and genius being equally welcome. Sir Geoffrey looked every inch an English gentleman, standing there among his guests. He was apparently about fifty years of age, tall and straight, thoroughbred from his stiff gray hair to the small shapely feet, as yet untroubled by the family gout. His eyes were pale blue, and somewhat weak; his face, clear-cut and refined, with an aquiline nose and a high white forehead, but the whole marred by a mouth weak and nervous to the last degree. A connoisseur of art, a dabbler in literature, and last, but not least, a firm believer in spiritualism.

Enid Charteris, his only daughter and heiress, a girl about eighteen, must be taken for granted. Imagine in your dreams of fair women what a golden-bronzed-haired girl should be, and you have Enid, with all her charms of manner and person, with that perfect expression without which the most classic features are cold. She smiled brightly as the new comers entered. It is not given to every one to be able to disguise their likings and antipathies, and it did not need a practised eye to see her cold greeting for Le Gautier, and the instantaneous glance for Maxwell.

"I really began to think you were going to fail me," she said: "and this is the last of our receptions too. I shall always have pleasant recollection of my visit to Rome."

"We have been dining with Maxwell, Miss Charteris," Visci explained. "Could we forget you, if we tried! And now, before you are so engaged that you can have no word for poor me, I want to ask you a favour. We are going to my country retreat on Fridey, and my sister Genevieve is dying to see you. Do persuade Sir Geoffrey to come."

"Here he is to answer for himself," she replied, as the baronet sauntered up to the group.—"Papa, you must promise to take me to see Signor Visci's country-house on Friday. Do you hear?"

"Anything you say is law, my dear," Sir Geoffrey answered with comic resignation. "Anything you desire.—Le Gautier, I wish to speak to you," he whispered quietly; "come to me presently.—Salvarini, you hear? I thought you had forsworn gaieties of all descriptions. Glad to see you are thinking better of your misanthropy."

Le Gautier turned off with the baronet somewhat impatiently, leaving the rest together. Salvarini, looking on somewhat thoughtfully, almost fancied there was a look of relief in Enid's face as the Frenchman left; certainly, she was less constrained.

"We shall look forward to Friday with great pleasure, then, signor Visci," she said.

"I have heard you speak so much of the Villa Mattio, that I am expecting to see a perfect paradise."

"With two Eves," Maxwell whispered in English. Visci was not a man to misunderstand the meaning of true company, so, with a bow and a little complimentary speech, he turned aside, taking Salvarini by the arm, and plunged into the glittering crowd.

"I do not understand the meaning there," Salvarini remarked as they walked through the rooms. "If Maxwell means"——

"Orange blossoms," Visci interrupted laconically; "and right, too.—Let us get into the music-room. Le Fanu is going to play."

Maxwell remained by Enid's side, toying with her fan and discoursing in their native language in a low voice. From the expression in his face and the earnest ring in his voice, there was no doubting the power of attraction that chained him there.

"When do you leave Rome, Miss Charteris?" he asked, abruptly changing the conversation. "This is your last reception, I know."

"We shall leave in the middle of next week for certain. I shall be very sorry for some reasons, for I have been happy here."

"I shall probably return with you," Maxwell observed. "I have deferred my departure too long already. It would be pleasant to leave together."

"After learning everything that Rome could teach you," Enid put in archly.

"Then the Eternal City has no more artistic knowledge to impart?"

"Yes; I have learned some lessons here," Maxwell replied with a tender inflection, "besides artistic ones. I have been learning one lately that I am never likely to forget. Am I presumptuous, Miss Enid?"

"Really, Mr. Maxwell, you are too mysterious. If I could understand you"——

"I think you do understand me; I fervently hope you do."

For a moment, a little wild-rose bloom trembled and flushed on the girl's cheek, then she looked down, played with her fan nervously. No reason to say she did not understand now. Maxwell did not follow up his advantage; some instinct warned him not; and adroitly changing the conversation, he told her of his life in Rome, each passing moment linking his chains the firmer. Gradually, as they sat talking, a group of men gathered, round, breaking in upon their tete-a-tete, laughing and talking after the most approved drawing-room fashion.

In a distant corner, Sir Geoffrey had button-holed Le Gautier, and was apparently deep in conversation on some all-absording subject. The Frenchman was a good listener, with that rare faculty of hearing all that was worthy of note and entirely ignoring the superfluous. He was not a man to talk much of himself, and consequently heard a great deal of family history; details and information that astute young man had found valuable on occasions. He was interested now, Maxwell thought, as he idly speculated upon his face.

"Yes," Sir Geoffrey was saying, "I am firmly impressed with that belief." He had got upon his favorite topic, and was talking with great volubility. "There are certain gifted beings who can call spirits from the vasty deep, and, what is more, the spirits will come. My dear sir, they have been manifested to me."

"I should not wonder," Le Gautier replied, stifling a yawn in its birth. "I think you are quite right. I am what people call a medium myself, and have assisted at many a seance."

"Of course you believe the same as I. Let unbelievers scoff if they will, I shall always believe the evidence of my eyes."

"Of course," Le Gautier returned politely, his thoughts wandering feebly in the direction of nightmare, and looking round for some means of escape. "I have seen ghosts myself, or thought I have."

"It is no imagination, Le Gautier," Sir Geoffrey continued, with all the prosy earnestness of a man with a hobby. "The strangest coincidence happened to me. My late brother, Sir Ughtred, who has been dead nearly twenty years, manifested himself to me the other night. Surely that implies some coming evil, or some duty I have neglected?"

"Perhaps he charged you with some commission," Le Gautier observed, and pricking up his ears for any scrap of useful information.

"Not that I remember; indeed, I did not see him for years before he died. He was an eccentric man, and an extreme politician—in fact he got into serious trouble with the authorities, and might even have been arrested, had he not removed himself to New York."

"New York?" queried Le Gautier, wondering vaguely where he had heard of this Ughtred Charteris before. "Was he connected with any secret society—any Socialist conspiracy?"

"Do you know, I really fancy he was," Sir Geoffrey whispered mysteriously. "There were certainly some curious things in his effects which were sent to me. I can show you some now, if you would like to see them."

Le Gautier expressed his willingness; and the baronet led the way into a small room at the back of the house, half library, half studio. In one corner was an old ebony cabinet; and opening the front, he displayed a multitude of curiosities such as a man will gather together in the course of years. In one little drawer was a case of coins. Le Gautier turned them over carelessly one by one, till, suddenly starting, he eagerly lifted one and held it to the light. "Where did you get this?" he asked abruptly.

Sir Geoffrey took it in his hand. It was a gold coin, a little larger than an ordinary sovereign, and bearing on the reverse side a curious device. "That came with the rest of my brother's curiosities.—But why do you ask? You look as if the coin had burnt you."

For a moment, Le Gautier had started back, his pale face aglow with suppressed excitement; but as he noticed the baronet's wondering eyes upon him, he recovered himself by a violent effort. "It is nothing"—with a smile. "It is only the coincidence which startled me for a moment. If you will look here, you will see that I wear a similar coin upon my watch-chain."

Sir Geoffrey looked down, and, surely enough, on the end of Le Gautier's pendant was the fac simile of the medal he held in his hand.

"Bless me, what an extraordinary thing!" the startled baronet exclaimed. "So it is! Perhaps you do not mind telling me where you procured yours?"

"It was given to me," Le Gautier replied, with an enigmatic smile. "It could not help you, if I told you.—Sir Geoffrey, may I ask you to lend me this coin for a short while? I will tell you some time what I want it for."

"Some other time, perhaps,"—Le Gautier threw the coin into its place.—"You see, I regard it as a valuable curiosity and relic, or perhaps I might part with it. You will pardon me.—But I forgot all all about our spiritualistic discourse. As you are a medium, I will ask you"——

"At some future time, with all the pleasure in life," Le Gautier interrupted hastily. "Meanwhile, it is getting late—past eleven now."

As they walked back to the salon, the Frenchman was busy with his thoughts. "What a lucky find!" he muttered. "It is the missing insignia, sure enough, and the ill-fated Ughtred Charteris is mine host's brother. I wonder what I can make out of this? There ought to be something in it, with a feeble-minded man who believes in spiritualism, if my hand has not lost its cunning. Nous verrons."

He showed nothing of his thoughts, however, as he parted from Enid with a smile and neatly turned compliment. It was getting late now; the streets were empty as the friends turned homeward, Salvarini bidding the others good-night and turning off in the direction of his apartments.

"You had better change your mind, and come with us on Friday, Hector," Visci urged Le Gautier. "The baronet and his daughter are to be of the party. Throw work to the dogs for the day, and come."

"My dear Carlo, the thing is impossible. Do you think I should be chained here this lovely weather, if stern necessity did not compel? If possible I will get over later in the day, I will not fail you."

"I am very sorry," Visci replied regretfully, "because this is the last time, in all probability, our friends will meet together for some time."

"I am sorry too, Carlo, but I cannot help it. Good-night."

Le Gautier watched his friend along the moonlit street, a smile upon his face not pleasant to see. "Ah, yes,' he murmured "it is quite impossible. Genevieve is a good little girl, but good little girls are apt to cloy. It is getting dangerous. If Visci should find out, it would be a case of twelve paces and hair-triggers; and I cannot sacrifice myself yet—not even for Genevieve.'

(TO BE CONTINUED).

VARIETIES.

The experiment of turning cats loose in Australia to destroy the swarms of rabbits is reported to have proved eminently successful.

Ghee is much used in India in a way similar to our use of butter, suet, or lard for cooking purposes. It is made of boiling fresh milk in earthen pots for an hour, and after it has cooled adding curdled milk. Made pure, it will keep for years fresh, and is highly prized in every class in India.

In 1842 the depression of trade and agriculture in the United Kingdom was even greater than that of the last few years. In that year pauperism and crime reached, not their relative, but their actual maxima, till at last one person in every eleven was a pauper, and one in every five hundred was committed for trial.

The fur-seal has been many times confounded with the hair-seal. Two animals more disimilar in their individualty and method of living can hardly be imagined, although they belong to the same group and live apparently upon the same food. The hair-seal, white or grey in colour, common on every marine shore, has no generic affinity with those seals with which it has usually been associated, the fur-seal and the sea-lion. It no more resembles them than does the raccoon a black or grizzly bear.

In Chunking, the capital of Se-Chuen, China, it is usual to see in the streets, after the shops have been shut, a number of street-preachers, arrayed in full clerical garb, expounding the teachings of Confucius. They are employed by a benevolent society and the custom is prevalent all over China. Another benevolent society devotes itself to collecting waste paper. The Chinese believe that, as writing was given to them from heaven, to devote paper bearing written or printed characters to vulgar purposes is desecration; and so all the paper the society collects is burnt outside the city in enclosures erected for the purpose.

Mr. J. G. Barbour tells the following queer story as to the origin of Athole brose, a peculiar mixture of honey and whiskey. There was once a terrible wild man of the woods who was a great nuisance to the lovely heiress of the honours and lands of Tullibardine. Accordingly she let it be known that the slayer of this monster should be rewarded with her hand. At the particular desire of the lady a handsome young man in humble life entered the lists; and this was how he succeeded. At a certain hour in the day the monster was accustomed to resort to a hollow stone in the forest to drink. This hollow stone one day was filled with whiskey and honey. He drank it, and fell and easy prey to the handsome young man, who won the heiress; and ever since the particular mixture in question has been know by the name of Athole brose.

HOME AND GENERAL NEWS.

Ploughing was commenced on March 15th in Lethbridge and McLeod districts, N. W. T.

It is reported that there is a suspicious vessel off Youghal, County Cork, waiting to land a cargo of dynamite.

Tippoo Tib, appointed Governor of Stanley Falls by Mr. Henry M. Stanley, is to receive a salary of $1,800 a year.

Fifteen to twenty miles of snowsheds will be built by the Canadian Pacific railway this summer in the vicinity of Donald, B. C.

Measures for the development of the black cod fisheries of British Columbia are expected to be adopted by the Government this summer.

Pirates are roaming about Tonquin in powerful bands committing all kinds of outrages, and the French troops are too weak to cope with them.

With a view to protecting the fisheries of the province the Manitoba Fish and Game Protection Society is trying to get the export of fish prohibited.

Two Mounted Policemen at McLeod named Johnston and Toomey, who got intoxicated and resisted arrest, have been sentenced to twelve months' hard labor.

It is reported that Lood Balfour of Burleigh and Lord Dunraven are drafting a scheme for Ireland, which will be submitted to the next session of Parliament.

Unfounded reports are circulated at Peshawur to the effect that the Ameer of Afghanistan is dead, that Kelat has fallen and that Cabul and Candahar are in danger.

It is expected that the affairs of the insolvent Exchange Bank, of Montreal, which have been in liquidation for three years and a half, will soon be finally wound up.

M. Barthelmy Saint Hilaire has published a work on British India, in which he advocates the formation of a league in Western Europe to check the advance of the Slav-empire.

The plans and preparations for the new station of the Canadian Pacific railway in the west end of Montreal are completed, and contracts will be let and work commenced forthwith.

It is reported that negotiations for the transfer by the Michigan Central railway of the entire Canada Southern line to the Canadian Pacific are in progress, and are likely to be soon completed.

It appears now that Major-General Krock, Russian commander at Warsaw, who was said to have been murdered, committed suicide on learning that his son had been arrested on suspicion of being implicated in the recent attempt to assassinate the Czar.

Joseph Racine, the alleged counterfeiter, who escaped from a Montreal detective recently, has written from Paris to the Montreal Chief of Police offering to come back and turn Queen's evidence if guaranteed immunity from prosecution.

Lieut.-Governor Angers, of Quebec, continues to suffer so greatly from ill-health as to seriously interfere with his performance of public functions. It is reported that he would have resigned some time ago but for the pressing solicitations of Mr. Mercier.

It is rumoured that Mr. Ross, ex-Premier of Quebec, and Mr. Cornwall, ex-Lieutenant-Governor of British Columbia, will be appointed to the Senate to fill the vacancies caused by the death of Mr. Chapais and the appointment of Mr. Nelson to succeed Mr. Cornwall in British Columbia.

The contract for the masonry work of the Canadian Pacific railway bridge at Sault Ste. Marie has been awarded, and the work is to be completed by November 15th. The contract price is $260,000, which, with the ironwork, will bring the total cost of the bridge up to $400,000.

The London Times, commenting on the appeal of the members of the Newfoundland Legislature for compensation for losses sustained by the disallowance of the Bait bill, says the suffering complained of is real and serious and might have been already removed but for the dilatoriness of the Colonial Office.

Recently a cow belonging to Mr. Richard Coad, of South Ekfrid, gave birth to a double-headed calf. The heads were perfect in shape and size, and each had a separate neck which united at the shoulders. There was also two backbones, which united in the centre of the back. At birth the calf weighed 103 pounds.

Mr. Cormier, M. PP. for Ottawa County, recently received an intimation that the wife of one of his constituents, Mrs. Luke C. Ryan, of Stagsburn, on the Gatineau river, had given birth to triplets, and as it is understood the Queen's bounty is no longer extended in connection with such events, Mr. Cormier headed a subscription and raised $100 for her among the members of the House.

Mr. John Sanagan, a veteran of the war of 1812, died at St. Thomas recently, at the advanced age of 94 years and five months. Deceased was born in Montreal in 1792. He enlisted in the Canadian volunteers when the Americans invaded Canada in 1812, and secured his discharge in 1815. He took part in the battle of Fort Detroit and Chrysler's farm in 1814, serving under Col. Salisbury, and was awarded a medal for his bravery.

Russia.

The Empire of the Czar is so vast in its extent that it bewilders the mind to attempt to form a picture of it.

Sweeping from the White Sea, the Polar Ocean, at the north of Europe, eastward to the Sea of Japan and the waters of America, where she has ceded to the United States a domain in the New World larger than France embracing the vast realm of Siberia; bordering upon China on the south, and touching Afghanistan at the gate of India; flanking Persia, and hovering like a dark cloud over the whole of the Turkish Empire, while on the extreme, west she faces Germany, Austria and the new Kingdom of Roumania, Russia presents, in one compact mass a territory such as no earthly monarch has ever before ruled over.

To the people of the narrowed kingdoms of Europe, who watch jealously every movement of Russia, the Empire is grand, mysterious and fearful. They know its more than eighty million people include many races, all of whom seem willing to serve their Emperor. He has at his command a standing army of more than six hundred thousand men, and could call under arms two million soldiers.

The vastness and mystery of the Empire make it even more formidable than do the figures which represent its armed men.

The distant camps of the primitive Aryans, who still worship the sacred fire; the Iranians and their ancient enemies, barbarous Turanian, at peace at last under the flag of a foreign master; Tartars of every sort, faithful in their allegiance to their white master; Georgians, Circassians and Armenians; rude Samoyedes, people like Esquimaux in the extreme north; troops upon troops of Cossacks, the organized "Cowboys" of Russia; and, then the great mass of European Russians, with the Lapps and Finns, and myraids of Jews; all these diverse peoples belonging, with all their goods and their very live, to one man, and one only, the Great White Czar—all these make up a vague but formidable whole.

It is no wonder that the statesmen of Europe have Russia seldom out of mind, and that they sometimes attribute to her the strangest and darkest purposes, some of them the most unlikely for her to entertain.

The nation whose people are most jealous of the power of Russia is the English, for it looks upon the Czar as the greatest if not the only danger to its possessions in India.

But Russia has another rival in Austria-Hungary, for the interests of the two nations in the countries which have been from time to time sliced off the Turkish Empire, are constantly clashing.

Toward Germany Russia is friendly, and the German Government seeks to maintain the best of relations with the Czar; but there is jealousy between the two countries, which are,—and because they are,—the two greatest and most commanding powers in Europe.

The people of France are most friendly toward Russia, because they see the rivalry with Germany, and they have a proverb: "My next-door neighbor is my natural enemy, but my next-door neighbor but one is my natural friend, because he is the enemy of my enemy."

The power of peace or war lies in the hands of Alexander III., Emperor of Russia, but he is not likely to exercise it lightly. Although he is an absolute monarch, he could not govern long against the wish of his people.

His power is not limited by a parliament, but he feels none the less the influence of the thought of the people, and no absolute sovereign was probably ever more in sympathy with the inclinations of his people than is Alexander III.

They desire peace, and it is probable that he also desires it. But he is a warlike monarch, and the Russian people have become used to war, so that it is almost a second nature to them. A small event may precipitate a great conflict.

Plaster of Paris is not suitable for moulds for brass. Any fine sand, wet with water containing a little clay, can be made a fair moulding sand. Use as little clay and water as will just make the sand hold together when squeezed in the hand.

FARM.

No Putrid Food For Cows.

Many people have a vague idea that "milk is milk," no matter what sort of a cow it has come from, or on what food the cow has been kept. This is a great mistake, and sometimes a very serious one, as the National Live Stock Journal points out in the following article:

There is no test so delicate as the infant stomach to settle the question as to whether a cow, or a herd of cows in milk, are being fed unwholesome food. The infant's stomach will within a few hours after partaking of the milk of cows fed upon brewers' grains, rebel against the irritating properties contained, the stomach rejecting it by vomiting, and the bowels getting rid of it in the form of frequent evacuations, offensive, green, and sometimes frothy, in which are lumps of undigested milk. The following case is illustrative, and such occur frequently: An infant was being raised by hand, and special effort was made to procure select milk from a neighboring cow, rather than to depend upon milk shipped into the city and hauled aronad by milkmen. On the milk of this cow the infant took on a very bad condition from which it would improve upon treatment for a day, but immediately relapse, and after several weeks of this experience, a watch was put upon the woman who owned the cow, and she was detected in gathering refuse from the alleys, vegetables and decaying food thrown out from kitchens. Upon this information a change was made, and the infant began at once to grow better. It would be as unreasonable to expect good bread from flour made from damaged grain as to expect pure milk from cows that had their rations made up of damaged food, such as had become tainted by age or soured through exposure to heat and moisture. Those who are raising valuable high-bred calves need not look for health and thrift in these calves except the best of fresh food be given to the dams. The putridity contained in decaying food enters and poisons the blood, and it is from the blood that the milk is extracted in the udder. Let no man flatter himself that the digestive organs can separate the putridity, casting it aside, for they cannot do this; but, on the other hand, the damaged material goes wherever the blood goes—to the lungs, liver, kidneys, and udder, and in the latter, enters the milk.

Notes and Suggestions.

An eastern farmer says he does not know of anything finer than a good ox team, and that wherever you see one you see good crops.

Should spring open early, and the grass start, do not be tempted to allow the stock to graze on it until it is well under growth. Trampling on young grass does more damage than grazing it closely.

Whenever it is noticed that the hogs eat gravel it is a sign that something that they need is lacking. A few pieces of coal, or charcoal, will probably be a cure, while the food should at the same time be varied.

The four-year-old steer is now known no more in the advanced circle of cattle feeding. All of the big steers, which used to tip the beams at 1500 to 2000 pounds, were four years past, but now they do it at three years past.

Mr. Gregory says he has never seen water running in drains he has built for underdraining land after the first year. His theory is that after the accumulations of many years have been removed there is but little water running in the drains.

Charred wood from the stove, or charcoal in any shape, is excellent for hogs. It is best to keep charcoal in the pens where the hogs can always have free access to it. Rotten wood is also relished by hogs, and they are very fond of burnt bread or other charred substances.

More and more the active, prosperous men of the city are turning to farming, but there are lots of foolish ventures in this line and thousands and tens of thousands of dollars have been wasted after the absurdest fashion, and yet city people with money to spend keep trying their hands at farming.

The fruit jellies of commerce are fittingly called Horticultural Oleomargarine by Orchard and Garden, because they are such a compound of adulterations. For instance, alleged "currant jelly" is composed of water, glucose, tartaric acid, gelatine, aniline red and dried cores and skins of apples, the refuse of evaporating establishments, often sour and decayed before drying.

Well brought up dogs let sheep alone, but a dog's education is not ended before he is two or three years old. Many a valuable puppy if left at large at night, which he never should be, is enticed off on a marauding expedition by some little cur he accepts as a playmate. It is usually perfectly safe to let old dog's have the range of the premises; young ones never, if there are sheep within several miles

Farmers should not forget, in the hurry of spring work, that a good kitchen garden is "a handy thing to have" near the house—"especially in the country," as Mr. Sparrowgrass would say. Plan it out now and plan it so as to permit the use of a horse in cultivating as much as possible. Allow plenty of room, run long rows, and allow for a good variety of vegetables. Their use will promote health, give pleasant zest to the daily meals, and lighten the worry of the good wife in providing palatable food for the "men folks" and children.

In the case of trees which bear in alternate years, judicious thinning will often result in considerable fruit in the off year.

A breeder of poultry says—"Every spring I procure a quantity of cedar boughs and scatter them plentifully in and around the hen-house, The odour of cedar keeps away vermin. The remedy is simple and effective."

The forest-products of Canada constitute one of her most important sources of wealth. The export under this head in 1886 was £5,303,873; the annual output in timber and logs for the same year was 111,633,862 feet cubic of different kinds of timber, 48,350,091 pine and other descriptions of logs.

A curious belief of the Chinese is what is called the "Fengchui," or the influence of wind and water upon the physical and mental prosperity of the race. There are regular authorities in this belief, and without consulting them a Chinaman will not build a house or choose a grave. This belief has one great charm, insomuch that everything in a Chinese city is found to harmonise with nature. The houses all face to the south, and wherever the eye rests it meets with a pleasing picture.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Publisher.

MARKDALE, APRIL. 21, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Winnipeg has increased in population 2,000 the past year.

—F. W. Jarvis, Esq., Sheriff of York County, died suddenly in Toronto last Saturday.

—The Dominion Exhibition grant of $10,000 is to be given this year to the Toronto Industrial.

—Sir Donald Smith and Sir George Stephen have donated $500,000 each for a jubilee memorial hospital in Montreal on condition that the city furnishes the site.

—Rev. Dr. McCaul, formerly President of University Coll ege, died in Toronto last Saturday.

—It Has Been Suggested that a new gold coin the "Victoria", of the value of fifty shillings be struck in commemoration of the Jubilee. It is somewhat remarkable that the soverign should be the largest gold coin bearing the Queen's head, and a coin worth twelve dollars and a half might be useful as well as symbolical.

—In the last fourty-six years the consumptions of wines and spirits in the United States has not kept pace with the population, but the consumption of beer has increased twenty-eight times. The drinking population is estimated at 15 millions, and the amount consumed by each of these is in round numbers fourty-three gallons of malt liquors, a gallon and a half of wine and nearly five gallons of spirits. The annual direct waste of money on these beverages is seven hundred million dollars, besides probably, an equal amount of injurey through waste of value in human life and strength, and the cost of gaoles and asylums. Fourteen hundred million dollars is five percent upon a capital of twenty-eight thousand million dollars, the amount to which the nation could be enriched by effective prohibition.

—The Government bill respecting the formation of new countries provides that a proposed new county must contain a population of not less than 30,000; that the Councils of each of the municipalities which have not less than 200 municipal electors must pass within the space of one year a resolution affirming the expediency of establishing a new count, setting fourth the proposed name of the new county and designating the county town; that the vote shall be taken in connection with the municipal elections; and that, supported by a majority of all the electors of the proposed new county and by majorities in every municipality having more than 200 electors, the Lieutenant Governor in Council may by proclamation erect the territory into a new provisional county.

THE STATION YARD.

Our Railway Station yard is in a shameful condition. We are surprised that the roadmaster for this division persistently neglects to make the necessary improvements. This is one of the most important stations on this branch. and it is surely nothing more than reasonable to expect better treatment from a wealthy and prosperous company. We have referred to this matter year after year and earnestly hope that the necessary improvrments will speedily be made.

Hesford Road.

Death has again visited our neighborhood Miss Ida Gimby who has been ailing for the most of the winter passed away to her heavenly home last Friday morning. Her remains were taken to Owen Sound for interment in the family burying plot.

W. J. Holly and W. Smith have gone to Wiarton to work this summer; they report business booming.

Real spring weather is very slow in putting in an appearance. The fall wheat looks well at present and only wants warm weather to insure a good crop.

Feversham.

Well Mr, Editor you have not heard from our town for some time. I now endeavor to give you a few items.

Mr S. E. Spence of Walkerton has started a Tailor shop in this place and is doing a good trade. Miss Drew of, Markdale has been engaged as head Tailoress.

Rev. T Hall is home again from Michigan where he has been preaching.

Our friend Camp. is away on a visit, some are praying for his return.

A most disgraceful row took place at the S. A. Barracks last Sunday night in which some of our quietest young men were led into the fray, the boys are all down on the Captain now, owing to the way he acted.

W. J. McGirr purchased Camps. two year old "Puzzler colt. Will says she can go some.

G. H, Perigo late of Feversham but now of Collingwood has been visiting friends here for a short time.

Mr. R. A. Park our genial and obliging Stage Driver has gone to Toronto; he purposes going to Nebraska.

Flesherton.

Our Excelsior Brass Band now second to none in the County, having lately completed their uniforms by the addition of handsome plated lamps for their caps, donned their uniform and with lights brightly burning serenaded our town on Saturday evening last and for nearly an hour made the welkin ring with inspiring music.

The Band intends giving a first class concert in the Town Hall here on Friday evening the 22nd which we have no doubt will be well patronized, they deserve a crowded house as they have always been liberal with music and ready to serve on any occasion.

During the severe thunder storm experienced here on Friday evening last it grew so dark the lamps had to be lighted at five o'clock. Considerable debris was driven in the hurricane and small trees were lashed like rawhides. East of the village the lightning played over the wires and a number of Telegraph poles were shattered to their bottom in the earth. Mr. Chas Hales sustained heavy loss and damage to property by fences being driven before the whirl wind which appeared to run in two veins, the roof was taken off his barn and carried some distance, also several rounds of logs, it being a log building,

Messrs Hannah and Carson appeared in Owen Sound last Friday to have Justice meted out, re., the quarrel in the Hotel the week previous, when Hannah was fined five dollars and costs.

Thos. Wyvell, Esq., is now rapidly pushing forward his new dwelling here and intends moving in as soon as possible.

Master E. K. Richardson left on Tuesday last to resume his studies in Owen Sound High School.

Died at his home on Tuesday morning, poor Norman Boyles, so long known here after a very brief illness. He first felt ill on Sunday evening. Inflamation set in terminating fatally in about 36 hours: those who waited on him say he was very patient and willing to take any treatment prescribed.

School Report.

Report of the Markdale Public School for the three months ending March 31st.

1st Division.

No of days school kept open	62
No of pupils on roll	69
Aggregate attendance for 3 months	2899
Average	47

2nd Division.

No of days school kept open	63
No of pupils on roll	74
Aggregate attendance for 3 months	3246
Average	52

3rd Division.

No of days school kept open	63
No of pupils on roll	78
Aggregate attendance for 3 months	3010
Average	48
Total No of pupils on roll	211
" Aggregate for 3 months	9155
" Average	147

The first division was closed on Feb. 22nd for the purpose of using the room as a polling booth.

Parents and those interested will see by the above report that only about one half of the pupils on the roll attended school regularly. This you see is not giving either the pupil or teacher a fair chance. Let me urge upon parents the great benefit derived by their children from a regular attendance at the public school.

Eliza Porter
Teacher

Good Advice.

Don't buy Dress Goods until you see McFarland's Immense Assortment.

Don't buy Millinery without consulting Miss Bremner, McFarland's Milliner.

Don't buy Silks, Velvets, Gloves, or Laces, before seeing

McFARLAND'S

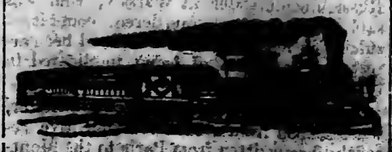
Don't select your Carpets, Lace Curtains, Floor Oil Cloth or Cretons, from any other house except

MC FARLAND'S.

Don't let any Young Man, Old Man, Boy or Child, who wants a perfect fitting newest style low priced Suit of clothes pass

McFARLAND'S.

Don't forget, McFarland has the Sweetest, Strongest, Purest and Cheapest, Tea in the County.



Don't neglect to look through McFarland's Immense Establishment crowded with new goods bought for cash down, in the best markets of the world all of which will be sold at a small profit.

Don't think it economy to buy a Shoddy Boot. For it is not, McFarland has received a large addition to his stock of Kid, Goat, Calf and Buff Boots, Women's Men's Boy's Misses' and Child's, all solid leather.

He will be pleased to have you call when in Markdale, and assure you of his best services.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY, Proprietor.

Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business, and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine, which will lift the stone, carry it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited

R. McNALLY.

MARKDALE

SAsH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,

MARKDALE.

The Law Concerning News papers.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed in his name, or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted in the place where the paper is published, although the subscriber may reside hundreds of miles away.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post office or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

Priceville.—George Lemmt, of this place, Ont., says he can heartily recommend Yellow Oil as the best reliever of rheumatic pain; his father and mother having suffered for years with rheumatism and all remedies failed except Yellow Oil.

Unparalleled Offer.

No. 1.—The Markdale Standard	$1.00
No. 2.—The American Agriculturist (English or German), 1887	1.00
No 3.—The A. A. New Poultry Book, for everybody. 256 pages. 100 Illustrations. Most complete work ever published	1.00
No. 4.—Engravings. "Home of our Farmer Presidents," 11x18. issued during 1887. Each worth	1.00
No. 5.—The same issued during 1886, forwarded post-paid, in a tube prepared for the purpose. Each worth	1.00
No. 6.—Articles describing the Engravings of the "Home of our Farmer Presidents," written expressly for this purpose by James Parton, Donald G. Mitchell (Ik Marvel,) printed on tinted paper.

Companion Portraits.

No. 7.—A magnificent portrait of General Grant from his last sitting. Grand Cabinet size, 19 by 24 inches, and engraved at large expense, especially for subscribers to this combination, and supplied to no other persons. Price. 1.00

No. 8.—A superb steel plate engraving of General Logan, 12 by 16 inches in size, from a photograph by Brady elegantly mounted on heavy, highly finished paper suitable for framing or for the centre table. Price. 1.00

No. 9.—A magnificent portrait of Henry Ward Beecher. Full cabinet size, engraved expressly for the subscribers of this combination by the new process direct from a negative taken by Bulk after Mr. Beecher's recent return from Europe. 1.00

Total $8.50

We will furnish all the above post-paid for $2.50. Send six cents to 751 Broadway, New York, for mailing you specimen copy of the American Agriculturist, English or German, specimen proofs of the engravings, and specimen pages of Poultry Book.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANCES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

Dundalk Spring Fair will be held next Monday, 25th.

A GOOD LIFE PRESERVED.—I was completely relieved from that dreadful disease dyspepsia, with only four bottles of that life preserver—B. B. B., and cheerfully recommend it to any one subject to such disease. P. Devanny, Harrisburg, Ont.

RICHARD HORN, of Big Bay, near Clarton, had his foot cut off while working in a saw mill last week.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient Catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh; 3 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic Catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333-83

Chatsworth Spring Show on the 29th.

OVERWORKED.—"My husband strained himself with overwork, causing a large swelling in the groin. He suffered great agony, which doctors failed to relieve; he could not eat or sleep. B. B. B. quickly cured him. He says he never had such quick relief in his life" Extract from a letter from Mrs. George Bosk, Cooksville, Ont.

Rev. Mr. Fairlie, of Chatsworth, was presented with 50 bushels of oats for his horse by his congregation last week.

A PROFITABLY LIFE.—Few men have accomplished the same amount of work and good in this world as the celebrated Dr. Chase. Over 500,000 of his works have been sold in Canada alone. We want every person troubled with Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Headache, Kidney or Urinary Troubles, to buy a bottle of Dr. Chases Liver Cure, it will cure you. Medicine and Receipe Book $1.

A COMMON OCCURANCE.—Many bad joints by which people are cripled for life, are made by neglected or badly treated rheumatism. Ida Pink, of Strathroy, Ont., was afflicted with rheumatism in her fingers so that she could not bend them. Yellow Oil cured her, and is a prompt cure for all painful complaints.

Mr. Norman Robertsou of Kincardine has been appointed Treasurer of Burce County.

A SEVERE ATTACK.—"I never felt better in my life than I have since taking Burdock Blood Bitters. I had a severe bilious attack; I could not eat for several days, and was unable to work. One bottle cured me." John M. Richards, Sr., Tara, Ont. For all bilious troubles use B. B. B.

A farmer near Neustadt named John Junghut was killed last Friday by lightning.

SURE TO SATISFY.—There are many remedies for coughs and colds, but there are few that prove so satisfactory as Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which is a pleasant and reliable cure for all throat and lung troubles, including bronchitis, asthma, croup, whooping cough and the pulmonary complaints of young or old.

Mr. Thos. Long, of Collingwood, is going to Toronto to reside.

BABIES AND CHILDREN.—They are always catching cold in their head. Place a small particle of Nasal Balm in each nostril at night, also rub well over the bridge of the nose, and let us know how they are in the morning.

THE MANITOBAN SAYS:—"Mr. G. L. Dodds, of Wolseley, who has a large general store there, is spoken of as a likely Conservative candidate for the North West Council, the vacancy being caused by Mr. W. D. Perley retiring to run for the Commons."

TAMARAC.—It is an ordinary mixture. In fact its properties are entirely different from any preparation used for Coughs, Colds, Throat and Lung Troubles.

CLIPPINGS.

LEG BROKEN.—Mr. Abraham Cook of Trayerston got his leg broken on Good Friday. There was a sawing bee at his own place, and while drawing in a log, another fell off a pile on him with the above sad result. We hope that it will mend as soon as possible.—[Durham Chronicle.

We omitted to mention last week the return home, from "C" School of Infantry, Toronto, of our young friends, Mr. W. J. Davis and Mr. Joseph Field. Both young men spent three months in the Military School named, and, what is more important, carried off honors in the shape of first-class certificates. The young men are worthy members of Flesherton Volunteer company—Mr. J. Field holding the position of Bugler, and, no doubt, Mr. Davis will be promoted to non-commissioned officer.—[Advance.

GORED TO DEATH.—Mrs. Archibald Meikle of Benfinck, an old lady over seventy years of age was gored to death last week, by an infuriated newly calved cow. On Friday morning she succumbed to her injuries and was buried on Saturday. Deceased was remarkably industrious, and very highly respected. Her connections have our deepest sympathy.—[Chronicle.

Alex. and William Smyth, two brothers living in the neighborhood of Singhampton, disputed respecting the division of some property while at dinner on the 11th inst., when Alex. seized a butcher knife, and cut William's hand in a most brutal manner, and then taking advantage of William's disabled condition, took six heads of horses and left for parts unknow.—[Creemore Tiser.

Young Frank Trouton, son of Mr Frank Trouton, Sr. of Holland, met with a severe accident on Good Friday. While putting the saddle on the horse the saddle slipped and the horse commenced kicking, and broke young Trouton's leg below the knee and tore the muscle on the flesh part of the leg. Dr. T. McCullough dressed the wounded limb and the patient is doing as well as could be expected.—[Chatsworth News.

It is our painful duty to have to record the sad event of the scalding of Mr. Thos. Curtis' little girl last Friday night which resulted in its death on Saturday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Curtis attended a party, on Friday evening, at Mr. Dan. Shunn's house, previous to his leaving this part of the country, and while Mr. Curtis' little girl was lying asleep in the cardle. beside the cooking stove, a pot of scalding water was accidently knocked off the stove into the cradle, scalding the child in a frightful matter. Death put an end to the little one's sufferings a few hours afterwards, and Mr. and Mrs. Courtis have the sympathy of the public in their sad bereavement. The little girl was one year and seven months old.—[Chatsworth News.

In one sense politics ought never to be taken to the pulpit, but in another they not only may but must be if that pulpit is to continue to be a power for good. In the old slavery days every preacher who said a word against that sum of all the villianies was denounced as carrying politics into the pulpit. So it has been in many cases and so it is still. If a moral question involved in politics then so far the pulpit is to discuss that question and the plain and fearless utterance of God's truth in regard to it is to be proceeded with whatever the objections and who ever may be the objectors, Temperance, for instance, is becoming more and more a political question. Is the pulpit therefore to be dumb on the whole subject for fear the cuckoo cry of political preaching be raised about it? What is the use denouncing the old dead sins of sinners of two thousand years ago, and having nothing to say to those that are so live and active at the present time?—[Truth.

Flesherton is about to lose another excellent family in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. F. Bunt and Miss Mina Bunt who will shortely remove to Markdale. Mr. Bunt, who goes to fill an engagement with Dr. Sproule, M. P. left for that place on Tuesday last. Mrs. and Miss Bunt will not take their departure for a few weeks yet.—[Advance.

SOUTHERN ASTHMA CURE
DOUBLE TREATMENT IN EACH PACKAGE
INSTANT RELIEF FOR
ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS
BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF PRICE
SAMPLES, 25c.; REGULAR SIZE, $1.00
ADDRESS FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

"Profitable -:- Reading."

To intending purchasers of American Watches, Clocks, Jewellery and Silverware, also Engagement or Wedding Rings.

I have the only complete stock of above lines in "Central Grey." It will pay to inspect my stock; get my prices, find out how I do business, learn what my 1, 2 & 3, years warrants mean; then if not square in every particular, I shall not expect you to buy. Over 200 pair of fine Specks in stock 25c. to $3.00.

☞ Fine Watch repairing a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,
MARKDALE.

HEAD QUARTERS
FOR
Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confdence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart:—Late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.
Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—
FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

Stock Taking
SALE
At the Toronto House,
Markdale.
SLAUGHTER PRICES
FOR CASH.
Wm. Brown.

STRATFORD, Aug. 8th 1885.

About three years ago I was laid up with bronchitis, and for six months was unable to do anything. Four bottles of Dr. Sing's Medicine completely cured me, and my health has been excellent ever since, in fact I never felt better in my life.

W. H. MAERS,
G. T. R. Works, Stratford.

SEEDS
Seeds !
SEEDS!
FIELD & GARDEN
SEEDS!
—AT—
Stephen's
DRUG STORE.
Your's Respectfully,
R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.
REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have re-moved to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS.

NOTICE is hereby given that the next examination in the County of Grey for Entrance to Collegiate Institutes and, High Schools will be held on the

4th, 5th, and 6th days of July '87

at Owen Sound, Meaford, Durham and Markdale respectively, commencing on the 4th, at 1:30 p. m.

The examination papers in literature will be set from the following lessons in the authorized reader:—1. The Vision of Mirza 2. The Death of Little Nell. 3. The Bell of Atri. 4. Dora. 5. The Changeling. 6. The Two Breaths. 7. A Forced Recruit at Solferino. 8. National Morality.

The Drawing Book will be No. 4 or No. 5 of the Drawing Course for Public Schools.

The History required will be "Outlines of English History," the outlines of Canadian history generally, with particular attention to the events subsequent to 1841, the municipal institutions of Ontario, and the Federal form of the Dominion Government.

THOMAS GORDON,
Inspector.

Owen Sound, 6th April, 1887. 345

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMP
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE.

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS
H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRAITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,
UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 13, CON., 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation, well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY
31-t Berkley.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.
ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

Partnership Notice.

DR'S SPROULE & BRODIE, have entered into a partnership for the practice of their profession. Dr. Sproule will be found at his old office Turner's Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his office Mathew's new block. 333-46

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for further particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
338-84 Holland Centre P

AUCTION SALE

—OF VALUABLE—

FARM PROPORTY.

Under and by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Registered Mortgage, which will be produced at time of Sale, and upon which default in payment has been made, there will be offered for sale by Public Auction, at the Markdale House, in the Village of Markdale, in the county of Grey, on

Thursday, April 28th,

A. D. 1887, at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon the following valuable land and premises, viz:

Lot No. forty in the fourteenth concession of the Township of Artemesia, containing one hunderd and ten acres more or less.

This is a valuable farm property. On the premises are said to be erected a good dwelling, barn and farm buildings.

TERMS:—Ten per cent to be paid down at time of sale; for balance, terms liberal, and will be made known at the Sale. For further particulars apply to

JOHN LEYS,
Solicitor Toronto.

HOUSEHOLD.

Judgment.

Much is said nowadays about the necessity for exactness in giving a recipe, and yet every housekeeper knows very well that she cannot always follow her own excellent and well tried receipts to the very letter. If she did, her reputation as a first-class cook would be gone forever. The experienced cook knows that there is a great difference in flour. We have made a cake for which we have established quite a reputation, which calls for two cups of flour in the recipe. We make this when in the city, using the Western, new-process flour, and if we use over a cup and a half we spoil our cake, and make it tough and dry. When in the country, using the flour ground at the local mills, it takes the full two cups, and we often shake in a little more before the cake stirs "just right." Again, the eggs to be used are by no means of exactly the same weight, although the successful cake maker will always select eggs of a uniform size for her "company cake." If she uses large eggs, her "judgment" will tell her that she needs a little less water or milk for the wetting of her cake, or a trifle more flour, as she may prefer. And if the eggs are small, she may, if she is sure of herself, put one more in than the printed receipt calls for. As for salt, it is so easily forgotten, it is a good plan to put that in even if the receipt calls for none, except you know that the butter is salter than that which you are in the habit of using. There are very few things that are harmed by the addition of salt, and so many are improved that the salt jar should be placed near the stove that it may be always within reach.

No rule will tell you the precise moment when your scrambled eggs will turn from golden solidity to whey, nor the exact time when your cake shall come forth from the oven, moist yet done, warranted not to fall, and all your fond hopes with it. Nothing but your judgment and experience will tell you the correct heat your oven must have for your graham gems, your bread or your pies, and should you make an error, and put your bread into an oven hot enough for successful gems, or gems into a heat just right for pies, justifiable failure will overtake you.

Good judgment is one of the primal qualifications of a housekeeper, and economy and good living come only in its wake.

More "Emergency Dishes."

A good dinner from scanty materials is a genuine triumph of mind over matter. There is nothing very inviting in the appearance of a leg of mutton or a shoulder that has been well hacked up on its "first appearance." Cold meat is very well for supper, or even for dinner with a good soup prefacing it, but as the principal feature of a dinner, a cheerless dish, around which it seems impossible for a family to be social ar joyous.

A very good looking and good-tasting dinner may be made from the remains of the mutton, by cutting the meat that remains upon the bone into small pieces and putting them into a baking dish with some of the gravy which was also left from the previous dinner: lacking the gravy, take a little hot water, some small pieces of butter, and a dredging of flour, and you have a very good substitute. Cover the meat with a layer of mashed potatoes, and put into the oven and brown nicely.

Meat balls, made from any kind of cold meat, mutton, veal or even corned beef, are very good for a change, and present a better appearance than the scraps from which they may be made could possibly do.

Chop the meat rather fine, not so fine that it is like paste, but so that there are no large lumps in it. Mix with either potato or bread crumbs, form into flat, round cakes, and brown in a little butter or drippings on top of the stove. The dryness of bread crumbs makes a beaten egg necessary to make the cakes cook without crumbling, but if potato is used, they will keep their shape very nicely. Use sage or celery salt for seasoning if liked.

As a relish for these quickly prepared dinners, nothing may be in readiness sooner, except celery, than "cold slaw." Chop or shave part of a good firm cabbage very fine, and place them without further preparation upon the table, leaving each person at liberty to use what quantity of vinegar, salt, pepper, sugar or oil he prefers.

Original And Tested Recipes.

BREADED CHOPS.—Take chops cut from the leg of a lamb or mutton, dip in beaten egg, then in cracker or bread crumbs, and fry in butter or drippings.

AN excellent gravy to be eaten with the above, is made by putting a cupful of hot water into the frying-pan after dishing the chops, adding a cupful of stewed tomato and a small onion, chopped fine; season with salt and pepper, and pour over the chops, or serve in gravy dish, as preferred.

TOMATO SOUP.—Put a quart of tomatoes on the stove in a porcelain kettle, and when boiling add one teaspoonful of soda, and boil thoroughly. Set the kettle on one side of the stove and add two quarts of milk. Season with salt, pepper and butter, and put two cups of fine cracker crumbs into the tureen, over which the soup is to be poured when ready for the table. This may be prepared in less than ten minutes, and is an excellent addition to a cold-meat dinner.

POTATOES BAKED IN MILK.—Take as many potatoes as you are in the habit of preparing for a dinner for your family, pare and slice as thin as possible—so thin that you can almost see through the slices. Let them stand covered with cold water for a short time. Then put them into a porcelain or tin baking dish, sprinkling with salt, and pepper as the dish is filled, also placing little pieces of butter here and there. When the dish is filled cover with milk, heated while preparing the potatoes, or milk and water, if milk is not plentiful. Put into the oven and bake until the potatoes are ready to fall to pieces; a dish holding two quarts will cook in one and a half hours in a good oven. This is a most delicious way to cook potatoes, and always a favorite with children.

Miscellaneous.

When there is a crack in the stove it can be mended by mixing ashes and salt with water.

Strong brine may be used to advantage in washing bedsteads. Hot alum water is also good for this purpose.

FURNITURE POLISH.—Equal parts sweet oil and vinegar and a pint of gum arabic, well powdered; shake the bottle and apply with a rag. It will make the furniture look as good as new.

Never set the lamp upon a red table cover; if you cannot find time to make a green lamp-mat, put a piece of green cardboard under the lamp, and you will find the reflection upon your work much more agreeable to the eyes than that from the red cover.

HOW TO PRESERVE BUTTER.—First work out all the milk thoroughly, then salt with Rock Salt, according to taste, pack into Air-Tight Jars or Cans, and keep in a cool place. By observing the above rules you can keep butter fresh for years. Tie a bladder over the jar or can.

HOW TO PRESERVE EGGS.—For every three gallons of water put in one pint of fresh slacked lime, and the same amount of common salt. Mix well and put into a barrel which should be half full of this fluid, then put in your eggs carefully so as not to break any, then cover the vessel over with a lid, on which also put lime and salt. This process will keep eggs from two to four years, if properly managed.

A Husband's Trying (on) Experience.

Gentle reader, this is not a Warner's Safe Cure or St. Jacobs Oil advertisement, as you might suppose from the heading. It commenced at breakfast the other morning by my wife remarking, "what a lovely spring morning, and all the stores are having their spring openings this week."

"They are never shut, dear," I replied, "except on Sunday, and then they leave the blinds up to dazzle the bait before your eyes."

"Oh, you know what I mean," she answered, "and I want you to help me to choose my spring jacket this morning."

"All right," said I, "be at my office at ten, sharp, and I will spare you twenty minutes."

"Exactly at 10.50 my amiable little wife sailed smilingly into the office under the pleasing delusion that she was frightfully punctual, and we went to the store together. I told my secretary, Mr. Jackson, as we went out that I would be back in twenty minutes, which my wife amended by saying, "better call it half an hour."

Entering one of our largest stores my better half went forward and made known her wants, while I kept modestly in the background. The first jacket tried on was too tight, next was too long; this wasn't a good fit round the neck and that was too slack at the arms.

After trying on seventeen different articles my wife was slightly mixed as to their respective merits, and I fear I did not help very much to soothe her by frequently remarking, "hurry up; its one o'clock. I really must go!"

"Well miss A—ah"—(my wife calls everybody A—ah when she forgets their name), "I will not decide this morning, but will think it over."

I was about to make my way back to my office when my wife, with one of her winning smiles, said: "I am sure they have a much better selection in this next store. Do come with me and I will chose one in five minutes."

But I said, "why not get your friend Mrs. W. to go with you? She would enjoy it more than I would and could advice you much better."

"Well, you know," she replied," Mrs. W. will be busy all this week choosing a dining room carpet or she would be delighted."

As it appeared that neither our jacket nor Mrs. W.'s carpet could wait until next week I surrendered. Well, jacket after jacket was tried on until 2.30 p.m. I was tired, hungry and desperate.

"How do you like this one?" said my wife as she buttoned on the twenty-seventh jacket.

"Oh, splendid," I replied, without looking at it. "Fits you like a glove. Take it and lets go to lunch!"

"But it is more than you wanted to give," said she.

"Oh, never mind that, have it sent home and come away," I replied in desperation.

"No, dear, I won't decide in a hurry." Then (turning to the saleslady), "I won't settle this morning, but I am expecting a friend from Brantford who has great taste in jackets, and we well come down together and make a final choice."

If any lady wants my assistance in choosing a jacket the editor has my address. Fee, $50 per hour.

The Zones.

Teacher—"How many zones are there?"
Boy—"Six."
"No, there are only five."
"Yes, there are six."
"Name them."
"The torrid zone, the northern and southern temperate, and northern and southern frigid—"
"That's five; what is the other zone?"
"O-zone."

Malaria at the South.

Rev. Mr. Johnsing—"Mawnin', Brudder Smif! How's all de folks wid yon?"

Mr. Smith—"Dey is all well, bress Moses! One ob de chilluns was allin' yisterday, but hit died jurin' de night.',

A Question of Time.

"I see by the papers," he said, "that the agent of a clock company in Toronto has skipped out with a boodle.'

"Yes."

"But the papers don't say whether he was running on standard or solar time."

"Oh, that makes no difference; the officers are after him meantime, and sometime he will be caught.

Why She Knew it Wasn't Right.

Little Dot—"Mamma, Dick is kissing me."

Mamma—"I am glad he likes you so well, dear."

"But it isn't w'ight."

"Oh, it don't matter, pet. What makes you think it isn't right?"

"Cause nurse told papa so."

Complicated Anger.

Gilhooly—"You say your wife is in a bad humor?"

Pennybunker—"Yes, you bet she is."

"What is she mad about?"

"In the first place, she got mad at the servant girl, then she got mad at me because I didn't get mad at the servant girl, and now she is mad at herself because she got mad at the servant girl. Do you understand?"

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"I should like to spoke a few words to Brudder Caravan Johnson if he am in de hall to-night," said the President as the triangle sounded.

Caravan slipped on his shoes and came forward and the President continued:

"Brudder Johnson, I h'ar dat you am contemplatin' a journey down into Kaintucky?"

"Yes, sah,"

"Gwine down neat Loweyville to see some of yer relashun?"

"Yes, sah."

"Dat's what I heard, an' I hope you a pleasant journey. As you will be representative of dis club while absent, I want to say a few words to you in a fatherly speerit. In the fust place put on a clean shirt to start out wid. I believe dar' am mo' battles won by clean shirts dan frew generalship. A clean shirt commands public respect, eben if de wearer's boot heels am all run down. It's a sorter sign of de wearer's decency an' honesty. It won't pay yer way frew the tollgate, but it will make de toll man duck his head to you an' rememder dat you wasn't a hoss.

"Purceed on your way quietly. Yer doan' own de State of Michigan, an' you don't kerry Detroit in your vest pocket. De man who enters a town wid two brass bands ahead of him an' a crowd of people behind him has got to be a good talker, a smooth liar an' a chap full o' promises or he will fall flat.

"Keep your money in de toe of your shoe in de daytime, an' at night hide it in de straw bed. A man may be eber so good, an' great, an' wise, but if he becomes deadbroke among strangers nine people out of ten will take him fur a sharper playin' his leetle game.

"Only half de road belongs to you. De odder half am reserved by law fur de man gwine in de opposite direckshun.

"When you arrove at a fust-class hotel to put up fur de night, doan' seek to create the ideah dat you got dar' by speshul train, an' dat fried oysters, banana-fritters an' champagne make you tired. You will simply be given de poorest room in de house an' charged de highest price when you settel up.

"Doan' start out wid a revolver in your pocket, an' as you work along frew Ohio an' Kentucky let politics alone, hev no disputes about religun, an' concede de fackt dat de world waan't created speshually fur your benefit. You may now take your seat, an' de hull lodge will jine in wid me in wishin' you a safe an' pleasant journey."

TOO EARLY YET.

The Secretary then announced a communication from Columbus, O., inquiring if the colored men of America intended to put a Presidential candidate into the field in 1888, and asking Brother Gardner if he would accept the nomination if tendered him. Sudden and lively interest was manifested throughout the hall, and there was deep silence as the old man replied:

"As to de fust query, it am too airly to answer definitely, but I ar' of de opinyun dat our race will conclude not to put forward any candydate. It doan' appear dat de time am ripe yit. As to de second queshun, a mominashun would be a great honor, but if dar' was any hope of leckshun I think I should decline it. I kin now go home arter my work an' eat supper in my shirt-sleeves, an' den sot down an' pop corn an' eat apples an' soak up an' pare down my co'ns an' bunyons. I couldn't do dat if I war' President, an' I reckon I shall decline to run."

IT FELL DOWN.

Trustee Pullback then sent to the Secretary's desk a preamble and resolution, the former beginning with:

"Whereas, Our present relashuns wid England am so strained dat one———."

At this point the Secretary had to stop to study over the next word, and the President said:

"De Seckretary may boot dat paper under de table! Brudder Pullback when did you find out dat our present relashuns wid England war strained?"

"I—I dunno, sah."

"Who strained 'em?"

"I can't tell."

"Somebody has made a fool of you, sah! De relashuns between America and England am as slick as a streak of grease, and dey will continue so until tom-fool statesmen upset 'em. You sot down, sah, an' de next break will result in purceedin's to make chills creep up your spine."

ELDER TOOTS SET BACK.

The Librarian secured the floor to remark that he didn't want to seem captious, nor did he like to lodge a complaint against any member, but he felt it his duty to say that Elder Toots was making an obstructionist of himself. He was the first one into the library after the doors were opened, and was the last to leave. He brought his corncob pipe and mouth organ with him, and when he wasn't smoking a mixture of cabbage-leaves and tobacco he was playing "Old Dan Tucker" on the organ. No matter who was reading, nor how much they were annoyed, the Elder persisted in his conduct. It was hoped that some action would be taken by the club to bring about a change. The Elder was fast asleep in his chair as usual, but Samuel Shin poured a dipper of water down the back of his neck, and as he got his eyes open Brother Gardner called to him:

"Elder, I'se wantin' to remark a few observashuns to you! If you want to visit de club library an' look over our work on poultry to see why your hens doan' lay biled aigs dat's all right, but the fust time I happen in dar' an' you has got a pipe or a mouforgan I'll take de law in my own hands an' make you tired."

The Elder sat down in a dazed way, shivered a few times under the wet streak down his back, and then dozed off to sleep again.

THEY BALANCE.

The Chairman of the Committee on Finance reported that his books balanced for March, and that the general accounts for the last quarter had been looked over, audited and balanced up.

"I would also add," said the President, "dat all odder books about dis place also balance. Dey hes to. When dar comes a time in dis hall dat de cash doan' walk right up to figgers you am gwine to hear of somebody gittin' hurt. No one pusson am 'lowed to handle ober thirty-five cents at any one time, an' he can't be gone ober an hour at once wid dat. We believe all men am honest, but we believe dat nine out of ten of 'em can't stand temptashun. We will now embrace de opportunity to go home."

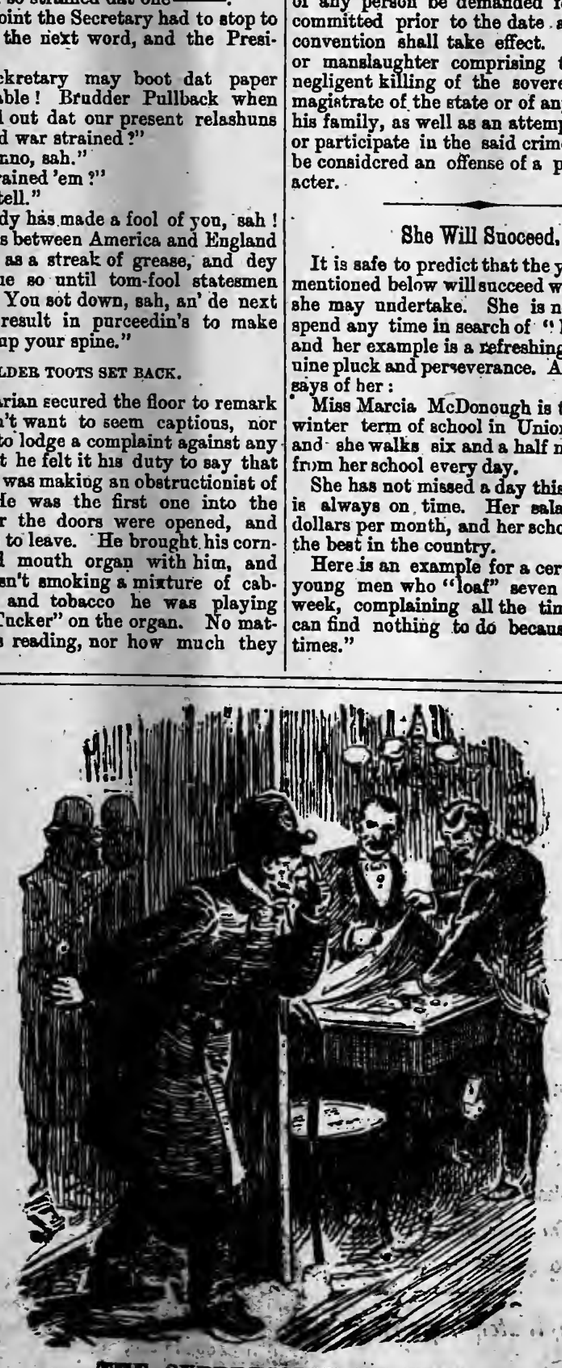
Extradition Treaty between the United States and Russia.

It is the interest of all nations that criminals should not have a safe retreat the world over. Why should our country harbour the rascals of another? And yet there is more or less of this always going on. Extradition treaties are generally not comprehensive enough, and in this way the rogues get the advantage. A pretty straight extradition treaty between the United States and Russia was lately signed. Of course political crimes are always excepted. If Canada and the States had such a treaty it would be uncomfortable for the embezzlers, but honest men would rejoice. The following are the crimes covered by the Convention referred to:—

1—Murder and manslaughter, comprising the wilful or negligent killing of a human being.
2—Rape, abortion.
3—Arson.
4—Burglary.
5—Forgery.
6—The fabrication or circulation of counterfeit money.
7—The embezzlement of public moneys by public officers or depositors.
8—Embezzlement by any person or persons hired or salaried, to the detriment of their employers, when the value of the property so taken shall exceed 300 roubles or $200.
9—Piracy or mutiny on shipboard.
10—Malicious destruction of or attempt to destroy railways, trains, vessels, bridges, dwellings, public edifices, or other buildings when the act endangers human life.

To guard against any attempt at using these terms as means of securing political offenders the following provisions are added:—

If it be made to appear that extradition is sought with a view to try or punish the person demanded for an offense of a political character, surrender shall not take place; nor shall any person surrendered be tried or punished for any political offense committed previously to his extradition, nor for any offense other than that for which the extradition was granted; nor shall the surrender of any person be demanded for an offense committed prior to the date at which this convention shall take effect. The murder or manslaughter comprising the wilful or negligent killing of the sovereign or chief magistrate of the state or of any member of his family, as well as an attempt to commit or participate in the said crimes, shall not be considered an offense of a political character.



She Will Succeed.

It is safe to predict that the young woman mentioned below will succeed with anything she may undertake. She is not likely to spend any time in search of "light work," and her example is a refreshing one of genuine pluck and perseverance. An Iowa paper says of her:

Miss Marcia McDonough is teaching the winter term of school in Union Township, and she walks six and a half miles to and from her school every day.

She has not missed a day this winter and is always on time. Her salary is thirty dollars per month, and her school is one of the best in the country.

Here is an example for a certain class of young men who "loaf" seven days in the week, complaining all the time that they can find nothing to do because of "hard times."

THE SUPPRESSION OF VICE.

Policeman No. 137921: LOOK OUT BOYS, CLEAR AWAY QUICK, WE ARE GOING TO MAKE A RAID ON YOU.

The Value of Diamonds.

It is curious to notice the fluctuations in the value of diamonds. About 300 years ago they were quoted at $225 a carat. Fifty years later we find them selling at $100 a carat. A hundred and fifty years later the supply from Brazil had increased so largely that one carat stones sold for $40, and shortly afterwards at $4. From this point they rallied to $31 per carat at the time of the French Revolution; then under pressure of the supply from exiled French noblemen they fell again to $20. During the first sixty or seventy years of this century they rose steadily, and twenty years ago they were quoted at about $100 a carat. Now, Mr. Henry D. Morse, of Boston, gives the following prices of diamonds at the present time:

Stones averaging one-half carat each, $90 per carat.

Stones averaging three-quarter carat each, $80 per carat.

Stones averaging one carat each, $100 per carat.

Stones averaging one and one-quarter carats each, $110 per carat.

Stones averaging one and one-half carats each, $125 per carat.

Stones averaging one and three-quarter carats each, $145 per caret.

Stones averaging two carats each, $175 per carat.

In other words, the value of the gem increases in the geometrical ratio of its weight. Four diamonds weighing together two carats are worth $120, but one diamond weighing just as much is worth $350. Stones weighing over two carats are about the same price per carat as two carat stones; they should be dearer, but they are not, simply because the demand for them is limited. If the demand for diamonds was as imperative as the demand for flour or beef the geometrical ratio would again come into play, and five carat stones would be valued in the thousands.

It is not likely that the diamond of moderate size will ever be much lower in value than it is now. In the words of a popular writer, The diamond is the very essence of property. It is riches condensed; too small to be seen by the midnight burglar; too easily hid to be seized by the tyrant: too quickly carried away to be wrested from the exile or the outlaw. A diamond is a portable empire."

Desperate Courage.

On the outbreak of the Sepoy mutiny against the English, in 1857, shocking cruelties were perpetrated. The English residents of towns within the limits of the insurrection were massacred; indeed, all India was in a fever of excitement.

Colonel Leevin, in his Fly on the Wheel, says that the magistrate in charge of the town of Banda narrowly escaped with his life at the beginning of the excitement. When the storm burst, he was the only European left in Banda, the other residents having already sought refuge in Futtehpoor.

The Nawab of Banda, although at heart in sympathy with the mutineers, yet preserved to the last an appearance of loyalty The magistrate had been informed that a rising was imminent, and went to the Nawab to exhort him to use all possible influence to quiet the people.

Even as they sat talking, there reached them a murmur from the town without, swelling into a shout as the tumult came nearer. A dead silence fell in the room, and on looking up the magistrate saw that the Nawab was smiling.

He knew then that his only hope lay in prompt action; so, drawing his revolver, he seized the Nawab by the collar and placed the muzzle against his forehead.

"Is a carriage likely to be soon ready for me to depart?" he asked quietly.

"Yes, yes, Sahib; one is now ready," vociferated the affrighted attendants.

"Then we will go at once."

Without relaxing his grasp of the Nawab's collar, they emerged from the palace, and the immense mob outside hushed their clamor, in terror for the life of their Nawab and in amazement at the daring of this solitary Englishman.

"Now," said the Magistrate to the Nawab, "Tell them that if I hear a hoot or an insult, or if any man's hand is raised against me, that moment will be your last."

The Nawab entered the carriage with him, and they drove off, no one daring to interfere. At twelve miles distance from the city, the magistrate had a horse waiting for him in case of a sudden emergency; so here he left the Nawab, politely thanking him for the pleasure of his company, and rode off unharmed to Futtehpoor.

Shoot the Tiger.

In lately pleading for high license and the consequent restriction of the liquor traffic, Dr. Howard Crosby, of New York, made use of a very unfortunate figure. He said:—

"If a tiger were loose in the streets of New York, would it not be better to try to confine him to certain streets rather than have him to roam all over the city?"

A voice from the gallery very naturally and very promptly called out, "Shoot the tiger," and the Dr.'s argument and illustration went at once by the board. What man in his senses would ever try to keep a loose tiger within certain streets of a large city? What man in his senses would ever think of thanking God that the tiger did not kill above two or three children a day, and that only in the poorer parts of the city? Who would ever dream of calling that man a public benefactor who would merely drive away loose tigers from Jarvis street and confine them to Lombard or the low-lying regions about the Don? And yet this is exactly what some supposedly wise men, ministers of the Gospel, and pretentious philanthropists, want to do with the liquor traffic. "Shoot the tiger" is the only effectual plan. Still, high license is far better than free trade in liquor.

Qualified for Musicial Criticism.

"There's a piano recital I'd like to have you look after," said the city editor to the new reporter. "Do you think you can attend to it?"

"Sure."

"Ever criticise a piano recital?"

"No, but I can tell good gymnastics when I see them, and when the lady wades in and takes both hands to it and hits the key board in seventeen different places all at once, you can bet I'll be there to say that it was one of the most brilliant performances ever attempted, executed with a brilliancy and eclat which stamped the lady as an artist without a superior."

He got the assignment.

The Voyage of Life.

BY JOHN IMRIE, TORONTO.

This life is like the ocean wide,
With constant ebb and flow;
And we the ships upon the tide,
A-sailing to and fro!
Each steering for some lovely isle
Beyond the setting sun,
Hope on each pathway seems to smile,
As oo our course we run.

Some barks fare well from first to last,
With fair winds all the way,
And soon their anchorage is cast
Within some tranquil bay
While other's scarcely leave the shore
When dark fogs hover nigh,
And loud the angry tempests roar,
And lightnings rend the sky.

But let us trim our sails aright,
No storms shall overwhelm
If we are brave and do the right,
And Faith directs the helm!
We'll ride the waves, though mountain high
And sing our triumph song,
Until we see the haven nigh
To which our ships belong!

The "Mary Jane."

BY NORA LAUGHER.

Oh! we are the crew of the "Mary Jane,"
And right merry boys are we,
For the "Mary Jane" is the bonniest craft
That sails o'er the briny sea;
With a ay, heave ho! away we go
Thro' fair and stormy weather,
We fear not the wave, our hearts are brave,
We messmates pull together.

From Liverpool port she first set sail
Across to the western world,
Some years since that scud afore the gale;
But her sails are still unfurl'd;
With, a ay, heave ho! away we go
Thro' fair and stormy weather,
We fear not the wave, our hearts are brave
We messmates pull together.

And so proudly cut we thro' the foam
At sixteen knots an hour,
That we swell our cap'n's heart with glee
For tho' the black clouds lower
With a ay heave, ho! away we go
Thro' fair and and stormy weather,
We fear not the wave our hearts are brave,
We messmates pull together.

For the "Mary Jane" is the bonniest craft
That sails o'er the briny sea,
Tho' she and her boys are growing old
Staunch friends they'll always be.
With a ay, heave, ho! away we go
Thro' fair and stormy weather,
We fear not the wave, our hearts are brave,
We messmates pull together.

Gleanings By The Sea.

BY L. A. MORRISON, TORONTO.

Read Mark VI: 34 to 51; and John VI: 1 to 21.

Break Thou the "Bread of Life," dear Lord,
In love to me;
As Thou didst break the loaves beside the sea.
So let my soul be fed;
Speak Thou the word,
Thou hast the Living Bread,
Dear Christ, my Lord.

Bless Thou the "Word of Life," dear Lord,
In love to me;
As Thou didst bless the bread by Galilee.
Thy blessing multiplies
Thy gifts divine;
My soul, in glad surprise,
Owns all things Thine.

Teach Thou the "Blessed Truth," dear Lord,
In love to me;
As Thou didst teach of yore, beyond the sea;
That though the desert reigns,
If Thou dost call
A school-boy's scrip contains Enough for all.

Give Thou a willing mind, dear Lord,
In love to me:
As Thou didst give to them on Galilee.
Who at Thy word and will
Did launch away;
That I, in trust, may still
Thy voice obey.

Watch Thou from Hills of Prayer, dear Lord,
In love, for me;
As Thou didst watch o'er wind-swept Galilee.
The darkness cannot hide,
Nor storms destroy;
Whatso' to me betide
Shall end in joy.

Come Thou when dangers press, dear Lord,
In love to me:
As Thou didst come to them, who on the sea
Toiled all the weary night
To reach the strand;
Thy coming brings the light,
It brought the land.

Beecher and the Children.

"Mr Beecher was wonderfully fond of children and he always carried oranges and candies in his pockets to help entertain them on the cars. If he saw a poor mother with a baby crying in her arms he would go and comfort it and make it stop its crying where others failed. In coming up from Washington one time a characteristic incident occurred. There were two little children, boy and egirl, ight or nine years old, in the car and they huddled close up together and appeared to be very fond of each other. We had breakfast at Wilmington, but the children did not get off the car, and they had evidently traveled all night without anything to eat. When Mr. Beecher came back from breakfast his arms were laden with good things for the children. Then he talked to them. He found that they were from the South, that their parents had died and that they were on their way to the city to find an uncle whom they expected to meet them. The train was late, what if the uncle should fail to meet them? When the train arrived in Jersey City, Mr. Beecher, got out of the car with the children, walked slowly along, looking around to see if he could discover any one looking for the children, and got out between the two ferries and stood there waiting until both boats had gone. Soon a man came hurrying along in great distress and saw the two children. but as he expected to see them unaccompanied, he stopped in doubt. Mr. Beecher suspected that he might be the uncle and asked him what he was looking for.

"'Two Children.'

"'Well,' said Mr. Beecher, 'I guess they're here. These look like two children, don't they?'

"It was the uncle, and he was indeed grateful. Thanking Mr. Beecher, he said:

"'Will you kindly give me your name?'

"'My name is Beecher.'

"'Where do you live?'

"'In Brooklyn.'

"'What! Can you be the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher?'

"'I am inclined to think I am.'

Tears came into the man's eyes, and he explained to the little ones who it was who had befriended them. The two children were soon after seen in Plymouth Church, and they have since then listened to Mr. Beecher's sermons frequently.

An Extended Experience,

Writes a well-known chemist, permits me to say that Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor never fails. It makes no sore spots in the flesh, and consequently is painless. Don't you forget to get Putnam's Corn Extractor, now for sale by medicine dealers everywhere.

Wild Boys.

An old teacher in Maine is credited with a story of wild boys which is remarkable. He says that, years ago, he had in his school seven wild, bad boys, who seemed to have no pleasure so great as that of giving their teacher trouble. A short time ago he happened to visit the State Prison of Maine, and there he found three of his wild boys. In the Reform School of the same State were the other four!

A good teacher, well sustained by his committee, ought to have been able to save some of the seven. Firm and judicious treatment can tame and civilize most wild boys. Not all, we grant; but seven is an inordinate number of incurables for one man's school.

Wild boys, however, be their number small or great, are the bane of our schools and the peril of our civilization. One such in a school of fifty,—one foolish, lawless, irrepressible boy, doubles the toil and anxiety of a teacher. Two of them go far toward undoing all the good a patient and gentle teacher can accomplish. Seven would create absolute chaos.

The wild boy is not, as a general thing, so depraved as he is silly and vain. His teacher is, usually, a kind and conscientious lady, often a young lady, who comes to school every morning clad in bright and dainty cleanliness, with an apron of apotless white, and a heart under it yearning to do her pupils good. The wild boy, who sends her home at night despairing and ashamed, what is he?

There he sits, in his dirty boots and dirty face, sprawling over his desk, a spectacle of indifference and latent rebellion, the centre from which proceeds all the disturbance and demoralization of the school. Often, he is the son of a widow, who has quite lost the power to control him, and looks to the school to do for him what she cannot.

But the "school" is this delicate and high-minded young lady, who cannot do battle with a thoughtless and unsavory lout of twice her strength, if not twice her weight. If she expels him, he roams the streets and develops rapidly into a criminal. If she permits him to remain, he spoils her school and embiters her every waking hour.

The time will come when our legislators will wisely provide for such cases; but, in the meantime, well disposed boys can do much towards delivering teachers from the wild ones of their number.

Boys understand boys. They know that these wild, disobedient fellows are usually very ignorant and stupid, and can not stand against the public opinion of the school, if it is clearly expressed.

The gentlemen of a school can prevent the abuse of kind and good teachers if they will but unite to do it, and consider patiently the best way to do it.

Why not a Law-and-Order League in a school?

MEN AND WOMEN

Of the original members of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, only two—Henry C. Bowen and John T. Howard—are living.

Miss Ethel Dickens, granddaughter of Charles Dickens, has started a type-writer office for the copying of parts and prompt books.

Sir Henry Tichborne will come of age in May next, and will enter upon the possession of his much "claimed" estates, which will pay him a net income of about $45,000 a year.

Gen. Annenkoff, who is building the Russian railroad in Bokhara, is a man of 55 years, full of vigor, energy and hope. He wife is less than half his age and is a very wealthy German lady.

A rich Russian amateur, M. Davidoff, has left to the Paris Conservatoire a genuine Stradivarius violin, valued at 20,000 francs, on which the laureates of the violin class shall be allowed to play in the concert give en at the distribution of prizes.

Gen. Count Kinoda, chief adviser of the Mikado of Japan, was one of those engaged in the insurrection of the old nobility, and when he found that he was defeated he accepted the situation, and has since cordially co-operated with the Mikado in the introduction of our civilization.

It may be remarked of Mr. Gladstone and his remarkable old age that he has not for the last forty years smoked his dozen cigars and taken his eight or ten drinks a day. He still has nerve and a coating to his stomach. Good nerves and good stomach coating largely makes the great man.

Sir Henry Hawkins is getting a reputation in England as a witty judge. Recently a prisoner pleaded guilty of larceny, and then withdrew the plea and declared himself to be innocent. The case was tried and the jury acquitted him. Then said Sir Henry Hawkins: "Prisoner, a few minutes ago you said you were a thief. Now the jury says you are a liar. Consequently you are discharged."

Beecher's Property.

Mr. Beecher's property is said to amount to about $110,000, most of it being personal property. For the past four years he had received a salary of $15,000 a year from Plymouth Church. For years before that $20,000 a year has been allotted him, and during the famous Tilton controversy $100,000 a year was granted him as a mark of confidence in his integrity and to enable him to meet the expenses of his suit. In the lecture field he received never less than $250 a night, nor more than $500. This would net him about $14,000 year. Then he received a royalty of about $4,000 upon some books written in his earlier days prominent among which was 'Lectures to Young Men.' His syndicate newspaper letter, which he continued up to the time of his illness, netted him $75 a week. This income, though almost princely, was spent by Mr. Beecher in ornamenting his household and in charity. His house was a perfect cabinet of curiosities.

He Won His Bet.

He had been going to see her for a long time, but would never state the object of his visits. Last night he mustered up sufficient courage.

"Will you be my wife?" he asked, simply and earnestly.

"Yes, Henry, I will," she replied, all in a tremor of blushing excitement.

"Ah, thanks," he said. "I bet Chollie Brown a package of cigarettes you would say 'yes.' Do you smoke? It's quite the thing, don't you know."

Spring Cleaning.

All peace and all pleasures are banished,
Abroad now I gladly would roam;
My quiet and rest have vanished;
A Cyclone is loose in my home!
The painters are all in possession,
The charwomen come by the score;
The whitewashers troop in procession,
And spatter from ceiling to floor.
I own I must make a confession—
Spring cleaning's a terrible bore!

They come in the morning at daybreak,
Just when I'm forgetting my cares,
And into my slumbers how they break,
With bustle and tramp on the stairs!
They laugh and they whistle and chatter,
They paint, and they varnish and size;
They thump and they wrangle and clatter,
And drive away sleep from my eyes,
They make me as mad as a hatter,
And cause me at daybreak to rise.

I dare not complain, notwithstanding—
I'm faint with the fumes of white lead;
And trip over pails on the landing,
And paint pots fall down on my head!
When right through my hall I go stumbling.
I'm sick, and I'm sorry and sore;
O'er planks and o'er ladders I'm tumbling,
And get my greatcoat painted o'er;
To myse f I can scarcely help grumbling—
Spring cleaning's a terrible bore!

Her Great Fault.

1st Dude—"Were you at the ball last night?"

2d Dude—"Yes."

"What is your opinion of Mrs. Rapid? Don't you think she is beautiful?"

"She has only one fault."

"And what is that?"

"Too much husband."

Mahogany is being introduced into every part of India, where it promises to thrive. The seeds sown have germinated remarkably well, a single pound planted in greenhouses in the southern districts having yielded between three thousand and four thousand plants. It is thought to be quite probable that the world may some day look to India for its mahogany as well as for its quinine. The Eastern product of the latter has already become so extensive and of such superior quality that the ciuchona bark exports of the United States of Colombia are said to have diminished fifty per cent. in five years.

(Toronto Mail, March the 5th, 1887.)

The report of the Federal Life Assurance Company, which will be found elsewhere, is a very satisfactory one. The amount of new business being transacted by the company is very large indeed for a company of its age. This shows that, in adopting the system of life insurance known as the Homans plan, the company did a judicious thing. The business increased from $2,696,454 at the beginning of the year to $5,241,679 at the end of the year. A similar ratio of increase this year will bring its insurance in force up to very nearly $10,000,000. The Home life companies are all making good progress. There is no reason why they should not keep abreast of their foreign competitors.

Scotch pebbles, agates, carnelians and Rhine-stones are mounted for shoes-buckles.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness. Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

Tulle is considered more appropriate than point lace as veils for youthful brides.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

Sensible silk mitts without fingers come over wear over kid gloves in cold weather.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

White brocaded velvet is the accepted material for elegant wedding toilets.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

White velvet is the fashionable material for opera bonnet this season.

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular. The second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East. Toronto Canada.

Square-necked dresses are again in high favor for full-dress toilets.

A. P. 329

GOOD LIVE AGENTS WANTED IN EVERY County in Canada. Address, FERRIS & CO., 87 Church St., Toronto.

6 PER CENT. MONEY—INTEREST YEARLY —no commission; Mortgages purchased. R. H. TEMPLE, 23 Toronto Street.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

EASTER CARD PACKETS By Mail—PACKETS of one dozen beautifully assorted Easter or Birthday Cards, at 10c, 15c, 25c, 50c, 75c, and $1 each packet; also silk-fringed packets, 6 in a packet, at 50c, $1, and $2 per packet; cash to accompany order. A dozen packets of a kind, 20 per cent off. Matthews Bros. & Co., 93 Yonge St., Toronto.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont. Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution, To thorough, practical instruction. and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc, mailed free. Address M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS, Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100 —according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

LADIES Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise on BOOK FOR on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

SNOW DRIFT THE FAVORITE! THERE IS NO BAKING POWDER BETTER! The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brantford, On

ILLUSTRATED CIRCULARS FREE. CANADIAN BUSINESS UNIVERSITY and Shorthand Institute, Public Library Building, Toronto. Specialties: Book-keeping, Penmanship, Shorthand, Typewriting, etc. Write for particulars. THOMAS BENGOUGH, Official Reporter York Co. Courts, President. CHARLES H. BROOKS, Sec'y and Manager.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

AGENTS APPLY TO THE D.W. BEADLE NURSERY CO. WANTED St. Catharines, Ont.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTUR'G CO.

CHURNS. Mangles, three kinds; Clothes Wringers, ten kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Carpet Sweepser, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS Co., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

R. SPENCE & CO. Consumers will find it to their advantage to ask the trade for our make of Files and Rasps. Re-Cutting a Specialty. Send for price list and terms. HAMILTON - ONT.

FREE FLOWERING PLANTS.

13 for $1 00	ALL FIRST QUALITY, and with every Dollar order, an Amaryllis, a Chrysanthemum or Monthly Rose, FREE.
6 " 50
3 " 25

THE BEST STRAWBERRY PLANTS, 25c. A DOZEN. I guarantee Plants to please, and to arrive in good order at any post office in the Dominion, Large plants by freight or express. Send postal for descriptive list. J. P. COCKBURN, FLORIST, (Stamps taken). GRAVENHURST, ONT.

Wall Paper MANUFACTURERS. M. STAUNTON & CO., Samples on application. TORONTO, ONT.

PILES! Blind, Bleeding, and Itching effectually cured by the Medical Pile Remedy. Thousands of sufferers can testify to the permanent relief from these internal and external Remedies. $1.00 per package. Ask your druggist for it, or will be sent by Mail postage paid. HUGH MILLER & CO, 167 King St. East., Toronto. PILES!

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO. MANUFACTURE ONLY FINEST Silver Plated Ware. Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish. HAMILTON, ONT.

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY, Peterboro', Ont.

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES. Send 3c. Stamp for Catalogue.

Bicycles! SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines, From $15 Upwards. New Catalogue Ready 1st April A. T. LANE, MONTREAL.

ARMSTRONG'S PATENT STEEL GEARS.

THE BOSS ELLIPTIC. All Furnished with our patent improved PERFECT SINGLE PLATE SPRINGS, three inches less open than formerly made, thus hanging the body that much lower The taper of plates has also been entirely changed and we claim to have a PERFECT RIDING SPRING with light or full load, and one that WILL NOT BREAK. Every carriage maker should handle these gears. PRICES RIGHT Full particulars on application. J. B ARMSTRONG M'F'G. CO, (Ld), Guelph, Canada.

J. L. JONES WOOD ENGRAVER 10 KING ST. EAST TORONTO.

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the U.S. and Foreign Countries by MARION & MARION, Civil Engineers, Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Cases. Established 1867. Ronald C. Rideout & Co., Toronto.

Dairy Salt, FOR BUTTER, ETC. NEW Importations—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices. JAMES PARK & SON, Wholesale Produce Merchants, Toronto.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED Dr. Withrow's latest and popular "History of Canada," from the Discovery of America to the late North-West Rebellion, including a full and correct account of the same, 670 pages, and prices lower than any other book of the same size and quality published in the States or Canada. Another remarkably low priced book is Sam P. Jones "Living Words," with autobiography, illustrations, etc., 595 pages; also, J. B Gough's "Platform Echoes," beautifully illustrated, full of anecdotes, etc., and sells at sight. Our Family Bibles are cheap, and superior to others. Terms liberal, circulars on application. WM. BRIGGS, 78 & 80 King St. E., Toronto, Ont.

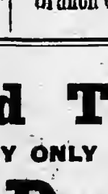
Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships. Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM. The Mutual Reserve Fund LIFE ASSOCIATION The largest and most prosperous open Assessment Association in the world—desires active representatives in every section of Canada; liberal inducements. It has full Government Deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa. Correspondence solicited. Address, J. D. WELLS, General Manager, 65 King Street East, Toronto.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO. Manufacturers of the highest grade of SILVER PLATED WARES. Steel Knives, Spoons, Forks, Etc., A SPECIALTY. ALL GOODS GUARANTEED. TORONTO CANADA.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information. Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.



THE National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO. 23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO. All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

Hamilton Scale Co. All Styles of Improved STANDARD SCALES. We make a Specialty of Hay, Stock, and Portable Platform Scales. BEST IN THE MARKET Every one Guaranteed All Styles of Trucks. Send for Illustrated Price List.

OSBORNE & CO., - - HAMILTON, ONT.

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties. J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C P R., West Toronto

ELM CITY HARNESS OIL. THE MOST SUPERB HARNESS DRESSING IN THE WORLD BASED ON NEATSFOOT OIL. SOLD BY ALL HARNESS DEALERS.

I CURE FITS! When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT, Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

Farmers and Threshers! USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN

PeerlessOil NINE GOLD MEDALS Have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE, for your Wagons and Horse Powers. Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO.

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issues of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT. Markdale.
1241y

WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence otd stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Monev Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at west rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Convevancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

For Sale or Rent.
Good large comfortable dwelling, with stable, also hard and soft water on the premises, on Sydenham street near Presbyterian Church.
344- Apply to B. Coleman

HAGYARD'S YELLOW OIL CURES RHEUMATISM.

FREEMAN'S WORM POWDERS.
Are pleasant to take. Contain their own Purgative. Is a safe, sure, and effectual destroyer of worms in Children or Adults.

MA... ...RAKE * DANDELION LIVER CURE

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.
500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.
TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
T. EDMANSON & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of
School Furniture,
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

NEW HARNESS SHOP.
R. CARNAHAN would respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of the surronnding country that he has opened a general harness shop on King street in the village of
HOLLAND CENTRE,
where he intends to manufacture and keep on hand a large stock of LIGHT and HEAVY HARNESS, long and short tugs, STRAW COLLARS, WHIPS, COMBS, BRUSHES, HARNESS OIL &c.
I will use only first class material and those requiring anything in the harness line will find it to their interest to call at the new harness shop and get prices before going elsewhere. Repairing done with neatness and dispatch. Soliciting a share of public patronage. I am respectfully yours.
R. CARNAHAN.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.
First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool.
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

WANTED!
Clean Timothy Seed,
—HIGHEST—
Market Price Paid.
H. PARKER,
DURHAM.

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DIZZINESS,
DYSPEPSIA, DROPSY,
INDIGESTION, FLUTTERING
JAUNDICE. OF THE HEART,
ERYSIPELAS, ACIDITY OF
SALT RHEUM, THE STOMACH,
HEARTBURN, DRYNESS
HEADACHE, OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT 131 con. 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia, 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush. Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson. Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.
342-tf

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, by
C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.

Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.
THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Society Directory.

Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78. meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.

Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.

MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.

Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m. Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.
Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. H. Cornish. Pastor; G. S. Bowes. S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection: Mrs. T Hill, Secretary.

Directory.

MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.
Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.
Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, J. Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.
Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore. Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace. W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N, Reid, Owen Sound.
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lander, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin, M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. J. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.

DIVISION COURT CLERKS
No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Post-Office Directory.

MARKDALE.
The P. O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.
Mails closed as follows, viz:
C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m

TRAVERSTON.
Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.

HARKAWAY.
Friday, 12:30 noon.

For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.
W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths, twenty five cents.

BIRTHS.

DOUGLAS—On Easter Sunday, the wife of Mr. Samuel Douglas, of a son

DEATHS.

GIMBY.—On the 15th inst., at the residence of her brother-in-law Thos. Boland Esq., of Artemesia, Miss Ida May, youngest daughter of Joseph Gimby Esq., of Owen Sound, aged 22 years.

KAY—In Markdale, on the 18th, inst., the wife of Mr. Alex. Kay, aged 48 years.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR,—T. L. M. is ingenious but not ingenuous. He professes a desire not to cross swords with "Dueco" then proceeds to hack, slash and thrash, at that same individual, in a manner that would be alarming, were it not ridiculous. Poor man! perhaps the words "Ross Bible" affect him as the proverbal red rag does an irate bovine of the masculine gender. Still, the appropriateness of that term justifies its use.

One edition was named the Wicked Bible, and destroyed because a word was omitted—not from the seventh commandment. Surely "Scripture Readings" prepared by mutilation carried to such an extent,—by removing the names of the Books, the number of the chapters and verses, and the garbling of the text, the omission of a verse in one place, and of verses and whole chapters in others, and placing in juxtaposition lessons from widely seperated portions—that the identification and comparison of many passages with the original, is made extremely difficult, is worthy of a distinct appellation and the fate, of its precursor. What name so appropriate as that of the presiding genius of the Education Department during its preparation?

The sub-committee of clergymen who examined the "Selections" had no legal status; but it is held responsible for that work, although the names of the Books, and the numbers of the chapters and verses were struck out—by whom the public know not—after it passed out of their hands. The Provincial Teachers Association asked for a list of Scripture Lessons, said list to be printed on the inside of the cover of the School Register, but the Minister of Education had prepared and printed a book of Selections, and still that body is held responsible. Extreme partizans stick at nothing in defending disreputable actions.

Clergymen of the Church of England read the lessons from the Bible, announcing the book, chapter and verse, where they begin, the congregation accompany in their own books, and this practice is held by some to justify the compilation and exclusive use of the "Ross Bible," in the High and Public Schools of Ontario, no wonder T. L. M. does not want to argue. A person seldom wishes to engage in what he cannot do.

Can any reason be given for submitting "Scripture Readings," to be used in High and Public Schools, to Archbishop Lynch? The Regulations accompanying the Book provided that it shall be used, only after the close of school,, when all Roman Catholics have retired.

The boast concerning the protestantism of the parties engaged in getting up the "Selections" is empty vapor, becaus e politics or rather party with some, excludes everything else, even reason and common sense.

The obvious reply to the statement that a certain verse is in the Donai Bible, is the fact that Roman Catholics are not, generally, allowed to have and read that book.

We live in the last quarter of the ninteen Century, and can easily obtain the whole Bible, therefore it is extremely cool, at least, to be told that in ancient times the possessor of a single Gospel or Epistle considered himself rich. The implication being that "Ross Bible" is good enough for this day and generation.

Politics leads rather to quieting the matter, not stirring it up; Even Reformers, when not blind partizans, join in the cry against the "Ross Bible."

Yours
DOCEO.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

On walking down Mill Street one day last week, I chanced to pick up the following letter, and as it was not directed to any person I thought I might read it. It read as follows:—

MY ADORABLE FRIEND,

It is with feelings of the deepest pleasure and purest love that I endeavor with trembling hand and beating heart to write of the unutterable love for you which has long taken possession of my heart. Do not, I pray you, look upon my earnest and sincere pleadings with scorn, but rather give them the smile of your aprobation and by so doing save one poor soul from a suicide's grave. I cannot longer withold the ardent passion I feel for you which is rending my heartstrings and setting my whole soul on fire. Yes my Dearest! this fire which is raging within me will, if not quell'd by one word of kindness, one look of sympathy or one smile of love from you, find vent I fear, in the worst of all crimes—Suicide. My love as circumstances are at... I cannot see you, but do not ... away without an encouraging ... to cheer me in my hours of ...

With the sincere hope that you ... answer this and also that what I ... said may kindle in your gentle ... some feeling of love for me. Allow ... to sign myself your devoted, affect... and everlasting Friend.

The owner can have the origi... calling at this office, proving pro... paying expenses.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from pra... having had placed in his hands by an ... India missionary the formula of a ... vegetable remedy for the speedy and p... ent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, ... Asthma and all throat and Lung Affe... also a positive and radical cure for ner... Debility and all Nervous Complaints, ... having tested its wonderful curative po... in thousands of cases, has felt it his du... make it known to his suffering fellows. ... ated by this motive and a desire to re... human suffering, I will send free of cha... all who desire it, this receipe, in Ger... Franch or English, with full directions ... preparing and using. Send by mail by ... pressing with stamp naming this paper, ... NOYES 149 Power's Block Rochester, N. Y.
334-36 E. O. W.

A Worthy Send-off.

At the regular monthly meeting of ... Orange Lodge, No 973. held in the ... Hall Rocklyn, on Wednesday evening ... inst., the following preamble and resol... were introduced by Bro. James Boyd, D... master, and Bro. Thos. Reid, treasurer, ... were unanimously adopted.

Whereas Bro. Samuel Breadner, who ... been a member of this lodge continu... since its organization in November, A... 1858, he signified his intention of ... drawing, and of removing from this pa... Ontario: And whereas during all these ... Bro. Breadner has conducted himself ... true and worthy member of our Asso... and as an enterprising and desirable ... and has proved himself a kind neig... always willing in the case of sickness ... trouble to afford valuable assistance and ... sultation: therefore resolved that we ... our sincere thanks to Bro. Breadner for ... service he has rendered to this lodge, ... for his very many acts of kindness ... individually; that we deeply regret his ... moval after so many years of fraternal ... tercourse: that we cordially recom... him to our brethern in his new hom... worthy of their fullest confidence ... esteem; and that if through the wor... of an All Wise Provicence we may not ... have the pleasure of Bro. Breadner's ... pany at our lodge meeting here, we ... our lives may be so regulated in accor... with the principles of our Order that ... may all be permitted to meet with him ... the Grand Lodge above.

Mr. Breadner intends removing to P... Harbor as soon as navigation opens. ... people of Euphrasia generally trust ... himself and his amiable wife and fa... will be blessed with health and p... perity in their new home.—[Mirror.

Markdale Roller Mi...
FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHE... and preferring flour from their ... wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bus... or more.
Flour always on Ha...
Flour $3.80 to $4.2... per. bbl.
SHORTS, per ton - $1...
BRAN, " - 1...
The highest market price paid for ... and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD...

CANADIAN PACIFIC R...
OWEN SOUND BRANCH
TIME TABLE.
Taking effect Monday, July 28th, 188...

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	E...
Toronto....Leave	7 45am	4 5...
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 5...
Orangeville. Arrive	10 05 "	7 0...
Orangeville. Leave	10 20 "	7 1...
Orangeville Jun	10 32 "	7 2...
Shelburne	10 58 "	8 0...
Dundalk	11 22 "	8 3...
Flesherton	11 47 "	8 5...
Markdale	12 02pm	9 1...
Berkeley	12 14 "	9 2...
Holland Centre	12 23 "	9 3...
Chatsworth	12 38 "	9 4...
Owen Sound	1 05 "	10 0...

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	M...
Owen Sound	5 40am	2 4...
Chatsworth	6 10 "	3 0...
Holland Centre	6 25 "	3 2...
Berkeley	6 34 "	3 3...
Markdale	6 47 "	3 4...
Flesherton	7 02 "	4 0...
Dundalk	7 26 "	4 2...
Shelburne	7 51 "	5 0...
Orangeville Jun	8 22 "	5 3...
Orangeville. Arrive	8 30 "	5 4...
Orangeville. Leave	8 45 "	6 0...
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 4...
Toronto....Arrive	10 55 "	8 1...

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 347. MARKDALE, ONT., APRIL 28, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Publisher.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

30 DAYS!

30 DAYS!

For 30 Days Only, there will be a great discount sale of

Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, Spex, &c.,

Do not miss it but come early and secure some of the bargains before they are gone, only for 30 days, positively, as we are giving you 25 per cent. off on all cash sales over $1.00. The finest make of Nicol Maple clock actually selling at RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelery Store for only $2.00, while they are $2.50 to $2.75 elsewhere and the finest assortment of Fine Plated Chains only $1.60 which are generally sold for $2.25 to $2.50. RUSSELL'S is the place you can get bargains, nobody can compete with us. Come and see for yourselves, we will not pay your milage or give you meals as a catch, but will sell you goods a great deal cheaper than you can get elsewhere and remember the only place to get your Watch repaired properly is at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,
FLESHERTON.

Farmers buy your land rollers from Jackson.

Maggie Millsap is home from Toronto for the summer.

Get your plow repairs from Jackson. Old metal taken in exchange.

For calcimines or wall finish of any kind. The best to be had at Mabee's.

Harrows! Harrows!! Iron and spring tooth at Jackson's.

For calcimine brushes, wall brushes, paint brushes &c., see Mabee's.

Clover & Timothy Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

Fishing Tackle all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner, & Co.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

31—clocks just opened out, will be sold close, as I bought them right, W. A. Brown, Jeweller.

Just call and see M. Richardson & Co's, new stock of stylish spring suits, fine goods at low prices, Flesherton.

Plows! Plows! Sod, General purpose and Jointer—Fleury and Wilkinson's make, at Jackson's.

Try our crown stove polish, its a daisy; no dust, no dirt, no brushing; Mabee has it.

Hardware Department.—Every line complete, nails at bottom prices, at M. Richardson & Co's, Flesherton.

1,000,000 doz., of eggs and 2 tons of butter wanted ot Davis' for which the highest market price will be paid.

J. H. Hull has erected a dwelling house already this spring and has it closed in and roffed.

A large stock of all wool Tweeds from 35c. a yard up, at M. Richardson & Co's, Flesherdson.

C. A. Johnston, in Montgomery's old stand, has opened a resturant where hot meals can be had at all hours, for 15 cents.

McFarlands stave factory is now in full blast. He has an excellent stock of some 400 cords stave bolts.

Moffat Bros of the Markdale foundry have enlarged their premises and are going into the stove manufacturing.

Call and get M. Richardson & Co's, quotations for nails and all kinds of building hardware, Flesherton, Ont.

Plow Points.—All the standard makes and patterns for sale at Moffat's foundry, three for $1.00 cash.

A fresh stock of meals have just been opened at Davis' which will be sold at a very small advance on cost as he will not be undersold.

The trout fishing season commences on Monday next but we have been informed that quite a few did not wait for the 1st May.

Remember you can get Bran, Shorts, Henfeed the same price at Bensons, as at the mill, it saves you half an honr trouble, give us a call.

We understand our village Police intend using cedar for stringers to lay sidewalks this summer. That will be a wise act.

If an editors' motives were one tenth as evil and selfish as he often gets credit for, it would be a pity of the community in which his paper was published.

What about an excursion to Toronto? Some Church or society should take hold and make some money: Don't all speak at once.

It's about time the village Police were making a tour of inspection of sanitary interests—some one says the school premises are not in a healthy state.

Wm. Mason has about a score of fine rigs nearing completed for the summer. Those in need of such will do well to call and examine and get prices before purchasing.

A Walnut case, 10 stop, Karn Organ, new, beautiful instrument, fine tone, will be sold below regular price, and one years time given to good mark, call at W. A. Brown's store.

Markdale Markets.—Fall wheat 75 to 76 cents; spring wheat 75 to 76; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 14 to 15; eggs 10; potatoes 75 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

Prepare for May 1st, Baskets, bait cans, poles, lines, hooks, sinkers, reels, etc., the only complete stock of fishing tackle in town, at W. A. Brown's Jewelery store.

For Oatmeal, "Corn meal" "Wheat meal" graham flour pot and pearl barley Bensons is the place to go, they will do better for you than any one in the town.

In our notice of Christ Church Vestry Meeting in last week's paper the typo made an error in giving the name of Sam'l Coleman as peoples Church Warden when it should have been Sam'l Douglas.

Subscribes who live at a distance (say outside this county) should not be surprised if their paper stops when the subscription expires. We cannot send the paper to nonresidents of our county on tick.

Notice.—All persons indebted to me either by note or book account are hereby notified to call and settle the same with A. Turner, Markdale, without delay, thus save trouble and expense, T. S. Sproule.

Cash buyers will find meat in Sarjeant Bro's meat market as cheap as in any other market in Canada. Prime Bacon, Hams and other smoked and dried meats, as well as all kinds of fresh meats in season.

Davis has constantly on hand a full supply of Ford's and Plewes' flour of the finest quality, if it is not right bring it back and your money will be refunded. Special reduction will be given for large lots.

Eggs for Hatching.—Samuel Coleman, Jr., Markdale, P. O. has for sale eggs from the Champion Strain of Light Brahmas at $2, per 13 eggs, S. C. White Leghorns $1. for 13. White Pekin Ducks 50c. for 13. Also Fowl for sale cheap. 2458

The brass band are to favor our citizens with music Saturday evening.

Special.—The largest best assorted and cheapest stock in Boots & Shoes in the section are at S. Hill's.

As the season is now opened for the sale of Bacon. Benson of the Belfast house is to the fore with a few cases; remember he will not be undersold by any one in the trade and if there is a cut to be given they are the boys that will give it to you, they are dacent little chaps.

Ladies', have you seen my stock of Millinery, all the latest novelties, and prices very low. Call and examine before purchasing elswhere. S. Hill.

A full stock of oranges, lemons, candies of all descriptions, nuts, figs, dates, raisins, biscuits of all kinds, canned goods, a few chests of that thunder, lightening and blue blazes tea left yet, the best value in town, try it, every person is getting it now at Benson's.

Notice.—Another consignment of ready made clothing just to hand. Beautiful all wool tweed suits for $7.50 S. Hill.

I have a few chests of that notorious uncolored japan tea left which I have sold at 30c. per lb and it has been pronounced by those who have used it to be better value than any Tea sold in town for the money—probably you ask why we can sell cheaper than those in trade? the answer is simply because we are satisfied with half the profit. W. L. Davis.

A large consignment of fresh Teas just received and another coming; Quality better and prices lower than heretofore don't fail to give us a call, S. Hill.

If you want a neat and stylish hat go to Miss Burch's the cheapest in town. Feathers, flowers, ribbons and lace, dress and mantle making; eggs taken in exchange for goods.

A young man asked the lady of his affections the other evening how she liked the looks of his new style of standing collar. After critically surveying him and the collar, she replied: "Very nice, indeed. It looks like a whitewashed fence around a lunatic asylum."

Our village for a number of years past have agitated and carried into effect the early closing movement for the summer months commencing the 1st May, but at the close of last summer a step in advancement was taken and the good custom carried out during the winter, so that there is now no necessity for any charge, but keep right on in he even tenor of their way.

Onions inhaled cause sleep, rest, and refreshment. In order to secure sleep and peaceful rest at night, tie a fresh onion around the neck and bruise it to extract the odor, and you are certain to obtain the desired object. Onions should not be eaten before going to church for more reasons than one.

Lightning Racket.—During the thunder storm on Friday evening the 15th, the house of Peter Mortimer, a farmer in Holland township five miles west of Markdale was struck by lightning. Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer and Mrs. Welsh, a neighbor woman, were sitting in the kitchen when suddenly the stove lids jumped off, the ashes flew in all directions, the floor burst up from under them pitching the three persons off their seats, Mr. Mortimer being thrown against the stove; the crash of window glass, breaking of crockery and general confusion all in the twinkling of an eye caused the distracted inmates to imagine the end of the world had arrived. When the confusion had partially subsided they found the house on fire up stairs, but it was speedily subdued, and on finding that no one was seriously injured they discovered that every window in the house was smashed, nearly all the crockery broken comprising china dishes forty years old; the bottom was knocked clean out of a tea kettle which was on the stove, and one end of the house badly shattered. It was indeed a most remarkable freak of lightning.

You may talk of the signs of the weather,
Of the coming days you may sing,
But sitting down on a red hot stove
Is a sign of an early spring.

W. J. Rowe of Barrhead mills has made important improvements in his saw mill recently, having just added 2 new saws and other machinery, increasing its capacity to ten to twelve thousand feet per ten hours. He has extensive orders for shipment besides a large custom trade which compels him to run the mill night and day.

The finest stock of glassware grocery milk pans, crocks, flour pots, hanging baskels &c., to be had at Benson's and will be sold cheaper than by any one in the trade. Remember we mean what we say. Call and see for yourselves.

Dr. Jug's Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

Davis is to the front, with a new brand of oat meal, the steel cut, try it once and you will use no other, also a fine brand of Corn Meal just to hand, in fact anything in the Provision line may be procured at Davis' at prices which cannot be beaten, and if the trade mean to cut prices, he aint like a fellow that can't stay with them.

A clerk in one of our stores a few days ago, was placed in rather an awkward position when a village belle entered the store and asked to be shown some "dignifierr." Wonderingly the clerk started up the aisle with no idea where he was showing the lady. At length he summoned up courage enough to ask the fair customer to be a little more explicit as he was ignorant of what she meant by "dignifiers." With a look of scorn she replied "bustles" sir.

There is every prospect of Niagara being at last and for ever forced from the harpies who have so long made it a scandal and a byeword. The whole arrangements about the International Park are nearly completed, and it is to be hoped that henceforth visitors to that world-famous region will come away neither victimized nor disgusted. No one will grudge the expenditure of the necessary funds of the desired call be fully and satisfactorily secured.

If Germany was trying to provoke war with France, it is difficult to see how she could alter her policy in order to make her course more effective. Such an occurance as that which is reported on the French frontier where a French official is said to have been enticed upon Germany territory in order to his arrests, and finally actually arrested on French territory, cannot be overlooked. The selfcontrol and moderation of the French press is admirable. War appears to English newspapers so certain that they have already appointed their continental staffs of correspoudents.

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.

It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannot be too widely known. Ask your druggists about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers in the United States and Canada.

Flesherton.

Building operations have now begun here for this season.

Mr. J. Ried, who recently moved in here from New York, has completed arrangements for rapidly pushing forward the work on his new dwelling.

The masons are at work on the foundation of John Osborns dwelling.

J. E. Moore is veneering his block on Collingwood street and fitting up a handsome shop with large glass front next door to M. Richardson & Co's hardware shop.

John Hales new dwelling is now almost ready to be occupied, he intends moving in, in a few days.

The annual spring show of Entire horses held in this village on Friday last far exceeded any previous spring exhibition held in this Township. In all sixteen horses were showed—there were some very fine and well bred animals; of course the usual dissatisfaction occurred with owners as all did not get first prize—The following were the prizes awarded—

Imported Draft—Thorp Wright, for Derby, first prize,

Canadian draught—R. T. McGirr, first—M. Ryan second.

General Purpose—H. King, first,—J. McGirr second,

Roadster—S. Stokes, first,—J. Henry second.

There were several Bloods in the ring but as none had registered Pedigrees no prizes were awarded.

Tan Bark Bath.—The first of the season refreshing and invigorating, was taken by a Mr. Irwin who resides not a mile from this Town on Monday last. In S. Damude's Tannery Mr. I. had occasion to enter the vat department and passing through stepped into a vat full of the liquid immersing him to the shoulders, a brief dip sufficed. The cooling and invigorating power of the bath was proven in the agility of the bather as he returned home not by the way known as the Queen's high way—fences proved no barrier to him in his flight.

An amusing occurence was witnessed in one of our meat shops here a few evenings ago in which the firm consisted of partners. The junior partner being a spirited man undertook to rule with a high hand the Good senior partiner when the former was kindly placed by the latter in a reclining position on the butchers meat block and there kept in peace till the storm passed by, and both are good friends still.

Robert Gallagher, Esq., who when a young man was Mr. M. Richardson's first clerk in Flesherton and who is remembered by many of the old residents here as Bob the lively boy who played so many practical jokes whenever and wherever an opportunity presented itself, after an absence of over twenty years paid this place a brief visit on Saturday last; for the past 20 years Mr. Gallagher has spent most of his time sailing on the Atlantic and elswhere being at one time out for five years on a trading vessel weathering many a gale. When here he was but a slim youth, at present we have but one man in our town who wears too large a coat to fit slim Bob.

On Thursday last a horse trade took place here between S. Spirit butcher and one O'Brien. Spirit stabled his newly installed horse under lock and O'Brien left for home appearently well satisfied, but on Sunday morning Mr. Spirit met with surprise to find the stall empty—and old time gray had in some mysterious way wandered back to town—As Spirit disowned the the gray and he appeared homeless, a kind friend impounded him and there he awaits the arrival of his owner for release. Mr. Spirit advertises a stolen horse.

Mr. Jas Glass, currier, who has been in the employ of S. Damude, for nearly nine years vacated his situation there on Tuesday last.

Owing to the inclemency of the weather on Wednesday evening last the audience at the Band Concert was very small, a good program was provided and very well rendered; at first we thought the Band had little to thank the village for, but since, we learn the receipts did not suffer. as many of our citizens who were not present sent in liberal contribution, altho' there would have been inspiration in a crowded house; Our boys always deserve our heartiest support.

The Rev. W. Ayers occupied the chair in a pleasing manner.

Old newspapers, suitable for laying carpets on, four cents a pound at this office.

LARRY.

BY ARCHIE MACK.

A young girl, slowly walking along the highroad, dusty and tired looking, and seeming as if nothing but shadow were in her life. As she goes homeward she is perusing a closely written letter, and as she raises her hand time and again to wipe away the hot bitter tears, it may be surmised that the contents are not of the most reassuring kind. After reading it through very carefully, she folds it and dropping it into the little satchel on her arm, lifts her head resolutely, quickens her pace, and soon reaches her destination.

She goes quietly to her room, takes off the broad sun hat, bathes her face, brushes her hair, then takes out that letter and re-reads it. Dropping it in her lap, in a listless manner, she gazed across the wide landscape and a long deep sigh escaped her—"Is there no way, no honorable way out of our difficulties?" she thinks bitterly. She is too wise to speak her thoughts, walls have ears, her trouble was her own and she intended it should remain so. "Must Jack sell the homestead to pay that dreadful mortgage that has been daily eating our lives out for years past? It will almost kill father to see it pass into other hands, but with three little mouths to feed, and the many unseen troubles that have come to us, it is all Jack and I can do to pay the interest and keep the wolf from the door, let alone put together that principal. Oh if I could do anything, anything honorable that would earn the money, how gladly I would do it! To see dear old Jack loosened from that weight would amply repay me for any hardship I might myself endure!"

She stands upright, clasps her hands above her head with a weary gesture, and as she stands there, we cannot do better than describe Fanny Campbell, the competent and popular teacher of Ferndale district. Slightly above the average height, a graceful, willowy figure, pure, creamy complexion, lighted by great, fearless, gray eyes, eyes that dilate and darken under excitement, full broad brow, shaded by clustering curls of soft dark hair a rather large nose and mouth, a dimpled chin, small, well-formed hands and feet, and you have a correct inventory of Fanny's charms.

In the rushing, lively town of Exeter, some hundred miles or so from Ferndale, standing at the window of a fashionable residence might be seen, that same evening on which our story opens, a handsome man of about thirty years of age The proud, fair face, however, wore a discontented, not to say unhappy expression, and the blue eyes were moody and troubled. What could possibly have transpired to so annoy Lawrence Ellwood, the petted darling of Exeter, the wealthiest man in the town?

As he chews the end of his heavy mustache he mutters, "I can't make it out, why can't I forget her as easily as I do the young ladies I meet every day? What is there in great, laughing, gray eyes to make me see them before me night and day? A girl, too, to whom I have never spoken, who possibly knows me by sight, by reputation at all events," and a bitter look crossed his face blotting out for a moment all its beauty, "And I don't doubt, poor as she is and forced to drudge daily for enough to eat, but that she would refuse me were I to lay my hand and my heart at her feet. By jove! my heart has been there for many a week past, it is useless to deny it any longer. I have passed safely the battery of fashion and beauty in Paris, and other European cities, in Toronto and Montreal, to fall, at last a victim, to a little gray eyed school-treacher! The worst of it is," ruefully, "I see no chance of winning her," and turning abruptly, he left the house and made his way down town.

The next forenoon, while sitting in his private apartment at the Bank, a young man of about his own age was shown in on business The newcomer was handsome and gentlemanly, in appearance, and Mr. Ellwood rose graciously to receive him, offering his hand as he said, "This is an unexpected pleasure, Mr. Campbell. Is there anything I can do for you to-day?"

Jack Campbell, for it is he, returned the greeting cordially, then with some slight hesitation, began, "Mr. Ellwood, I called to see you on business. Doubtless you are aware I am embarrassed in money matters. The truth is I want to sell my farm, I cannot clear myself of debt in any other way, and bitter as it is it must be done. I thought perhaps you would wish to invest in good property so I called to see you."

Lawrence Ellwood had listened attentively. When Jack finished he sat silent a few moments then looking up asked quietly, "What is the total amount of your indebtedness, Mr. Campbell?"

"At a rough estimate, eight thousand dollars would cover it in full," was the reply.

"And what will you do providing you find a purchaser? Pardon me, it is not idle curiosity prompts the question," he added, courteously, seeing his visitor's face flush.

"I scarcely know as yet. Anything that will give me means to support those dependent on me," was the frank answer.

"It will be hard for your parents to have to leave their home," Lawrence said kindly.

"God knows, it will," was the passionate answer, "it almost unmans me when I think of them, Mr. Ellwood."

"You have a sister, a young lady, have you not?" asked Ellwood, slowly.

"Yes," was the brief reply.

"Is she at home?" indifferently.

"No, she is teaching at Ferndale," coldly.

"At Ferndale!' exclaimed the other. "Do you know anything about Ferndale, Mr. Campbell," asked Lawrence qrickly.

"Nothing beyond what my sister has written, but, pardon me, we are straying from business," he added pointedly.

"Pardon me, Mr. Campbell, if I pursue the subject. We will return to business in a few minutes. Does Miss Campbell like Ferndale?"

"She does not say, Mr. Ellwood," with quiet dignity, "I prefer to have my sister's name left out of the discussion. She accepted Ferndale school, knowing how much the money was needed by those at home, and for their sake, if it is not all she would like, she has forborne making any complaint. My sister is one of the noblest girls in the world and so I cannot bear to have her spoken of in a light, careless manner," and Jack Campbell flushed hotly.

"You have misunderstood me, Mr. Campbell," was Lawrence's answer, "I respect Miss Campbell too highly to ever speak of her in the way you supposed I was guilty of doing," then suddenly raising his head and looking Jack fairly in the face he added, "I have a proposition to make."

Jack bowed, but looked at him curiously.

After a moment's silence he continued, "Do not be offended at what I say, Mr. Campbell, for I assure you no offence is intended. You know me, my means, my general character, my business standing, would you be willing to trust your sister's future to me?"

It was out, and Lawrence as he toyed nervously with a paper-weight at his hand, watched the varying expressions on Jack Campbell's face.

"I think I must have misunderstood you," said Jack in amazement.

"Perhaps I bungled," said Lawrence, half sadly, "but, Mr. Campbell, I love your sister so dearly, and the fear that I will never be able to call her mine so unnerves me, that I find it difficult to explain to you my position. If Miss Campbell will marry me, I will give her the amount of your indebtedness, to set you free before the world. One moment," as Jack rose indignantly, "I am not buying Miss Campbell. She will be free to accept or reject me. I merely tell you what I will do, providing she honors me with the acceptance of my hand. Will you favor my suit?" quietly.

Jack had reseated himself. It was a tempting offer. Had he a right to refuse it without consulting Fanny, Frank as he always called her? Assuredly not,—and looking up he found Lawrence's eyes watching him keenly.

"What is your decision, Mr. Campbell?"

"I will let my sister decide for herself. To her and to her alone must you look for your answer, I will not influence her in the least," was the candid answer.

"Do me one favor," he pleaded. "Write to her and tell her the circumstances and," with a deprecating little smile, "say a good word for me, if you can."

"Promise me one thing, Mr. Ellwood," said Jack rising, "if my sister answers favorably, will you always give her the kind love a true husband should give his wife?"

Lawrence Ellwood rose to his feet, and drawing himself to his full height, answered, "as surely as there is a God in Heaven, so surely will I be to your sister, if she will marry me, a faithful, loving husband as long as I live."

"I am satisfied," said Jack, offering his hand, "I will write to my sister to-night." "So will I," said Lawrence, and the two men parted.

A week later Miss Campbell received the two letters. Whom the one addressed in the bold business hand could be from puzzled her, and she opened it to appease her curiosity. Glancing at the signature, she exclaimed in amazement, "Lawrence Ellwood! What can he have to say to me?" and beginning at the first she read,

"MY DEAR MISS CAMPBELL,—Doubtless you will be surprised to get this note from me, but I can endure the suspense no longer. Will you be my wife? I love you truly, as a man ought to love the woman he marries, and if you will kindly listen to me, and accept me, I will endeavor to make your life very happy.

"I know you will think it strange, my writing in this manner, and not even having an introduction to you, but I have seen you many times in Exeter, and the fact remains, that I love you with my whole heart and soul.

"I had a conversation with your brother to-day, on the subject, and I write this with his sanction. From him you will learn all particulars, also a proposition I made to him, which I trust will not damage my cause in your eyes.

"Dear Miss Campbell, judge my past as leniently as you can, and be very sure that from this day forward, Lawrence Ellwood will stand free from the vices that have marred the days gone by, the memory of your pure face will ever guard me from temptation, even should you close the gate of Paradise on my longing eyes.

"Kindly let me know your decision as soon as possible, as I will be very unhappy till I hear from you. Whatever your decision may be, always look on me as your friend, if you debar me from a nearer and dearer relationship.

"Yours very faithfully, (I would fain add lovingly,)

"LAWRENCE LESLIE ELLWOOD."

Fanny Campbell dropped the letter in consternation. "Oh, good gracious!" she muttered, "has the man gone crazy! Lawrence Ellwood wanting to marry Frank Campbell!" and she laughed a queer little laugh. "A man I have never spoken to, either, it is too ridiculous! Still there is a ring about that letter, I like," she added, thoughtfully, "more true manliness in it than I ever gave the man credit for! But marry him! that is simply out of the question," decisively. "I wonder what Jack has to say" after a pause, "and Mr. Ellwood says he sanctions his suit; it is very odd," thoughtfully.

Slowly she opens Jack's letter, reads it still more slowly, evidently weighing each word as she goes along, and when it is finished the whole expression of the girl's face has changed. Jack had written very minutely, giving her all details, and leaving her to decide for herself, at the same time begging her not to accept Mr. Ellwood unless she felt sure she could be happy with him.

She faces the situation unflinchingly. She sees it all so plainly, ease and comfort for the dear, old parents, a sure home for the little ones, freedom from care for Jack, all these on one side, on the other, what? A life spent by the side of a man who was less than nothing to her, a man whose past drew from her nothing but scorn and loathing. True, she cared for no one, she was wholly heart free, but she shuddered at the thought of marrying Lawrence Ellwood.

The battle went on, and finally her decision was made. "I will do it!" she said, determination written on every feature. "God forgive me if I am doing wrong, but I cannot see them turned adrift, homeless and penniless."

A week later Lawrence Ellwood received his answer. For a few minutes he could not summon courage to open it, at last he broke the seal, drew out the sheet and read with wildly beating heart the few lines penned therein:

"DEAR MR. ELLWOOD,—There can be but two answers to yours of the 16th, yes or no. My answer is not no.

"Yours sincerely,

"FRANK C. CAMPBELL."

"Thank God!" he said reverently "thank God, for this great blessing," and he kissed the signature, blushing like a school-girl as he did so.

Looking at it again, he continued, "What a pretty name! Frank! and how well it suits her! Ah my bonnie, little Frank. I can understand why your answer is not 'no,' but the daughter who loves so truly will make a wife doubly worthy, and if it lies in the power of man to win your love, so surely will I win it, darling!"

The next day when he wrote to her, his letter breathed something of the great love he felt, but in his letter no extravagant terms of endearment were to be found in it. At the end he begged for just one word to say she was not wholly indifferent to him.

Her answer carried a quiet dignity with it. "You must not forget," she wrote, "that to me all this is new and strange. It is needless to say that I only accepted your offer, because you so generously promised to extricate my brother from his difficulties. I can truthfully assure you, that if you do not possess my affection no one else does. At present all I can give you is loyal friendship, the future alone can tell if it will ripen into anything warner. If you are content to take me under these circumstances, I will do my best to be a good, true wife to you; more than that I cannot promise," and Lawrence was fain to confess he could expect no more.

When he urged for a speedy marriage, she declared she was in duty bound to finish her term at Ferndale, then it should be as soon as he desired.

Jack was not surprised at his sister's decision. Knowing her so well he never for a moment had doubted what it would be, and yet he felt terribly uneasy about how it all would end. Lawrence Ellwood that day had favorably impressed him. "If Frank could only learn to care for him," he said again and again, "I'm sure she would be very happy, for Ellwood is at heart a good man."

The end of September saw Frank in Exeter, waiting for Jack to come and take her home. In the meantime Lawrence had bought up all Jack's debts, and one morning the latter got a letter enclosing a receipt in full for all liabilities. Frank had been duly informed, and her heart warmed to the man who had so delicately accomplished a difficult task. But that day in Exeter it was with a sinking heart she awaited the coming of her affianced husband. It was a strange position, engaged to this man for over three months, and to day would be the first time they would speak to each other.

The minutes dragged slowly. At last a step on the stairs, a light rap on the door, and Lawrence Ellwood and Frank Campbell were face to face. He came towards her eagerly, his fair face in a glow of delight, his blue eyes lit up by his great love, with a very tender light in them, both hands outstretched, "At last! Oh, Frankie, we meet at last!" he cried tenderly.

Frank had risen to her feet, and now stood pale to the lips, her eyes darkening and dilating with excitement. Almost unconsciously she extended her hands to meet his, but when he would have drawn her to him and kissed the pure, pale face, she sprang away from him, exclaiming, "No, no, Mr. Ellwood, not that, not that!"

Lawrence's face grew very sad at her evident aversion to him. "Forgive me," he said sadly, "forgive me, Frankie. My great love made me forget for the moment that you did not return it."

"Rather forgive me, Mr. Ellwood," she said, in a curiously choked voice, "but—but I was taken so by surprise. I never imagined you would want to—to kiss me," she finished desperately, flushing crimson to the roots of her hair.

In spite of himself Lawrence Ellwood smiled. The smile was contagious. The absurdity of the position flashed on both, and ere they were aware of it, both were laughing heartily over the affair. It served to drive off the oppressive feeling, and was the first foundation of real friendship between these two so strangely mated.

Seating himself by her side, Lawrence continued the conversation, asking mischievously, "Well, Frankie, if I did not want to kiss my intended wife, what would I want?"

"Please, don't, Mr. Ellwood," she pleaded. "I know how generous you can be, won't you extend it a little further, and—and let us get a little acquainted, before—before—" breaking down in charming confusion.

"Poor little girl!" he said kindly, putting his arm around her, and drawing her close to his side. "Poor, little, timid, Frankie, I won't tease you any more, you may trust me, darling," and he bent his head and kissed the trembling lips of the agitated girl.

Frank sprang to her feet, sudden anger chasing away every other feeling. Lawrence looked at her, in amazement, then suddenly realizing what he had done, he too, rose, coloring plainfully. "Forgive me, oh, forgive me!" he pleaded, humbly, "on my honor, I never intended doing it! Frankie," passionately. "I love you so, you cannot comprehend how I do love you, and when I saw you in such pitiable agitation, I unconsciously did what I did, I could not help it. Forgive me this once and I will try not to offend again," and he looked at her beseechingly.

Her sudden anger was cooling, reflection was doing its work, as she answered, calmly as possible, "I believe you, Mr. Ellwood. Being unpremediated, I can forgive you this time, otherwise I would find it hard to do so."

"Then sit down again and let us resume our conversation," with grave politeness.

"Thank you," and Frankie sat down in a cosy rocker some distance from the sofa, the scene of their late trouble.

"Won't you sit here?" he asked, indicating her last seat.

"I am quite comfortable here, thank you," with a litle smile.

"Ah, you cannot trust me," sadly, then going where she sat, he knelt down by her side, and slipping his arm around her, said tenderly, "Dear Frankie, have patience with me. You say you care for no one, won't you try and care for me just a little, a very little," unconsciously his arm tightened around her.

"Mr. Ellwood, don't, please don't," she cried, in deep distress.

"Mr. Ellwood!" he repeated, reproachfully, "why do you call me that, Frankie?"

"What else would I call you?" she inquired innocently.

"Why, Lawrence, of course," he answered promptly, "Let me hear you say it, dear," pleadingly.

"But, I don't like the name," doubtfully.

"Then call me Leslie, my second name is that. I hope you don't object to it?" smiling.

"But I do," decidedly. "I'll call you neither. I'll have a name all my own, for you," saucily.

Lawrence's heart gave a great bound. Surely she did not dislike him when she spoke in that tone, and, yes she permitted him to put his arm around her, and that terrible nervous dread was wearing off. But he said nothing of this, only bending his look on her more keenly, he asked, merrily, "And what is my new name to be, sweetheart?"

"Let me see," she said, gravely. After a moment's thought, she looked up with a merry twinkle in her eye.

"Well, what is it?" he asked gaily.

"Larry!" she said, emphatically.

He gave a low whistle as he made a comical grimace at the name.

"You don't like it?" she questioned mischievously.

"I can't say I do," he acknowledged slowly.

"Never mind, it will not be long till you think it the prettiest name in the world," sagely,

"I would like to hear how it sounds," he said with great innocence.

"Would you, really,—Larry?" with a very slight hesitation before mentioning it.

"I am converted," he cried, "Larry it shall be to the end of the chapter!"

In the course of an hour or so he rose to take his leave. As he held her hand he looked at her pleadingly, which brought the hot blushes to her face. "Have you quite forgiven me, Frankie?" he whispered.

"Yes, Larry," was the low reply, without raising her eyes.

"Darling," and his face was bent close to hers, "will you not give me of your own free will, what I unconsciously robbed you of some time ago?"

No answer, but the little hand he held fluttered like a prisoned bird.

"We may never meet again," he whispered, pleadingly, "God only knows what is in store for us, and I would like to have one kiss from my wife's lips."

A moment's hesitation, then she raised her pure face to his, and as Larry Ellwood kissed the pure lips of his chosen bride, he murmured reverently, "God bless you and keep you always, and may He give me the power of making you happy, dearest Frankie," and then he left her.

Arrangements for the marriage were made shortly. In the meantime Larry lost no opportunity that presented itself to try and win her affection. A surprise awaited him the first time he drove out to her home to see her. He had purchased a very handsome set of jewellry as a present for her. When they were alone he gave them to her. She opened the box in some surprise, and the beauty of its contents drew from her an exclamation of admiration.

"You like it?" he questioned eagerly.

"It is lovely, but—" and she looked at him wistfully.

"But what, Frankie?" kindly. "Say what you wish, darling."

She took a step towards him and laid one hand lightly on his arm. "You will not be angry, Larry," she pleaded; "but I cannot accept your gift."

"Not accept it, Frankie! Do you dislike me so very much that you will not even take a paltry little gift from me?" he asked bitterly.

Her face showed the keen distress his words caused her. "I was afraid you would put that construction on it," she answered sadly; "but, indeed, indeed, you are wrong. I would not accept such presents from any man. When—when," blushing deeply, "I am your wife, Larry, I will not refuse any gift you may choose to give me. You understand what I mean?" wistfully.

"Yes. Frankie, you are one woman in ten thousand! I will not offend again until," roguishly, "you are my wife," lingering very tenderly over the two last words.

The evening before their marriage Larry drove out to see her. As they were standing together shortly before he left, he suddenly put his arm around her and drew her closely to him. It was the first time he had done so since the day of their first meeting in Exeter, and she made a movement as if to escape from his embrace. "Don't, darling, you hurt me," he whispered tenderly, "let me hold you so, just this once," and she permitted him.

"This will be our last good-by," he said presently. "After to-morrow we will not be separated. I wish, Frankie, that you could look forward to the future as eagerly as I do," regretfully.

She did not answer, but he felt her quiver from head to foot.

"Do you dread it so terribly, dear?" he inquired, gravely tender.

"Larry, don't!" she cried, a ring of pain in the sweet voice, then, as if impelled by some unseen power, she turned towards him and burying her face on his shoulder sobbed as if her heart would break.

Larry was shocked at her grief. He said nothing, but tenderly stroked the soft, little curls that ran riot over her head. His touch seemed to soothe and restore her. Presently she raised her head, and would have withdrawn from his arm, but he gently, yet firmly, resisted her attempt.

"No, darling," he said softly, "you sought shelter in my arms from your trouble, and have wept bitter tears on my bosom, instinctively you turned to me, and I will not let you go."

"Larry," she said, in a low voice, "it was not the dread of to-morrow made me do what I did just now! My nerves seem wholly unstrung, and I feel already that my cry has done me good, forgive me for wounding you as I have done," and she glanced up at him shyly.

Something in her face made his heart beat wildly. "Frankie, tell me truly, do you care for me?" he questioned eagerly.

"I hardly know," she answered slowly, "Till the last half hour I thought I did not, but now—"

"Now, Frankie?" pleadingly.

"I think I am beginning to care for you," was the low reply, so low he had to bend his head to catch the words.

His arm tightened about her. "You have made me very happy," he said; then suddenly he bent his head and kissed her passionately time and again.

The next day they were married.

Six months later husband and wife stand side by side, a goodly sight to see.

"You do not regret having married me, Frankie?" Larry inquires.

"No," she answers quickly, then adds, "I never knew real happiness till I [illegible] your wife."

His face lights. "You have learned to love me," exultantly, "have you not, my darling?"

"Yes, Larry, with my whole heart," the response. We draw a veil over the scene.

A few minutes after, she asked mischievously, "shall I call you Lawrence or Leslie?"

"No," emphatically, "nothing but Larry." And "Larry" it will ever be in this happy home.

RELICS OF THE DARK AGES.

A Justice of the Peace in a West Virginia village recently fined a fisherman heavily for insisting in the course of a trial before the sapient magistrate that the moon had something to do with the ebb and flow of tides.

A little negro girl of Calhoun goes up into the mountains every day or two and talks, so she says, with an obliging angel who tells her a great many mysterious secrets. The black people place a great deal of confidence in her revelations, and await her coming and going with anxious interest. Her latest piece of information is that the town will be visited by a cyclone, following close on the heels of a disastrous earthquake, before the year is out, and will be totally destroyed.

Frank Winn, a precocious young colored boy of Dallas, Tex., has shown considerable inventive skill, and many of the more superstitious of his race think that he is in league with the devil. Last week some of the credulous blacks tried to rout Satan out of the young inventor's dwelling by nailing up the door and suspending before it strands of hair tied around bits of broken glass. To clinch the argument with the black fiend they tacked a horseshoe on the lintel of the door and attached a precious rabbit's foot to the knob.

A negro cook at Athens, Ga., had a severe attack of rheumatism in the back not long ago and called in a voudoo doctor to treat him. The voudoo man said that his patient was under the malign influence of an enemy, and going out into the yard returned with a piece of red flannel tied in the middle with a blue string, which he declared to be the cause of all the trouble. The offending cloth was burned in the sick-room to the accompaniment of weird incantations, the patient said he was much better and the doctor, having received his proper fee, departed.

One of Mrs. McLane's hens, near Thompson, laid an unusually large egg a short time ago, on which, it is declared, was written in startling capital letters the inscription, "Terrible Earthquake in March." The news of the omen flew around among the negroes with great rapidity, and intense excitement prevailed. Prayer-meetings were held in cabins, people confessed their sins to one another and an alarming state of mental depression and religious fervor obtained among many of the blacks. It is now supposed the mysterious inscription was the work of a young man employed on Mrs. McLane's farm.

The Victorian Empire.

Great Britain is quarrelling with Venezuela, and has even gone so far as to withdraw her Minister. The quarrel is, of course, over the boundary question. Great Britain took Guiana from the Dutch, and while the line between Dutch and English territory has been settled by treaty, those between English territory and the territories of Brazil and Venezuela have never been laid down, and Britain's claims rest upon the old Dutch conquests. Treaties between all the nations exist which debar either one from occupying the disputed territory, which is said to amount to over eighty thousand square miles. The area of British Guiana, without this disputed territory, is, according to latest figures, one hundred and nine thousand square miles. This is a very small proportion of so large a continent for a nation which has annexed over one-seventh of all the land on earth. She owns indeed even a smaller proportion of the continent of Europe upon which her sole possession is Gibraltar whose area is only about one and seven-eighths square miles; but then, Europe is too far advanced to need her fostering care, while South America is in part undeveloped and in part uncivilized. Of course Great Britain owns a good many scrappy islands which count with South America, and whose aggregate area is about 125,364 square miles, but two hundred and twenty-five thousand square miles is too small a proportion of such a vast continent for a nation to possess which owns about 3,600,000 square miles of North America, 3,306,000 square miles of Australia and Oceanica, 1,304,655 square miles of Asia and 300,000 s square miles of Africa. This is without counting such recent annexations as those in New Guinea, in Burmah, on the Niger in Africa, or such protectorates as those established over Egypt, or Afghanistan, or Beloochistan, and leaving out such pearls as Cyprus, Malta, Aden, Perim; nor does it include the United Kingdom, whose area is 120,892 miles. Seriously, Great Britain possesses already too much undigested territory. She has been nowhere less successful in Anglicizing her possessions than in the plantations of Guiana, whose conditions are little removed from those of the former slave plantations of the South, and in some respects differ for the worse, as the planters have less interest in their hands; and these, being largely imported coolies, suffer greatly from the climate. Brazil is a well-governed country, and Venezuela is a self-governing republic, which, however unsettled, is more to the mind of freemen than a crown colony ever can be. On the whole, we hope England will not distress herself about acquisitions in that region.—Montreal Witness.

Doing Well for His Size.

Visitor (to Flossie)—"And how is the baby to-day, Flossie?"

Flossie—"Mamma thinks he is a little better."

Visitor—"Then he is not very much better?"

Flossie—"No, ma'am. He couldn't be very much better, you know, because he is such a little bit of a baby."

"Ah, Jones, where away so fast this morning?" "I'm off for the whaling grounds." He was the district schoolmaster on his way to the school-house. "Does your mother wear a switch?" asked an inquisitive lady. "Yes," replied little Johnny, "but she always uses her slippers."

HOUSEHOLD.

House-Cleaning.

The March winds have shaken the clinging dead leaves from the trees, and blown the light, loose rubbish into heaps in the hollows and valleys; and now the April showers have softened and washed away what the winds could not remove, while the warm and purifying sunshine will help to carry forward the thorough renovating process which at this season is going on throughout the entire domain of nature Indoors, the tidy housewife feels an impulse to follow nature's example, and cleanse her house of the dust and dirt, which, in spite of the weekly cleaning, has accumulated during the long winter season. To bring about this necessary end without an undue taxation of physical strength, should be the first thought in connection with this annual business of house cleaning.

Do not undertake to accomplish more in one day than can be done with ease and pleasure. It is far better to attempt only as much work as can be finished in the first half of the day, giving the remainder of the day to other, less onerous duties, thus reserving a fund of strength, which must be added to by adequate rest, for the work of the coming day.

Do not make the mistake of upsetting many or all the rooms of a house at once; take only one room at a time, and arrange so that there shall be throughout the entire house-cleaning season, some cosy place where the family may live and rest in comfort.

Get plenty of help for the heavy work. The fashion many women have of themselves attempting to do all the extra work of house-cleaning in addition to the ordinary cares of the family, which are quite enough for them, is the poorest kind of economy; and overwork at this season of the year, when the system is naturally relaxed, is especially hazardous.

Make thorough work of the cleaning process. Remember the closets, cupboards, attic, and cellar. These are just the places where dirt and germs are most apt to accumulate. Purify, and disinfect if necessary, every nook and corner of the house.

Do not rest satisfied until the entire house and all that pertains to it, has been thoroughly renovated; but do not hurry through the work at the expense of health and strength; and, as a recent writer upon the subject aptly remarks: "No woman should indulge the thought that what she is doing is drudgery, but that, like her great exampler, nature, she is performing a refining and elevating process."

Practical Recipes.

NIAGARA CAKE.—Take one cupful of sugar, three cupfuls of flour, one and a half cupfuls of milk, half a cupful of butter, and two eggs; mix thoroughly, adding two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Bake in a hot oven. This is a really excellent cake.

TO PRESERVE ORANGES.—Boil the oranges in clear water until you can pass a straw through their skins; then clarify three-quarters of a pound of sugar to a pound of fruit, and pour over the oranges while hot. Let them stand one night, then boil them in the syrup until they are clear and the syrup thick. Take them from the syrup, and strain it clear over them.

JAUNE MANGE.—Break up and boil an ounce of isinglass of gelatine in rather more than a half pint of water, till it is melted; strain it, then add the juice of two large oranges, a gill of white wine, and the yelks of four eggs beaten and strained; sweeten to taste, and stir it over a gentle fire till it just boils up. Dip a mold in cold water, and fill with the preparation. Do not allow any sediment to go in it.

CHICKEN SALAD.—Mince the white meat of a chicken fine, then chop the white parts of celery, and prepare a dressing as follows: Rub the yelks of hard-boiled eggs smooth with a spoon; put to each yelk one teaspoonful of made mustard, half as much salt, a wineglassful of strong vinegar, and a tablespoonful of the best olive oil. Put the celery into a salad-bowl, lay the chicken on that, then pour over it the dressing. Lettuce cut small may be used in the place of celery, but the latter is much more delicious. Cut the whites of the eggs in rings to garnish the salad.

LEMON PIE.—A delicious lemon pie can be made by following the receipt here given, namely: Take one cupful of bread crumbs, one of sugar, one of water, three well-beaten eggs, the juice of three juicy lemons, the rind of two lemons grated fine, and mix together thoroughly. Make paste, and a puff-paste crust to cover the pie, as follows: Rub half a pound of sweet butter into a pound of flour, and add half a teaspoonful of baking powder; use just enough water to bind it, then roll it out, away from you, rather thin, and use for top and bottom crusts. If you like a puff-paste top, after you roll out this crust as advised, spread butter all over the surface, fold the crust together, and roll it out again, always away from you. Flour the pie-board well, also the rolling pin; spread on more butter, fold, and roll as before. Do this three times in all, and you will have a fine puff-paste crust. Or to make a less expensive and plainer, but very nice crust, mix with milk instead of water, and use one-half fresh sweet lard and one-half butter, instead of butter and water.

Hints For House-Cleaning.

To clean steel, apply with a flannel cloth a paste of emery powder and sweet-oil.

Mirrors may be cleaned with cold water and a sponge, or rubbed with a damp cloth dipped into powdered bluing, and then polished.

For the destruction of moths, pursue the following plan: Take the tacks from the carpet, fold it back, and wash the floor underneath in strong suds in which a tablespoonful of borax has been dissolved. When dry, sprinkle the carpet and floor with insect powder, and re-tack.

Persian insect powder, if carefully and persistently used, will generally be found efficacious for the extermination of roaches. An exchange says that if powdered borax is plentifully sprinkled around their haunts and occasionally renewed, it will prove an effectual exterminator.

A mother, vexed at something one of her sons (ætat seven) had done, told him no one would give her two cents for him. "Well, mother," replied, "no one would have you if you were to be given away with a pound of tea."

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

For some weeks past Shinbone Smallman and Hardluck Johnson have engaged in an enmity which bade fair to end in bloodshed. It came about through a dispute on a Biblical question. Shinbone said that he didn't believe any bears came out and ate up the children who shouted after Elisha. Hardluck replied that any man who disputed the statement was either a fool or an atheist, and thus the gulf opened. Several mutual friends have sought to arbitrate, but Shinbone was firm and Hardluck was determined. They ignored each other's existence, and their wives and children made faces at each other over the fence. It had been whispered around all the week that Brother Gardner would bring about a reconciliation at the Saturday night session, and every face in the hall was turned towards him as he arose and said:

"How much we know dat we doan' know 'tall an'kin nebber find ont! De aiverage man will bet mo' money on his ignorance dan on his true knowledge, an' he will fight for a lie as soon as de troof. I see Brudders Smallman an' Johnson back dar by de fluted column. Boaf of 'em will please retrograde to de front."

The two gentlemen named indulged in two magnificent starts of surprise, gritted their teeth at each other and advanced to the President's desk in single file.

"Shinbone," said Brother Gardner, when they stood before him, "do you believe de b'ars ate up de chill'en dat followed 'Lisha?"

"No, sah."

"Why doan' you?"

"Kase I doan'."

"Hardluck, do you believe de b'ars ate de chill'en up?"

"Yes, sah."

"Why do believe it?"

"Kase I do."

"I expected dis was de case. Fools an' bigots believe bekase dey believe. It hain't bekase dey have sense an' reason on deir side, but simply bekase dey have made up deir minds to a sartin thing. One of you believes de b'ars ate up de chill'en bekase you've heard so. De odder one won't believe it bekase he didn't see it done. Now dis 'ere fulishness has got to stop! It has got to stop right yere an' now! Hold out yer paws to each odder. Now shake. Now go an' sot down, an' when you go home arter de meetin' tell yer wives dat de match has bin declared off an' de country am safe. By-law 6491 forbids any disputes on religus subjeks. You have laid yerselves liable to a fine of $13,000 cash, an' if you don't walk powerful straight fur de nex six' months sunthin will happen to upset yer piece of mind."

HE MEBNT IT.

The two members returned to their seats and began to smile and whisper to each other and inside of three minutes had traded jack-knives and exchanged gum.

"I should like to ask de Cha'r," said the Rev. Penstock, as he arose, "if he meant to use de expreshun he did of: 'Please retrograde to de front?'"

"De Cha'r did, sah!"

"Yes—um—yes! Retrograde to defront!"

"Dat's what I said, sah, an' de Cha'r meant it! If de Cha'r had meant for 'em to disrupt to de rear he would have said so. What am de pint you wish to raise?"

"Dat de expreshun was not classically nor grammatically correct."

"Brudder Penstock, 'you sot down, 'an' doan' you be ober fo' minits sittin' dar! Dis club doan' do business on de classically nor grammatically basis. We seek to speak so plainly dat eberybody kin understan'. 'Bout de time we orter hev bin in college, bittin' off hull hunks of wisdom from de branches of de tree of eddecashun, we was handlin' de cotton hoe an' workin' in de sugar-can, an' we isn't to blame fur it. Yes, sah, sot right down, an' stay sot, an' de Seckretary will enter a fine of $7,000 agin you for disturbin' de harmony of de meetin'."

HAVEN'T HEARD OF IT.

A communication from Toronto stated that the writer had seen the statement in print that the colored people of the North were leaving the Methodist Church in great numbers and becoming Presbyterians, and he would like to inquire of the Lime-Kiln Club the occasion for such a move.

Sir Isaac Walpole said he was totally ignorant of any such movement. The only person who had left the Methodist pastorate to which he belonged was a colored man with a wooden leg and one eye out, and he had been churched for having too intimate an acquaintance with his neighbors' wood piles.

Waydown Bebee, who passes the collection box in a Methodist congregation, had not heard of any stampede. His church was constantly gaining in membership, and the only lost lambs consisted of two members who tried to steal the stove out of the basement.

Whalebone Howker, who is a janitor in a Methodist church edifice, pronounced the statement "uneventually false" in every particular. There was no hegira from the Methodist church, and there was nothing wrong with the Methodist religion.

"I guess de hull bizness ar' what de white falks call a kenard," observed the President as he rose up to cut off further debate, "De cull'd man who can't git 'long with de Methodist or Baptist religun am a pusson who orter be watched wid boaf eyes. De Seckretary will brand de statement as a kenard, but thank de gem'lan for his interes' in our race."

Frontier Marks.

The frontier between Germany and France is more distinctly marked than that of any other two countries. The frontier line is so arranged that it crosses every road at right angles.

On the German side is a large post, twelve feet high, painted like a barber's pole—red, black and white, with a cross-piece at the top, with the word, in black letters on a white ground, grenze (boundary), with an exclamation mark.

Diagonally opposite is a cast-iron post, twelve feet high, whereon is painted in gray, on an iron cross-piece, the word frontier.

Such posts are only placed on roads and railways. The line is indicated "across country" by some stone blocks projecting about a foot above the ground at intervals of fifty yards. On the French side of the block is cut with a chisel the letter "F"; on the German side is the letter "D"—for "Deutschland.

It is no great matter to live lovingly with good-natured, humble, and meek persons; but he who can do so with the forward, willful, ignorant, peevish, and perverse has true charity.

FARM.

Women and the Farm.

In her interesting essay on "Farming from a woman's point of view," Miss Emily A. Brownell says:—It goes without saying that there is no class of women so helpful and so necessary in their homes as the wives and daughters of farmers. Herbert Spencer says that Americans overwork; and he would reverse the common belief that life is for work, and substitute "Work is for life." The revised ideal that he suggests seems almost impossible for the farmer to follow, and quite impossible in the farm-house. The old-fashioned farmer—it is possible he may have a few successors—seemed to economize everything but the labor and strength of his wife. The woman's work on a farm is highly important, though all men are not willing to concede this until some time sickness stops the wife's busy hands and feet and active brain; and hired help, expensive and often inefficient, is found to be a poor substitute. Then the farmer realizes the worth of his wife's work and care. There dawns upon him a sense of her value when he has to pay a stranger good wages for what the wife did so much better and for so little, and that often given grudgingly. Among all the burdens woman is called upon to bear, there is not one so galling as the burden of dependence in money matters. Many truly kind and affectionate husbands are thoughtless on this point. Whatever money a woman wants—to a reasonable extent—should be given into her hands in such a way that she can enjoy it and preserve her self-respect. It should be given voluntarily, in generous proportion to her husband's income, and her use of it should be unquestioned.

It is evident that farmers' wives are becoming more interested and more intelligent in regard to farming. If they will, they can do much toward elevating farm life and making it attractive. We are indebted largely to their taste and efforts for the success of our annual agricultural exhibitions. By their presence and sympathy they have given an impetus and a new interest to the pleasant field meetings and winter gatherings.

Novelties.

The advice of many rural papers to "leave novelties alone" is retrogressive. There are two great classes of cultivators; those who can afford to buy and to try new seeds and plants, and who delight in it, and, second, those who care for them as a means of support or profit. The first class stand in little need of caution or advice. But it should be the study of every farm journal to assist the latter class, not by advising them to "shun novelties" but through investigation, inquiry and experiment, to aid them in a judicious selection.

The farm journal that advises its readers to "beware of novelties," shrinks its duty. If such journals have no reason for existence which is stronger than another, it is that they are to find out what new plants or seeds or methods or implements are worthy of commendation or trial; what are not. All improvements of every kind come through novelties, and the progressive agricultural journal must be prepared to give the earliest trustworthy information respecting them.

Notes and Comments.

Regularity as to time of milking should be observed, and the milk drawn quickly. Irregularity and slowness dry up a cow.

Merino sheep do best when kept in small flocks, and it is profitable also to grade the different lots, so that the weaklings are together.

An eastern farmer says that he does not know of anything finer than a good ox team, and that wherever you see one you see good crops.

It is a good plan to give a cow immediately after dropping a calf a tablespoonful of saltpetre dissolved in water, and worked into a bran mess.

Don't keep a calf tied or shut up in some damp, dark corner, with hardly room enough to lie down. He needs the sunshine as much as hens or the plants in the garden.

As a grain feed for fattening steers, the following is given by a stock raiser: Corn meal, eight pounds; linseed meal, three pounds; wheat bran, six pounds, with hay.

It is claimed that a fat sheep will produce coarser wool than if only in moderate flesh. Excessive feeding will increase the weight of the carcass, but not the fineness of the wool.

Do not make horses reach up for their feed. Dust gets into their nostrils; besides, it is an unnatural thing for them to do.

One egg a day is a prescribed remedy for scours in calves. We would suggest a change of feed—no meal, if that has been given—and a little basswood charcoal in the feed daily.

South American Gold Mining.

The necessity for a prompt settlement of the boundary dispute with the republic of Venezuela is strikingly illustrated by a few items of intelligence we take almost at random from British Guiana newspapers just to hand. One item tells of about 200 laborers and others—the laborers would be chiefly negroes—leaving Georgetown in one day for the gold mining districts in the tributaries of the Massaruni River. Another tells of a digger selling his placer claim to a private company in Georgetown for $30,000—no less than 45 pounds of gold having been taken by him from this claim in one month. The district of the Puruni seems to be passing rich in mineral wealth. According to an expert examined by a commission appointed by the local Government to frame mining regulations, quartz abounds in "thousands of tons" in the Puruni creeks. In 1885 but 903 ounces of bullion were exported from the colony, whereas in 1886 the total export was over 6,500 ounces. The total for 1887 promises to surpass that of 1886 as the total for that year excels that for 1882. That is, of course, if the home Government guarantees security to the enterprise now being shown by keeping Venezuela to her own domain.

"James," said a grocer to a new boy, "what have you been doing in the back room so long?" "I was a-pickin' the dead flies out of the dried currants, sir," replied James. "You were!" replied the grocer, with much disgust; "an' your father told me that he thought you were born for the grocery business. You had better study for the ministry, James."

SOME RECENT GENERAL NEWS.

The first vessel to leave Port Colborne this season sailed for Cleveland.

The German Government asks for an extra military credit of 134,000,000 marks.

A society for the prevention of cruelty to animals has been organized in Kingston.

Successful experiments have been made in Metz with a navigable balloon propelled by an electric motor.

The Prince of Wales has consented to act as honorory president of the Melbourne International Exhibition.

Sheriff Jarvis, of the County of York, died suddenly on Saturday night of last week. He was in his sixty-ninth year.

Since May 1 of last year 37 convictions for violation of the Scott act have been obtained in the County of Oxford.

It is stated Tichoneff, the man who fired recently at the Czar, was hanged the day on which he committed the crime.

The Vanslooten iron monopoly bill has been defeated in the Nova Scotia Legislature by an almost unanimous vote.

The proposal for affiliation with Trinity Medical School, Toronto, has been approved of by the medical faculty of Queen's University.

Rev. Dr. McCaul, late President of the Toronto University, died at his residence, in Toronto, the other morning, in his 81st year.

The Imperial Government, fearing the importation of dynamite from America, has instructed Customs officials to keep a sharp lookout.

Sir Adolphe Caron says that the Government will provide a sufficient sum to put up a spacious drillshed in Toronto as soon as the people of Toronto provide a site.

Mr. James Dakers, for nearly forty years secretary and manager of the Montreal Telegraph Company, died in Montreal recently, aged 75 years.

Rev. Dr. Parker, of the Temple church, London, will deliver the eulogy on the late Rev. Henry Ward Beecher in Brooklyn on June 24, and it is believed that he will accept an invitation to fill the vacant pulpit.

The Ameer of Afghanistan is concentrating troops round Herat to resist a dreaded Russian advance, and he is also sending a strong force against the Ghilzeis and other rebel tribes who are resisting his authority.

In opening the Spring Assizes at Hamilton Sir M. C. Cameron remarked on the notable absence of crime on his present circuit, and spoke strongly in favour of maintaining the jury system.

A deputation from the Toronto Ministerial Association recently waited upon the Minister of Education and laid before him the resolutions passed by the association regarding the education laws.

While renewing public records partly burned in the great fire of 1871, an employe in the Chicago city clerk's office has discovered a deed conveying property covered with valuable business buildings to the city, enriching it by several million dollars.

The proposed Sunday law has been so amended by the Nova Scotia Legislative committee that its framers could not recognize it. The clause relating to barbers, ball-playing, racing, fishing, shooting, and running horse-cars were all struck out.

Prospects for the building trade in Montreal this season are of the most promising character. Public buildings, including two new railway stations, involving an expenditure of about two million dollars, will be erected, besides a large number of business premises and private residences.

An intense sensation has been created in London by the publication of the facsimile of a letter signed by Mr. Parnell, written to Mr. Egan, saying that while he regretted the murder of Lord Frederick Cavendish in the Phœnix Park, he thought Burke got no more than his deserts. Mr. Parnell denies that he wrote the letter, and speaks about demanding that the editor of the Times be called to the bar of the House of Commons.

VARIETIES.

The name of the bat is never uttered at night by the common people in India, the belief being that the utterer would lose all his property.

When a Polish Jewess is married, it is usual for her own hair to be cut off and replaced by a wig, for the purpose, it is said, or lessening her attractions in the eyes of men other than her own husband.

A good mother of Toronto was horrified the other day when her little daughter informed her that she had her hair cut at the blacksmith's shop. When asked to explain she replied: "Mr. Smith cut my hair, and he is black, isn't he?"

A new industry has arisen in one of our southern seaports. It consists of packing sprats in tins a la sardine. These fish are caught in large numbers during the winter months, and hitherto there has been found some difficulty in disposing of them.

In the reign of King Charles II. the House of Commons met at ten in the morning and worked till four. It now meets at four, and has been known to sit till ten on the following morning. In the days of Elizabeth Parliament sometimes got to work at six in the morning, and went to dinner at eleven o'clock. The dinner-hour now is from seven to eight at night.

It seems curious at the present day that such a law as the following was in existence in the eighteenth century: "That anybody who should induce an English artificer engaged in any of the manufactures of Great Britian to go abroad and teach and practise the art must forfeit one hundred pounds and be liable to imprisonment." The artificer who did go abroad was "liable to be as an alien and have all his property forfeited to the king."

The Duke of Wellington was remarkable for the coolness with which he gave his directions. Even in the heat of an engagement he was known to give vent to a humorous observation, especially when it seemed to raise the spirits of his men. Thus, when the British were storming Badajos, his grace rode up whilst the balls were falling around, and, observing an artilleryman particularly active, inquired his name. He was answered, "Taylor." "A very good name, too," said Wellington. "Cheer up, my men; our Taylor will soon make a pair of breeches—In the walls!" At this sally the men forgot the danger of their situation, a burst of laughter broke from them, and the next charge carried the fortress.

THEATRE OF TRUTH.

There is no man who is not better or worse to-day by means of what he thought, designed, or did yesterday.

Strive for that serenity of spirit that will enable you to make the best of things. That means contentment in its best sense.

Honor your engagement. If you promise to meet a man or do a certain thing at a certain moment, be ready at the appointed time.

If you are fortunate enough to possess youth, be careful in the handling of wine. In its moderate use—as in that of many other blessings—lie health and cheer; but excess means misery and disease.

It is not isolated great deeds which do most to form a character, but small conterminous acts touching and blending into one another. The greenness of a field comes not from trees, but from blades of grass.

No faculty is ever better for being dull. But when it is sharpened only by selfishness its mission remains unperformed. It is then only a means of personal gain, whereas its true purpose is a wide and general diffusion of happiness.

A good test of one's condition is ability to sleep well. Toil that does not interfere with sleep cannot be said to be excessive. Idleness that prevents sound and refreshing sleep, and takes away the keen appetite for it, robs a man of this among other blessings of life, and makes existence empty.

The quarrelsome man not only poisons the happiness of his own family and friends, but also his own. He generates antagonism, ill-feeling, and dislike wherever he vents his spleen, and these react on him to his misery. When to this is added the internal irritation of his own feelings, it is very certain that he is himself the greatest sufferer from his own pugnacity.

Of all educations that which has for its object the right fulfilment of parental duties would seem among the most important. Yet, as a general thing, that relation is entered upon with only crude and desultory ideas of the principles involved; and while intelligence and experience slowly bring a measure of wisdom, it often comes too late for the most pressing necessities.

A great portion of all the worst mischief, negative and positive, that ever afflicted the world is traceable to what people erroneously call conscience, but which is often only a hateful compound of ignorance, prejudice, and vindictiveness. The duty of man is to improve those faculties which enable him to think and act correctly. He must make his conscience a good enlightened conscience; then, and then only, will he be entitled to honour and credit in acting upon it.

Benevolence has a farther-reaching service to render to mankind than is usually supposed. Not merely to listen to complaints, to relieve conscious suffering, and to supply recognized deficiencies is her appointed work, but also to detect the poverty that fancies itself rich, the ignorance that thinks itself wise, the grievances suffered unknowingly, the wrongs inflicted unthinkingly, the sins committed without remorse, the woes endured without effort to avert them.

Out of Gaol Again.

Herr John Most, the windy Anarchist who emerged to public view from under a bed about a year ago to disappear a little later in the penitentiary, reappeared the other day and was seen by many of his kind, until he again retired, this time into a beer-shop near Second avenue. A number of curious specimens of humanity greeted him on his arrival from Blackwell's Island, none of them having work that they could not just as well postpone. What Most expects to do beyond posing as a hero and martyr is not stated; but he will probably continue to be an agitator. Within bounds, of course. His term in the penitentiary will serve as a holesome check on his loose tongue, we imagine, for it is a painful fact (painful to Most especially that for ten months he has been actually working. Doubtless he expects that to last him during his lifetime. Perhaps it will, if he obeys the laws and keep his mouth shut.—N. Y. Tribune.

Germany's White Elephant.

Reichsland, after sixteen years of possession, seems to be about as much of an elephant on Germany's hands as ever. The project of redividing it and assigning the northern part to Prussia and the southern to Baden for incorporation and government appears to have made little headway. Instead, Prince Hohenhohe is entrusted with a somewhat new system of administration, which nevertheless does not appear greatly to effect the desired Germanization of Alsace-Lorraine. Meanwhile the revelations of the late elections have caused more stringent measures to be taken in these disaffected provinces. Secret clubs are ferreted out, furtive tricolors are seized, expulsions have recommenced, and Strasburg sees its garrison largely reinforced. Such incidents are the natural sequences of the result of the late ballotings, yet they furnish France with reasons for irritation and sympathy. It is clear enough that the problem of what to do with the conquered provinces has not yet been fully solved, and that they remain more or less a source of peril for the relations of the two countries.

The Queen Sleeps Between Irish Sheets.

A linen dealer in London has the royal order every year for ten new pairs of sheets at £25 a pair. The linen is of the most exquisitely fine cambric; in the centre is the royal coat-of-arms most beautifully embroidered, and the crown equally exquisitely done in the four corners. These sheets are for the state rooms, and are all manufactured near Belfast. Every day the Queen's bed is freshly furnished with linen, and six housemaids perform the task. There are twelve pillows, on which the linen cases are sewn, not buttoned or tied, and these also are changed every day.

Sunday School Teacher—"Now, can any little boy tell me what Easter is celebrated for? Good Little Boy (eagerly)—"Eggs."

In London's Arboretum it is stated that the fruit of the mountian ash is greedily devoured by birds; and in various parts of the north of Europe these berries are dried and ground into flour, and used in times of great scarcity as a substitute for the flour made of wheat. In Livonia, Sweden, and Kamtchatka the berries are eaten as fruit, and a very good spirit is distilled from them. Evelyn says that "ale and beer brewed with these berries being ripe, is an incomparable drink, familiar in Wales.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Publisher.

MARKDALE, APRIL. 28. 1887.

SPRING FAIR.

Markdale Spring Show was held last Saturday and was a decided success. The day was dry and a stiff breeze from the west which increased into a gale, made overcoat and gloves a comfort and a necessity. A large numbers of fine Stallions were on exhibit, 16 having entered for competition. A remarkable feature in our Spring Show is the introduction late years and increased attention given to heavy horses, especially the Imported Clydesdale.

Only a few years ago it was not considered necessary to offer a prize to imported heavy draught horses as there was none to compete. but now we find more attention and greater competition in this class than any other.

The exhibit was pronounced by competent and prominent judges to be the best ever held in this place.

The competition in bulls was small but what there was were thoroughbred and really good animals.

There was a large display of implements exhibited by Messrs Bebee, Carson, Jackson and Noble, all of which attracted attention.

A very important and much desired part of Spring Shows is able and impartial judging, and these qualities were leading features in our Show: The judges were Mr. R. Rand of Toronto, Walter Nicholl, Dundalk, and Frank Burton of Holland.

We do not by any means wish to make little of our local men as being incompetent to judge fairly and with ability, yet would favor the selection for such purposes a Judge from a distance, one fully master of his business and who had no interest or knowledge whatever of individual exhibitors. The system of only one judging is fast coming in use as well as in favor, and we believe it is a good one.

PRIZE LIST.

Imported Clydesdale—1st "Lord Derby," Thorpe Wright; 2nd "Galloway Laird," W. J. Shepherdson.

Canadian Draught—1st "Just in Time," Beattie and Burnett; 2nd "Honest Tom," M. Ryan.

Percheron—"Ribant" H. King.

General Purpose—1st "British Ensign," John McWhirter, 2nd "King Tom," J. Manary.

Roadster—1st "Eddie F," T. Tuck, 2nd "Chief," Jas. Henry.

Blood—1st "Young Terror," Thos. Campbell, 2nd "Boston," Jas. Henry.

BULLS.

Durham—under two years, 1st R. Watson, 2nd W. &. J. Anderson.

IMPLEMENTS.

Mower—Noxon, Geo. Noble.
Seed Drill— " Geo. Noble.
Jointer Plow--Pulford, J. H. Carson.
Sod Plow--Dominion Plow, G. Noble
Seed Harrow—Evans & Son Cayuga M. Bebee.
Root Cultivator —Ritz Bros, Geo. Noble.
Land Roller—Wilson Shelburne, J. H. Carson.

SOMEWHAT JEALOUS.

The following sensible items appeared in last week Flesherton Advance. "We understand a great effort is being made to induce the Ontario Government to move the Division Court from Flesherton to Markdale. Thanks, awfully. Suppose we remove Markdale and set it on one of our corner lots?" In the first place the editor of the Advance evidently has been laboring under a mis-understanding, as Markdale, or any other power, has not asked for, or is not seeking to have Flesherton Division Court moved to Markdale. In the same paper the following appears. "Markdale gobbles the roller [illegible] while Flesherton meekly folds her arms and, like poor Micawber, "waits for something to turn up." Of course something will turn up—it always does. Markdale appropriated a position in the Methodist church to which she is clearly not entitled, and Flesherton meekly bore it all. And now an attempt is to be made to remove the Division Court. Of course Flesherton will also permit this with its usual indifferance." In reference to "Markdale appropriating a position in the Methodist church to which she was not entitled," we may state that on a division being made of the Owen Sound District at Conference, and the new District mapped out, Markdale was found to be located 1½ miles off the centre geographically; it was the most important business place in the jurisdiction and had first class railway facilities, so that the conference could not in justice, make any other circuit the head of the District, and it was thus named Markdale District without any interferance on the part of Markdale—not so Flesherton nevertheless.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Sheriff Clark, of Port Arthur, died last Wednesday at the age of 70 years.

—Sheriff Duncan of Welland, county. died at Welland, Ont., on Wednesday last.

—It is understood the Dominion Parliament will build a printing bureau in Ottawa this year.

—June 22 is officially set apart as the day for observing the Royal Jubilee in Canada.

—The Ontarie Legislature was prorogued on Saturday afternoon with the usual ceremonies.

— Mr. W. E. Bennett, of Toronto, has been appointed to the position of Assistant Post-office Inspector.

—Barnum's firm and the Grand Trunk Company have ended the Jumbo suit by an agreement.

—The total cost to Canada of her share in the late Colonial Exhibition was $120,857, of which sum $8,500 went in wages and $14,000 in freight.

—The Minister of agriculture has decided to establish experimental farms in the North West, with a view to testing the capabilities of the soil in various districts for certain products.

—Mr. Norquay's bill empowering the Manitoba Government to build a railway to the boundary provides for the issue of one million dollars of provincial bonds for its construction.

A destructive Cyclone passed through Arkansas, Nevada, Kentucy and Missouria, and a Blizzard in Wyoming on the 22nd in which much property was destroyed and many lives lost.

—A motion for annexation to the United States was made in Nova Scotia Legislature last Friday; it was seconded just to bring it before the house, but Mr. McCall the mover was the only vote in faver of the resolution.

—Lord Landsdowne has offered fresh terms to all his tenants, and pending the probable settlement of the difficulty Mr. William O'Brien will postpone his visit to Canada.

—The Prohibition yeast is working all over the Anglo-Saxon world. The latest ferment was in Newfoundland, where it took the casting vote of the Speaker to defeat a prohibition motion. Newfoundland, like Quebec, is peopled by different creeds, and it is not easy, as we know, under such conditions to advance moral reforms, but in spite of all there is no resisting their advance in the long run.

—A motion by Mr. Clarke, of Wellington, has been passed in the House ordering that a copy of the statutes of this Province shall be annually supplied to each Reeve and Deputy Reeves of the various county municipalities in the Province of Ontario, under the provisions of the R. S. O., 1877, cap. 2 sec. 3. Formerly copies ordered by the County Councils have had to be paid for out of the funds of the County, and Reeves only were supplied.

Good Advice.

Don't buy Dress Goods until you see McFarland's Immense Assortment.

Don't buy Millinery without consulting Miss Bremner, McFarland's Milliner.

Don't buy Silks, Velvets, Gloves, or Laces, before seeing

McFARLAND'S

Don't select your Carpets, Lace Curtains, Floor Oil Cloth or Cretons, from any other house except

MC FARLAND'S.

Don't let any Young Man, Old Man, Boy or Child, who wants a perfect fitting newest style low priced Suit of clothes pass

McFARLAND'S.

Don't forget, McFarland has the Sweetest, Strongest, Purest and Cheapest, Tea in the County.

Don't neglect to look through McFarland's Immense Establishment crowded with new goods bought for cash down, in the best markets of the world all of which will be sold at a small profit.

Don't think it economy to buy a Shoddy Boot. For it is not, McFarland has received a large addition to his stock of Kid, Goat, Calf and Buff Boots, Women's Men's Boy's Misses' and Child's, all solid leather.

He will be pleased to have you call when in Markdale, and assure you of his best services.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY, Proprietor.

Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business, and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine, which will lift the stone, carry it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited.

R. McNALLY.

MARKDALE SAsH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,

MARKDALE.

The Law Concerning News papers.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed in his name, or another's, or whether he ha subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted in the place where the paper is published, although the subscriber may reside hundreds of miles away.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post-office or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

PERSONAL.—George Legant, of Tayside, Ont., says he can heartily recommend Yellow Oil as the best reliever of rheumatic pain, his father and mother having suffered for years with rheumatism, and all remedies failed except Yellow Oil.

Unparalleled Offer.

No. 1.—The Markdale Standard	$1.00
No. 2.—The American Agriculturist (English or German), 1887	1.00
No. 3.—The A. A. New Poultry Book, for everybody. 256 pages. 100 Illustrations. Most complete work ever published	1.00
No. 4.—Engravings. "Home of our Farmer Presidents," 11x18. issued during 1887. Each worth	1.00
No. 5.—The same issued during 1886, forwarded post-paid, in a tube prepared for the purpose. Each worth	1.00
No. 6.—Articles describing the Engravings of the "Home of our Farmer Presidents," written expressly for this purpose by James Parton, Donald G. Mitchell (Ik Marvel,) printed on tinted paper.
Companion Portraits.
No. 7.—A magnificent portrait of General Grant from his last sitting. Grand Cabinet size, 18 by 24 inches, and engraved at large expense, especially for subscribers to this combination, and supplied to no other persons. Price.	1.00
No. 8.—A supurb steel plate engraving of General Logan, 12 by 16 inches in size, from a photograph by Brady elegantly mounted on heavy, highly finished paper suitable for framing or for the centre table. Price.	1.00
No. 9.—A magnificent portrait of Henry Ward Beecher. Full cabinet size, engraved expressly for the subscribers of this combination by the new process direct from a negative taken by Falk, after Mr. Breecher's recent return from Europe.	1.00
Total	$8.50

We will furnish all the above post-paid for $3.50 and six cents to 751 Broadway, New York, for mailing you specimen copy of the American Agriculturist, English or German, specimen proofs of the engravings, and specimen pages of Poultry Book.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

A flat failure—a poor pancake.

The proposed Mechanics' Institue at Alderton has fallen through.

Shelburne is going to celebrate the Queen's birthday on a large scale.

Durham will celebrate the 24th May. Their posters are out announcing it.

The asseesment in Euphrasia is being raised by Mr. Myles the assessor forty per cent: That's about what Glenelg assessor raised ye editor.

A pen picture—a photograph of a pig-sty.

Mr. Jas. Sparling of Euphrasia has been appointed post master at Goring in place of Mrs Bailey resigned.

Meaford has established a Stock Exchange.

A Good Life Preserved.—I was completely relieved from that dreadful disease dyspepsia, with only four bottles of that life preserver—B. B. B., and cheerfully recommend it to any one subject to such disease. P. Devanny, Fort Erie, Ont.

Mr. Archy Cairns of Artemesia contemplates a trip to Scotland this Summer.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr. Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh. 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh in 1 to 5 days is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333-83

Hanging is too good for a painting that is badly executed.

Overworked.—"My husband strained himself with overwork, causing a large swelling in the groin. He suffered great agony, which doctors failed to relieve; he could not eat or sleep. B. B. B. quickly cured him. He says he never had such quick relief in his life." Extract from a letter from Mrs. George Bell, Cooksville, Ont.

Where it ends.—Nine-tenths of the disease denominated Catarrh is the result of protracted or oft-repeated colds in the head. Nasal Balm will give immediate relief and permanently cure.

A Profitably life.—Few men have accomplished the same amount of work and good in this world as the celebrated Dr. Chase. Over 500,000 of his works have been sold in Canada alone. We want every person troubled with Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Headache, Kidney or Urinary Troubles, to buy a bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure, it will cure you. Medicine and Receipe Book $1.

Mr. Thos. Jennings has sold his interest in the Mansion House, Shelburne, to Mr. Geo. Thompson, recently in Black's old stand, Owen Sound street.

A Common Occurance.—Many bad joints by which people are cripled for life, are made by neglected or badly treated rheumatism. Ida Pink, of Stranroy, Ont., was afflicted with rheumatism in her fingers so that she could not bend them. Yellow Oil cured her, and is a prompt cure for all painful complaints.

The Supreme Court of Kansas has decided that a married woman need not take her husband's name unless she chooses.

A Severe Attack.—"I never felt better in my life than I have since taking Burdock Blood Bitters. I had a severe bilious attack; I could not eat for several days, and was unable to work. One bottle cured me." John M. Richards, Sr., Tara, Ont. For all bilious troubles use B. B. B.

The grain house of James Allen, Esq., of Allenfore was destroyed by fire together with 10,000 bushels grain on the night of the 18th inst.

Sure to Satisfy.—There are many remedies for coughs and colds, but there are few that prove so satisfactory as Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, which is a pleasant and reliable cure for all throat and lung troubles, including bronchitis, asthma, croup, whooping cough and the pulmonary complaints of young or old.

Mr. Moffat, M. P. for Restigouche, was found dead in bed Monday morning at Salyerd's hotel, Teeswater, where he had been visiting friends in the vicinity.

Babies and Children.—They are always catching cold in their head. Place a small particle of Nasal Balm in each nostril at night, also rub well over the bridge of the nose, and let us know how they are in the morning.

There is a street in Dundalk on which only five families reside. In these five families there are nineteen children under ten years of age.

A Person.—Unable to sleep in bed, unable to work, unable to take ordinary exercise from the effects of Asthma —with using Southern Asthma Cure. A sample package relieved, three packages permanently cured.

While a number of laborers were excavating for the foundation of the new Cotholic church at Guelph last Saturday morning the earth caved in on them burying Fred. King, aged 21, and crushing him so badly that when he was extricated life was extinct.

Tamarac.—It is an ordinary mixture. In fact its properties are entirely different from any preparation used for Coughs, Colds, Throat and Lung Troubles.

The transfer committee of the Methodist church have sanctioned the transfer of Rev. Dr. Aylsworth, of the London Conference. and R. H. Waddell to the Guelph Conference. The former will go to St. Thomas, and the latter will come to Mount Forest.—[Confederate.

An average of 60,000 yards of hotel carpets is sold in New York at auction every season. Some hotels make a carpet lass three years, and others purchase every year. From these partly worn carpets, second-class hotels and boarding-houses maks a choice.

Furious cyclones and halestorms swept over a large part of Western and South-Western Missouri, South-Eastern Kansas and Northern Arkansas on Thursday night, causing great loss of life and destruction of property. Several towns were entirely demolished.

Stratford, Aug. 8th 1885.

About three years ago I was laid up with bronchitis, and for six months was unable to do anything. Four bottles of Dr. Jug's Medicine completely cured me, and my health has been first-rate ever since, in fact I never felt better in my life.

W. H. Magee,
G. T. R. Works. Stratford.

Holland Council.

Holland Centre, April 17th.

Special Meeting of the Council of the Township of Holland for the revising and amending certain By-Laws of the township.

Members all present, Reeve in the chair. After revising and amending certain By-Laws, on motion of Mr. Shute, sec. by Mr. Murray, the council went into general business.

Shute—Murray.—That the Reeve and Clerk, be appointed as a committee to confer with the Treasurer as the best means or plan for depositing the township monies in order to draw interest and that he, the Treasurer be authorized according to the orders of the Committee to Deposit $1000,00.—Carried.

Shute—Howey,—That the Reeve sign an order to the General Hospital Toronto, to keep David Shea two weeks longer in that institution.

Galbraith—Murray,—That the council adjourn till the 26th June, and then to meet as a court of revision.

Carson Price,
Tp. Clerk.

SOOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING.

It Cures

CATARRH, Cold in Head, HAY FEVER.

STOPS Droppings from Nasal passages into the throat and excessive expectoration caused by Catarrh. Sent pre-paid on receipt of price, 50c. and $1. Address FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.

EASY TO USE.

AUCTION SALE

—OF VALUABLE—

FARM PROPORTY.

Under and by virtue of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Registered Mortgage, which will be produced at time of Sale, and upon which default in payment has been made, there will be offered for sale by Public Auction, at the Markdale House, in the Village of Markdale, in the county of Grey, on

Thursday, April 28th,

A. D. 1887, at the hour of one o'clock in the afternoon the following valuable land and premises, viz:

Lot No. forty in the fourteenth concession of the Township of Artemesia, containing one hunderd and ten acres more or less.

This is a valuable farm property. On the premises are said to be erected a good dwelling, barn and farm buildings.

TERMS:—Ten per cent to be paid down at time of sale; for balance, terms liberal, and will be made known at the Sale. For further particulars apply to

JOHN LEYS,
Solicitor Toronto.

"Profitable -:- Reading."

To intending purchasers of American Watches, Clocks, Jewellery and Silverware, also Engagement or Wedding Rings.

I have the only complete stock of above lines in "Central Grey." It will pay to inspect my stock; get my prices, find out how I do business, learn what my 1, 2 & 3, years warrants mean; then if not square in every particular, I shall not expect you to buy. Over 200 pair of fine Specks in stock 25c. to $3.00.

☞ Fine Watch repairing a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,
MARKDALE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confdence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart:—Late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of Markdale and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.
Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller.
MARKDALE.

SEEDS

Seeds!

SEEDS

FIELD & GARDEN

SEEDS!

—AT—

Stephen's

DRUG STORE.

Your's Respectfully,

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.

REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have removed to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

Stock Taking

SALE

At the Toronto House,
Markdale.

SLAUGHTER PRICES
FOR CASH.

Wm. Brown.

BE SURE & GET YOUR

PUMPS

—FROM—

J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

OWEN SOUND MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRAITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,

UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE.
In Stock at bottom prices.
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 13, CON., 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation, well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY
31-t Berkley.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpander and Builder
GEORGE St., MARKDALE.

ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

Partnership Notice.

Dr's SPROULE & BRODIE, have entered into a partnership for the practice of their profession. Dr. Sproule will be found at his old office Turner's Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his office Mathew's new block. 333-46

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Rubey, for further particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
338 81 Holland Centre P

THE KEY TO HEALTH.

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.

For sale by all dealers.

T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, Toronto.

HEALTH.

"Clean" and "Unclean"

All Bible students have noted with interesting comments the fact that the division of foods into two classes, "clean," which were allowed, and "unclean," which were forbidden, as found in the Pentateuch, was something more than an arbitrary law imposed upon the Jews. A careful study of the list of animals excluded from the category of allowable foods as unclean, will show that all of them are by their habits rendered specially unfit for food. Except when pressed by hunger, most of them are rejected by the most barbarous tribes, and are not considered choice food even by those animals which prey upon others; as the lion, tiger, etc.

Not a single predatory or scavenger animal was allowed in the list of foods; and why? Evidently because in the eating flesh food, the flesh of the eater is deteriorated. The lion might eat the same sheep that the man intended to eat; but man must not eat the lion. He might take the grass and grains at second hand, but not the sheep. Is there any reason for this? Experience shows that when an animal whose usual food is chiefly grains and other vegetable substances, exchanges its ordinary diet for animal food, its flesh becomes unpalatable and unwholesome. Evidently, animal food leaves in the tissues of the eater certain impure and unwholesome elements which are not left by vegetable food. Is not this the reason why flesh-eating animals were interdicted by the law of Moses? The flesh of a flesh-eating animal is rank and unsavory; and that of a vegetable-eating animal, as a sheep or an ox, becomes rank and unsavory when the animal eats flesh food. Certainly the evidence seems to be conclusive.

But there is still another conclusion which may be legitimately drawn from the facts referred to. If the use of flesh as food, has such a deteriorating effect upon a sheep or an ox, and upon all carnivorous animals, as thereby to render them unfit to be eaten, is it not probable that the same cause may produce a like effect upon the flesh of human beings? It is not pleasant for one to contemplate a condition of his body which in another animal would render it unfit to be eaten; and when we consider the high purposes for which the human body was made, mental and moral, as well as physical, and the infinitely delicate functions which its marvelous machinery must perform in the mechanism of thought and mind—in feeling, knowing, and willing—does it not occur to one with considerable force that a body unfit to be eaten, is unfitted for thinking and for exercising the highest powers of heart and mind and soul, of which a human being is capable? If fruits and grains, the pure products of the earth, make the best flavored flesh, will they not also make the best brains and the best nerves as well?

What to Do for the Baby's Earache.

"What make: the baby so cross to-night?" says Jones.

"Oh! he has taken cold, and got the earache. I guess he will be all right as soon as Mary Ann gets back from the drug store with the laudanum," says Mrs. Jones.

And so when Mary Ann gets back, a good dose of laudanum is poured into baby's ear, and very likely a few drops get into his stomach too, if he don't get quiet without. Perhaps some old lady in the neighborood will drop in, and insist that he must have an onion poultice on the outside of his ear, or chloroform inside of it, or a mustard plaster to the back of his head, or a dose of soothing syrup, or something else equally inefficient.

Here is the proper thing to do. Pour a little warm water into baby's ear. Now wet a soft sponge of folded flannel in hot water, wring dry, and apply to the ear. A hot ear douche, taken with a syphon or fountain syringe, allowing the hot water to run slowly into the ear with little force, is still more efficient. This simple remedy has the advantage that it not only eases the pain, but removes the cause by stopping the inflammation. The application of hot water may be made as often as necessary, or all the time. Keep the ear warmly covered during the intervals. If the baby has really taken a cold, a warm blanket pack, to produce a good sweat, should he used in addition to the applications to the ear.

The significance of earache is generally not understood. Quite a proportian of the cases of deafness occurring in adults without immediate cause, are justly attributable to the oft-recurring earaches of childhood. Hence the importance of giving to a matter of this sort early and efficient attention. The notion that in cases of severe earache there is nothing to do but to wait for the ear to "break" or discharge, is a mischievous one. When this occurs, it is usually the result of neglect, and the effect is a more or less permanent injury to the ear. This "breaking" should be prevented by prompt treatment. If the earache is not speedily relieved by the hot-water ear douche,—which may be used almost continuously, if necessary,—a skillful physician should be consulted without delay. It is sometimes necessary to lance the drum membrane.

It is always important that an ear which has been subject to severe inflammation should be treated after the inflammation has subsided. The eustachian tube must be inflated by means well known to physicians. This will also drive out of the ear, secretions which, if left for the slow process of absorption, may permanently injure the hearing.

Hints Worth Preserving.

1. Some one's nose bleeds and cannot be stopped: Take a plug of lint, moisten, dip in equal parts of powdered alum and gum-arabic, and insert in the nose. Bathe the forehead in cold water.

2. Child eats a piece of bread on which arsenic has been spread for killing rats: Give plenty of warm water, new milk in large quantities, gruel and linseed tea; foment the bowels. Scrape iron-rust off anything, mix with warm water, and give in large draughts frequently. Never give large draughts of fluids until those given before have been vomited, because the stomach will not contract properly if filled, and the object is to get rid of the poison as quickly as possible.

3. Child falls backward into a tub of water and is much scalded: Carefully undress the child, lay it on a bed, on its breast if the back is scalded; be sure all draughts are excluded; then dust over the parts scalded with bi-carbonate of soda; lay muslin over it; then make a tent by placing two boxes with a board over them in bed, to prevent the covering from pressing on the scald; cover up warm.

4. Mower cuts driver's legs as he is thrown from his seat: Put a tight bandage around the limb above the cut, slip a cork under it in the direction of a line drawn from the inner part of the knee to a little outside of the groin. Draw the edges of the cut together with sticking plaster.

CURIOUS FREAKS OF NATURE.

A negro of the name of Wiley Smith, of Boker County, Ga., is said to be a physical curiosity. Ten years ago he was one of the blackest men to be found in the State, but to-day his skin is of a light gingerbread color. The change in him was first noticed in his finger-tips, whence it spread up his arms and then down his body. The backs of his hands are still quite black and dark spots still remain on his face and give it a strangely mottled appearance.

Mr. J. Ogden, of Jamestown, has a natural curiosity in the shape of a pig which came into the world headless and hairless, but with a horn sticking out from the end of its neck like the tusk of an infant rhinoceros. Its feet are like the hoofs of a horse, and there is a hump sticking out from its back, which is supposed to be the missing head. The pig has one eye. It lived for a week and was apparently hearty, but is now preserved in alcohol.

A few miles from Mackinaw is a curious piece of ground, nearly an acre in extent, which is so warm that the snow melts as soon as it falls upon it, and though the surrounding country may be buried in deep drifts, this particular spot remains bare throughout the winter. The earth there is so dry that it is said to flash like powder when disturbed, and a peculiar gas issues from the ground, which has thus far shattered every vessel in which it is confined.

A farmer named Orton, living near Byhalia, some time ago became the father of a child which is naturally formed as far as the body and lower limbs are concerned, but whose head resembles that of a rooster. On the top of the head, which is narrow and runs up into a peak, is a diminutive comb of a bright red color, and the nose looks like the beak of a game cock. The eyes are small and protuberant, but the vision is clear and distinct. The child is not old enough to talk and his attempts to do so sound exactly like a rooster's crow. Mr. and Mrs. Orton have several children who are physically perfect and they are much distressed by the strange deformity of the child.

A newspaper printed at Dolores, Argentine Republic, which is situated near the volcanic region, gives an account of a mysterious shower of stones which fell near that city a few weeks ago. The stones are said to have fallen as thick as hail, and varied in size from a pebble to a very respectable boulder. Incalculable damage was done to the crops, tall tree were shivered to atoms, barns and outhouses were demolished and many domestic animals were killed. In some localities the ground was covered with the bodies of wild geese and hawks, which appeared to have been killed during their flight in the air. Several persons were struck and badly injured while at work in the fields, and in the city itself, which missed the violence of the shower, one dwelling was wrecked. The stones are said to have fallen continuously for more than a minute.

Strange volcanic disturbances are said to have been frightening the people living along the Blood River, near New Concord, in Calloway County, Ky. The phenomena were first noticed about ten days ago, when all the wells suddenly ran dry, and at night there was a deep rumbling noise resembling the muttering of distant thunder, which seemed to come from the earth. Occasionally there would be an explosion like the booming of a far-off gun, and recently a column of fire has been seen to shoot up at intervals during the night from Stronger's bluff, two miles from the town. Citizens who went out to investigate the disturbance say that the heat near the bluff was so intense that they could not approach it. The scene of the phenomena is one of the wildest and most rugged parts of the State, and is remote from communication by mail or telegraph.

A Hindoo Marriage.

A case that has attracted no little attention in England as well as India, and will strike Canadian readers as involving a curious marriage custom has just been tried in the High Court of Bombay.

It appears that Rukmibhai, a native girl, was, according to Hindoo usage, married when only eleven years of age to a youth of nineteen. The two immediately parted, the girl remaining at the house of her parents. By them she was carefully educated and "grew up into a refined and cultivated lady." Recently the husband came to claim her as his wife, but she declined to live with him and her family refused to recognize his claim. He is described as being little better than a coolie—illiterate, coarse, too poor to support a wife, and, moreover, consumptive.

A suit was thereupon brought to enforce the marriage agreement. The judge remarked that their involuntary union would be unnatural and barbarous and held that the man's claim could not be maintained under Hindoo law. From this decision an appeal was taken to a higher court, which, while expressing sympathy with the young woman, decided that she was the lawful wife of the man and bound to live with him. An order was accordingly issued requiring her to join him within a month or submit to six months' imprisonment for disobedience.

Aside from its hardship and absurdity the case presents two curious legal aspects. The first is that it was a suit for the restitution of conjugal rights, and the decision of the High Court upholding it was based on English precedents. Now, this remedy to compel a wife to live with her husband has been abolished in England. Second, the wife may escape the obligation of the marriage by six months' imprisonment. After that she is not bound to recognize the man as her husband, though she is not free to marry another.

Joy in Every Drop.

This may be truly said of Polson's Nerviline, the greatest pain remedy of the age. It brings comfort to the weary sufferer when failure has attended the use of every known remedy. Nerviline is an absolute cure for all kinds of pain, internal, external, or local. Purchase a 10 cent sample bottle and try this great remedy, Nerviline, nerve pain cure. Don't forget the name at any drug store.

The Federal Life.

(TORONTO WORLD, MARCH 5th 1887.)

The report of the Federal Life Assurance Company, which is one of our prosperous home institutions, appears elsewhere in this issue of The World. We have watched the progress of this company with special interest, owing to its having been the first company in Canada to adopt a scientific natural premium plan of life insurance. That this move has proved a wise one is shown by the remarkable success that has attended its efforts during the past two years.

It seems to us that a young company must have something very attractive to offer, and must be specially well managed to enable it to secure applications for $3,538,000 of insurance. This we regard as indicating a degree of public confidence that must be quite satisfactory to the company.

The Homans plan, which is a specialty with the Federal and prrcticed by it alone in Canada, is a system of insurance by which policy holders secure protection without being compelled to pay beyond its present necessities.

If the company makes its selection of risks with the care it claims to do and seems to have done, judging from its past mortality experience we see no reason why it should not continue to grant insurance at low rates, for the death rate has already been very low in Canadian business.

We have heard the argument used that, owing to the fact that mortality is known to be much lower in Canada than elsewhere, it is unwise for our people to take insurance on equal terms from campanies doing a foreign business.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

Gobelin blue is a new shade of a charming color seen in much of the new millinery.

LOOK TO YOUR FLOCKS.

For destroying ticks and vermin on sheep, cattle and horses, Leicestershire Tick and Vermin Destroyer is well worth the price, yes, double the price. It was first used in England with wonderful success, and has now been introduced into Canada, and is sold at 30 and 60 cents a box; one small box is sufficient to treat 20 sheep. It is used as a wash. Full directions accompany each box. Sold by druggists, G. C. BRIGGS & SON, Hamilton, Ont., and C. M. BRIGGS & BRO., Buffalo, N. Y., Agents.

There are two things whose drawing power has never been excelled—the circus and the porous plaster.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

A pig was never known to wash, but a great many people have seen the pig iron.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

Half high boots and low shoes will again be in vogue for summer wear.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

The fashionable stocking is black or some very dark shade of brown or blue.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

Waiter—"Do you prefer a dry champagne?" Country Bridegroom—"Oh, no; wet!"

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular. The second heart-beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East. Toronto Canada.

A. P. 330.

6 PER CENT. MONEY—INTEREST YEARLY—no commission; Mortgages purchased. R. H. TEMPLE, 23 Toronto Street.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

THE BOILER INSPECTION and Insurance Company of Canada,
Consulting Engineers and Solicitors of Patents,
TORONTO.
G. C. ROBB, Chief Engineer. A. FRASER, Sec'y-Treas

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont.

Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc, mailed free. Address
H. MacCORMICK, Principal.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS,
Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool.
RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR "PLATFORM ECHOES," or Living Truths for Head and Heart, by John B. Gough; his last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos; bright, pure, and good, full of laughter and tears. It sells at sight to all. To it is added the life and death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. Lyman Abbott. This is the best and fastest selling book of the day. Terms liberal. Write us for full information, circulars, etc. Address, WILLIAM BRIGGS, 78 and 80 King Street East, Toronto.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

AGENTS APPLY TO THE WANTED
D.W. BEADLE NURSERY CO.
St. Catharines, Ont.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTUR'G CO.

GOLD, COMPOSITION GOLD, Mitre Brown, Natural Wood, and other Picture and Room Mouldings, Frames, etc. Paintings, Engravings Etchings, Artotypes, Artists' Materials, Mirrors, etc. Whole-sale and Retail. Trade Catalogue. MATTHEWS BROS. & CO., Toronto.

CLOTHES WRINGERS, 10 kinds; MANGLES 3 kinds; Washing Machines, 2 kinds. Churns, Carpet Sweepers, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

Water PURE LIVING STREAM. AUGERS, bore 20 feet per hour. Also Rock Drills—Hand, Horse, or Steam Power. Send for Catalogue.
Laidlaw Manufacturing Co.,
HAMILTON, ONT.

H. Williams, FELT AND SLATE Roofer,
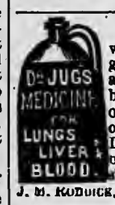
Manufacturer and dealer in
Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Papers, Carpet and Deafening Felt, READY ROOFING, Etc. 4 Adelaide St. E., TORONTO.



THE LONDON GUARANTEE AND ACCIDENT CO. (LD. OF LONDON, ENG.
Capital, £260,000. Dominion Government Deposit, £55,000. Head Office: 72 King St East, Toronto.
Gentlemen of influence wanted in unrepresented districts. A. T. McCORD,
Resident Secretary for the Dominion.

R. SPENCE & CO.
Consumers will find it to their advantage to ask the trade for our make of Files and Rasps. Re-Cutting a Specialty. Send for price list and terms.
HAMILTON - ONT.

FREE FLOWERING PLANTS,

13 for	$1.00	ALL FIRST QUALITY, and with every Dollar order, an Amaryllis, a Chrysanthemum or Monthly Rose, FREE.
6 "	50
3 "	25

THE BEST STRAWBERRY PLANTS, 25c A DOZEN.
I guarantee Plants to please, and to arrive in good order at any post office in the Dominion, Large plants by freight or express.
Send postal for descriptive list.
J. P. COCKBURN, FLORIST,
(Stamps taken). GRAVENHURST, ONT.

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties
J. M. KODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto

ARMSTRONG'S PATENT STEEL GEARS.

THE BOSS ELLIPTIC.
All Furnished with our patent improved PERFECT SINGLE PLATE SPRINGS, three inches less open than formerly made, thus hanging the body that much lower. The taper of plates has also been entirely changed and we claim to have a PERFECT RIDING SPRING with light or full load, and one that WILL NOT BREAK. Every carriage maker should handle these gears. PRICES RIGHT Full particulars on application.
J. B ARMSTRONG M'F'G. CO, (Ld), Guelph, Canada.

J.L.JONES
WOOD ENGRAVER
10 KING ST EAST
TORONTO

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto

THERE IS NOTHING LIKE IT
SPANISH
GLYCERINE AND OIL
DRESSING
A BEAUTIFUL WATERPROOF.
A PATENT LEATHER POLISH
FOR BOOTS, SHOES & RUBBERS
—SOLD EVERYWHERE—

BABY'S BIRTHDAY.

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother and much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

THE National ELECTRO & STEREOTYPE CO.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

SNOW DRIFT BAKING POWDER
THERE IS NO BETTER!
The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Brant

Dairy Sal
FOR BUTTER, ETC.
NEW Importations—Higgins' Eureka, Wa ton and Ashton Brands, in large or small Also Rice's Canadian Salt Write for prices.
JAMES PARK & SON,
Wholesale Produce Merchants,

MERIDEN BRITANNIA
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated War
Artistic Designs, combined w Unequalled Durability and Fin
HAMILTON, ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steams
Sailing during winter from Port and every and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and i mer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, at Londonderry to land mails and passengers Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via fax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly ing summer months. The steamers of the lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortn
For Freight, passage, or other information ap A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allan & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; Allan Portland Boston Montreal

ONTARIO CANOE COMPA
Peterboro',

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOE
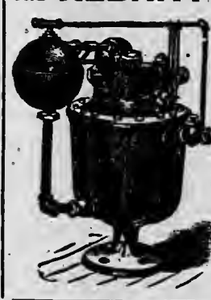
Send 3c. Stamp for Catalogue

Bicycles



SEND AT ONCE FOR L of Second-Hand Machi
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st A
A. T. LANE, MONTREA

CONBOY'S

CARRIAGE TOP
Are famous for their style, convenience, durabil and cheapness. Buy no other until you see them. the leading Carriage Builders sell them.
Factory: 407 King West, TORONT

THE ALBANY STEAM TRAP CO.

SPECIAL BUCKET RETURN TRAP
The Celebrated Ha cock Inspirator.
Gresham's Automa Re-starting Injector.
Morrison's Automa Sight Feed Lubricator.
Engineers' & Plumb ers' Supplies of every description. Send f circulars.
JAMES MORRISON
75 & 77 Adelaide St. W., TORONTO

FOR ONE CENT
FARMERS, who want to settle their family around them. Tennnt Farmers, who want a home of their own. Mechanics, wanting big pay. Capitalists, wanting safe investments. Business Men, who want to strike a business boom. Ambitious Men, who want a home and start in life—send postal card with address to J. M. HUCKINS, 96 King Street West, Toronto.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

Confederation Life ASSOCIATION.

OUR LAST NOTICE

In this paper referred to the Annual Meeting of the Association. This meeting (being the 15th since the Company was organized) took place on Tuesday, the 12th April, when the following gratifying increases were announced:

PREMIUM INCOME INCREASED FOR YEAR,	-		$96,894.
INTEREST AND RENTS,	- - -		13,029.
ASSETS, - -	$356,375.	SURPLUS,	80,234.

$260,420 Were allocated as Profits to Policy Holders. Profits payable on and After May 1st.

J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director.

ORIFT
KING PO
Powder Co. y Sal
BUTTER, ETC.
—Higgins' Eureka,
Brands, in large or small
Salt Write for prices.
ARK & SON,
Produce Merchants,
BRITANNIA
ACTURE ONLY
EST
lated Ware
ns, combined
rability and
TON, ONT.
al Mail Steamship from Portland every rday to Liverpool, and Saturday to Liverpool, nd mails and passengers
Also from Baltimore via
., to Liverpool fortnightly
The steamers of the
to and from Halifax,
a; and during summer
weekly, Glasgow and and Philadelphia, fortnightly or other information apply
Baltimore; S. Cunard &
t. John's N. F., Wm.
Allan & Co., Chicago; Lo
Bourlier, Toronto; Allan
Brockie, Philadelphia; H.
Montreal
CANOE COMPANY
Peterboro',
LL KINDS OF CANOES
Catalogue
Bicycles
END AT ONCE FOR of Second-Hand Machines
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st April
A. T. LANE, MONTREAL.
IMPROVED
AGE TOPS
tyle, convenience, durability
other until you see them.
ilders sell them.
West, TORONTO.
Y STEAM TRAP CO.'S
SPECIAL BUCKET
RETURN TRAP.
The Celebrated Hancock Inspirator.
Gresham's Automatic Re-starting Injector.
Morrison's Automatic Sight Feed Lubricator.
Engineers' & Plumbers' Supplies of every description. Send for circulars.
JAMES MORRISON,
75 & 77 Adelaide St. W.,
TORONTO
E CENT
to settle their family around rmers, who want a home s, wanting big pay. Capitalists
tments. Business Men, iness boom. Ambitious nd start in life—send postal
. M. HUCKINS,
treet West, Toronto.
FITS!
an merely to stop them for a rn again. I mean a radical of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING
dy. I warrant my remedy ase others have failed is no a cure. Send at once for a my infallible remedy. Give ess you nothing for a trial,
DR. H. G. ROOT,
nge St., Toronto.
Life
ICE
the Associa-Company
12th
g
$96,894.
13,029.
80,234. to Policy
n and After Director.

ORDER OF THE LEAGUE.

CHAPTER III.

antier was not far wrong in his estiCarlo Visci. The game the former ying was a dangerous one. He had youthful Genevieve in one of his excursions, and, struck by her conceived the idea of finding some amusement in her society. It was d, in that quiet place, with his audad talents, to make himself known to or did the child—for she was little romantic, passionate, her head filled reams of love and devotion, long reold to his advances. Friendship pens into love in the sunny South, temperaments are warmer, and the straints of northern society do not The Frenchman had no sinister inas when he commenced his little flirtamere recreation pour passer le temps side; but alas for good intentions; h may not approach too near the without scorching its wings. Begun rfulness, almost sport, the thing lly ripened into love—love such as omen never know, love encountered n wit and a knowledge of the evil life. When the story opens, Genhad known Le Gautier for six —had known him, loved him, and him.

Le Gautier was already tired of his toy. It was all very well as a pastime; e gilded chains were beginning to and besides, he had ambitious schemes hich any calculations of Genevieve ntered. He had been thinking less passionate eyes lately than of a fair face, the face of Enid Charteris; so mind he began to revolve how he est free himself from the Italian girl mencing his campaign against the nd fortune of Sir Geoffrey Charteris' Come what may now, he must fetters.

d with this virtuous and manly re- he set out the following afternoon Villa Mattio. It was Vici's whim his sister there, along with a young- r, a child as yet, little Lucrece, both the charge of a sleepy old gouvernante. te of his faults, Visci was a good r, having too sincere an affection for er to keep her with him among the ndent spirits he affected, fearing conion from her mind. And so she ed in the country; Visci running from the city to see her, each time ulating himself upon the foresight he splayed in such an arrangement as ttle thinking he had thus caused the evil he had to fear.

autier walked on till the white facade oco pillars of the villa were in sight, en, striking across a little path leadp into a thick shady wood, all carwith spring flowers, threw himself he grass to wait. There was a little here by the side of a tiny stream, with ucifix and a rude stone image of the in a park niche; evidently a kind of woodland sanctuary. But Le Gautier notice these things as he lay there; ere was a frown upon his brow, and ttful, determined look upon his face, boded ill for some one.

had not long to wait. Pushing the es of the trees aside and coming to- him with eager, elastic step, was a She was tall and slight; not more eventeen, in fact, and her great dark nd clear-cut features gave promise of beauty. There was a wistful, tender upon her face as she came forward—a tinged with pain, as she noted the face of the man lying there, but eless a smile which betokened no- but perfect, trusting, unutterable Le Gautier noted this in his turn, and not tend to increase his equanimity. t easy for a man, when he is going mit a base action, to preserve his imity when met with perfect confi- by the victim. For a moment she there, looking at him, neither speaka brief space.

ow ridiculously happy you look, ieve,' Le Gautier said irritably. "It reat compliment to me, but"— e girl looked at him shyly, as she leant st a tree, the shafts of light through aves playing upon her lustrous coronal hair and showing the happy gleam in yes. "I am always contented when re here, Hector," she answered softly. ould never at any other time, I sup-cannot say that. I have many things but I can always find time to think of I dwell upon you when you are away, think what I should do if you were to me. Ah, yes, I know you will not do but if you did, I should die."

Gautier groaned inwardly. Time had when he had dwelt with pleasure on out pourings of an innocent heart.

You are not one of the dying order of mes, Genevieve. By no means. And en often wonder what you would do if I to leave you?"

e girl half started from her reclining ion, and with her scarlet lips parted, a troubled expression on her face. on speak very strangely to-day, Hector," exclaimed. "What do you mean?"

Precisely what I say. You are anxious now how you would feel if I left you. r curiosity shall be gratified. I am to leave you."

To leave me! Going away, Hector, without me?" Genevieve wondered ely whether she heard the words aright. started and pressed her hand to her , as if to still its rebellious beating. ng away? The warmth seemed to have rted from the scene, the bright light w dim as gradually the words forced emselves upon her; and the cold numbness pair froze her trembling limbs.

Yes, I am going away," Le Gautier re- d in a matter-of-fact manner, but s with his eyes anywhere but on the face. "Indeed, I have no alternative; as to taking you with me, it is impos-

I have dreamt of something like this," nevieve intoned in a low vague voice, her seemingly far away. "It has been upon me, though I have tried not to k so, that you have been growing cold- day by day. And now you come and tell that you are going to leave! There is regret in your voice, no sorrow in your e. You will go away and forget, leaving here in my sorrow, mourning for my love—leaving me here heartbroken—ceived!"

You should go on the stage," Le Gautier replied sardonically. "Your talents are wasted here. Let me assure you, Genevieve, speaking as a man who has had a little experience, that if you can get up a scene like this upon the boards, there is money in it."

"You are cruel!" the girl cried, dashing her tears away impetuously—"you are cruel! What have I done to deserve this from you, Hector? You wish to leave me; that you will not come back again, my heart assures me."

"Your heart is a prophetic organ, then, caro mio. Now, do look at the thing in a rational light. I am under the orders of the League; to disobey is death to me; and to take you with me is impossible. We must forget all our little flirtations now, for I cannot tell when I may be in Italy again. Now, be a sensible girl; forget all about unfortunate me. No one possibly can know; and when the prince appears, marry him. Be assured that I shall tell no foolish tales."

Gradually, surely, the blood crept into the girl's face as she listened to these mocking words. She drew herself up inch by inch, her eyes bright and hard, her head thrown back. There was a look of infinite withering scorn upon her as she spoke, sparing not herself in the ordeal. "And that is the thing I loved!" she said, each word cold and clear—"that is the thing to which I gave all my poor heart! I understand your words only too well. I am abandoned. But you have not done with me yet. My turn will come, and then—beware!"

"A truce to your histrionics," Le Gautier cried, all the tiger aroused in him now, and only too ready to take up the gage thrown down. "Do you think I have no occupation, nothing to dwell upon but romantic schoolgirls one kills pleasant hours with in roaming about the world! You knew well enough the thing could not last. I leave for London to-morrow; so be sensible, and let us part friends."

"Friends!" she echoed disdainfully. "You and I friends! You have made a woman of me. From this moment, I shall only think of you with loathing!"

"Then why think of me at all? It is very hard a man cannot have a little amusement without such a display of hysterical affection as this. For goodness' sake, Genevieve, do be sensible!"

Stung to madness by this cruel taunt, she took one step towards him and stopped, her whole frame thrilling with speechless, consuming rage. It would have gone hard with him then, could she have laid her hand upon a weapon. Then all at once she grew perfectly, rigidly calm. She stepped to the little sanctuary, and took down the wooden cross, holding it in her right hand, "Before you go, I have a word to say to you," she said between her clenched white teeth. "You are a man; I am a poor defenceless girl. You are endowed with all the falseness and deceit that flesh is heir to; I am ignorant of the great world that lies beyond the horizon. You fear no harm from me now; I shall evoke no arm in my defence; but my time will come. When you have nearly accomplished your most cherished schemes, when you have your foot upon the goal of your crowning ambition, when fortune smiles her brightest upon your endeavours—then I shall strike! Not till then shall you see or hear of me; but the hour will come. Beware of it!"

"Perfection!" Le Gautier cried. "You only want"——

"Not another word!" the girl commanded. "Now, go!—mean, crawling hound, base deceiver of innocent girls! Go! and never look upon my face again; it shall be the worse for you if you do! Go! and forget my passionate words; but the time will come when they shall come back to you. Go!" With steady hand she pointed to the opening in the wood; and without another word he slunk away, feeling, in spite of his jaunty air, a miserable, pitiful coward indeed.

As he turned to go, Genevieve watched him down the long avenue out of sight, and then, sinking on her knees, she sobbed long and bitterly, so full of her grief and care that she was oblivious to her surroundings. Her face was deadly pale, her white lips moved passionately, as she knelt there weeping, half praying, half cursing herself in her despair.

"Genevieve!"

The word, uttered in a tone of wonder and alarm, was repeated a second time before the agitated girl looked up. Salvarini was standing there, his usually grave face a prey to suspicion and alarm, a look which did not disguise entirely an expression of tenderness and affection. Genevieve rose to her feet and wiped away her tears. It was some moments before she was calm enough to speak to the wondering man at her side.

"I have chosen an unfortunate moment for my mission," Salvarini mournfully continued; "I am afraid my presence is unwelcome here.—Genevieve, there is something behind this I do not understand. It must be beyond an ordinary grief to move you like this."

"There are some sorrows we dare not think of," Genevieve replied with an air of utter weariness—"Luigi, do not press me now. Some day, perhaps, I will ask you to help me."

"I am afraid a brother is the fittest confidant in a case like this. Pardon me, if I am wrong; but when I hear you talking to a man—for his voice came to me—and then I find you in such a plight as this, I must think.—O Genevieve! my only love, my idol and dream since I first saw your face, to have given your heart to some one unworthy of you. What will Carlo say, when he hears of it?"

"But he must not hear," Genevieve whispered, terrified. "Luigi, you have surprised me; but you must keep my secret—I implore you."

"I can refuse no words of yours. But one thing you must, nay, shall do—you must tell me who this man is; you must have an avenger."

"Luigi," the girl said, laying her hand gently upon his arm, "I shall be my own avenger—that I have sworn by the cross I hold in my hand. If it is for years, I can wait—and hope."

"That is a wrong spirit," Salvarini replied sorrowfully. "You are mad just now with your wrongs. Stay here at home, and let me be your champion. I love you too well to admire such sentiments from you yet. I shall not press you now; but all time, for good or for evil, I shall wait for you."

"Luigi, you are a good man, far too good for me. Listen! I must gratify my revenge; till then, all must wait. Things alter; men change; but when the time comes, and you are still the same, say 'Come to me,' and I shall be by your side."

"I shall never change!" he replied as he touched the outstretched head with his lips gently.

Slowly and sadly they walked back towards the house—Genevieve calm and collected now; Salvarini, mournfully resigned; pity and rage—pity for the girl, and rage against her deceiver—alternately supreme in his heart. For some time neither spoke.

"Will you come in?" she asked.

"Not now," he replied feeling instinctively that his presence would only be an unwelcome restraint. "I had a message to bring from Carlo. He and Sir Geoffrey and Miss Charteris are coming to-morrow.—And now, remember, if you want a friend, you have one in me.—Good-bye."

"Good-bye, Luigi," she said mechanically. "You are very good. I shall remember."

Strangers coming to-morrow. The words bear on her brain like the roar of countless hammers. Strangers coming and how was she to meet them now with this wild sense of wrong burning within her vengeful Italian heart, bruised but not crushed? She walked slowly upstairs and sat down in her room, thinking till the evening light began to wane, and the lamps of distant Rome to twinkle out one by one. The very silence of the place oppressed her.

"Are you coming down to supper, Genevieve?"

She aroused herself at these words, and looking up, saw a child standing before her. She was regarding her sister somewhat curiously, and somewhat pitifully too; the latter, child as she was, did not fail to notice the pale face and dark-ringed eyes. She approached the older girl, throwing her arm round her neck and kissing her gently "What is the matter, caro?" she asked in her soft liquid Italian. "Have you one of your headaches again, sister? Let me comfort you."

"I have something more than headache, Lucrece—some pain that no soft words of yours can charm away. Run down stairs, child; I am not fit to talk to you now."

"Please, Genevieve, I would rather stay with you."

Genevieve looked out again across the landscape, lit here and there now by twinkling lights, reflected from the happy firesides, till it was too dark any longer to see aught but the ghostly shadows.

"Lucrece!" she exclaimed suddenly, "come here."

The child hesitated for a moment, and obeyed, taking her sister's cold damp hand in her own, and waiting for her to speak.

"Do you remember, Lucrece, the Golden City I used to tell you about when you were a little one, the blessed place far away, where there is no strife and no care, and every heart can rest?"

"Yes, I remember, sister."

"And should you care to go with me?"

"O yes, please. I would go anywhere with you and not be afraid."

"Then you shall go. When you go to your room to-night, do not take off your clothes, but lie awake till I come for you. Only, mind, if you say a word of this, you will not see the beautiful city."

Through the rest of the hours, Genevieve moved about mechanically, getting through the evening meal she scarcely knew how. Gradually time passed on, one by one the members of the household retired. It was an hour later when Genevieve entered her little sister's room. "Lucrece, are you awake?" she whispered.

"Yes, sister; I am waiting for you. Are we going now?"

"Yes we are going now. Walk slowly, and hold my hand. Come, let us hasten? we have far to go, and the way is weary."

Silently they passed down the stairs, and out into the night-air, along the path to Rome, walking on till they were lost in the darkness of the night; Genevieve's face stern and set; the little one's, bright and hopeful.

Gradually the east flushed with the Golden splendour of the coming dawn; the birds awoke to welcome up the sun; and after them, the laggard morn. The orb of day saw strange things as he rose in the vault of heaven: he saw two tired wayfarers sleeping on the roadside; and then, later, the anxious faces of a party gathered at a pretty villa by the Tiber. As he sank to rest again, he went down upon a party searching woods and streams far and near; and as he dipped behind the shoulder of the purple hills that night, his last red glimpse flushed the faces of the stern sad-visaged group on their way to Rome. When he rose again there were no wayfarers by the roadside, but a brother on his knees praying for his lost darlings and strength to aid him in his extremity. In Sol's daily flight he saw hope lost, abandoned in despair; but as came each morn, he brought a gentle healing, but never Genevieve back to the Mattio wood again!

And so time passed on, bringing peace, if not forgetfulness.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A Sonoma Eagle.

A peculiar story is told of an eagle which had been watched for thirteen consecutive years by the residents of a quiet valley not many miles from Santa Rosa. The same eagle has for the above named period of years built her nest in a cave and there reared her young unmolested. She will regularly in the spring come from some unknown place, lay her eggs and hatch her young. After the young are old enough to take care of themselves she leaves them in the valley and flies away, and is not seen again in that neighborhood until the following spring has come. Where she goes to and where she comes from no one is able to tell. The young seldom follow her off, but stay in the valley and are shot or stray away. In the spring when she comes to build her nest, she will fly directly over the cave for several days; the meaning of this nobody is able to tell, but the supposition is that it is to find out whether the cave is occupied by varmints or birds of her own nature. Each day she can be noticed lowering down toward the ground, until at last she reaches the cave. After this, perhaps, she is not again seen for a week, when she will come out in search of food.

A lady who suffers agony with her teeth and yet has a horror of dentists rang the bell at her dentist's the other day with some hesitation. A liveried servant answers it. "Monsieur is not in," he says. "Ah, what good fortune!" exclaims the patient, visibly relieved.

DAZZLING FIBRE YARNS.

A traveller who has recently returned after a trip through British Columbia says that one day last November it was possible to lay boards on top of small fish in a small stream, which empties into the Fraser and pass over, as if on a living pontoon bridge, to the opposite bank. The fish had been driven into the stream by the back-water of the Fraser and were packed together like sardines in a can.

Many curious fish have been brought to light by the artesian wells which are being sunk from time to time in various parts of Florida. At the Ponce de Leon Well star fish of an unknown species were found at a depth of 1,000 feet, and from a well near Brooks Springs several fish with scales of variegated colors and fins covered with a shaggy coat of hair where thrown up. At other places fish that were totally blind were met with at a depth of 600 to 1,500 feet.

A huge devil-fish was captured in Victoria Harbor a week ago by three adventurous fishermen. The monster weighed over a hundred pounds and measured several feet across the back. It was taken alive and pulled into the boat, where it promptly seized hold of seats, oars everything else that was moveable with its innumerable suckers. The men were forced into the very stem and stern of the boat, but there was a vital spot between the great fish's eyes and a boat-hook soon found it.

William Sykes, a Mississippi planter, went fishing near Leota Landing one morning, and while he was trying to impale a minnow on his hook the diminutive fish wriggled out of his fingers into his mouth and slipped down his throat. He went home and took an emetic, but it had no effect, and although all this took place some time ago the fish still remains in his stomach. Sykes hasn't worried much about the matter and tells his friends that he feels no unpleasant effects from his abdominal visitor. He even says that he experiences a certain pleasure in feeling the fish grow.

The rapid growth and breeding qualities of the German carp, which is now the favorite fish for stocking ponds in Western States are a matter of astonishment to fishermen A typical instance of its fecundity is that related by a farmer residing near Fairfield Ia. Four years ago he started a pond with three small carp, and this year he reports his stock at 12,000. In the mean time he has sold hundreds for stocking ponds in various parts of the State. The fish have attained a great size and are said to be very tame. Their flesh is somewhat like that of the buffalo fish and is rather coarse grained for the table.

Prof. Baird says there is nothing to prevent a fish from living an incredible number of years and growing to an enormous size, and cites in proof of the statement an immense pike living in Russia whose age dates back to the fifteenth century. Apropos of this, a well-known Canadian artist now in New York says that while travelliing in British Columbia a few months ago he was shown a gigantic sturgeon which was declared by the people to have lived in the waters of the Fraser River, to their certain knowledge, time out of mind, and which, since its capture more than a year ago, had furnished food for several families. The fish was tied with strong ropes to a tree on the bank of the river, and whenever a resident wanted some fish he simply went to the river, pulled in the captive, cut a steak o the size needed, and allowed the great fish to float back into the stream. The sturgeon was still alive when the artist left, and was estimated to have enough meat on its bones to supply the village for several months to come.

Moneys for Breachin'.

The following tit-bit taken from an American paper is a suitable illustration of how some ministers of the Gospel help to send men to Parliament for the purpose of mutilating the Scott Act.

It's election day. A minister of the Gospel and a German brewer meet at the polls.

Brewer—"Vell, minister, I suppose you votes mit dem venatics, vot thinks peer am awful posion?"

Minister—"Oh, no! I guess not. I vote the same ticket you do."

B.—"Vot! I votes for peer and men who helps me in mine peezness. Let me see your dicket. Vell, now, ish not dat goot? You breach and you bray all the year against my peezness, but ven you comes to vote you vote shoost like me, and all the saloon-mens. Does you know dat ven dem vimens vas rount to get moneys, I vas shoost so mat? I gifes no moneys to de man vot inderferes mit mine peezness; but now I sees you did not mean anythings by de breachin' and brayin'. You do it shoost to blease dem vimens and fools vot say me shall make no more peer. Vell, shoost as long as you votes right you may breach and bray. Cause dem who drinks mine peer no hear you, and he drinks shoost so much as if you no breach. Here, I now gifes you $10, and I gifes you the same every year shoost so long as you votes mit me."

M.—"Oh, no! I could not take that. It would be selling my vote, which would not be right, you know."

B.—"Oh, vell, I sees; I no gives you de moneys for de vote, but for de breachin' and de brayin' ven you means nottings by it. Now give me your dicket, and I gives you mine, and we go out and put dem in de pox; and I tells de beples you votes shoost like me, and I votes shoost like you, and de next time dem vimens comes rount dey gets lots of moneys for de breachin' and de prayin'.

Tufts of ostrich feathers trim the trains of some very elaborate dresses of high ceremony.

A young college student, whose chief charm is his honesty says: "The superior standing of the college girls is owing to the fact that the girls work for all they are worth and we work for all our fathers are worth."

Bill Collector—"See here, I have written you a dozen letters about that bill you owe my firm, and you haven't even recognized them." Country Editor—"Were they written on both sides of the sheet!" "Of course." "All such communications go into the waste basket without reading."

"Tell your mother, Johnny," said his kind maiden aunt, as she placed a piece of cake in his hand, "that I was very sorry your sister couldn't come." "And what will I say," replied little Johnny, with an air of strategy, "if mamma asks where is sister's piece of cake?"

What's the Matter with this Mean?

Guest (to landlord)—What can you get me up for dinner, landlord?

Landlord—Anything you want. How about some nice fish-balls?

Guest—Don't care for fish-balls. I'll take a couple of chops, not too well done.

Landlord—Well, it's a little late for chops; but I can give you anything else. Them fish-balls is nice.

Guest—A small porter-house, with mushrooms.

Landlord—A bridal couple ate the last mushrooms I had in the house not ten minutes ago. I've got some Al Toronto dressed beefsteak, but, unfortunately, it's only on the way. Them fish-balls are brown on the top!

Guest—Veal cutlets!

Landlord—The last bit of veal went to make chicken sal-er—oh! veal? No, no veal; but I can give you anything else. My wife picked that codfish herself, and them balls are as boneless as tapioca pudding. A judge of the supreme court asked for the recipe only this evening.

Guest—Got any spring chicken?

Landlord—I'll have some nice ones for breakfast. But if there's anything else you want—nice hot fish-balls, or——

Guest—Oh! let me have some liver and bacon, then!

Landlord—We don't have liver and bacon aftor 2 o'clock, sir. It's just luck that we've got them fish-balls——

Guest—Bring me some fish-balls!

Landlord—Yes, sir! Tea or coffee?

Guest—Coffee!

Landlord—Well, the coffee is all out! I guess you'll have to take tea!

The Other Side.

"Young man!" he said as he followed him out on the steps last evening, "I want to have a talk with you. You have been sparking my daughter."

"Yes, sir."

"You think you love her."

"I know I do."

"And you would fain bear her off to some woodbine cottage?"

"That is what I would fainest, sir."

"Ah—um! What's your salary?"

"Seven dollars a week, sir."

"Jess so—take her. I was afraid you couldn't support us all on your wages, but it's all right. Hurry up things and get into the family in time to pay the next month's rent. You don't know what a relief it will be to us old folks to have some one to support us."

George Growing Great.

"I saw an article in the paper yesterday," remarked Mrs. Gabble to Mrs. Vain, her nextdoor neighbor, "stating that nearly all great men were bald."

"Yes; it is a shame, too. Now, my poor dear George's hair is coming out so fast I scarcely think he will have any left soon," scored Mrs. Vain.

A Faint-Hearted Lover.

I asked her if she'd marry me,
Love made me half demented.
She kindly heard my earnest plea,
And blushingly consented.

Since then the wedding day she's set,
Her trousseau's almost ready;
I know that I'm in luck, and yet
My nerves are quite unsteady.

I loved her then and love her now—
Her love makes life worth living;
But secretly I must avow
I feel a strong misgiving.

Sometimes I wish that I were free
And hadn't gone and done it,
Since her papa has shown to me
The hill for her Spring bonnet!

Either Perjured Himself, or had Remarkable Feet.

"Now, you say, Mr. Kolby, that you stood outside, and, looking over the fence, saw the defendant here strike Mr. Smith."

"Yes, sah."

"How tall are you, Kolby?"

"'Bout five foot six, sah."

"Then tell me, if you please, how you could stand and look over a nine-foot fence?"

"I stood on my tiptoes, sah."

The Nice Young Man on the Front Seat.

On one occasion the late Henry Ward Beecher when a young man was going to a country town in an open stage, the driver of which was a garrulous old fellow, and the other passengers two old maids and a little girl, Beecher being on the seat with the driver. One of the ladies was an affected, over-nice kind of a female who liked to talk, and she kept the driver busy. She was dilating upon the advantages of city life.

"And then, besides all this," she said, "things are so much cheaper in the city."

"Yes'm," replied the driver.

"Why, only yesterday I saw hose sold in a store for twenty cents that would cost fifty in the country."

This was a poser, and it was followed by a period of silence, broken by the little girl, who remarked:

"Say, auntie, what is hose?"

"Sh—sh!" said the aunt, shaking her, and the child became silent for a minute, and the aunt began to talk again.

"Auntie," interrupted the child, "what is hose?"

"Keep still, Fanny!" said the aunt, with an angry blush.

But the child wouldn't keep still, and very shortly broke in again:

"Say, auntie, what is hose?"

This was too much, and with a snap the aunt put her foot in it.

"Well, if you must know," she answered, "hose is stockings; but I hoped that I would not be compelled to mention the word before that nice young man on the front seat."

Short, Crisp and Decisive.

"What's your business?" asked one merchant of another.

"I manufacture quinine; and yours?"

"Specifics for ague."

"Shake!"

Quite Satisfactory.

Salesman (to mild-looking old lady). "Yes, ma'am, as you say, ma'am, this cloth is very cheap. All our goods are very cheap. In fact, we lose money on everything we sell."

Mild-looking old lady. "How ever do you manage to get along, then?"

"Why, ma'am, we couldn't, I assure you we couldn't, if we didn't sell such enormous quantities."

Mild-looking old lady considers this explanation quite satisfactory.

Legal.

P. McCullough.

BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.

OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,

MARKDALE.

Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,

BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.

OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.

J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.

N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

---

Wm. Brown,

ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.

Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.

N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate se curity.

WILLIAM STUART,

KIMBERLEY,

Issues of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.

A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.

DENTIST,

GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,

MARKDALE, - - ONT.

J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.

Builder and Contractor

In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.

Estimates given. All work guaranteed.

Orders by mail promptly attended to.

329 Residence, MARKDALE.

W. C. RICHARDS,

BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT. Markdale.

124ly

WEAVING.

Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.

318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,

FLESHERTON.

Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

---

6 PER CENT.

Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at west rates of interest. Apply to

R. J. SPROULE,

Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

For Sale or Rent.

Good large comfortable dwelling, with stable, also hard and soft water on the premises, on Sydenham street near Presbyterian Church.

344 Apply to B. Coleman

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT 131 con. 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia. 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S. Thompson, Flesherton P. O. or J. J. Thompson, Orilla.

342-ft

HAVE YOU

Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.

NATURE'S REMEDY

The unqualified success of Dr Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests entirely with the fact that it is compounded from nature's well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood. 500,000 SOLD

Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada in one. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.

SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE

Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.

TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.

TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25cts. per box.

SOLD BY ALL DEALERS

Markdale Roller Mill.

FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.

Flour always on Hand

Flour $3.80 to $4.20 per. bbl.

SHORTS, per ton - $13.00

BRAN, " - 12.00

The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.

J. W. FORD.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.

OWEN SOUND BRANCH

TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, July 28th, 1886.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.
Toronto....Leave	7 45am	4 50pm
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 30 "
Orangeville. Arrive	10 05 "	7 03
Orangeville. Leave	10 20 "	7 22
Orangeville Jun	10 32 "	7 34
Shelburne	10 58 "	8 04
Dundalk	11 22 "	8 30
Flesherton	11 47 "	8 55
Markdale	12 02pm	9 10
Berkeley	12 14 "	9 22 "
Holland Centre	12 23 "	9 32 "
Chatsworth	12 38 "	9 49 "
Owen Sound	1 05 "	10 20 "

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.
Owen Sound	5 40am	2 40pm
Chatsworth	6 10 "	3 07 "
Holland Centre	6 25 "	3 30 "
Berkeley	6 34 "	3 40 "
Markdale	6 47 "	3,52 "
Flesherton	7 02 "	4 06 "
Dundalk	7 26 "	4 31 "
Shelburne	7 51 "	4 57 "
Orangeville Jun	8 22 "	5 23 "
Orangeville. Arrive	8 30 "	5 35 "
Orangeville. Leave	8 45 "	5 55 "
Cardwell Junction	9 25 "	6 30 "
Toronto....Arrive	10 55 "	8 10

WM. G. GUTHRIE,

Plain & Ornamental Plasterer

MARKDALE.

Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.

330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.

The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of

School Furniture.

Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.

181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.

ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,

J. S. BLACK,

190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.

LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to

J. S. BLACK,

190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.

Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling. Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.

First Class Cotton Warp

supplied at the lowest possible rates.

A call solicited.

Terms strictly cash or wool

Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

WANTED!

Clean Timothy Seed,

—HIGHEST—

Market Price Paid.

H. PARKER,

DURHAM.

The Markdale Standard

Is issued every Thursday, by

C. W. RUTLEDGE, Markdale, Ont.,

TERMS—$1 per year in advance; $1.50 if not paid within six months.

Professional and business cards one inch space and under, per year, $4.

	1 YR.	6 MO.	3 MO.
Whole column	$50 00	$27 50	$15 00
Half column	27 00	15 00	10 00
Quarter column	15 00	10 00	6 00
Two inch space	7 00	4 00
Three inch space	10 00	5 00

Casual advertisements 8 cents per line first insertion, 3 cents per line each subsequent insertion, nonpareil measure.

Editorial notices, or notices in local column 10 cents per line first insertion, 5 cents each subsequent insertion.

Stray animals &c, advertised 3 weeks for $1

No paper discontinued until all arrears are paid except at the option of the publisher.

JOB PRINTING.

THE STANDARD office has a splendid equipment of poster as well as fine job type. Special attention to orders by mail. All orders filled with dispatch.

Society Directory.

Markdale C. O. O. F. No. 78, meets every alternate Monday evening at 8 o'clock in their Hall, Rae's block. Visiting brethren welcome.

Markdale A. O. U. W. No. 141 meets in their Hall, Rae's block, every alternate Monday evening at o'clock. A visit from brethren of neighboring lodges solicited.

MARKDALE L. O. L. No. 1045 meets in their Hall on Friday on or before full moon each month. Thos. Elliott, Master; W. J. Blakely, Secretary.

Victoria R. B. Preceptory, No. 282, Meets in Lodge Room of Markdale L. O. L. No. 1045, first Friday in each month. Visiting Sir Knights always welcome. Jas. Brodie W. P.; Thos. Elliott, Registrar.

Markdale Church Directory.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Services every Sabbath at 10:30 a. m, Sabbath School at 2:30 p. m. Prayer Meeting every Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. A. Wilson, Pastor; A. McFarland, S. S. Superintendent.

CHRIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p m. Rev. Jas. Ward, Incumbent. Sabbath School 2:30. W. J. Ford, Superintendent.

METHODIST CHURCH.

Services every Sunday at 10:30 a. m and 7 p. m. Sunday School at 2:30. Prayer Meeting every Thursday evening from 8 to 9, Rev. Geo. H. Cornish, Pastor; G. S. Bowes, S. S. Superintendent. Ladies' Aid in connection: Mrs. T. Hill, Secretary.

Directory.

MARKDALE VILLAGE OFFICIALS.

Police Trustees—E. Davis, A. Turner, and S. J. Coleman.

Public School Trustees—B. Coleman, J. Lyons, W. A. Brown. B. Coleman, Sec.

COUNTY OFFICIALS.

Judge, H. McPherson, Owen Sound.
Deputy-Judge, S. J. Lane, Owen Sound.
Sheriff, C. H. Moore, Owen Sound.
Clerk of Peace. W. Armstrong, O. Sound.
Clerk, John Gale, Owen Sound.
Treasurer, S. J. Parker, Owen Sound.
County Warden, N, Reid, Owen Sound
Registrar, N., R. McKnight, "
" S., Thos. Lauder, Durham.
Revising Barrister, North, Judge McPherson, Owen Sound.
Revising Barrister, South & East, Judge Lane, Owen Sound.
M. P., North, Jas. Masson, Owen Sound.
M. P., East, T. S. Sproule, M.D., Markdale
M. P., South, Geo Landerkin. M. D., Hanover.
M. P. P., North, D. Creighton, Owen Sound
M. P. P., East, Capt. J. Rorke, Clarksburg
M. P. P., South, John Blyth, Orchard.

DIVISION COURT CLERKS

No. 1. John Stephens, Owen Sound.
" 2. David Jackson, Durham.
" 3. Thos. Plunkett, Meaford.
" 4. Thos. J. Rorke, Heathcote.
" 5. J. W. Armstrong, Flesherton.
" 6. John McDonald, Chatsworth.

Post-Office Directory.

MARKDALE.

The P O. will be opened from 8 o'clock a. m. to 7 p. m. every working day.

Mails closed as follows, viz:

C. P. R., going North, 11:40 a m, and 7 p m
" " South, 3:30 p m, and 7 p m

TRAVERSTON.

Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday 12:30 noon.

HARKAWAY.

Friday, 12:30 noon.

For registered letters and money orders, fifteen minutes earlier than above. The P. O. will be open on Holidays from 9 to 9:30 a. m., and half an hour after mails arrive.

W. J. McFARLAND, P. M.

"Notice" To Farmers, Those that have to buy their "Flour" this summer. Can buy it at Benson's, the Belfast House, the same price as at the mill, and every lb. guaranteed, both Ford's & Plewes' kept on hand, Liberal inducements made on over one barrel lots.

Just received, Piles of New Tweeds, Stacks of prints, Oceans of Dress goods Loads of Cottonades and Heaps of Cotton Shirtings, S. Hill.

To the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR.—In reply to "Doceo" intimation that I am afraid to argue, I simply say he has mistaken his man, and as for our capabilities, let others judge.

He has laid himself open to many a sarcastic hit, but as there are too many personals and slurs and too little of the subject, in his as well as most letters to the press I pass over them, but I am sure the readers of the Standard will forgive me if compelled to use a little ironv seeing I am in that line.

He still persists in calling the Selections the "Ross Bible. Now he must remember the first lesson in logic or reasoning is to call things by their correct name.

The Readings are not intended, and never were, to supersede the Bible in the schools, but the use of them were made compulsory only where the Bible was not used. The Government have no desire to interfere so long as the Bible or its contents are read daily and systematically.

They were got up at the request of the various demoninations and the Teachers Provincial Association and under the supervision of Ministers appointed by the English and Presbyterian Synods and the Methodist Conference's; copies were also sent to leading clergymen of others religious bodies.

The above gentlemen met and appointed the sub-committee. Was that legal enough for "Doceo?"

The Selections were begun a year before Mr. Ross was appointed Minister of Education.

A copy of the Selections was placed in every member's box and the regulations were on the table of the House for six weeks and neither the leader of the opposition nor his followers saw fit to criticize them; they are therefore responsible with the Government for the Readings.

As to how the Readings were received—I refer to the Mail editorial in last letter, but this was before the Elections.

Doceo still complains of the omission of some chapters and verses, perhaps he can explain how he would make a book of Selections without omitting any, but the verses omitted he says favor the Catholics' and do away with their subjecting themselves to civil government or as our M. P. P. for North Grey puts it "from honoring the King", as I showed in last letter the verses are the same in the Douay Bible which the Roman Catholics' put in the hands of their people, but does he say the Catholics do not honor the Queen or are subject to the government, he had better prove it.

I know from personal observation that the Douay Bible is in the libraries of our general Institutes and Hospitals for the special benefit of R. C. patients. But why show the Readings to Archbishop Lynch, there are 58,000 children in the Public and High Schools and many hundred teachers, the Readings were shown to every denomination and why not the R. C. but perhaps he does not recognize them as christians I am afraid he talks more charitably of the heathen.

In reference to the English Church Lessons, what makes a church, the minister or the people? according to Doceo those Lessons are mutilations the International S. S. Lessons are the same and if we carry out his theory ministers are mutilating the Bible every Sabbath in their sermons, there is not a single verse garbled.

And as for the names of the Books, what is a scholar more likely to carry away, for instance, The life of Moses or Exodus, 11 &c.

The chapters and verses are not correct in the Bible, they are not in the original, they were put there if I mistaken not by some Catholic Monks, Doceo says men such as Rev. Dr, Nelles, Dr. Stewart, Dr. Cochrane, Rev. Prin. Caven, Provost Body, Rev. Prin. Castle, Hon. S. H. Blake, &c., are mere partizans.

The above gentlemen need no defence, such men form the moral backbone of our country and whatever their politics may be, no one need be ashamed to walk in their foot steps.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for the insertion of above letter in your columns.

T. L. MOFFAT, Jr.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths twenty five cents.

DEATHS.

GALBRAITH.—In Toronto on the 19th inst., James Galbraith, formerly of Markdale, aged 42 years.

CAMPBELL.—In Chatsworth on the 23rd inst. Alex Campbell, Esq., proprietor of the Campbell House, aged 63 years.

Newspapers in 1887.

Geo. P. Rowell & Co., of New York will issue on Monday, May 2nd, their fifteenth Annual edition of their American publication, the "American Newspaper Directory."

The new volume contains an exhaustive list of all Class Publications admirably arranged that any one of three thousand papers represented can be readily referred to and important facts concerning it, together with its circulation rating, easily ascertained.

The Newspaper Directory will be used principally by publishers, Advertising and advertising Agents, but the vast fund of information it contains must be valuable to persons of almost every trade and profession. As a Gazetteer alone it is well worth the price asked, $5.00, for it fully describes every town in which a newspaper is issued, and where people care to know about any town where one is not.

The number of papers published in the United States. Territories (including Alaska) and Canada is put at 17,000, an increase of 581 in one year.

The growth of newspapers in some of the Western States would be a matter of wonder, if it were not that this is no exception to the rule. In Iowa the increase is 89 and in Nebraska 35, while the Keystone State show a greater advance of 35 and in Buckeye State show of 30. Pennsylvania has the largest increase in dailies. Kansas in weeklies, 81, and New York in monthlies, 42. Seven States show decrease: The most prominent instance being New Hampshire and Virginia each. The whole volume shows great care has been taken to sustain reputation as the most comprehensive work of the kind yet published, and to insure accuracy in every detail. Nothing less a complete compendium of American newspapers and periodicals would surprise those who are familiar with the former efforts of this firm, which are so well known as the oldest, largest and best known of all the American Advertising Agencies.

Church Notes.

Sacremantal services will be held next Sabbath in the Presbyterian church 10:30 a. m. Preparatory service will be held the previous day, preaching at 1 p. m. by Rev. D. McLeod, Priceville.

Rev. Mr. Hosking, will hold his Quarterly Meeting at New England Church next Sunday, at 10:30. The business meeting will be held the following Monday, at Ebenezer at 2 o'clock.

The Markdale Methodist Circuit Quarterly meeting will be held next Sunday at 10:30. Local preachers' meeting the following Monday at 10 o'clock and business meeting at two.

A reception service was held in the Methodist church last Sunday when the trial members', (children and young people) were received into full membership.

Makdale Lodge C. O. O. F.

The following officers were elected for 1887, viz:—

N. Grand Bro.	J. W.	Sproule.
V. Grand	"	Angus Plewes.
Treasurer	"	A. Turner.
Secretary	"	W. J. Benson.
Inside Guard		A. McFarland.
Outside	" "	John Wallace.
R. S. N. G.	"	Alex Kay.
L. S. N. G.	"	J. R. Mathews.
R. S. V. G.	"	Samuel Sarjeant.
L. S. V. G.	"	Dan. McFarlane.
Warden	"	Frank Maidment.

This lodge is in a prosperous condition and constantly adding new members.

Public Notice

To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for Johnson's celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all heal White Ointment. The nervine is the best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction with the Liver Pills, it is the very best for all diseases arrising from Torpid liver or bad stomach.

The White Ointment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples, Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all other diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these remedies and you will not be disappointed.

For sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist Markdale, Ont,

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 348. MARKDALE, ONT., MAY 5, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

30 DAYS!

30 DAYS!

For 30 Days Only, there will be a great discount sale of

Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, Spex, &c.,

Do not miss it but come early and secure some of the bargains before they are gone. only for 30 days, positively, as we are giving you 25 per cent. off on all cash sales over $1.00. The finest make of Nicol Alarm clock actually selling at RUSSELL'S NOTED JEWELERY STORE for only $2.00, while they are $2.50 to $2.75 elsewhere and the finest assortment of Fine Plated Chains only $1.50 which are generally sold for $2.25 to $2.50. RUSSELL'S is the place you can get bargains, nobody can compete with us. Come and see for yourselves, we will not pay your millage or give you meals as a catch, but will sell you goods a great deal cheaper than you can get elsewhere and remember the only place to get your Watch repaired properly is at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,
FLESHERTON.

NEXT Saturday, is cattle Fair.

SMITH the barber will be in Flesherton next Monday, Fair Day.

CLOVER & TIMOTHY Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

Farmers buy your land rollers from Jackson.

Best quality of L. C. Bacon at J. G. Anderson's.

Two weeks from next Tuesday will be the Queen's Birthday.

EVERY person should see the choice line of prints at J. G. Anderson's.

For calcimine brushes, wall brushes, paint brushes &c., see Mabee's.

Harrows ! Harrows ! ! Iron and spring tooth at Jackson's.

For calcimines or wall finish of any kind. The best to be had at Mabee's.

Fishing Tackle all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner, & Co.

Get your plow repairs from Jackson. Old metal taken in exchange.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

MOFFAT Bro's of the Markdale foundry have enlarged their premises and are going into the stove manufacturing.

PLOWS! Plows ! Sod, General purpose and Jointer—Fleury and Wilkinson's make, at Jackson's.

All kinds of Boots & shoes, from the coarse brogan to finest kid, can be had at J. G. Anderson's.

1,000,000 doz., of eggs and 2 tons of butter wanted at Davis' for which the highest market price will be paid.

A very fine line of Dress goods and trimmings to match just to hand at J. G. Anderson's.

PLOW POINTS.—All the standard makes and patterns for sale at Moffat's foundry, three for $1.00 cash.

You can get a choice assortment of all kinds of goods cheap for cash at J. G. Anderson's.

ANDREW FOGARTY, mason and brick layer, has the brick and other material on the ground for his residence.

For a real stylish hat, neektie, or anything in the Gents furnishing, try J. G. Anderson, he can suit you.

W. G, GUTHRIE, plasterer, has his dwelling house up and is pushing it forward.

For Muslins, Embroideries, Laces, flouncings &c., J, G. Anderson has a compete stock to select from.

A spring poem from a Muskoka author commences thusly—Spring, sprang, beautiful sprung.

Try J. G. Anderson for Shirtings, Cottonades, Brown and Blue Denims, a big range to choose from.

THE District Meeting of the Markdale District Methodist church will be held at Flesherton onthe 17th and 18th of May.

IT is said quite a number were out fishing on Sunday last—They should be made an example of.

OUR brass band treated us to music on Saturday evening to the enjoyment of the citizens.

SPECIAL.—The largest best assorted and cheapest stock in Boots & Shoes in the section are at S. Hill's.

A fresh stock of meal's have just been opened at Davis' which will be sold at a very small advance on cost as he will not be undersold.

REMEMBER you can get Bran, Shorts, Henfeed the same price at Bensons, as at the mill, it saves you half an hour trouble, give us a call.

MRS. STEER will accept thanks for a bunch of rhubarb which she handed in to ye editor last Tuesday, being the first of the season.

HEAD QUARTERS for Buggie Tops, Milk Waggon Springs, or anything in the Carriage line is at Wm. Mason's carriage works.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and cured at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Sample free.

A large consignment of fresh Teas just received and another coming; Quality better and prices lower than heretofore don't fail to give us a call, S. Hill.

MARKDALE Cheese Factory will commence operations on Monday the 16th, and patrons will assist very much by being in full readiness.

NOTICE.—Another consignment of ready made clothing just to hand. Beautiful all wool tweed suits for $7.50 S. Hill.

ANOTHER large importation of the newest Dress-Goods, Plushes, laces and cretones expected via steamship Sardenian this week for W. J. McFarland.

LADIES', have you seen my stock of Millinery, all the latest novelties, and prices very low. Call and examine before purchasing elswhere. S. Hill.

Messrs R, D. Ellis of Euphrasia, D. J. Hunter of Collingwood township and Thos Kells of Artemesia attended a Farmers' Council meeting in Toronto last week as delegates from Centre Grey Farmers' Institute.

REV. T. HALL, of Lehigh, Iowa, arrived in Markdale last week and will spend his Holidays in this part. His many friends were much pleased to meet him and to learn of his success in the ministry across the lines.

THE fishing season opened in right, earnest on Monday last; numerous and immense strings and baskets of speckled beauties were brought to town during the day.

MR. MAURICE DOOLAN a highly respected and well-to-do farmer near Traverston, Glenelg, passed peacefully away to his reward on Saturday last at the age of 60 years.

IF you want a neat and stylish hat go to Miss Burch's the cheapest in town. Feathers, flowers, ribbons and lace, dress and mantle making; eggs taken in exchange for goods.

I have a few chests of that notorious uncolored japan tea left which I have sold at 30c. per lb and it has been pronounced by those who have used it to be better value than any Tea sold in town for the money—probably you ask why we can sell cheaper than those in trade? the answer is simply because we are satisfied with half the profit. W. L. Davis.

A full stock of oranges, lemons, candies of all descriptions, nuts, figs, dates, raisins, biscuits of all kinds, canned goods, a few chests of that thunder, lightening and blue blazes tea left yet, the best value in town, try it, every person is getting it now at Benson's.

Right now is the time to use a good Blood Purifying Medicine. Loose no time in getting a bottle of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. It will do you good. Sold by all Druggists 50 cents. tf.

"Notice" to Farmers. Those that have to buy their "Flour" this summer. Can buy it at Benson's, the Belfast House, the same price as at the mill, and every lb. guaranteed, both Ford's and Plewes' kept on hand. Liberal inducements made on over one barrel lots.

Don't fail to call at Wm. Mason's Carriage Works and see the style and quality of the rig's he builds; he is making a specialty of the Buffalo Road gear the most stylish and durable Buggie built, and prices as low as any one in the country.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists. tf.

THE Shelburne Free Press is twelve years old and is one of the most enterprising papers in the district. Since it came under the management of Mr, Mortimer four years ago, it has made commendable progress. We wish it continued prosperity.

THE finest stock of glassware grocery milk pans, crocks, flour pots, hanging baskets &c., to be had at Benson's and will be sold cheaper than by any one in the trade. Remember we mean what we say. Call and see for yourselves.

DON'T SPECULATE.—Run no risk in buying medicine, but try the great Kidney and Liver regulator, made by Dr. Chase, author of Chase's receipts. Try Chase's Kiver Cure for all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stamach and Bowels.

MARKDALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 75 to 76 cents; spring wheat 75 to 76; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 14 to 15; eggs 10; potatoes 75 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

FOR Oatmeal, "Corn meal" "Wheat meal" graham flour pot and pearl barley Bensons is the place to go, they will do better for you than any one in the town.

Davis has constantly on hand a full supply of Ford's and Plewes' flour of the finest quality, if it is not right bring it back and your money will be refunded. Special reduction will be given for large lots.

NOTICE.—All persons indebted to me either by note or book account are hereby notified to call and settle the same with A. Turner, Markdale, without delay, thus save trouble and expense, T. S. Sproule.

CASH buyers will find meat in Sarjeant Bro's meat market as cheap as in any other market in Canada. Prime Bacon, Hams and other smoked and dried meats, as well as all kinds of fresh meats in season.

ARBOR DAY.—The first Friday in May has been set apart in every rural school and incorperated village for the purpose of planting shade trees, making flower beds, and otherwise improving and beautifying the school ground.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a similar vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure for Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh Asthma and all throat and Lung Affections also a positive and radical cure for nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge to all who desire it, this receipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp naming this paper W. A. NOYES 149 Powers Block Rochester, N. Y. 354-66 E. O. W.

PREPARATIONS are being made for a "big time" in Markdale on the 24th. We cannot give particulars this week but something interest may be expected.

THE Ladies of the Methodist Church are making vigorous preparations for their annual Bazaar and Concert on the Queen's Birthday of which further particulars will be given later.

As the season is now opened for the sale of Bacon. Benson of the Belfast house is to the fore with a few cases; remember he will not be undersold by any one in the trade and if there is a cut to be given they are the boys that will give it to you, they are dacent little chaps.

To the farmers and the public generally—Consult your interests and purchase your Buggies, Democrats &c., from W. Mason's Carriage Works where you can get a first class article with a written guarantee, as cheap as you can buy factory make rigs from Agents. Be loyal and support home industry.

CARD OF THANKS.—J. H. Carson, Implement Agent, returns thanks in this paper for past favors and may be found in his new premises opposite McNally's Carriage Works with a full line of Farm Iplements, and Machinery. Mr. Carson is pushing his business this season with energy, and will doubtless secure an increasing patronage.

MR. ARCH. MCINTYRE of Euphrasia while on his way to Holland Centre one evening last week was unable to cross Allen's "sink hole" navigation being opened and he without a boat; he turned back and secured lodging for the night with Mr. John McNally a neighbour, and took another road in the morning, some three miles out of his way. If he had been a subscriber of the Standard he would have known about the HORRIBLE PIT.

Davis is to the front, with a new brand of oat meal, the steel cut, try it once and you will use no other, also a fine brand of Corn Meal just to hand, in fact anything in the Provision line may be procured at Davis' at prices which cannot be beaten, and if the trade mean to cut prices, he aint like a fellow that can't stay with them.

DR. JUG'S Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

WEDDING BLISS.—Married on April 6th, in Christ Church, Brampton, by Rev. C. C. Johnson, Mr. Joseph T. Joyce, late of Markdale, to Miss Cecilia, youngest daughter of James Nelson, Esq., all of Brampton. The bride who was given away by her father, was attired in a very neat and pretty traveling suit. After partaking of dinner, the happy pair left for the east on their wedding tour. They will spend a few days among their friends in Brampton before going to Michigan, where they intend making their home. The presents were numerous and costly.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING.—During the storm last Monday afternoon the lightning struck and burned the barn of Mr. Ledingham, townline of Holland and Glenelg. Two of Mr. Ledingham's sons were in the underground stables at the time, the lightning fluid passed down the wall within a few feet of where they were standing. They were considerably stunned. Several head of horses and cattle were in the stable at the time, but were all rescued, except three spring calves. There was a large quantity of hay and grain consumed. The barn was a double one, and was the most complete stock-barn in that section of the country and served as a land-mark for many miles around, being situated on an eminence which overlooked an extensive district of the surrounding neighborhood. The building was insured but what amount we have not learned.

TAMARAC.—It is an ordinary mixture. In fact its properties are entirely different from any preparation used for Coughs, Colds, Throat and Lung Troubles.

RUNAWAY.—On Wednesday morning a son of Colman Day of Glenelg drove into town with a pair of young horses and democrat wagon; his mother was with him in the rig and when he drove up to Hill's store the pole dropped causing the colts to run and kick; the pole ran into the ground breaking it off. The old lady was pitched out but not seriously hurt, The young man managed the team in a remarkable clever manner bringing them to a stand-still before going far and with no damage or injury more than that mentioned above.

A copy of the Canadian Horticulturist for May, and the Report of the Fruit Growers' Association for 1886, has just come to hand. This is the only monthly magazine on the continent devoted wholly to the interest of Canadian Fruit Growers. It is edited by a practical fruit grower, and has no connection or interest in any nursery. Our Canadian farmers will find in it wholly unbiased opinions regarding the merits of new and old fruits, instructions in fruit culture, and the best modes of marketing the same, hints on floriculture, lawn decoration, etc. Every number has a beautiful colored plate as a frontispiece, and numerous illustrations. The number for May contains a list of insecticides and fungicides which is almost useful at this season of the year. The subscription price is $1 per annum. which includes membership of the association a copy of its annual report, and a share in the distribution of plants, in addition to the magazine, and may begin any month. To introduce the magazine, and increase its usefulness, the editor offers to send it for eight months from May, to new subscribers, for 50c. Address L. Woolverton, Sec. Fruit Growers Association of Ontario, Grimsby, Ont.

Base Ball.

A very enthusiatic meeting of the lovers of base ball met at the Markdale House last Friday evening to organize for the season.

The following officers were duly elected:—

J. E. Marsh.....Honorary Pres.
F. Porter.....President
R. O. Whitby.....Vice "
R. L. Stephen.....Sec. Treas.
R. L. Stephen.....Captain
J. Wallace.....Vice "
D. R. Anderson, P. Kelley, J. Wallace } Field Committee.

Be it known to the public of Markdale that we have assumed the name of the Markdale Star Base Ball Club.

That we are prepared to accept and tender challenges.

NOTE.—Any person or persons desirous of becoming a member and of helping the boys can do so by leaving a 25 cent bit with the sec., treas. In doing so he will have the privilage of a catch behind the bat, liable any moment to be paid in full in the shape of a beautiful mahogany colored left eye or a knock out finger. Come and try it.

A reply to a letter of enquiry re Stallion Pedigree's from a horse man.

Toronto April 13th 1887.

DEAR SIR.—Yours of 8th to hand. Pedigree of horse published on season bills, if they do not give numbers and the name of the Stud book they are recorded in, also if they do not give the name and recorded number of dam, should be looked at with great caution as many of them are very incorrect and missleading running back through sire only as many of them do without giving dam, all horses travelling should be recorded and have certificate and number.

Signed

H. WADE,

Sec. Agricultural and Arts Association.

Ninety Years Old.

The Emperor William of Germany has completed the ninetieth year of his age. The occasion was celebrated with unusual rejoicing and festivity throughout his dominions. In Berlin the displays of military pageantry and of court gaieties were brilliant and various, while throughout Germany the people gave themselves up to a joyous holiday. The event is certainly a very rare one, if, indeed, it is not unexampled in the history of modern royalty. It is not easy to recall any sovereign of a large nation in modern times who has reached so patriarchal an age. There have been, it is true, many longer reigns than that of the Emperor William. At least three living European potentates have sat upon the throne longer than the Victoria of England has reigned nearly fifty years. Francis Joseph of Austria has reigned thirty-nine, and William of Holland has worn the crown thirty-eight years. But the German Emperor has only been king of Prussia twenty-six years, and has been at the head of the Empire sixteen years. The monarchs who have had the two longest reigns in modern times, Louis XIV. of France and George III. of England, both died younger, however, than the German William.

Louis reigned no less than seventy-two years (1643—1715), and yet died at seventy-seven. George reigned sixty years (1760—1820), and died at the age of eighty-two. The present Emperor of Brazil, who is now just closing the fifty-sixth year of his reign, is in the sixty-second year of his age.

It is wonderful to think that in the yet sturdy old ruler of Germany a monarch is still reigning who became an officer of the Prussian army eighty years ago; who took part in, and still well remembers, the battle of Waterloo (1815), and who has seen all the great events of this eventful nineteenth century, now so near its close, pass in dramatic succession before his eyes.

The Emperor William has always shown a high, haughty, despotic nature. He is perhaps the only remaining sovereign in Europe—except his grand-nephew, the Russian Czar—who devoutly believes that he has a divine right to rule, and who clings to the old despotic ideas of kingship which prevailed in the Middle Ages.

Yet he has never been a capricious tyrant. He has shown an ardent love of his people and his country; has been ambitious to make Germany great, strong, and prosperous; and has sincerely tried to be a kindly as well as strict ruler over his subjects.

Like almost all of his stalwart race, William has always had a fondness for military affairs. The greater part of his life, indeed, was spent in active service in the Prussian army. He had a taste of war very early in life, in the Napoleonic campaigns; and has always been regarded since as one of the best-trained soldiers in Europe.

At the age of ninety, the wonderful physical powers which have suffered the wear and tear of an unusual busy and laborious life seem almost undiminished.

The veteran Emperor is still seen daily by his people, standing erect and soldierly at the window of his palace; and we often hear of his appearing, mounted on his white horse, at the great military reviews which are frequently held in the neighborhood of his capital.

More than one attempt has been made, by wild fanatics, on the Emperor's life. Yet there is no doubt that his intelligent and thoughtful subjects regard him, not only with the deepest reverence, but with the fondest affection.

Alike in his person and in his character, he presents a noble type of royalty, a representative of the German nation of which it may well be proud; and when, as must, ere very long, happen, he passes away, he will be deeply mourned and regretted throughout the Fatherland.

VICTORIA AT THE TABLE.

How the Queen Manages to Get Through Her Meals.

The strict ceremonial of the dinners of Queen Victoria has not changed since her assumption of the throne. A quarter of an hour before the time fixed for the repast—generally 8 o'clock—all the party invited to dine with the Queen meet in the grand salon and form themselves into a half-circle about the door where she is expected to enter.

The Queen, on entering, makes a beautiful courtesy (for which she is renowned), then bows to the gentlemen and gives her hand to the ladies, who courtesy deeply. She then goes in first to the table, accompanied generally by one of her sons. If any imperial or royal person is present he sits at her right hand. But, even in the case of General Grant, she placed the Princess Beatrice between them. The Queen never removes her gloves during dinner, except at state banquets. This is a singular piece of etiquette, and one would think it would be exactly the reverse. Her gloves are new, of white kid, embroidered with black, never worn but once, and become, after using, the perquisites of the ladies-in-waiting. The Queen has a small and beautiful hand.

As soon as she has finished a certain "plat," everyone else stops eating of it, as when she finishes eating her fish, everyone else stops eating fish, etc.

After she has spoken to her guests on either side, conversation may become general, but in a subdued tone, always deferring to the sovereign.

Sir Arthur Helps, who was her private secretary, used to tell an amusing anecdote of being snubbed by her for telling a rather funny story down the table, among the ladies-in-waiting, to relieve the monotony of a dreary dinner, when the Queen remarked: "What is it? We are not amused" She has however, a love of fun, and sometimes laughs heartily.

"So you wouldn't like to be a minister, Bobby, when you grow up?" remarked Mr. Whitechoker at the table. "No, indeed," responded Bobby emphatically. "And why not?" insisted Mr. Whitechoker, amused at the lad's earnestness. "Because ma says she always feels sorry for country ministers, an' that's the reason she has you here to dinner so often."

Faithful Pastor—A minister's life is a very hard one. Parishioner—Why, there are only two sermons a week to write, and —— "Oh! I don't mind sermon-writing; that's easy enough. But my duties require frequent visits to the homes of every member of the congregation, and just think of the strain on my conscience." "Conscience?" "Yes. I am expected to admire all the new babies."

M. Katkoff.

Recent dispatches concerning Russian affairs state that, while the Czar's head is with M. de Giers, his heart is with M. Katkoff. This is probably as accurate and concise a statement of the situation in Russia as it is possible to obtain. M. de Giers is commonly regarded as the apostle of peace, while M. Katkoff, the rampant Panslavist and exponent of the autocratic idea in its most extreme form, is looked upon as the apostle of war. The latter is the personal friend and private counsellor of the Czar, who, on the other hand, detests M. de Giers and his methods. Nevertheless the position of Russia is such that the great Autocrat is compelled to close his ears to the advice of his favourite and to allow himself to be guided by the far-seeing and moderate De Giers.

The position which M. Katkoff occupies in Russia is a unique one. The editor of the leading paper of the country, the Moscow Gazette, he occupies no official position, and yet his influence at St. Petersburg has for years been almost supreme. He has, in fact, been described as the real autocrat of the empire. Previous to the insurrection in Poland he was a Liberal, and was believed to be strongly tainted with Socialism. The spread of Nihilism, however, caused him to change his tactics, and he became the strongest exponent of the idea that the only power capable of erecting a barrier against the assults of the revolutionists was that of the Czar. From that time forward the Gazette, of which he became proprietor in 1863, has been the earnest advocate of absolutism and Panslavism. For years M. Katkoff has been admitted to the Imperial Council, and his position as the chosen confidant of the Czar's innermost thoughts was soon established. So powerful did he become that he was the principal instrument in the overthrow of M. Valonieff, who had dared to suspend the publication of the Gazette. He is the vigorous enemy in Russia of Bismarck and his policy, and his views have been very largely accepted by the people. His famous article against the German Chancellor, published in August last, met with a responsive echo throughout the country, and he has since been working assiduously to undermine the favour which Berlin enjoys at St. Petersburg. It is for this reason that the Czar has been compelled to side with M. De Giers against his own personal inclinations. He sees clearly enough that Russia cannot afford, at present at least, to quarrel with Germany, and he has been obliged, therefore, to administer something like a snub to M. Katkoff. Russia is not ready for war, and dare not displace M. De Giers to make room for Ignatieff, M. Katkoff must therefore bide his time and, await a more favourable opportunity of raising once more the cry of "On to Constantinople."

It is a singular fact that, though M. Katkoff has shown himself the most determined enemy of Nihilism, and has done much to thwart its schemes, no one has yet been found to carry out against him the sentence which Nihilism imposed upon its own enemies. The secret of this, it is said, is his great popularity, which has practically made his life sacred. He is a man of wonderful powers—a scholar as well as a publicist and a politician. He personally superintends the studies at the Nicholas College to which institution he devotes a large portion of the many hours which he daily gives to hard work. No man in Europe, or elsewhere, occupies a position similar to his, and it seems a pity that his great influence should be exercised in behalf of a system opposed to the spirit of modern civilization.

The Luck of the Prince of Wales.

The News Wieuer Tagblatt informs us that the Prince of Wales is regarded on the Continent as having a singularly lucky hand at games of chance. "The day before the earthquake he appeared in Monaco, and tried his luck in jest at trente et quarante. His success was so satisfactory that the Prince resolved to venture at roulette the sum which he had won at the other game. Here again luck followed him like a dutiful servant, and in a very short space of time he left the salon with a gain of £600 sterling." The incident reminds the Vienna journal of the equally fortunate play of the Prince a year ago, when he was the guest of Count Tafilo Fastetics at Buda-Pesth. "In one single night the future ruler of England won nearly a quarter of a million gulden in a well-known aristocratic club. The Prince told his fellow-players that he would give them an opportunity for revenge as soon as he returned from his hunting tour. Fourteen days later he appeared at the club, according to his promise. The 'revenge,' however, cost his opponents 8,000 florins!" It appears from the same journal that the heir to the Austro-Hungarian throne, the Crown Prince Rudolph, is not quite so prodigal and reckless in gaming as the Hungarian nobles. He will only play for very small stakes, like the aged German Emperor, who thinks that a sum of 50 pfennig is as much as a king or prince should venture at a time.

Ladies of Lima.

The ladies of Lima are all eyes. They have the reputation of being, as a class, the most beautiful in the world, and meeting them on the way to mass in the morning or shopping later in the day one can see how they obtained it; but knowing them in their homes the opinion changes, and you conclude, after calm reflection, that they are not so pretty as the women of Toronto. It is the manta which they wear in such a coquettish way that gives them their reputation for beauty, for it conceals every feature except their bewitching eyes and lovely olive complexion. No matter how ugly her mouth or her nose is; no matter how high her cheekbones or large her ears; no matter whether she is as scrawny as a scarecrow or as bald as a bat, a manta will make any woman with pretty eyes look handsome, and, like charity, it covers a multitude of sins. This garment, which is peculiar to Peru, and is worn by ladies of all ages and social positions, from the President's wife to the laundress who comes after your linen, is a sort of foster-sister to the mantilla of Spain. It is usually of crepe from China, and costs anywhere from $10 to $500, according to its quality.

The Sabath-school teacher had spent considerable time in drilling into her pupils the truth that "pride cometh before a fall." Near the close of the lesson, wishing to test the result of her efforts, she inquired: "Now, children, can you tell me what comes before a fall?" "Yes, ma'am; summer," was the reply from the seat farthest away.

Wolves Caught in Traps.

If perchance a wolf should be caught in a trap, all its courage deserts it and it allows itself to be killed without any resistance. The pitfall is the trap most in favor, as it does not injure the skin. In depth the pit is about eight feet, and it is always made with the bottom much wider than the top, so as to prevent the wolves from scrambling out—just the shape which, on a smaller scale is so useful in trapping the field-mice on the Continent. It is narrated that on one occasion an old woman had the misfortune to fall into one of these traps. She was not hurt and sat on the ground waiting until the owner of the trap should come to look for his captive. Presently large wolf came tumbling into the pit, she and gave a herself up for lost. The wolf, however, evidently considered her as part of the trap, and was quite as afraid of her as she was afraid of him. So there the fellow-prisoners remained until the farmer came up, shot the wolf, and released the woman from her captivity. In his well-known works, Audubon mentions that at the beginning of his hunting career he happened to visit a farmer who had been greatly plagued with wolves, and had dug a number of pitfalls about his premises. Into one of these pits three fine wolves had fallen. To Audubon's astonishment, the man descended into the pit, armed only with his knife, pulled out the hind legs of the animals, severed the tendons so that they could not escape, and hauled them to level ground, where he could kill them without damaging the skins. A similar example of the abject terror of a trapped wolf is mentioned by Mr. Lloyd. During a severe Winter a peasant was driving to his home, not far from St. Petersburg. Eleven wolves chased him to his very gate, through which the horse dashed, followed by nine of the wolves. The gate swung back on its own accord, when the wolves, so ferocious only a minute beforehand, tried to hide themselves in holes and corners, and allowed themselves to be killed without offering and resistance. Sometimes, when hard pressed, the wolf will feign death.

SCIENTIFIC AND USEFUL.

The principal acid of the tomato is malic; but there is also a trace of oxalic acid.

The most thorough way to secure a dry cellar is to plaster the exterior of the cellar walls with the best Portland cement.

Cloth can be cemented to polish iron shafts by first giving them a coat of best white-lead paint; on this being dried hard, coat with best Russian glue dissolved in water containing a little vinegar or acetic acid.

Cocaine has a rival in an alkaloid obtained in Australia from the juice of Euphorbia Drummondii, which Dr. John Reid, its discoverer, calls drumine. The new local anæsthetic acts almost entirely by paralysing, and does not excite.

Silver dissolved in nitric acid may be again reduced to a metallic state by adding copper after removing excess of acid by evaporation. Gold can be dissolved in warm nitro-muriatic acid, and it may be recovered or reduced to a metallic state by precipitating with copperas and then melting the precipitate in a crucible.

An anti-insect fabric has been patented at New York which is intended to be used for the lining of trunks, &c., as a protection against the ravages of moths and other insects. The fabric is prepared by soaking it in a solution of tobacco and cascarilla bark macerated in benzine. It is then dried, and again steeped in tobacco, cascarilla bark, and hot water.

Koumiss is prepared by dissolving four ounces of white sugar in one gallon of skimmed milk, and placed in bottles of the capacity of one quart; add two ounces of baker's yeast or a cake of compressed yeast to each bottle. Cork and tie securely, set in a warm place until fermentation is well under way, and lay the bottles on their sides in a cool cellar. In three days fermentation will have progressed sufficiently to permit the koumiss to be in good condition.

It.

The pronoun I', is a comical word—
It is sometimes amusing, it is often absurd;
It is large, It is small, It is round, It is square,
It rains and It snows—It is foul, It is fair;
It is black, It is white, It is long, It is short,
It is every thing, almost, and then It is nought;
It is true, It's a lie; It isn't, It is.
Indeed, the word It, is a humbug.

Gallic Gall.

"Well, that just like the cheek of these foreign artists," observed Mrs. Snaggs. "What is?" asked her husband. "Why, that man Munkacsy is coming back here next Summer to paint Niagara Falls, and I believe he'll just spoil them, so I do."

Going Her One Better.

First little cherub—My aunt has got false hair.

Second little cherub—So has mine.

"But mine has got false teeth."

"I don't care, my aunt has false teeth, too, and yesterday I heard ma say that she had a false tongue."

A Man of Undoubted Family.

Aunt Crœsus—"I cannot tell you, Clara, how shocked I am to come home and find you married without consulting me. And to a man with all these children, after all that I've told you about my fortune being yours whenever you should marry to my liking!"

Clara—"Why, Aunty, you know I gave up young Smith on your objection that he hadn't family, and I supposed this would just suit you."

So Much For Dreams.

"Speaking of omens," he said, "not long ago I read of a cashier who dreamed that he was murdered while protecting the funds of the bank and that seven angels carried him off to heaven. The very next night he was—"

"Murdered?" she interrupted, with a shiver.

"No; he was on his way to Canada."

What Time it Was.

(Scene—Road from Busby to Eaglesham. Two countrymen who have left Busby behind are staggering homewards).

First Countryman—"Whit o'clock is't, Bob?"

Second do. (after spending some time examining his watch in the moonlight)—"It's either ten minutes past echt or twenty minutes tae twa. Ye can just please yersel!"

FREE FLOWERING PLANTS.

13 for $1.00 | 6 " 50 | 3 " 25

All First Quality, and with every Dollar order, an Amaryllis, a Chrysanthemum or Monthly Rose, FREE.

The Best Strawberry Plants, 25c a Dozen.

I guarantee Plants to please, and to arrive in good order at any post office in the Dominion. Large plants by freight or express.

Send postal for descriptive list.

J. P. COCKBURN, FLORIST,
(Stamps taken). Grapehurst, Ont.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly

For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. John's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A Allan Portland Boston Montreal

ASSESSMENT SYSTEM.

The Mutual Reserve Fund
LIFE ASSOCIATION

The largest and most prosperous open Assessment Association in the world—desires active representatives in every section of Canada; liberal inducements. It has full Government Deposit, and under the supervision of Insurance Department at Ottawa.
Correspondence solicited. Address,

J. D. WELLS,
General Manager,
65 King Street East, Toronto.

THE TORONTO SILVER PLATE CO.
Manufacturers of the highest grade of
SILVER PLATED WARES.
Steel Knives, Spoons, Forks, Etc.,
A SPECIALTY.
ALL GOODS GUARANTEED.
TORONTO CANADA.

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY
Peterboro', Ont.

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES
Send 3c. Stamp for Catalogue.

Bicycles!
Send at once for list of Second-Hand Machines,
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st April
A. T. LANE MONTREAL

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

SNOW DRIFT BAKING POWDER
THERE IS NO BETTER!
The Snow Drift Baking Powder Co., Hamilton.

AGENTS WANTED
Apply to D. W. BEADLE, Hussey, St. Catharines, Ont.

PILES
Blind, Bleeding, and Itching, effectually cured by the Medical Pile Remedy. Thousands of sufferers can testify to the permanent relief from these internal and external remedies. $1.00 per package. Ask your druggist for it, or will be sent by Mail, postage paid. HUGH MILLER & CO.,
167 King St. East, Toronto.

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.
MANUFACTURE ONLY
FINEST
Silver Plated Ware
Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish
HAMILTON, ONT.

June 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed the opinion that she could not live. I commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking three bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household affairs.
J. M. ROBBINS, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto

CONSUMPTION
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease to any sufferer. Give express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

BABY'S BIRTHDAY

A Beautiful Imported Birthday Card sent to any baby whose mother will send us the names of two or more other babies, and their parents' addresses. Also a handsome Diamond Dye Sample Card to the mother with much valuable information.
Wells, Richardson & Co., Montreal.

The National Electro Stereotyping Co.
23 ADELAIDE ST. E., TORONTO.
All classes of fine work. Mfrs. of Printers' Leads, Slugs and Metal Furniture. Send for prices.

DUCHESS DRESSING
A PERMANENT BLACK POLISH
ESPECIALLY ADAPTED FOR LADIES & CHILDREN'S FINE SHOES.

L. D. SAWYER & CO., Hamilton, Ont.
MANUFACTURERS OF
"L. D. S." ENGINES,
WOOD, COAL AND STRAW BURNERS,
PLAIN AND TRACTION,
"Grain Saver" and "Peerless"
SEPARATORS.

"Pitts" Horse Powers, for 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 Horses.
Tread Powers, for 1, 2 and 3
Eclipse Separators, for Tread & Small Powers.
Send for Illustrated Catalogue.

Farmers and Threshers!
USE ON YOUR MACHINERY ONLY THE WELL-KNOWN

Peerless Oil
NINE GOLD MEDALS have been awarded it during the last four years. Try also PEERLESS AXLE GREASE, for your Wagons and Horse Powers.
Manufactured at QUEEN CITY OIL WORKS, by
SAMUEL ROGERS & CO. TORONTO.

THRESHERS, SAW-MILLERS, OWNERS OF LIGHT POWER,
KEEP YOUR POWER AT WORK BY PURCHASING
Shingle Machine, Chopper or Veneer Machine.
SMALL INVESTMENT.
EASILY MANAGED.
Good profits, quick returns.

BRANCH WORKS: ST. PAUL, MINN., U. S. A.
This Cut represents our Patent Shingle Machine and Jointer.
Special Catalogues for each department. When writing state wants. New Saw-Mill Catalogue just finished.
WATEROUS ENGINE WORKS CO., BRANTFORD, ONT.

BY ORDER OF THE LEAGUE

BY FRED. M. WHITE.

IV.

Five years have passed away, bringing strange changes and startling revolutions—years, to some, fraught with misery and regret; years, to others, which have been pregnant with fame and honour; but to the suffering, patient world, only another step nearer to eternity. Five years later, and night in the small German town where honour is wrecked and lives are lost on the hazard of a die. The Kursaal at Homburg sparkling with the glitter of ten thousand lights. Men of all nations were gathered there, drawn together by the strongest words which bind human destiny—the power of gold. No type of face was wanting; no passion, no emotion that the human visage was capable of, but had its being there: rage, despair, misery, exultation — the whole account of man's passions and triumphs. Women were there too. The bluest-blood recorded in the Almanach de Gotha did not disdain to rub elbows with the last fancy from the Comedie Francaise; my lord, cold, indifferent, and smiling, sat side by side with the reckless plunger who would have bartered his honour, had that commodity remained to him, for the gold to p ace upon the colour. On the long green tables, the glittering coins fell with a subdued chink sweeter than the finest music to the hungry ears; a republic the most perfect in the universe, where rich and poor alike are welcomed, with one great destiny—to lose or to gain. There were no wild lamentations there; such vulgar exhibitions were out of place, though feeling cannot be disguised under the deepest mask, for a tremor of the eyelid, a flash of the eye, a convulsive movement of the fingers, betray poor human nature. As the game proceeded with the monotonous cry of the croupier, it was awful to watch the intentness of the faces, how they deepened in interest as the game was made, bending forward till at length "Rouge perd et couleur" came from the level voice again.

The croupiers raked in the glittering stacks of gold, silently, swiftly, but with as much emotion as a child would gather cowslips, and threw the winning on each stake as calmly, knowing full well that in the flight of time it must return. The piles were raked up, and then arose a murmur, a confusion of tongues, reminding the spectator of what the bewilderment at Babel must have been, a clamor which died away to silence at the enthralling "Faites votre jeu."

How the hands clawed at the sparkling treasure; eager, trembling avarice in every finger-tip; from the long, lean, yellow claw of the old withered gamester, to the plump little hand of the bride, who is trying her fortune with silver, fearful lest, driven by despair, some less fortunate player should lay felonious fingers upon the piled-up treasure.

Standing behind the all-absorbed group was a young man with pale, almost ghostly features, and a heavy dark moustache. From his attitude and smile, it was hard to say now fortune had served him, for his face was void of any emotion. He held one piece of gold in his hand, placed it on a colour, waited, and lost. A trifling movement of his lips, pressed tightly together under the dark moustache—that was all. Then for a moment he hesitated, pondered, and suddenly, as if to settle the matter quickly, he detached a coin from his watch-chain and leaned forward again. Under him, seated at the table, was a woman winning steadily. A pile of gold was before her; she was evidently in the luckiest vein. The man, with all a gambler's superstition, placed the coin in her hand. "Stake for me," he whispered; "you have the luck."

Mechanically, she took the proffered coin, and turned it in her hand; then suddenly a wave of crimson, succeeded by a deathly whiteness, came across her face. She held the coin, then put it carefully aside, and staked another in its place. Then, apparently forgetting her emotion in the all-absorbing interest of the game, she looked at the table. "Rouge gagne, et couleur perd," came the chant of the croupier. The stakes were raked in, and the money lost. Under his breath, the man uttered a fervent imprecation, slightly shrugged his shoulders, and turned to watch the game again. From that moment the woman lost; her pile dwindled away to one coin beyond the piece of metal tendered her to stake, but still she played on, the man behind watching her play intently. A little varying luck, at one moment a handful of napoleons, at another, reduced to one, the game proceeded. At length the last but one was gone, save the piece tendered to her by the man behind the chair; that she never parted with. As she sat there, words came to her ears vaguely—the voice of the man behind her, and every time he spoke she shivered, as if a cold breath were passing through her heart. A temporary run of luck came to her aid, and so she sat, listening and playing.

The new-comer was another man, evidently an Italian, fine, strong, with an open face and dark passionate eyes. He touched the first man upon the shoulder lightly, speaking in excellent English.

There were four actors there, playing, had their but known it, a ghastly tragedy. The two men were players; the listening woman was another; and across the table, behind the spectators, stood a girl. She had a dark southern face of great beauty—a face cleanly chiselled, and lighted by a pair of wondrous black eyes—eyes bent upon the two men and the woman, playing now with the keenest interest. She shrank back a little as the new-comer entered, and her breath came a little quicker; but there she stayed, watching and waiting for some opportunity. Her look boded ill for some one. Meanwhile, the unconscious actors fixed their attention on the game. The last arrival touched the other man upon the elbow again, a little roughly this time.

"You have been playing again, Hector?" he said.

"I have been playing my friend—yes. It is not in my nature to be in such a place without. What would you have me do, Luigi? I am dying of ennui from this inaction—kicking up my heels here waiting for orders."

"I should have thought you could have found something better to occupy your time," the man addressed as Luigi returned. "Our work is too stern, too holy, to be shared with such frivolity as this. Gold, gold, with no thoughts of anything but this maddening scramble!"

"My dear Luigi, pray control yourself. Are you not aware that this sort of thing has been done to death? Do not, as you love me, descend to the level of the descriptive journalist, who comes over here to coin his superlative condemnatory adjectives into money—to lose at this very interesting game. John Bull holds up his hands in horror as he reads the description in his Telegraph, and then he comes to try his luck himself. I, Hector le Gautier, have seen a bishop here."

"How fond you are of the sound of your own voice," Luigi Salvarini returned. "Come outside; I have something to say to you."

"Something connected with the League, I suppose," Le Gautier yawned. "If it was not yourself I was talking to, I should say, confusion to the League."

"How rash you are!" Salvarini returned in a low tone, accompanied by an admiring glance at his companion. "Consider what one word spoken lightly might mean to you. The attendants here, the croupier even, might be a Number in the League."

"Very likely," Le Gautier replied carelessly; "but it is not probable that, if I should whisper the magic words in his ear, he would give me credit for a few napoleons. I am in no mood for business to-night, Luigi; and if you are the good fellow I take you for, you will lend me"——

"One Brother must always aid another according to his means, says the decree. But, alas! I have nothing.—I came to you with the intention——"

"Oh, did you?" Le Gautier asked sardonically. "Then, in that case, I must look elsewhere; a few francs is all my available capital."

"Hector," the Italian exclaimed suddenly, in a hoarse whisper, "where is the——?" He did not finish his sentence, but pointed to the watchchain the other was idly twirling in his fingers.

Le Gautier smiled sarcastically. "It is gone," he said lightly—"gone to swell the bloated coffers of the bank. Fortune, alas! had no favor even for that mystic coin. Sacred as it should have been, I am its proud possessor no more."

"You are mad, utterly mad!" Salvarini exclaimed. "If it were but known—if it has fallen into the hands of the bank, or a croupier happens to have a Number, think of what it means to you! The Coin would be forwarded to the Central Council; the signs would be called in; yours missing"—

"And one of these admirable German daggers would make acquaintance with my estimable person, with no consolation but the fact of knowing what a handsome corpse I shall make. Bah! A man can only die once, and so long as they do not make me the posthumous hero of a horrible tragedy, I do not care. It is not so very serious, my Luigi."

"It is serious; you know it is," Luigi retorted. "No Brother of the League would have had the sublime audacity, the reckless courage"——

"L'audace, l'audace, toujours l'audace," Le Gautier returned. "I sigh for new temptations; the sight of the gaming-table is to me what the smell of battle afar off is to the war-horse. I came her intending to risk a louis; I have lost everything. There is nothing like courage at the tables; and as it had a spice of danger in it, I risked"——

"Your life! You do not seem to comprehend the danger."

"But, my dear friend, it is exactly that spice of danger that gives the thing its nameless charm. Come, you are hipped, out of sorts. You see the duties of the Order in every action; you see the uplifting of the avenging dagger in every shadow that trembles on the wall. Be a man!"

"I am all the more disturbed," Salvarini observed with moody, uneasy face, "that the orders have come. That is the principal reason I am here to look for you. We are translated to London."

"That is good news, at anyrate," Le Gautier exclaimed briskly. "I have been literally dying to get back there. By the bright eyes of Enid——What is that?"

Above the clamour of tongues and the rattle of the gold pieces, a low laugh was heard distinctly close to the speaker's elbow. He turned sharply round; but there was no one within a few feet of them. Apparantly, it had not disturbed the enthralled players, though the croupier swept his cold eye around to discover the author of this unseemly mirth.

"Strange!" Le Gautier observed. "I seem to have heard that laugh before, though I cannot remember where."

"And so have I," Salvarini whispered hoarsely—"only once, and I hope that I may never hear it again. It is horrible!"

Le Gautier looked at his companion, amazed to see the agitation pictured on his face. It was white and drawn, as if with some inward pain. Salvarini wiped his damp brow as he met the other's piercing gaze, and tried to still the trembling of his limbs.

"A passing fancy," he explained—"a fancy which called up a remembrance of my boyhood, the recollection of a vengeance as yet unpaid.—But I am idiling; let us get outside. The orders have come, as I tell you, for London. We are to meet the Head Centre at the old address."

"And how did the orders come?" Le Gautier asked.

"The old mysterious way," was the impatient reply; "secrecy and darkness; no trust in any one, however worthy he may have proved—the old suspicion, which drags us down, and holds our hands even in the act of striking. I found them on my table when I got in. You and I are to get to London, and there await orders. Our instructions bear the crossed dagger, indicating extreme secrecy and a mission of great danger."

In spite of his sang froid, Le Gautier could not repress a slight start; and a smile of covert sarcasm, pity almost, rose to his lips as he looked in his companion's eager, enthusiastic face; the same sort of pity the sharper feels for his unconscious victim when he has him within the toils. Not that the younger man noticed this; his eyes were full of some far-away project, something, noble, by their expression.

"The old story of the monkey and the chestnuts," Le Gautier observed with his most sinister smile; "the puppets run the risk, and the Head Centres get the glory. If we fall, it is in freedom's name. That is sufficient epitaph for us poor, silly, fluttering moths."

"But the glory of it," Salvarini cried—"think of that!"

"The glory, yes—the glory of a felon's grave! The glory lies in the uncertainty. What do we gain, you and I, by the removal of crowned heads? When the last tyrant fell at our leader's dictate, how much did we benefit by the blow? He was not a bad man; for a king, he was just."

"You are in a bitter mood, to-night, Hector," Salvarini answered. "What will you say when I tell you the appointment has come with your nomination as a Deputy, with a seat at the Council of the Crimson Nine?"

"My appointment at last? You are joking, Luigi. Surely they had need of better men than I. What of La Fontaine?"

"Dead," Salvarini responded grimly. "Treachery was suspected, and it was necessary to remove him.—But what I tell you is true; you are ordered to be present at the next Council at Warsaw, two months hence, when you will give up your badge as an Avenger, and take the premier order."

"And I have staked it to-night on the hazard of a die!" Le Gautier exclaimed, pallid even beyond his usual deathly whiteness. "Fool, fool that I was! How can I prevent it becoming known? I am undone!"

"[You do not know the worst," Salvarini replied. "Come closer, and let me whisper in your ears; even the walls carry such tidings. The Supreme Director is here!"

Le Gautier turned faint and sick as he looked furtively round the room, with its long mirrors and barbaric splendour.

"Suppose you lend me yours," he suggested. "You will not want it now. What a mad fool I have been! I wonder if there is any way of recovering it? for I must have it, come what will. With a penalty of"——

"Death!"

The word, abruptly, sternly uttered, was followed by the same low mocking laugh they had heard before. They looked around in alarm, and not the trace of any one could be seen. Standing in the recess of a window they looked out; but no sign of the mysterious warning, so strangely given.

"Let us get away from this." Le Gautier groaned. "I am stifled! Come outside into the open air. My nerves must be unstrung to-night."

They walked out through the high folding-doors, and disappeared in the darkness. As they left, the woman who had been playing rose from her seat and followed them. Apparently, she was too late, for they had vanished; and with a sigh, she abandoned her evident intention, turning into Kursaal gardens and throwing herself into a seat. Directly she quitted the saloon, the woman with the dark eyes followed, and tracked the other to the quiet retreat. For some time she stood behind the shadow of a tree, watching her. It was a brilliant moonlight night—clear, calm, and peaceful. Without there, the lighted windows of the gambling saloon could be seen; and ever and anon the murmur of the croupier, the scrape of the rakes, and the subdued clink of the gold might be heard. But the figure on the seat did not heed these things; she was looking at a coin in her hand, making out as she best could the devices that it bore, strange and puzzling to her.

It was merely a gold coin, in fine a moidore of Portugal; and upon the reverse side, the figure had been rubbed down, and an emblem engraved in its place. There was a figure of Liberty gazing at a rising sun, her foot upon a prostrate dead body, and underneath the words "I strike." Over the rising sun, in tiny letters, was the device, "In Freedom's name;" and at the top, two letters in a monogram. The seated figure noted these things, but, from the expression on her face, they represented nothing to her. Behind the shadow of the tree, the watcher crept closer and closer, trying in vain to get a glimpse of the golden coin. As the seated figure bent over it, tears began to gather in her eyes, overflowing at last, and the passion of sorrow seemed to rise, till her frame was shaken with sobs she did not strive to master. The woman looking on stepped out from her shelter and crossed the open grass to the other's side. Her face, on the contrary, was eager, almost hopeful, as she bent forward and touched the weeper on the shoulder. She looked up, surprise mastering her grief for a brief moment.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

DOMINION AND GENERAL NEWS.

Brantford now has a society for the suppression of vice.

Mr. William O'Brien has postponed his visit to Canada.

Two thousand chainmakers in Staffordshire have struck for higher wages.

London city bakers have raised the price of bread to 6 cents the two-pound loaf.

The Canadian Pacific railway has constructed a fish ladder at Morris, N. W. T.

June 22 is officially set apart as the day for observing the Royal Jubilee in Canada.

The Ghilzais have defeated the Ameer's troops and killed a hundred of them near Khelat.

Mr. W. E. Bennett, of Toronto, has been appointed to the position of Assistant Post-office Inspector.

The total of the Russian debt is £471,474,000, and the interest for the current year is over £25,000,000.

Seventy-five years ago this summer the first steamer, the General Smythe, appeared on the river St. John, N. S.

Startling rumours are current of the discovery of Anachists' plots to destroy the Opera house and numerous factories in Pesth

During the past year 5,518 persons were placed on trial in the Dominion for various offences, and of this number 3,797 were convicted.

William Duchesnay, an acrobat, intends walking on a tight rope over Montmorenci Falls during the time of the Queen's jubilee at Quebec.

A Bill providing a new system for encouraging the constructinn of railroads in Manitoba has been introduced in the Manitoba Legislature.

The total cost to Canada of her share in the late Colonial Exhibition was $120,857, of which sum $8,500 went in wages and $14,000 in freight.

It is reported that one of a litter of pigs, recently born at Long Lake Hotel, N. W. T., has a duck's pill instead of the ordinary nose of its kind.

Two men employed on the new building of the Ontario Lumber Company, at Midland, were seriously injured the other day by a falling scaffold.

A strange man was found dead in bed at Cooksville, on Monday morning last. An empty bottle of laudanum beside him revealed the fact that he had committed suicide.

Ven. Archdeacon Pinkham, bishop designate of Saskatchewan, has received from an anonymous friend $1500, to be divided between the dioceses of Saskatchewan and Algoma.

The cable, 38 miles in length, connecting the mainland with the Island of Anticosti, has parted. It well be impossible to repair it for some time owing to the quantity of ice in the straits.

The Minister of Agriculture has decided to establish experimental farms in the North-West, with a view of testing the capabilities of the soil in various districts for certain products.

In the Recorder's Court at Montreal eleven storekeepers, charged with exposing objectionable advertisements in their windows, were each sentenced to eight days' imprisonment, without the option of a fine.

W. A. Stinson, a large cattleman, and two of his employes have been murdered by Comanche Indians in Green county, Texas. A large portion of the tribe have taken the warpath, and a general outbreak is expected.

One day last week some young blackguards, belonging to Belleville, forced a reformed drunkard to drink liquor. His old appetite overpowered him, he was arrested, and died very soon after recovering from his debauch.

Furious cyclones and hailstorms swept over a large part of Western and South-Western Missouri, South-Eastern Kansas and Northern Arkansas on Thursday night of last week, causing great loss of life and destruction of property. Several towns were entirely demolished.

At the annual meeting of the Council of Queen's University, the proposal to rise a Jubilee endowment fund of $250,000 was sanctioned. It is understood that a citizen of Kingston will give $10,000 toward the fund, and an additional $50,000 will be raised in Kingston.

A pension system in connection with the North-West mounted police will likely be adopted this seasen. A detachment of 100 men of the force, under Supt. Steele, will likely be sent to patrol the Kootenay district in British Columbia during the coming summer.

Thirty miles of Father Labelle's colonization railway will be bullt this year. The projected line starts at St. Jerome on the line of the Canadian Pacific, and will run in a north-westerly direction as far as the Desert, where it will strike the Gatineau Valley Railway. The ultimate terminus will be near Lake Nipissing or at Temiscamingue.

Dr. W. Cox Allen, superintendent of customs and inspector for ranches for the North-West, states that ranching prospects for this year are exceptionally good, the over crowded state of the cattle districts in Montana, Dakota and other States necessarily causing the southern cattlemen to look to Alberta and other new fields. The mortality in these States has been unprecedentedly large while in the North-West Territories it has not exceeded in native cattle 5 per cent. and in imported not 10 per cent. The farmers have ploughed a larger area of land this spring than ever before, and their hopes of good crops are very sanguine.

The Kaiser's Fortune Twice Told.

It appears that the Emperor as had his fortune told twice. The first time was in 1863. He was strolling incognito in a wood near Baden, accompanied by his faithful Bismarck and other friends. Suddenly they came across an old gypsy, who begged to be allowed to tell their fortunes. Several of the party having tried their luck, his Majesty consented to do likewise. The gypsy took his hand, and, after minute study, said, "I see a great crown, bloodshed, war, laurels and a life of 96 years." The second time was in 1884. The Emperor had forgotten all about the gypsy's prophecy, when a niece of Count Czechenyi, the Austrian ambassador, arrived in Berlin and created a great sensation not only by her beauty but also by her reputed skill in palmistry. She was present at court and his Majesty in a playful spirit took advantage of the occasion to consult her. She had no sooner scrutinized his hand than she exclaimed, "I see a life of 96 years."

Small Boy—"I picked up a dollar in the road to-day, pa." Fond Father—"And you restored it to the owner, of course!" Small Boy—"Yes, sir." Father—"That's a good, honest boy." Boy—(conscience-stricken)—"Well, pa, you see, I couldn't very well help it. The man had me by the ear."

A Trial by Jury.

That great American jury, the people, have rendered a unanimous verdict in favour of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, the standard remedy for bowel and stomache disorders, biliousness, sick headache, dizziness, constipation and sluggish liver.

Look on the bright side of things.

Walking advertisements for Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy are the thousands it has cured.

The Nashville Union gives each subscriber an accidental insurance policy.

> Come to the bridal chamber, Death!
> Come to the mother, when she feels
> For the first time, her first-born's breath,
> And thou art terrible!

The untimely death which annually carries off thousands of human beings in the prime of youth, is indeed terrible. The first approach of consumption is insidious, and the sufferer himself is the most unconscious of its approach. One of the most alarming symptoms of this dread disease is, in fact, the ineradicable hope, which lurks in the heart of the victim, preventing him from taking timely steps to arrest the malady. That it can be arrested in its earlier stages is beyond question, as there are hundreds of well-authenticated cases where Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has effected a complete cure.

If you are not wiser and better at the end of a day, that day is lost.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

"Orlando, I didn't see you with Miss Brown at the concert last night." "No, Percy; I'm not calling on her any more. I can't until she retracts what she said last week." "Ah! what did she say?" "Well, she said I needn't call any more."

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in non-secret on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps, UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

Lew Wallace says he has never seen a Turkish drunken man.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generally aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 306 King Street West Toronto Canada.

In all, 1,590,000 barrels of salt are on hand in Michigan.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and read M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

Nothing is more difficult than to return thanks neatly.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

Clairvoyants are "dealers in futures."

Heart Disease.

The symptoms of which are "Faint spells, purple lips, numbness, palpitation, skip beats, hot flashes, rush of blood to the head, dull pain in the heart with beats, strong, rapid and irregular. The second heart beat quicker than the first, pain about the breast bone, &c." Can be cured "in many of the, first stages." Send 6c. in stamps for pamphlet and full particulars. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto Canada.

"He that loves noise must buy a pig,' says a Spanish proverb. In most cases, however, a baby will answer just as well.

A P 331

STAMMERING—And all Impediments of Speech, removed for life. Cure guaranteed. Stammering Specialist. 26 Clarence St., Toronto.

AGENTS AND CANVASSERS wanted, Male or Female, whole or spare time, on salary or commission. Industrial Union of B.N.A., 45 Arcade, Toronto.

A NEW EMERY MOWER SHARPENER—Will sharpen the knife without taking it out. Every farmer will buy it. AGENTS WANTED CLEMENT & CO., TORONTO.

TORONTO CUTTING SCHOOL.—Gentlemen desirous of acquiring a thorough knowledge of garment cutting should apply at once to S. CORRIGAN; 122 Yonge St., Toronto. Terms on application.

PATENTS PROCURED in Canada, the U S. and all foreign countries. Engineers, Patent Attorneys, and experts in Patent Causes. Established 1867. Donald C. Ridout & Co., Toronto.

GUELPH Business College, Guelph, Ont.

Twelve States and Provinces already represented on the roll of this Institution. To thorough, practical instruction, and the efficiency and success of its graduates, this College owes its popularity. Circulars, giving terms, etc, mailed free. Address M. MacCORMICK, Principal.

BEAVER LINE OF STEAMSHIPS,

Sailing weekly between Montreal and Liverpool. RATES OF PASSAGE:—Saloon, Montreal to Liverpool, $40, $50, and $60; Return Tickets, $80, $90, and $100—according to steamer and accommodation. Intermediate and Steerage at lowest rates. For further particulars and to secure Berths, apply to H. E. MURRAY, General Manager, 1 Custom House Square, Montreal, or to the Local Agents in the different Towns and Cities.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR "PLATFORM ECHOES," or Living Truths for Head and Heart, by John B. Gough; his last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos; bright, pure, and good, full of laughter and tears. It sells at sight to all. To it is added the life and death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. Lyman Abbott. This is the best and fastest selling book of the day. Terms liberal. Write us for full information, circulars, etc. Address, WILLIAM BRIGGS, 78 and 80 King Street East, Toronto.

TEACHERS and Students, Attention!

Special classes during summer holidays, in Shorthand, Typewriting, Book-keeping, Penmanship, etc. Write for full particulars. Canadian Business University and Shorthand Institute, Public Library Building, Toronto.

THOS. BENGOUGH, President.
CHARLES H. BROOKS, Manager.

BOOK AGENTS WANTED FOR "PLATFORM ECHOES," or Living Truths for Head and Heart, by John B. Gough; his last and crowning life work, brim full of thrilling interest, humor and pathos; bright, pure, and good, full of laughter and tears. It sells at sight to all. To it is added the life and death of Mr. Gough, by Rev. Lyman Abbott. This is the best and fastest selling book of the day. Terms liberal. Write us for full information, circulars, etc. Address, WILLIAM BRIGGS, 78 and 80 King Street East, Toronto.

SPOONER'S COPPERINE 'Babbitt'—Non-fibrous Anti-friction Box-metal for journal bearings in machinery—Guaranteed copper mixed. Supplies every requirement. Ask your hardware dealer for it. ALONZO. W. SPOONER, Patentee and Manufacturer, Port Hope.

CARPET SWEEPERS Mangles, 3 kinds, Washing Machines 2 kinds; Clothes Wringers, 10 kinds. Churns, Meat Choppers, Trucks, and other sundries. HAMILTON INDUSTRIAL WORKS CO., Hamilton, Canada. Send for article wanted, or Illustrated Catalogue.

Awnings! Decorated Window Shades, &c. Wholesale and Retail, at the CELEBRATED GOLD MEDAL TENT MANUFACTORY, 70 King St. West, Toronto. NATIONAL MANUFACTUR'G CO.

H. Williams, FELT AND SLATE Roofer.

Manufacturer and dealer in

Tarred Felt, Roofing Pitch, Building Papers, Carpet and Deafening Felt, READY ROOFING, Etc. 4 Adelaide St. E., TORONTO.

Dairy Salt,

FOR BUTTER, ETC.

NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices.

JAMES PARK & SON,
Wholesale Produce Merchants, Toronto.

Water PURE LIVING STREAM.

AUGERS, bore 20 feet per hour. Also Rock Drills—Hand, Horse, or Steam Power. Send for Catalogue.

Laidlaw Manufacturing Co.,
HAMILTON, ONT.

Wall Paper

MANUFACTURERS.

M. STAUNTON & CO.,
Samples on application. TORONTO ONT.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, MAY. 5. 1887.

BUILDING PAPER.

Although brick houses are now considered the right thing, and almost as cheap as wooden ones when well finished, yet, numerous frame or wooden dwellings as well as other buildings are being erected from year to year, and since building paper (both tarred and dry) is available and cheap, it is a decided economy to use it and that without stint.

The tar paper serves a double purpose, being a nonconductor of heat or cold it is invaluable in this changeable climate, and then the tar is a preventative of vermin and adds to the healthfulness of the house. Those who contemplate building should consult some one who has experience in the matter.

There is a number of houses in this village lined with building paper and they are among the most comfortable dwellings, during the cold winter months, in Markdale. It is a good plan to put a layer of the dry paper even on the roft before sheeting; and some use it to advantage between the floors on the first floor.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Toronto's assessment is $91,000,000.

—So far this season a total of 4,368 immigrants have arrived in Winnipeg.

—The first division in the new Parliament gave Sir John's government a majority of thirty-two.

—Five steamers left Liverpool last week with 2,750 emigrants, Chiefly English, for Canada.

—A fleet carrying 125,000 bushels of grain is on the way from Chicago to Owen Sound.

—Dominion parliament will take a recess of a week, from the 18th to the 25th inst.

—Between November and April last $136,669 was spent in the distribution of seed to the suffering settlers in the North-West.

—During last week fifteen hundred immigrants arrived in Montreal, the majority intending to settle in Ontario and the North-West.

—His Excellencd the Governor-General and Lady Lansdowne arrived in Toronto last Tuesday night and met with an enthusiastic reception from the citizens.

—Arrangements for running Canadian Pacific trains over the Michigan Central road to the Western States have been completed, and the Western Ontario Pacific railway will not be built west of London.

—The County of York has been separated from the city of Toronto for shrievality purposes, and Frederick Mowat, son of Hon. Oliver Mowat appointed Sheriff of Toronto. The appointment for York has not yet been made.

—A Largely attended meeting of representatives of Farmers Institues throughout the country was held in the courthouse, Toronto, Thursday. A Central Institute for the province was formed, and officers elected. Resolutions were passed in favor of reciprocity with the United States, and condemning the present railway rates and classification as being prejudicial to the interests of the farmers.

—The report of exports on the Canadian products shown at the Colonion Exhibition are generally satisfactory. Ontario cheese is spoken highly of; butter, on the other hand, is not well thought of; fruit, especially apples. comes in for praise, as does also honey; the Wheat of Ontario is generally of a superior quality, though somewhat lacking in strength, but the tobacco is declared to be off colour and coarse in flavor.

—The surplus of revenue over expenditure in the Dominion on April 20 was $2,060,845, as compared with a deficit of $2,294,000 on the corresponding date last year.

—The way in which President Cleveland is reversing the immoral traditions of his country should place his name among the highest of her presidental benefactors. Had the treaty rights of the Indians always been vindicated as is now being done by driving squatters from their reserves, we should probably have heard less of the internecine strife which has made American frontier life horrible.

—The announcement has been officially made that the Grand Trunk Railway Company intend to spend a million dollars during the present year in doubling their track and in otherwise improving their line. The work of laying down a double track on the main line which begun some years ago, and from time to time reports of progress have been made, but so far only a small portion of the whole has been done. When completed, the Company will have far more than double their transportation powers and will have reduced the liability to accidents very greatly, to the benefit of both the people of Canada and of themselves.

—Russia has succeeded at last in securing for hereself a voice in the settlement of the question of the government of Afghanistan. Until she has annexed all the territory between her frontiers and those of the Ameer's territory, Russia declared over and over again that Afghanistan was without the scope of her operations. At that time, and even since, the country has been under the guardianship, if not the recognized protection, of England. Having secured a large portion of the oasis of which Herat is the centre, and having a force within easy striking distance of that city, Russia has appearently forced England to take her into all councils in regard to Afghanistan. That is the meaning of the announcement that Lord Salisbury's Government has come to an agreement with Russia as to the neutral government of Afghanistan. It is one thing to come to an understanding with Russia, and it is quite another to make any understanding with her effective. There has never been a treaty sacred enough to bind Russia for one moment after it became safe for her to break it. Superior force is the only thing which will make an agreement with Russia binding. He should have a long spoon who would sup out of the same pot with her.

—THE PROPHET.—The Bradford Prophet forecasts the weather as follows for the next month:—May will be the very antipodes of April. Like the Irishman's whiskey, we'll have water galore. The average downfall will be small but their frequency, followed by warm sunny days, will gladden the hearts of the farmers. Expect rain ever other day, 12 out of 31 days will be wet. The Queen's Birthday will be fine and hot, the month expiring in a deluge.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truely beautiful world we live in! Nature gives us grandeur of Mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraging and worn out with diseases, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof that Green's August Flower will make them free from disease, as when born, Dispepsia and Liver Complaint are the direct causes of seventy five per cent, of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the head, Palpitation of the Heart and other distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

SOUTHERN ASTHMA CURE
DOUBLE TREATMENT IN EACH PACKAGE
INSTANT RELIEF FOR
ASTHMA AND BRONCHITIS
BY MAIL ON RECEIPT OF PRICE
SAMPLES, 25c.; REGULAR SIZE, $1.00
ADDRESS FULFORD & CO., BROCKVILLE, ONT.

Good Advice.

Don't buy Dress Goods until you see McFARLAND'S Immense Assortment.

Don't buy Millinery without consulting Miss Bremner, McFARLAND'S Milliner.

Don't buy Silks, Velvets, Gloves, or Laces, before seeing

McFARLAND'S

Don't select your Carpets, Lace Curtains, Floor Oil Cloth or Cretons, from any other house except

MC FARLAND'S.

Don't let any Young Man, Old Man, Boy or Child, who wants a perfect fitting newest style low priced Suit of clothes pass

McFARLAND'S.

Don't forget, McFARLAND has the Sweetest, Strongest, Purest and Cheapest, Tea in the County.

Don't neglect to look through McFARLAND'S Immense Establishment crowded with new goods bought for cash down, in the best markets of the world all of which will be sold at a small profit.

Don't think it economy to buy a Shoddy Boot. For it is not, McFarland has received a large addition to his stock of Kid, Goat, Calf and Buff Boots, Women's Men's Boy's Misses' and Child's, all solid leather.

He will be pleased to have you call when in Markdale, and assure you of his best services.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY, Proprietor.

Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business, and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine, which will lift the stone, carry it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited

R. McNALLY

MARKDALE SASH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

Give us Franchise and Victory is Ours!

In making your purchases in small goods don't forget to call at the best established CONFECTIONARY, TOY and FRUIT STORE in the County.

My stock comprises the latest and best designs in TOYS; the choicest and freshest stock of FRUIT and CONFECTIONARY; also first-class Fancy Note Paper and Envelopes (all colors.)

OYSTERS kept constantly on hand during the season, and sold by the quart or glass.

Mrs. Clement,

MARKDALE.

The Law Concerning News papers.

1. Any person who takes a paper regularly from the post-office, whether directed in his name, or another's, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for payment.

2. If a person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and then collect the whole amount, whether the paper is taken from the office or not.

3. In suits for subscriptions, the suit may be instituted in the place where the paper is published, although the subscriber may reside hundreds of miles away.

4. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers or periodicals from the post-office or removing and leaving them uncalled for, while unpaid, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.

BABIES AND CHILDREN.—They are always catching cold in their head. Place a small particle of Nasal Balm in each nostril at night, also rub well over the bridge of the nose, and let us know how they are in the morning.

Unparalleled Offer.

No. 1.—The Markdale Standard	$1.00
No. 2.—The American Agriculturist (English or German), 1887	1.00
No. 3.—The A. A. New Poultry Book, for everybody. 256 pages. 100 Illustrations. Most complete work ever published	1.00
No. 4.—Engravings. "Home of our Former Presidents," 11x18, issued during 1887. Each worth	1.00
No. 5.—The same issued during 1886, forwarded post-paid, in a tube prepared for the purpose. Each worth	1.00
No. 6.—Articles describing the Engravings of the "Home of our Former Presidents," written expressly for this purpose by James Parton, Donald G. Mitchell (Ik Marvel,) printed on tinted paper.

Companion Portraits.

No. 7.—A magnificent portrait of General Grant from his last sitting. Grand Cabinet size, 18 by 24 inches, and engraved at large expense, especially for subscribers to this combination, and supplied to no other persons. Price.	1.00
No. 8.—... supurb steel plate engraving of General Logan, 12 by 16 inches in size, from a photograph by Brady' elegantly mounted on heavy, highly finished paper suilable for framing or for the centre table. Price.	1.00
No. 9.—A magnificent portrait of Henry Ward Beecher. Full cabinet size, engraved expressly for the subscribers of this combination by the new process direct from a negative taken by Falk, after Mr. Breecher's recent return from Europe.	1.00
Total	$3.50

We will furnish all the above post-paid for $3.50

Send six cents to 751 Broadway, New York, for mailing you specimen copy of the American Agriculturist, English or German, specimen proofs of the engravings, and specimen pages of Poultry Book.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

t the entertainment in the Metho- Church here on Tuesday evening the audience was not large but as an evidence that something e than an ordinary programme to be rendered that even so many ere present should turn out in the ents of rain falling: the evening most unfavorable.

Miss Fraine's readings were very rendered, altho. if permitted to e comparison, we think the een of Eloqutionists" who read e, some months ago pleased her ience best, Miss. Fraine was well tained by our local talent, which believe never appeared to better ntage. The selections were ce and well rendered.

Miss Fraine will again read to- t (Tuesday) in the Town Hall en we presume her readings will be somewhat different character from e given in the Church. She ad- ssed the Methodist Sabbath School Sabbath last in a very interesting nner, and assisted in the evening vice by a brief address and exposi- on a few verses from the word God: her earnest words touched hearts of many present.

During the morning service in the tist Church here on Sabbath last Rev. Mr. Watson was suddenly ercome by a fainting spell and akness—some stimulant was ckly applied and he soon recovered sciousness but was not able to take afternoon appointment. He has ce recovered to his wanted health

Rev. T. A. Colter and wife, of ckford, paid our village a brief it on Monday and Tuesday st. We were pleased to see Mr. lter so much improved in health ce his last visit to this place.

Mr. Chadwick, formerly of this lace who has for some time held a sition as teacher in the Stratford gh School, is at present in the Life surance business and with his lleague are making a raid on this llage in that line this week.

Mr. James McNally who has been nstrated with Erysipelas is now in low condition, poor hopes of his re- overy are entertained.

Mrs. A. Ward is also in a low con- ition.

Our township fathers met in the own Hall Monday last for transaction f township business, the docket ust have been light as the members ppeared to be on furlough most of le day.

Maxwell.

Weather still keeps cold.

Ploughing is going on.

Roads are excellent,

Sugar making over, Good results report- d by those who engaged in it this year.

Miss Ella Kerr has returned to her studies at the Institute, Collingwood.

Our former townsmen, Mr. Cyrus, Field, gave us a call last week. Cyrus is prosper ing.

The chimney of Dr. Kerr's house burned- out one night last week, No damages report- ed.

The Council of Royal Templers, formed here promises to be a most decided success- The members are taking an active interest in the work. We hope that the order, which from our point of Judgement is an excellent organization, may prosper in its noble work.

Mrs. W. J. Wright is still lying very ill with rheumatism. We trust that she will soon be restored to health,

We regret to record the death of Mr. John Gamey, which occurred very suddenly last Tuesday. He was buried last Thursday. Rev. Mr. Ferrier preached the funeral sermon on Sunday. Great sympathy is felt for the family in their sore bereavement.

[The above came too late for last weeks paper.]

A searious shooting accident occurred here on Monday afternoon, throwing our usually quiet village into a state of intense excitement, It appears that a party had gone shooting on the beaver and in decending a rough hill. Mr. T. A. Blakely, who had his gun thrown over his shoulder, stumbled. The gun fell, part of the charge carried away a piece of flesh from his elbow, while another part lodged in the arm and breast of Willie Ferrier. Mr. Blakely immediately gave the alarm and Willie was conveyed home where Dr. Kerr dressed the wound. He is now lying in a precurious condition.

TAMARAC
ELIXIR
NATURE'S REMEDY
FOR COUGHS, COLDS, HOARSENESS
THROAT & LUNG COMPLAINTS
INSTANT RELIEF POSITIVE CURE

Honor Roll.

Honor Roll of S. No. 6 Glenelg for April, 1887.

IV Class,—Maggie, White, Lizzie White, Maggie Walker.

III Class,—Robbie Burnett, Alfy Murray, Catherine Norris.

II Class,--Robbie White, Luther Torry, Johnnie Symmes.

II Pt. Sen.—Eddie Burnett, George Symmes, Mary E. Norris.

II Pt Sen,—Jessie Duncan, Maud Walker, Herbert Walker.

I Class—Lizzie Symmes, Walter Bell.

AGGIE WHITE
Teacher.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh; 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333-83

Honor Roll.

S.S. No. 5 Holland for the month of April, 1887.

4th Reader,—Bertha McKennitt, Ellen Gawley, Thos. Deaver.

3rd Reader,--Martha Freeborn, Lizzie Clarke, Chas. Hamilton.

2nd Reader,—Sarah Mathews, John Hamilton, Lizzie White.

Part 2nd—Robt. Freeborn, Nancy White, Davis Freeborn.

Part 1,—Wm. Freeborn, Mary White, Frances Mathews.

The most good conduct marks:—Martha Freeborn, Bertha McKennitt, Jas Carter.

The most bad conduct marks:—Davis Freeborn, Mary Demmie Jno. S. Hamilton.

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past. I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming-bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Davy Rake.
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.

The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.

The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.

Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Fanning mills. Land Rollers.

Agent for the Watersou's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.

Horse Powers, Wagon's Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R, Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J.H. CARSON, Agent
148-61 Markdale.

IT IS A WELL KNOWN FACT —THAT—McCOLL'S
"LARDINE,"
is the best known, and most reliable MACHINE OIL in the Dominion; Farmer's, Thresher's and Mill Owner's, will find it decidedly to their advantage to insist upon getting the "Genuine Lardine" when they ask for it, owing to so much inferior oil being sold under the same name by unscrupulous dealers. We are the sold manufacturers of the "Genuine Lardine" every barrel branded.

McCOLL BRO'S, & CO.

For sale in Markdale at Haskett Bro's, Hardware Store. 347-73

OFFICIAL NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given to all persons concerned, to have their premises, including watercloseets, stables &c., thoroughly cleaned before the 16th May; also all boxes. barrels, wood or other obstructions, removed off the public road. Parties neglecting to do so will be dealt with according to law.

248-9

E. DAVIS,
S. J. COLEMAN,
A. TURNER,
} Trustees.

TAMARAC.—For Hoarseness and all Bronchial Troubles that usually effect public speakers, Tamarac Elixir will give speedy relief. Try it.

"Profitable -:- Reading."

To intending purchasers of American Watches, Clocks, Jewellery and Silverware, also Engagement or Wedding Ringe.

I have the only complete stock of above lines in "Central Grey." It will pay to inspect my stock; get my prices, find out how I do business, learn what my 1, 2 & 3, years warrants mean; then if not square in every particular, I shall not expect you to buy. Over 200 pair of fine Specks in stock 25c. to $3.00.

☞ Fine Watch repairing a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,
MARKDALE.

HEAD QUARTERS

—FOR—

Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confdence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart:—Late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarland's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.

Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—

FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS. also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas. Miller
MARKDALE.

SEEDS

Seeds!

SEEDS

FIELD & GARDEN

SEEDS!

—AT—

Stephen's

DRUG STORE.

Your's Respectfully,

R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae, Tailor.

REMOVED.

IN returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have re-moved to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

Stock Taking SALE

At the Toronto House,
Markdale.

SLAUGHTER PRICES FOR CASH.

Wm. Brown.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS

H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRAITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,
UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE,
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

Farm for Sale.

100 ACRES, BEING LOT 13, CON., 14 Artemesia, about 70 acres cleared and under cultivation, well fenced with cedar, well watered with spring creek, a comfortable log house and barn, young orchard bearing. Situated three miles from Markdale. For Terms and further particulars apply to

JAS. W. LACKEY
31-t Berkley.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.
ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

Partnership Notice.

DR'S SPROULE & BRODIE, have entered into a partnership for the practice of their profession. Dr. Sproule will be found at his old office Turner's Drug Store, and Dr. Brodie at his office Mathew's new block. 333-46

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay, also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for further particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
338-84 Holland Centre P

Burdock BLOOD BITTERS.
WILL CURE OR RELIEVE
BILIOUSNESS, DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, JAUNDICE, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, DIZZINESS, DROPSY, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, DRYNESS OF THE SKIN,
And every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEYS, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD,
T. MILBURN & CO., Proprietors, TORONTO.

HOUSEHOLD.

Setting Tab'e for a Plain Dinner.

A neat, well-set table, with its snowy linen, glittering silver and china, is one of the best appetizers one can have. When to this is added some touch of beauty in the shape of lovely color, let us say a vase of flowers, a freshly growing foliage plant, or the rainbow tintings of modern glass, the effect is magical, and the spirits rise under the influence of anticipated good cheer in a most marvelous manner. By this I do not mean that costly furnishing is necessary to promote anticipations and feelings of good cheer, but that neatness, and order, and the brightness of good color are requisites, and these may be had for a trifle more than the reverse costs, and in the end at a lower cost, taking all the good results into consideration.

First and foremost is needed a nice thick, double-faced canton flannel over which to spread the damask table cloth, which should be of the purest white for dinner. A cloth of small pattern will take a good gloss in the ironing, and wear better than one of large pattern. The napkins should match the cloth, and be daintily washed and ironed, with a trifle of starching only. If there is to be any decoration a low bowl of flowers, or a potted plant of fresh clean foliage, will be pretty standing in the middle of the table, and where there is no waiter, it will be convenient and tasteful to arrange a fruit desert on little fancy plates, one for each member of the family and the guest or guests around the flowers, thus making a pretty center piece. The knives, forks, and spoons to be used should be laid at each place, the forks at the left, the spoons at the right, the knives across the top and the folded napkin with a square of bread enclosed between them. There will be the desert knife, fork and spoon, the dinner knife and fork, and the tablespoon, and at the corners of the table the necessary vegetable spoons; also, at each plate a goblet and individual salts, or else small salt and pepper cruets, say three of each on the table in convenient places. The soup and the roast may be on the table at once, and the vegetables in covered dishes on a two shelved side table convenient to the mistress's hand, to avoid an appearance of crowding.

After the soup is served it will not be very troublesome for a servant or some member of the family, a daughter or wife's sister, to remove the tureen and soup plates to the lower shelf of the side table, and to place the vegetables on the dinner table, and presently for the servant to remove these, and bring in the coffee or tea and the dessert, and to stand them on the side table.

If there is no servant sufficiently trained, this service can be quietly performed by one of the family without disturbing the comfort of the guests or the rest of the family, if some method is observed and affairs have been regulated for a quiet change. In such a case that member, whether daughter or sister-in-law, but not the lady of the house, will remove the vegetables, and the plates and dinner knives and forks to the side table, serve the dessert of pudding, or pie, or what not, and place the after dinner coffee cups, cream, sugar, and coffee on a tray before the mistress of the house, and the dessert will proceed and the dinner end pleasantly. Meanwhile, from beginning to end, provided everything necessary has been placed on the two tables, there have been only two occasions for rising from the table and no apparent disturbance of the order of the dinner.

Practical Recipes.

PRESSED EGGS.—Eight eggs, boiled hard, and while hot chopped with salt and a lump of butter the size of a walnut. Press into a deep dish and serve cold.

NICE BREAKFAST DISH.—To chopped, cold, boiled potatoes add a generous lump of butter, and for a small family half a cup of thick cream; put over the fire and mix and stir until very hot; then serve.

GINGER CAKES.—One cup each of sugar, molasses, sour cream and butter, two eggs, five cups flour, one tablespoonful of ginger, one teaspoonful each of cloves and cinnamon, one half teaspoonful of nutmeg; many add raisins, one and one-half cups, seeded.

WHITE CAKE.—Two cups of sugar, one cup of butter, five eggs beaten very light, one cup sweet milk, three and one-half cups of flour, two tablespoonfuls of cream of tartar and one of soda. Flavor with bitter almonds or vanilla.

BEEF OMELETTE.—Chop the raw beef fine and put into the frying pan with a lump of butter; stir until very brown, but not too well done; then add several well-beaten eggs: stir well and serve at once. If preferred, it can brown on one side and be lapped over like an ordinary egg omelette.

CHOCOLATE CAKE (WEDDING).—One half cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, one cupful of sweet milk, two and one-half cupfuls of prepared flour, the yelks of five eggs, and the whites of two. For icing between layers, whites of three eggs, thickened with powdered sugar and one-fourth of a cake of grated chocolate. Flavor with vanilla.

CALVES' LIVER FRIED AS OYSTERS.—Cut the liver moderately thin and about the size of large oysters. Wash, put it into hot water slightly salted, and let it boil five or ten minutes. Then remove it from the kettle, let it drain and fry as oysters. Beat as many eggs as the liver will require. Dip in the egg, roll in powdered cracker and fry in hot lard or butter.

POTTED SHAD.—Cut the shad in small pieces, wash and wipe dry, season each piece with salt and pepper. Put in a deep earthen dish with whole allspice and cloves on each layer, taking care to remove the blossoms from the cloves, as these darken the vinegar. Cover them with good cold cider vinegar. Cover tightly and place in a moderate oven for three or four hours.

DRY BREAD FRITTERS.—Two cups of dry, fine bread crumbs, two tablespoonfuls prepared flour, half a pint or rather less of milk, four well-beaten eggs, half a cupful of sugar, a tablespoonful of butter and a few currants. Boil the milk and pour over the bread, dredge the currants with flour and mix all into a stiff batter. Drop into hot lard as doughnuts and send to table in powdered sugar.

FLOUR PUDDING.—One quart of sweet milk; wet and stir smoothly into a little of this cold milk six tablespoonfuls of flour. When the remainder of the milk boils, stir in this wet flour, boil ten minutes more and set away to cool. When cold, add the well-beaten yolks of six eggs, then the whites, which have been beaten to a foam that will pile up; now beat this into the cold pudding until it all looks even and light. Bake another half-hour and serve hot.

CITRON CAKE.—Three cups of sugar, one of butter, one of sweet milk, four cups of flour, one-half teaspoonful of soda and one of cream of tartar. Cut up one-half pound of citron fine and thin and the whites of ten eggs. Cream the butter and sugar; sift the flour and add gradually, then the citron. Beat the eggs until stiff and add last; sift the cream of tartar in the flour and dissolve the soda in a little tepid water. Beat all thoroughly before stirring in the eggs.

CHICKEN CROQUETTES.—Parboil the chicken, skin it and take out all the bones, mince fine. Take one onion and boil it until thoroughly done and then mince it fine. Two or three sprigs of parsely also minced. Season the mixture with a pinch of mace, a dash of red pepper and salt to your taste. Take a pint of milk, two tablespoonfuls of corn starch and two tablespoonfuls of butter. Put the milk on to boil; stir the corn starch and butter together and then stir into the milk. Pour this over the mince, stirring it thoroughly, and when cool mold into shapes and roll in egg and pulverized cracker and fry in hot lard.

CREAM PUFFS.—One cup of hot water, one-half cup of butter, boil together, stirring in a cupful of dry flour while boiling. When cold add three eggs not beaten. Drop by tablespoonfuls on a buttered tin and bake in a quick oven over twenty-five minutes, being careful not to open the oven door more than is necessary. This makes fifteen puffs. Take care that they do not touch each other. For filling, take a pint of cream, a cup of powdered sugar and whites of two eggs with flavoring of any sort preferred. When the puffs are cold, cut a round piece out of the bottom of each, scrape out the inside; fill the cavity with whipped cream, fit back the piece taken from the bottom, set on a dish and ice.

Things a Housekeeper Should Know.

That salt should be eaten with nuts to aid digestion.

That milk which stands too long makes bitter butter.

That rusty flat-irons should be rubbed over with beeswax and lard.

That it rests you in sewing to change your position frequently.

That a strong hot lemonade taken at bed time will break up a bad cold.

That tough beef is made tender by laying a few minutes in vinegar water.

That a little soda will relieve sick headache caused by indigestion.

That a strong cup of coffee will remove the odor of onions from the breath.

That well ventilated bed-rooms will prevent morning headaches and lassitude.

That a cup of hot water drunk before meals will prevent nausea and dyspepsia.

That one in a faint should be laid on the flat of his back; then loosen his clothes and let him alone.

That consumptive night sweats may be arrested by sponging the body nightly in salt water.

That a fever patient can be made cool and comfortable by frequently sponging off with soda water.

That to beat eggs quickly, add a pinch of salt. Salt cools, and cold eggs froth rapidly.

That the hair may be kept from falling out after sickness by a frequent application to the scalp of sage tea.

That you can take out spots from wash goods by rubing them with the yolk of eggs before washing.

That white spots upon varnished furniture will disappear if you hold a hot plate over them.

New Definitions.

Music: A polite art which serves its highest usefulness as a stimulus to conversation.

Duty: An obligation that rests entirely upon one's neighbor.

Advice: A superfluous article which everybody is eager to give away, but no one cares to receive.

Consistency: A jewel which frequently needs re-setting.

News: Old women's gossip; salacious scandal and secrets of domestic and conjugal life: anything in the way of rumor that does not relate to public affairs.

Civility: An ancient form of behavior, popular in feudal times, but unsuited to the exigencies of modern civilization.

Artist: A man of subtle æsthetic perceptions who attains proficiency in some such useful art as hair-dressing, or negro minstrelsy.

Poetry: Any metrical composition whose merit is unrecoguized by the average magazine editor.

Economy: A habit of life which enables a woman to save money in her domestic expenditures in order that her husband may keep up his end at the club.

Culture: The pursuit of social folly having its origin in the love of singularity.

Keen as a Razor.

Countryman—"That feller in the telegraph office up there, thought he was mighty smart, but I fooled him."

Policeman—"You did? How?"

Countryman—"Oh, easy enough. You see I went in here yesterday to send a message to Toronto and told him what I wanted. 'All right,' sez he. 'Seventy-five cents.' So I paid him the seventy-five cents, and I'll be hanged if he did a thing but rap that old brass clicker of his fifteen or twenty times, and then hang the message on a hook."

Policeman—"Well, do you call that fooling him?"

Countryman—"You just hold on, and I'll tell you. To-day I wanted to send another message to Toronto, but I'll be hanged if I wanted to pay seventy-five cents. So I went up to the office, kinder perlite like an' sez I: 'Mister,' sez I, 'there's a young lady outside as sez she wants to speak to you. I'll tend office for you while you're gone.' Well, sir, he bit right away. Off he went in a hurry, and before he got back I had plenty of time to clink his old brass machine all I wanted and hang my message on the hook, just as he did the day before. I knew they got it too, at the other end, for the minute I got through the old machine went to clicking like blue blazes, 's much 's to say, 'All right, old man, we hear you.' Oh, I fooled him good, I did. Your Uncle Peter lives in Wayback, but he ain't no fool, he ain't, by a long chalk; no sir-ee!"

HEALTH.

Prevention of Malaria.

Malaria is justly considered a dreaded disease. While it is not generally fatal, yet it has an injurious effect on the constitution, so that the children of persons who have suffered from it are less robust than others. For many years the inhabitants of malarial regions have understood the value of certain precautions, and that it was possible to avoid, and often to greatly diminish the injury done by the poison. There are two classes of preventive measures, which have become traditional with some races. The first class includes all those methods which very materially reduce the quantity of malaria penetrating the lungs, and of the water infused with germs of the disease, which have been taken into the system through the stomach. The second class is composed of such remedies as enable the system to eliminate the germs in the shortest possible time before they can do much harm.

The number of malarial germs in the atmosphere of the malarious country varies greatly in differemt hours of the day, and in different seasons of the year. It is supposed that they are most extant at dawn of day and in the early part of the evening, and that the least number are found at noon. It is generally understood that malaria does not rise many feet above the surface of the soil. The only exception is when prevailing winds and currents may carry it up mountain slopes or hills. Travelers who have visited the Pontine marshes in the vicinity of Rome, one of the most dangerous malarial districts in the world, have been struck with the large number of platforms raised from twenty to thirty feet. These are places of safety where unfortunate people obliged to work on this poisonous soil may pass the night during the malarial season.

The natives of Central America when obliged to spend the night in a badly infected locality, hang their hammocks high above the ground. More than probable it was this custom which suggested to the engineers, managing the building of the Panama Railroad, the idea of setting up little houses for the workmen in trees. House-plants cultivated in pots filled with malarious earth are a constant danger. Germs grow luxuriously in the moisture and warm air of closed rooms, and may be a fruitful source of the malady.

The second means of prevention, eliminating those germs which have gained admittance to the body, is also an important subject to consider. One of the first things to act upon, is to maintain the highest conditions of bodily vigor and an active and equal circulation and exposure to cold, gives the poison time to develop in the blood and produces its worst effects. The food sh uld be nourishing and taken in such quantities as can be digested. The skin should be kept active by bathing and friction. Warm baths may be used to stimulate it to special activity and to restore warmth and cold baths to give tone when necessary. In some cases drinking hot lemonade has proven very beneficial. The clothing should be woolen and sufficient to guard against chill, and the bowels should be regular. Malaria weakens and demoralizes the nervous system and this should be guarded against by cultivating the will power. Turkish baths as a preventive measure may be favorably mentioned. The copious perspiration thus induced, brings the poison out of the body in a remarkable manner. Chronic cases are cured quicker by Turkish baths than by medicines. We may say finally, that the best way to guard against malaria is to keep away from the regions thus infected.

Serious Burns.

When a serious burn occurs, the clothes must be removed as soon as the fire is extinguished. The first consideration should be to get the clothes off, without pulling, as the least dragging brings the skin too. The injured part should be thoroughly drenched with water, and the clothes cut away. If any part of the garment sticks, let it remain. Dip cloths in a thick solution of common baking soda water, and place over the burnt surface, bandaging lightly so as to keep them in place. As soon as a dry spot appears on this dressing, wet it again by squeezing some soda and water over it. As the saturating will exclude the air there will be no smarting. A rubber sheet, a piece of oil cloth, a gossamer cloak, or any waterproof article can be spread on the bed with a blanket over it to receive the sufferer. Should the feet be cold heat must be applied to them, and a little stimulant given if the pulse is weak. It is well to have the bed covering warm and light. A doctor should be called without much delay. A burn is serious in proportion to the amount of surface involved. A deep burn is not as dangerous as a superficial one twice the size. In severe burns, pain is an encouraging sign; it shows there is still vitality left. Scalds may be treated in much the same way. Sweet oil may be poured over the surface and covered with flour. Anything that excludes air will relieve pain. Patients suffering from such accidents should have concentrated, nourishing food—and as much as they can take with ease. In order to do the necessary repairing, nature must have plenty of material with which to accomplish it. Only doctors should prescribe opiates.

The Sepulchral Guest Chamber.

Even more dangerous to life and health than the unused parlor, is the guest chamber or "spare room," which is occupied on rare occasions only. To go to bed in an unwarmed room, where the bed has been made up for days, weeks, of even months, is quite as dangerous to life as to stand in a draft when in a dripping perspiration, or to take a sea bath after a hearty dinner.

So, good housekeeper, you can keep your spare bed in all its bravery of silk quilt, knitted counterpane and pillow shams, but let the sheets lie folded with the rest of your bed clothing until your guest comes, then air them thoroughly, as also the comfortables and blankets, and make the bed; and if it be a cold winter night give him for a bedfellow a warm flatiron well wrapped, or a hot water bottle, and he will feel that his welcome is a genuine and a hearty one. And at the time for him to rise, a warning knock upon his door, with the information that a pitcher of hot water stands at his threshold, will make him thrice glad, and he will give you his heartfelt thanks.

The Use of Iodine.

As a simple family remedy, the tincture of iodine should be always in the house, and a small camel's hair brush, with which to apply it. To reduce inflammation of all kinds where the skin is unbroken, nothing is more valuable, and it may be made to serve the purpose of various kinds of poultices or plasters. It is of a very dark, purplish color, but the preparation known as colorless iodine may be purchased and can be used with greater freedom than the darker liquid. For rheumatism, paint twice a day, as long as the skin does not blister. For sore throat, paint the external surface, and good results will quickly follow. The advice of a physician upon its use for boils was as follows: "Never let a boil come to a head if it can be prevented. The system is poisoned more than relieved by the eruption. When anything appears at all resembling a boil, paint it with iodine and drive it away, if possible."

The liquid is a poison, and should be handled with care, and placed where it could be mistaken by no possibility for anything else.

Remedy for Infantile Bronchitis.

A correspondent tells us of a remedy for that dread disease which is a terror to so many mothers. We are informed that it has been used very successfully on children who are subject to croupy coughs, and it is so simple of manufacture and inexpensive, that it can be made without the least difficulty. The recipe is as follows:

Procure two ounces of spikenard root, two ounces of rock candy, one ounce of best brandy, and two teaspoonfuls of syrup—not molasses. Immerse the spikenard root in a quart of water and boil down to a pint. Strain, and then add the rock candy and syrup. Replace on the stove and heat slowly until rock candy is dissolved. Remove, and when cool add the brandy. Shake the mixture and it is ready for use. Dose: a teaspoonful whenever cough is troublesome. The total cost, excepting the syrup, should not exceed twenty-five cents—ten cents for the spikenard root, five for rock candy, and ten for brandy.

To Bonnie Rosedale.

TORONTO'S SYLVAN SUBURB.

Bonnie Rosedale! I must sing
Of thy beauty rare,
By the stream meandering
Through the valleys fair;
Thou art truly Nature's book
Bound in living green,
Hill and dale and quiet nook—
Home of Flora's queen!

Here the swallows first appear
Telling us of Spring,
Early snow-drops seek to cheer—
Birds to build and sing!
Here the young leaves first embower
Thy fairy-like ravine,
First to bud and last to flower
Nature here is seen.

Sweet to walk thy leafy glade
'Neath the silver moon,
There the lover and the maid
Find their hearts in tune
To the music and the words
Of a lover's dream
To the singing of the birds
And the whispering stream.

Bonnie Rosedale! sweet retreat
From the city's din;
From its toil and dust and heat,
Let me enter in—
There to revel in thy beauty,
Wreaths of praise entwine:
Gather strength for toil and duty,
At thy sylvan shrine!

JOHN IMRIE.

The Old Church.

BY MAUDE L. RADFORD, AGED 14.

Into the ivy-covered church
I wandered one bright day,
The birds sang sweetly, flowers smiled,
And all around was gay.

But my heart was sad and weary,
And filled with bitter pain,
For the sunshine had left my life,
Ne'er to return again.

So I restlessly wandered 'round,
Trying in vain to still
The bitter feelings which arose
Within me 'gainst my will.

When suddenly the old organ,
With deep, musical roll,
Gave forth, in richest harmony,
Grand sounds which thrilled my soul

It seemed that voices of angels
Came to me from among Those sounds in heavenly sweetness, and
These were the words they sung:—

"Earthly trials are stepping stones,
Which lead us up above,
Which show us in a clearer light
Our heavenly Father's love.

"Then to that Father turn your soul,
And joy with your griefs blend,
For heav'n's the home of the true heart,
And there all sorrows end."

The music ceased. I knew that 'twas
A message to me sent
From Heav'n, and turned from the church
And went my way—content.

Parted.

The dream has passed, and we must live apart?
O God! the thought, I and my lonely heart,
Why did I love with such passion? for me all joys are fled;
Better not to exist—than to wish that I were dead.

For what is life worth living apart from the pleasures of love,
When I have lost my hope of Heaven and all the joys above?
My anguished heart cries out in pain, O God, if this be so,
Would I still find mercy if I should end my woe?

Yet the world is full of sadness—others have suffered as I,
Have they given up as easily? and said, "I wish to die."
A better thought comes to me, I will raise my eyes above
And say, my God, have mercy and chasten my sinful love.

"Until We Meet in Heaven."

—Shakespeare.

BY NORA LAUGHER.

In the golden light of autumn
Oft we rambled, you and I,
While sweet birds were swiftly winging
To their homes, 'neath the blue sky.

Now, I wander, love, without you
In the dreary winter night,
All is cold and sad without you,
All is mist and darkest blight.

O, I wonder if your spirit
Can look down from Heaven above;
Perhaps you star so brightly beaming
Is your eye of fondest love.

Oh, eye! Oh, star! What e'er you are,
I shall soon your beaut see;
Heart's dearest, tho' thou art so far
Death will bring me near to thee.

For the Year 1887

No better resolution can be made than to resist buying any of the substitutes offered as "just as good" as the great only sure-pop corn cure—Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. It never fails to give satisfaction. Beware of poisonous flesh eating substitutes.

A MOUNTAIN MYSTERY.

The Strange Sight Seen by California Hunters

Parties returning from hunting trips in the mountains tell strange tales of their experience when miles away from human habitation, of conflicts with grizzly bears, mountain lions, &c, but by far the most weird story we have heard is told by a well-known young men of this place, who were on a prospecting tour some weeks since near Cobblestone mountain, the northern boundary of this county. The story they tell—and they are willing to take their oath on the truth of the statement—is about as follows:

One cold night they were simultaneously awakened about 12 o'clock by the noise of crackling brush that had been thrown on the fire. They arose in a sitting posture and saw the figure of an Indian woman standing by the fire. She was dressed in a robe of gaily colored material that almost reached her feet. A glistening necklace, evidently of gold and silver, enriched her neck, and hanging pendent from this were a number of bear's claws. Her black hair reached below her waist. In her ears were large hoop rings of gold.

Upon seeing the form one of the young men instinctively reached for his rifle by his side, while the other stared in amazement at seeing such a sight in the dead of the night and thirty miles from any human habitation. When the figure saw the motion made to reach the rifle she motioned for them not to fire and moved down the trail, beckoning to them, but they were too dumbfounded to follow.

The next morning they followed the trail and after much difficulty, traced the footprints to the base of a high cliff about a mile from their camp. The rest of the story told is to this effect: "When I awoke," said one of the young men, "I was horrified. I couldn't move to save my life. I was frozen with astonishment. The next morning we discussed the matter and determined to investigate. So the next night we took our blankets and went to the base of the cliff. At about midnight, the same hour the figure appeared to us, we saw a bright phosphorescent light on the brow of the cliff, and I am sure we heard a voice calling 'Meeneeah! Meeneeah!' several times. This is the strangest experience I ever passed through. I never have believed in ghosts, but I would like to know what this was. If it was a woman, how did she come there at that time, thirty miles from civilization."

An old Indian tradition is to the effect that many, many years ago an Indian maiden—Meeneeah, the only daughter of a chief—was lost in this region and starved to death near the place called squaw Flat. It is said that different camping parties have seen the phosphorescent light spoken of in the vicinity where these young men were camped. Can it be a parellel case with that of the Indian woman abandoned on San Nicholas Island for eighteen years?

Charming Away a Toothache.

We happened lately to meet a young well-to-do and well-educated farmer in a market town not on a market day, and in the course of conversation casually asked what particular business he had on hand. "A very bad toothache," he replied. The next and natural question was to inquire if he had "been and had it out." Blushing to his eyes he said: "I dare say you'll think me very foolish, sir, but I've been to a wise man to have the pain charmed away. Folks say he's wonderful at that sort of thing, so I thought I might as well give him a trial." This announcement being received with a burst of laughter he evidently expected, he hastily added, "Believe it or not as you like, sir, as soon as he said something the pain went away, and I've been easy ever since." It was worse than useless to explain the well-known effect on the nerves, of a visit to any sort of dental operator, and the agriculturist wended his way to spread abroad the fame of his healer, and no doubt to suffer renewed agonies as soon as he got home. It may be added that under no circumstances will a countryman, if he can help it, have a tooth taken out by a regular practitioner—a baker, grocer, or blacksmith, with a local reputation of being "uncommon handy," is almost always resorted to for this extreme measure. It is but another form of provincial superstition.

The Afghan Boundary Settled.

The report that Russia was collecting military stores on the Afghan border with a view of active operations has been quickly followed by another, that the boundary dispute with England has been peacefully settled. The frontier claimed by Russia on the north-west during the last dispute ran from Khoja Sale, on the Oxus, to and across the Murghab, above Penjdeh, and so on to the Persian frontier just north of Kusan. It would now appear that Russia makes concessions on that frontier, which is an important one, being close upon Herat, and in exchange gets possession of a southerly branch of the Oxus on the north-eastern frontier, hitherto held by the Afghans. Whether the Ameer has been consulted in the matter does not appear, but beyond doubt any agreement that the two European powers have come to must be accepted by Afghanistan. To all appearance the quantity of territory thus said to be exchanged at the north-east and north-west cannot be very great; and if it really results in a binding compact which will effectually define the limit of Russian advance, a great triumph of peaceful diplomacy will have been reached. But scepticism as to the lasting quality of any such arrangements is pardonable.

Washed With Cold Cream.

A peculiarity of Madame Patti's toilet has been revealed. It appears that when she goes to her bath, which she takes at about five o'clock on the evenings when she sings, she never allows the water to touch her neck and face, although the rest of her body is religiously immersed. She has a singular theory that hot or cold water produces wrinkles, and it is certainly some sort of proof that her theory is correct that, in spite of being considerably over forty years of age, there is not a wrinkle visible upon her neck, throat, or face.

Of course she insists that she keeps equally clean by means of cold cream, which she uses in copious quantities, generally spreading it on her face and neck, and leaving it there while her maid goes through the hair-dressing process, often a period of an hour or so. Then the cold cream is taken off very carefully with a towel, and Madame Patti considers herself washed.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

As soon as the meeting was called to order Brother Gardner arose and said:—"Wicked-ness dosn' pay, figger it up as you will. We hev had many instances of it in dis club, an' we ar' surrounded wid 'em at home. When Whalebone Howker stole a wheel-barrer belongin' to Pickles Smith he at fust rejoiced an' was glad. He felt dat he was ahead of de game, and he poked hisself in de ribs fur a smart man. Howsumeber, he didn't had dat stolen vehickle in his posse-sion two hours when his game rooster died, an' de dog-catcher picked up his dog an' a man named him $4 went into bankruptcy. He would figger dat he was $8 out of pocket, but when Pickles foun' out who stole his barrer an' cum ober an' licked Whale-bone within an inch of his life besides.

"Take de case of Bermuda Jones who lives down' doah to Condensed Cunningham. Bermuda sot down wid a piece of chalk an' figgered up dat wickedness paid 200 per cent., an' he went ober to de grocery, back-yard, an' he went ober to de grocery, back-yard an' still gittin', but what was de re-sult? A small boy, who was in dar to buy cent's worf of taffy, seed de hull perfor-mance and told de grocer. Bermuda was ordered home, knocked down in his own kitchen, an' made to give up de fo' caneseat chairs in his parlor to settle de case. Did he profit by his badness? Did he make any 10 per cent on dat?

"Agin, take de case of Kurnel Leffing-well Kabar. I had six Leghorn hens in my coop, an' he coveted 'em. Instead of comin' to me in a frank, honest way an' offerin' to buy dose hens at deir value an' gibin' me his note due in thirty days, he steals upon my coop in de gloom of midnight an' forcibly captivates my poultry. He chuckled to his-self over his smartness an' he figgered up a 200 per cent. profit, but a Nemesis war' on his trail. He left one of de ole blue patches on his pants on a nail in de coop, an' when I found my hens gone I walked ober to his humble cabin an' took him by de neck an' drawed him out doors. Some of you may probably heard dat he went into a de-cline soon arter dat, an' dat when de post-mortem was held three of his ribs war' found stickin' out of his back.

"I hev figgered on goodness an' badness, an' I tell you dat badness doan' pay. Some of you may hev lifted a ham at de co'ner grocery widout bein' caught at it, but yit how did you feel when you met a police-man, or when a strange knock cum at de cabin doah? Guilt was sich a burden on yer soul dat de ham tasted like saw-dust, an' you woke up at midnight to see spooks standin' round yer beds. De good man goes aroun' wid a flat hat on his ear, afeared of nobody an' lookin' eberybody squar' in de eye. If he happens to see de patrol wagon gwine along he doan' turn pale. If anybody happens to lay a hand on him he doan' sink inter his shoes.

"How ar' it wid de bad man? He's allus dodgin' for b'ar-traps an' spring-guns. He's bin 'spectin' to be 'rested an' sent up. A strange knock at his cabin doah sends a chill down his back. Go whar' he will, he feels skeery an' afeared, an' some fine day when he am out enjoyin' de balmy breeze 'long comes a detective an' claps de handcuffs on him, an' away he goes to Jackson fur ten years. You kin figger an' figger, but good-ness am bound to come under de wire a full length ahead."

The President's address created consider-able excitement, and Waydown Bebee was ready with the following preamble and re-solution:

"Whereas, Goodness ar' moa' profitable dan badness, an' also easier on de conshience; an', dar' fore

"Resolved. Dat it ar' de sense of dis meet-in' dat we stick to goodness."

The resolution was adopted by a unani-mous vote, and the meeting adjourned with much good feeling

Feathered Architects.

Among the curiosities of nature there are none better worthy of study than the nests of birds. The skill displayed by these little architects is simply wonderful, and one is lost in wonder at the knowledge, patience and perseverance of these feathered builders. Especially is this the case of pensile birds, that suspend their habitations on branches, sometimes hanging them over the water.

The weaver-bird, which embraces several varieties, is one of the most ingenious of the pensile birds. It generally hangs its nest on a twig over the water, and so low down that a monkey attemps to steal the eggs, which is apt to do, the twig bends with its weight and a cold bath is the consequence. The Bahali weaver-bird of South Africa is a very small bird with an ambition to live in a very large house, and industry enough to build it for itself. The shape of the nest is similar to an oil flask, but of course greatly magnified in dimensions, and very rough on the outside. The sociable weaver birds unite their efforts, and make a kind of thatched roof under which, or rather in which, they build their nests. Sometimes this structure is ten feet square. Each nest is shut out from every other, although all are under the same roof, and while the whole com-munity join in building the roof, each pair builds its own nest. The commencement is interwoven with the branches of the trees the whole structure being neat and compact.

The palm swift of Jamaica, so called from its rapid flight, builds a curious nest which it hangs to a spathe of the cocoanut palm. The exterior is of cotton and the interior of feathers the walls being very strong and compact. Sometimes it builds several nests and glues them together, leaving an opening between them like a gallery.

The lanceolate honey-eater builds a nest in the shape of a hammock, and suspends it by the ends to a small twig. It is made of grass and wool mixed with the down of certain flowers. This nest is very deep and comfortable, and may probably have sug-gested to man the hammock.

The tailor-bird, which is a native of India, is quite expert in sewing. It makes along nest of leaves, which it sews together with the fiber of a plant, piercing holes in them with its beak. In the hollow formed, it de posits a quantity of cotton, thus preparing a soft, warm nest for its young.

Papa: "Well, girls, Lent is over, and now what have you done for the good of the church during the season of penance?" Bess (with a sudden attack of bravery): "Molly hasn't done much of anything; but I—hm—er—I've promised to marry the new rector."

How the Suez Canal is Worked.

The number of ships in the Suez Canal at one and the same time is sometimes very great; the slightest mistake or carelessness therefore in sending signals from station to station might lead to very serious conse-quences. The way in which the Canal is worked from the Suez office is, like many other ingenious devices, exceedingly simple. It is ascribed to the local head of the ad-ministration, M. Chartrey, who deserves immense credit both for the invention itself and for the way in which it is applied to the traffic. Against the wall at one side of the room is a narrow shelf or platform along which runs a groove. At intervals this trough or groove has deep recesses, and at two places these recesses are of larger size. This trough or groove represents the Canal. The recesses are the sidings. The larger intervals are the Great Bitter Lake and Timsah. When the vessel has been signal-led and is about to enter the Canal at, say, the Suez end, a small toy or model three or four inches long is chosen to represent her. A group of these model ships stands ready beside the model canal, each furnished with a flag. About forty have the English flag, ten or a dozen the French flag, and so on with other nationalities. As the ship comes up and her name is known, it is written on paper and placed on the toy boat. The whole number of ships thus actually in the Canal at any moment can be seen at a glance and, as the telegraphic signals give notice, the toy boats are moved along, or placed in a siding, or shown traversing one of the lakes at full speed. Signals are sent from the office to the various gares prescrib-ing the siding at which each ship must stop to let another ship meet and pass it. The official who is on duty keeps the models moving as he receives notice, taking care, when perhaps two ships going in opposite directions are both nearing the same siding, to give timely warning to the pilots in charge by means of the signal balls and flags at each station under his control from the office, and so directs which of the two is to lie up and which is to proceed. Bar-ring accidents, the whole arrangement goes like clockwork; the clerk can read off in a moment the name, tonnage, nationality, draught and actual situation of every steam-er; he can tell what pilot she has on board, her breadth of beam, the rate she is moving at, and everything else which has to be known about her; and he is able without an effort to govern all her movements, to pres-cribe the place where she is to pass the night and the hour at which she is to get under way in the morning, although he does not see her, and probably never saw her in his life.

The Insane Duchess of Cumberland.

The Duchess of Cumberland, the youngest sister of the Princess of Wales, has become insane, and it has been found necessary to place her under medical care and restraint. The Duchess has for a long time suffered from mental depression, and her illness reached a crisis about a fortnight ago, with the result that she manifested the suicidal tendencies which are often associated with a condition of pronounced melancholia. The cause of this breakdown is by no means clear. She has had several children in rapid succession, and had been much weakened in consequence, never having been a strong wo-man. The Duchess had looked thin and miserably shattered for two years past, and during her long visit to Copenhagen last summer all her relatives were perfectly shocked at her appearance. Her comparat-ively lonely life at Gmunden was much against her, especially as the Duke of Cum-berland has become very soured and depres-sed. They went to Vienna early in Febru-ary, and the Duchess benefited by the change, went into society and seemed better in every way, but the news of the plot against the Czar and Czarina caused a re-lapse, and she is now in a most critical and precarious condition. It is to be feared that there are but very slight hopes of a recovery, as the private accounts which have reached London are as bad as possible. The Duchess is a woman of considerable ability and high-ly accomplished. She is the favorite child of her parents, and has always been the pet of the family.

Why it Failed.

Political Boss—"See here, didn't I tell you to run this paper so I'd get plenty of votes?"

Hired Editor—"I have never lost a chance to appeal to the prejudices of your consti-tuents."

Political Boss—"Then how does it happen that my political strength is no greater than it was before?"

Hired Editor—"The people you depend on can't read."

How Victoria Was Named.

Considering the "strained relations" with Russia which have marked the whole course of the Queen's reign it is remarkable that her first name, Alexandrina, should have been conferred upon her in honor of the then reigning Czar, of whom the Duke of Kent was an admirer, and who was our faithful and close ally. It was in the Castlereagh period of our foreign policy. George IV. was to have contributed another name, Georgiana. But Georgiana Alexandrina would have deprived the emperor of the place of precedence, and "Alexandrina Georgiana" would have derogated from the claims of the name borne by the actual king of England and all his Hanoverian predeces-sors. The name of the queen's mother was therefore substituted for that of her uncle. In the commencement of the christening of the new born princess she was called Alex-andrina Victoire, but the second name was speedily Anglicized or Latinized into Vic-toria.

A little before William IV.'s death there was some flutter among official people as to the designation under which the queen ex-pectant should be proclaimed and should re-main, and Lord Campbell, then Sir John Campbell and attorney general, represents himself as having decided this matter in conjunction with Charles Greville and Lord Lyndhurst as representing the opposition, in favor of the baptismal name for the pro-clamation, leaving it to the queen to choose afterward the name under which she should reign. Among other absurd suggestions there was one that she should be styled Elizabeth II. The assumption apparently was that her majesty was always to remain a maiden queen, with perhaps Lord Mel-bourne for her Leicester, Lord John Russell for her Essex and Sir John Campbell for her Sir Francis Bacon. The fates happily have otherwise determined. But it is curious to think that but for chance or caprice or good sense we might now be preparing for the jubilee, not of Queen Victoria but of Queen Alexandrina or Queen Georgiana—I put Queen Elizabeth out of the question.

A Delicate Question.

The Parisian advocates discussed the deli-cate question: "Has a husband a right to open his wife's letters?" at their last confer-ence, and they decided that he has. A jour-nalist who has consulted several extra legal luminaries on the point finds them, with a single exception, in substantial agreement with the lawyers. An "Enlightened priest," whose name is not given, answered that the doctrine of the church was that the "husband is master in the house," and that he had, therefore, a perfect right to open his wife's letters. M. de Pressense, the leading Pro-testant pastor in Paris, was somewhat less affirmative; though, as regards wives who had anything to fear from the the exercise of the right, he supported the decision of the barristers, while in the case of a good wife he could not see how it mattered either way. Alexander Dumas, looking at the question from the historic-philosophical standpoint, contended that what we know of the rela-tions of Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden clearly establishes the right of the husband to inspect his wife's correspondence. Mme. Peyrebrune's answer was also in the affirm-ative, though she added that the question was of no importance, as compromising let-ters are never sent through the post. Mme. Adam was the only dissentient. In her opinion, the husband who opened his wife's letters was nothing more or less than a black-guard.

An Excellent Manager.

But she ought not to have bragged to her second husband.

"My fust," said Mrs. Spriggs to Spriggs, her second, "was given to incompatibility of temper with me, and didn't want the ex-pense and disgrace of gettin' a divorce, and so I jist put a can of kerosene near the stove, and when my fust began a-cussin' and a swearin', as usual, kase he couldn't git the fire to light, I jist p'inted significantly to the can. I married you jist six months after, Spriggs."

She can't get Spriggs up now, at all, to light the fire.

He Found his Man.

Brown—What's the matter with Dumley? I saw him across the way a little while ago, and he looked quite used up.

Robinson—He was all right yesterday.

Brown—Where did you see him?

Robinson—I met him on the street. The Bugle had an article about him in the morn-ing, and he was looking for the reporter who wrote it.

Brown—Ah, yes; he must have found him.

The Bear that was Interested in a Drummer.

"You know Jonty—Jonty, of Toronto?

"Yes, I know him well."

"That fellow's got the most cheek and can tell the biggest lie in the business. He told me that he was met by a bear once, and that he got away with it. I asked to see the skin, but he said he gave it to a mash he made in the next town; but he offered to give me her address. She'd moved. But he met this bear, and this bear looked at him. He knew in a minute he was a drummer, the bear did, and he licked his chops, anticipatin' eatin' him clean up. Jonty had great presence of mind, and he opened his sample case and showed the bear his baking powder. The bear was interest-ed. Bears have a great deal of curiosity. He began examining it coolly, just as if he was going to eat a drummer, and he might as well begin with the samples. He licked up all the baking powder and seemed to en-joy it. All that Jonty wanted then was time. So he skirmished around until the baking powder began to work, and the bear began to swell. Upon my word, Jonty told me that the bear swelled up until he floated away into the air, and Jonty tied a rope to him, fastened the other end to a tree, and killed him with lead at his leisure."

"Did you ask where Jonty got the rope?"

"What was the good? I knew he was lyin'."

How He Would Act.

"I see by the papers, Mr. Yager, that a woman, supposing her husband dead, mar-ried another man, when, after an absence of twenty years, the first husband turns up and finds husband Number Two occupying his wife's affections."

"Ugh. Vhen I vas dot odder feller und camed home und finds mine frau mit anodder feller I don'd meinsellef kick for dot."

"What would you do in a like case?"

"Vhy, I let him haf her und I got anodder young von und shtard a saloon. Dere peen blenty sea in der fish vhat don'd have peen catched yit, haint it?"

"Yes, but you couldn't help feeling bodly over the matter."

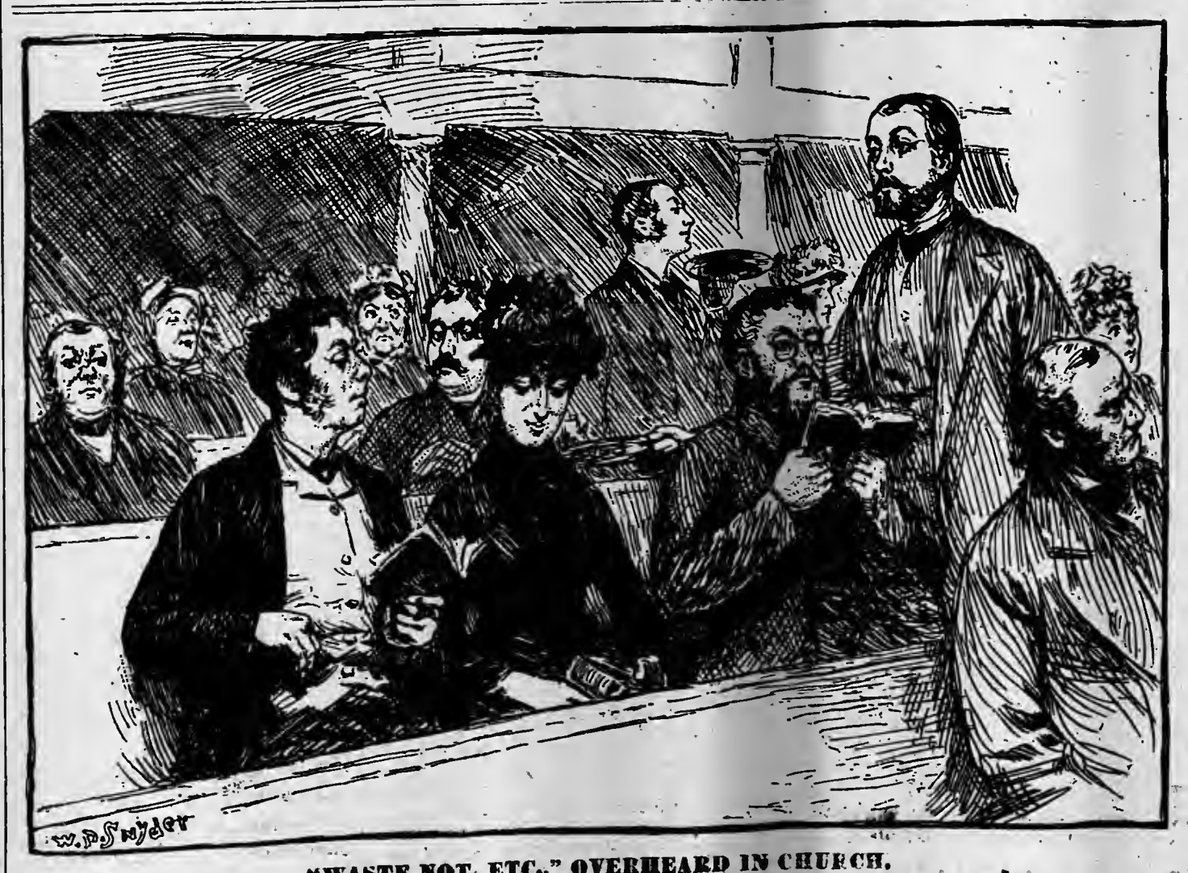
"No sire-ee, Bop. Dot peen blenty times petter vhen a etdt frau anodder feller got marriedt as vhen she a cistern got fall in her und shpile der vater. I see it shtand in der baper a oldt voman fall der cistern in for a mans gesterdav. Dot vas vurster as he got anodder feller marriedt. I sooner mein frau dwo odder fellers got married to as fall mein cistern only vone time in und got her drownded. I don'd trink dot vater no more. I sooner it all got bumped oud firsd. I dinks dot vas goot luck ouf some oldt vomans got some odder feller marriedt."

That Aint Where the Trouble is.

"Oh, how little we foolish women know what we are dooming ourselves to when we unite ourselves in wedlock!" sighed Mrs. Nagger, the other day, when her husband suggested that a little more economy might not be a bad thing. "Here I've been toil-ing and slaving all my life, trying to skimp and save, and here you are always preach-ing economy. I could have married half a dozen rich men, too. It's my opinion that no man has a right to get married until he has a home to which to take a wife."

"You think he ought to have a home first, do you?"

"Yes, I do. Before he gets the bird he ought to have the cage all ready."



"Well," snarled Mr. N., "I don't see it that way."

"Of course you don't. Men never do. They think it's only a woman's place to work her life away for them."

"No, they don't," he snapped out. "That ain't where the trouble is. But be-fore a man goes to blowing himself on cages and things he'll find out whether he's got a canary bird to put into it, or an old poll parrot that 'ud chatter the life out of him if he got her board and lodging in the apart-ments of Queen Victoria."

Plenty of Women There.

At a Conservative meeting recently held in Duncan, it was intimated that ladies were specially invited, and that the two front seats would be reserved for their accommo-dation. On the night of the meeting a lady passing the hall door suddenly remembered the invitation and meeting, and resolved, out of curiosity, on attending, but, afraid that perhaps she might be the only female present, she approached a stalwart High-land policeman standing guard at the door and asked if he had seen any ladies going in. "Plenty, matam, plenty," was the re-assuring reply; "the hall's nearly fu', an' every third man's a woman!"

"WASTE NOT, ETC.," OVERHEARD IN CHURCH.

Mr. W. (to Mrs. W., as the plate is about to be passed): "MARIA, HAVE YOU GOT THAT AMERICAN QUARTER THAT WAS PASSED ON YOU YESTERDAY?"

FARM.

Farming and Fruit Culture.

One of our well experienced contributors advocates the separation of the two pursuits, horticulture and agriculture, as he claims that one man cannot do justice to both. One or the other will be surely neglected. The reason of this he claims to be obvious. Both require attention at one and the same time, and whichever predominates in the mind of the owner is sure to be attended to at the expense of the other, hence, either de-vote your attention to farming alone or to horticulture alone.

These two branches of trade, he claims, are as distinct as shoemaking and black-smithing, carpentering and bricklaying, coopering and pork packing. Not that a farmer may not raise fruit for his family, or a fruit raiser plant corn and potatoes, squashes and cucumbers for his family; but the absorbing interest should be either one or the other, and before this one inter-est all else should bow and become subser-vient.

He says he never yet saw a farmer trot-ting off to market in haying time with a basket of currants, a box of gooseberries, a barrel of red astrachans, or golden sweets, or early harvests, without thinking his and the services of his team would be worth twice the value of the fruits in attending to the crops upon the farm.

One single acre planted to fruit, in his opinion, is all that one who follows general farming should attempt to attend to, and this acre should include apples, pears, plums, peaches, cherries and quinces.

His idea in the main is not an unreason-able one, but farmers will hardly give up the good sized orchard and confine themselves to a single acre, as the small fruits can be grown here and there upon the premises to supply the family, and perhaps a surplus for market, and yet not devote time to it that would encroach upon duties to the agricul-tural department.

Really, when we come down to the fine point, system is required in running the farm. It would be a difficult matter to make extensive horticultural pursuits and general husbandry, on ordinary farms, work well together, but a generous sprinkling of fruit culture will not only make the regular farmer's home pleasanter, but will add to its profits in the way of food supply if none is grown to sell.

Notes and Comments.

Wash horse collars with carbolic soap and then oil the inside.

Before the hurry comes, provide a stock of summer wood, if it has not already been done.

If stable floors are not sound, do not neg-lect them. Repairs are cheaper than losing a horse by having his legs broken.

Experience has taught you something during the past year. Write it out and sen it to this paper for the benefit of others.

One day's work this spring in the door-yard will tell more in future than any other spent during the year upon the farm, for a pleasant home has more than one signifi-cance.

One third of the wood ashes is lime, and this lime is more valuable for crops than stone lime; it once having entered into vege-table life is more soluble and easily taken up by plants.

Successful farming is made by attention to little things. The farmer who does his best earns his money with best appreciation and uses it with best results. Such men are the salt of the earth.

The family cow should be made just as comfortable as possible and she will pay for it in yield of milk. Every hour she suffers from any cause makes the milk account cor-respondingly.

One pound hay lost per day (and on many farms there are several) to each animal, the waste will amount to two tons to every twen-ty-five head of cattle in the foddering sea-son.

Guard against having any beam, bar, or protrusion in the stable that a horse can get aginst so as to wear away the mane. The proper adjustment of head gear and collar is also important.

A kicking cow is not a pleasant piece of property to possess, and unless she is re-markably good for milk and butter, she had better be put to raising calves or prepared for the shambles as soon as possible.

The best systems of cropping are invari-ably those which call for the most thorough preparation of the soil.

If the farmers of this country realized the danger that lies in the path of ignorance, they would be more concerned about the future.

There is always a fair demand for the best products of the soil, and when they are obtained by skilful management there is also a fair margin of profit.

At this season of the year stock must be well cared for. We have had a long, cold winter, and while it has not been an un-usually severe one on sheltered stock, the possible weather between now and the com-ing of grass may be, hence the necessity of extra care and food from now till it can be turned into pastures.

A good garden, well supplied with choice varieties of vegetables and fruits, is one of the greatest luxuries of the farm and house-hold. There is no farmer but can afford to have just such a garden; no farmer can afford to be without one. A good garden and a good cow will go a long way towards supplying the table with good, wholesome food for the family.

"It's all very well," said the gravedigger, "to advise a young man to begin at the bottom and work up, but in my business it ain't practicable."

"I hear that your husband is very ill," said Mrs. Philpot. "Yes, poor fellow," re-plied Mrs. Shooper, "he leads such a sedi-mentary life that his health is shattered."

"They say fortune knocks once at every man's door," said an old pauper, who died at the almshouse the other day, "but if it ever came to mine, I didn't hear it." "Why not?" "I guess I must have been in the saloon around the corner."

"Mamma," said a small boy the other day, "do little boy angels wear shoes and stockings in summer time?" "No, my son." "Do they go barefooted?" "Yes." And do they stay out after sundown?" "I presume so." "Well, don't the stars tickle their feet when they twinkle?" The fond mother was nonplused.

Legal.

P. McCullough.
BARRISTER, SOLICITOR, &c.
OFFICE—OVER McFARLAND'S STORE,
MARKDALE.
Money to Loan.

MASSON & MASSON,
BARRISTERS, SOLICITORS, &c.
OFFICES—Owen Sound, in Vicker's Block, Poulett St.; Branch office in Markdale, over McFarland's Store, on Friday and Saturday every week.
J. MASSON, Q. C. S. MASSON. W. MASSON.
N. B.—Private and Company's funds to invest at from 6 to 8 per cent

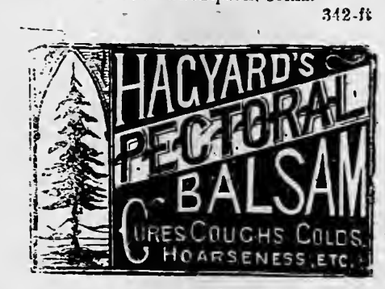
Wm. Brown,
ISSUER OF MARRIAGE LICENSES, &c Commissioner in B. R. &c.
Conveyancing in all its branches promptly attended to and carefully executed.
N. B.—Money to Lend on Real Estate security.

WILLIAM STUART,
KIMBERLEY,
Issuer of Marriage Licences. Money to Loan on Real Estate at low rates.
A few Farms for sale. Terms easy.

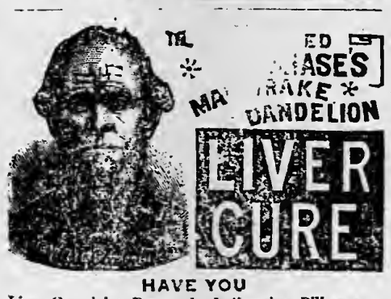
J. P. MARSHALL, L.D.S.
DENTIST,
GRADUATE OF TORONTO SCHOOL of Dentistry, will be at the Markdale House, Markdale, on the 1st and third Wednesday of each month and also at Munshaw's Hotel. Flesherton, the day following the third Wednesday in each month for the practice of his profession.

MARKDALE HOUSE,
MARKDALE, - - ONT.
J. E. Marsh, - Prop'.

ISAAC STINSON.
Builder and Contractor
In all kinds of Brick and Stone work.
Estimates given. All work guaranteed.
Orders by mail promptly attended to.
329 Residence, MARKDALE.



W. C. RICHARDS,
BUILDER, CONTRACTOR, & ARCHITECT, Markdale.
124ly



WEAVING.
Having returned to Markdale, in order to be more convenient for my customers, I beg to announce that I am now prepared to do all kinds of Custom Weaving. Residence old stand, opposite Presbyterian Church.
318 ARCH. BOYD.

R. J. SPROULE,
FLESHERTON.
Conveyancer, Appraiser, Valuator and Money Lender. Deeds, Mortgages, Leases and Wills drawn up and Valuations made on shortest notice. Charges very low. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Money Lender & Postmaster. Flesherton.

6 PER CENT.
Money loaned on Farm or Town Property at west rates of interest. Apply to
R. J. SPROULE,
Conveyancer & Postmaster. Flesherton.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT 131 con. 3 west of T. & S. Rd. Artemesia, 50 acres, about 20 acres clear of stumps and stones, balance good hardwood bush Five miles from Markdale and four from Flesherton. For further particulars apply to A. S Thompson. Flesherton P. O. or J. J Thompson, Orilla.
342-ft

HAVE YOU
Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, Jaundice, Headache, Dizziness, Pain in the Back, Costiveness, or any disease arising from a deranged liver, DR. CHASE'S LIVER CURE will be found a sure and certain remedy.
NATURE'S REMEDY
The unqualified success of Dr Chase's Liver Cure in Liver Complaint rests solely with the fact that it is compounded from natures well-known liver regulators, MANDRAKE AND DANDELION, combined with many other invaluable roots, barks and herbs, having a powerful effect on the Kidneys, Stomach, Bowels and Blood.
500,000 SOLD
Over one-half million of Dr. Chase's Recipe Books were sold in Canada alone. We want every man, woman and child who is troubled with Liver Complaint to try this excellent remedy.
SOMETHING NEW. GIVEN AWAY FREE
Wrapped around every bottle of Dr. Chase's Liver Cure is a valuable Household Medical Guide and Recipe Book (84 pages), containing over 200 useful recipes pronounced by medical men and druggists as invaluable, and worth ten times the price of the medicine.
TRY CHASE'S CATARRH CURE. A safe and positive remedy. Price, 25 cents.
TRY CHASE'S KIDNEY AND LIVER PILLS. 25 cts. per box.
SOLD BY ALL DEALERS
E. EDMANSON & CO., Sole Agents, Bradford

Markdale Roller Mill.
FARMERS HAVING No. 1 WHEAT and preferring flour from their own wheat, can get it by bringing twenty bushels or more.
Flour always on Hand
Flour $3.80 to $4.20 per. bbl.
SHORTS, per ton - $12.00
BRAN, " - 12.00
The highest market price paid for Fall and Spring wheat.
J. W. FORD.

CANADIAN PACIFIC R. R.
OWEN SOUND BRANCH

TIME TABLE.

Taking effect Monday, July 28th, 1886.

GOING NORTH.

STATIONS.	Mail.	Exp.
Toronto....Leave.....	7 45am	4 50pm
Cardwell Junction.....	9 25 "	6 30 "
Orange- Arrive.....	10 05 "	7 03
ville. Leave.....	10 20 "	7 22
Orangeville Jun.....	10 32 "	7 34
Shelburne.....	10 58 "	8 04
Dundalk	11 22 "	8 30
Flesherton.....	11 47 "	8 55
Markdale.....	12 02pm	9 10
Berkeley.....	12 14 "	9 22 "
Holland Centre.....	12 23 "	9 32 "
Chatsworth.....	12 38 "	9 49 "
Owen Sound.....	1 05 "	10 20 "

GOING SOUTH.

STATIONS.	Exp.	Mail.
Owen Sound.....	5 40am	2 40pm
Chatsworth.....	6 10 "	3 07 "
Holland Centre	6 25 "	3 30 "
Berkeley	6 34 "	3 40 "
Markdale.....	6 47 "	3 52 "
Flesherton	7 02 "	4 06 "
Dundalk	7 26 "	4 31 "
Shelburne	7 51 "	4 57 "
Orangeville Jun.....	8 22 "	5 23 "
Orange Arrive.....	8 30 "	5 35 "
ville.. Leave.....	8 45 "	5 55 "
Cardwell Junction.....	9 25 "	6 30 "
Toronto.....Arrive.....	10 55 "	8 10

WM. G. GUTHRIE,
Plain & Ornamental Plasterer
MARKDALE.
Arches, Cornices, Centre Flowers, and all kinds of plain and ornamental plastering executed at cheapest rates. Calsomining Lime Washing and Repairs promptly attended to.
330

TO SCHOOL TRUSTEES.
The undersigned is manufacturing an excellent assortment of School Furniture.
Consisting of SCHOOL SEATS and DESKS, TEACHERS' DESKS, etc., of the latest design and most approved pattern. Highly recommended by School Trustees and Teachers, for cheapness, comfort and compactness, wherever tried. An assortment of Farm and School Bells kept always on hand. Send for catalogue to Chatsworth P. O.
181 ANDREW McGILL.

MONEY TO LOAN.
ON real estate security, at low rate of interest, no commission charged. Business Strictly Confidential,
J. S. BLACK,
190 Pomona, P. O.

FARM FOR SALE.
LOT No. 24, con. 4, N. D. R. Glenelg, 100 acres, will be sold cheap and on easy terms of payment, for further particulars apply on the premises, or by letter to
J. S. BLACK,
190-tf. Pomona P. O.

Markdale Woolen Mill.
Custom Carding, Weaving, Fulling, Dyeing and cloth dressing, done in a workmanlike manner and on very short notice.
First Class Cotton Warp
supplied at the lowest possible rates.
A call solicited.
Terms strictly cash or wool.
Sept. 28, 1886 F. J. RITCHIE.

Notices of Births, Marriages, and Deaths twenty five cents.

BIRTHS.

McFARLANE—In Markdale on the 24th April the wife of Mr. Dan. McFarlane, blacksmith, of a son.

DEATHS.

DOOLAN—In Glenelg on the 30th April. Mr. Maurice Doolan aged 60 years.

MARRIAGES.

On the 28th April, by Rev. A. Wilson. Mr. Geo. Warling, to Miss Josephine Gilbert all of Artemesia.

DISTRICT DOINGS.

A SYNOPSIS OF COUNTY AND DISTRICT DOINGS FROM OUR EXCHANGES PREPARED FOR STANDARD READERS.

Navigation opened at Owen Sound last week.

MANY PERSONS SUFFER.—From impure Breath and suppose it comes from a disorderedered stamach. In many cases the actual cause is Catarrh. Nasal Balm will remove the cause, and cure.

A fund for the election of a Y. M. C. A. building at Owen Sound has reached the sum of $1,255.

WIND THE CLOCK.—The best clock needs regulating and winding when the mainspring runs down. So too, when the main machinery gives out, it needs regulating and the main spring (pure blood) needs toning. Burdock Blood Bitters will regulate and tone all broken down conditions of the system. In purchasing B. B. B. beware of counterfeits.

Rev. John A. Ross, Presbyterian minister of Dundalk, was married last week to Miss McGregor, daughter of Peter McGregor, Esq., reeve of Dundalk.

A FAIR OFFER.—For many years the proprietors of Hagyard's Yellow Oil have offered to refund the money to all purchasers of the medicine where it failed to give relief in case of pain or painful affections, such as rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, deafness, burns, bruises, sprains, stiff joints and cords, and internal or external inflammation.

Tara has passed a by-law sanctioning the expenditure of considerable money in the improvements of her streets.

IN A BAD CONDITION.—"I was so bad with dyspepsia that I could not take food of any kind without distress, and could not take a drink of water for a month at a time. I have been a great sufferer with liver complaint and dyspepsia for many years." says Mrs. Nelson W. Whitehead, of Nixon, Ont., whom two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters cured

A. G. Hunter of Dundalk has been successful in procuring a patent right in the United States for his "Automatic Orator."

FROZE HIS FEET.—While out skating last winter, G. Varcoe, of Brandon, Man., got his feet badly frozen. He rubbed them with snow, and then applied Hagyard's Yellow Oil, which speedily cured them, and saved him from being a cripple.

A HAMILTON ITEM.—"My wife has been a suffer from liver complaint for many years. I am glad to be able to testify to the benefit received from Burdock Blood Bitters, as well as in the case of my little boy' who had glandular swellings." J. S. Miller, 77 Victoria Ave. North Hamilton, Ont. B. B. B. regulates the entire grandular system.

A MATTER OF FACT.—One of the preparations that seldom disappoints on trial, is that old standard throat and lung medicine, Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, sore throat and other diseases of the air passages.

Feversham.

From our own Correspondent.

The Saw Mill has commenced operation for another season with Ira Perigo as head sawyer and J. McQuarrie at the tail. With those two worthies at the helm, lumber should roll out lively.

Mr. Ed. Halton treated the boy's to a taffy pull the other night. Long may you live Edward.

We are sorry to hear that Chas. W. Little (Blacksmith for J. Paul & Bro.) is going to leave our town; Charlie intends going to Nebraska to try his luck.

Chas. J. Allister late of Feversham has started a lumber yard in Edgely Dakota.

Dr. T. S. Spence, of Fordwich, and Mr. Edward Spence, of Walkerton, were visiting Mr. J. E. Spence's for a few days.

Mr. Mark Hall is in town again, he has been up in Muskoka for some time.

Lieut. Rowe acted a little better at the S. A. Barracks, last Sunday night.

Mr. J. Paul & Bro. have erected a belfry on the school house, the trustees of Feversham School have procured a fine bell.

Public Notice.
To all whom it may concern.

I R. L. Stephen the Druggist of Markdale have been appointed agent for JOHNSON'S celebrated Tonic and nervine. JOHNSON'S little liver Pills, and JOHNSON'S all healing White Ointment. The nervine is the very best in the market, in all diseases caused by poverty of blood, for Nervousness, Hysteria, and the PALENESS of Complexion so often noticed in female's, loss of appetite and general debility. In conjunction with the Liver Pills, it is the very best for all diseases arrising from Torpid liver or bad stomach.
The White Ointment is the very best in the market for Salt Rheume, Barbers Itch, Pimples. Chafs, Burns, Scalds, and all Skin diseases of a scrofulous nature. Try these fin remedies and you will not be disappointed.
For sale at R. L. STEPHEN'S the druggist, Markdale, Ont.

From Josh Billings.

Menny a phool haz passed thru life with fair suckcess by taking a bak sete and sticking to it.

Yung man, don't sware—you may convince yurself by swaring but you kan't the other phellow.

After we git the Christains better civilized than they are now, I am in phavor ov attacking the hethen.

The hardest sinner in the whole world to convert iz the one who spends half hiz time in sinning, and the other half in repentance.

Those people who are allwus looking for parfekshun in this world generally compromise for a second or third-rate artkle before they git thru.

Yung man don't git down on yure knees before the world. If yu do, it won't be long before the world will insist on yure getting down a peg lower.

The grate mass of mandkind seem to be kranks—either trieing to prove something they kan't understand, or trieing to understand something they kan't prove.

There iz a great deal of speculashin that is trying to untwist the untwistable. This iz just az smart az setting down in a wash-tub, taking hold ov the handles, and trieing to lift the unliftable.

The Red Man Not Dying Out.

A letter is published by one of our exchanges in which the writer states that the Indian population is rapidly increasing in Canada and that they promise to become an important element in the country. According to the correspondent the number of Indians in the Province of Quebec has increased from 4,350 in 1851 to 12,286 in 1882, and in Ontario their number, which was 10,423 in 1861 reached 17,267 in 1886. While the red men have increased in numbers they have also made considerable advancement in other respects. On all the reserves in Ontario agricultural pursuits are by many industriously carried on, and very creditable churches and schools have been established and are being attended with great and satisfactory result to all.

Assembly Notes.

The actual business of the first session of the sixth Parliament of Ontario was closed at a quarter past five o'clock on Saturday morning. The formal prorogation took place at three o'clock in the afternoon. There have been more sensational sessions of the Assembly. There have been sessions in which a greater number of questions of active Provincial concern have been considered. But there have been few sessions in which more important questions have been dealt with. The legislation covers a wide and varied field. A broad and well-considered scheme of University Federation has been settled. Adequate provision has been made for the erection of new Parliament buildings by an increase of the apropriation from $750,000 to $1,050,000. Power has been taken to dispose of the Upper Canada College property, to transfer the College endowment to the University, and to erect and endow a new residental school. The Woodstock Baptist College and McMaster Hall have been erected into McMaster University with degree-conferring powers. The powers of Ontario Medical Council have been materially increased. There has been an important limitation of the power to distrain for rent. The Government have taken power to appoint police magistrates without the consent of the County Councils. Important amendments have been made to the law of libel. A public park has been established at Niagara Falls. The exemption from taxation on income has been increased from $400 to $700. The qualification for municipal office has been reduced. The Land Titles Act has been extended to the outlying districts and provision made for its adoption by County Councils. It has been decided that no future contracts shall be entered into for the labor of convicts at the Central prison. Better provisions has been made for the guardianship of minors. The York shrievalty has been divided. The Mechanics Lien law has been amended by making it clear that the wages of a workman cannot be garnished before the registration of the lien during the statutory period. The registration respecting religuous instruction in the schools have been amended. It has been provided that no higher rate of taxation for school purposes shall be imposed upon a landlord in consequence of a default of the tenant than that fixed for the school of which he is a supporter. A recommendation has been made in favor of the abolition of tolls on roads within three years. And in many other respects the law has been improved and amended inequalities removed, wrongs redressed and the public interest promoted and protected.—[Globe.

CLIPPINGS.

If Owen Sound would stop the importation of niggars and send some of those already there on a North Pole expedition the town would be improved in appearance and poultry raising would be a lucrative business.—[Chatsworth

As far as can be ascertained there were at the time of the last municipal elections the names of 5083 ladies on the roll as entitled to vote. Of these 3958 actually voted and 125 temperance candidates were elected and 53 defeated. The women are going to make their influence felt at elections, and on the right side, the side of sobriety, decency and fair dealing. All right. TRUTH has no fear of evil consequence flowing from women having the right to vote with men at municipal or parliamentary elections. It won't make them a whit less womanly and domestic and it will help to defeat questionable candidates for office at home.—[Truth.

THE Lehigh Valley Echo of the 27th inst., says:—"The Resurrection of Christ was the subject of the Rev. Mr. Hall's sermon last Sunday evening. The dicourse was an able one and assisted in proving the incarnation of divinity in man and in drawing many lessons therefrom. The speaker's word painting of the scene when Christ entombed in the sepulchre vaunted by his divine arm the king of terrors and walked forth a living proof of the power within him was grand and pathetic and made a deep impression on the minds of his hearers even though they had heard it a hundred times. Mr. Hall's many friends will be pleased to hear such favorable accounts from him in his new sphere.

A TRIUMPH OF JOURNALISM.—We have the publication oph The Roccay Mountain Cyclone with some phew difficulties in the way. The type phrom whom we bought our phor this printing ophice phailed to supply us with any ephs or cays, so it will be phour or phive weex before we can get any. The mistaque will phound out till a day or two ago, have ordered the missing letters and will have to get along without them till they come. We don't like the look of this variety ov spelling much better than our readrs, but mistakes happen in the best regulated phamilies and iph the ph's and c's and x's are bold out we shall ceep(sound the c) on the Cyclone whirling aphter a phew till the sorts arrive. It is no joke to us—its a serious aphair.—[Rocky Mountain Cyclone.

LILVER MINE.—It is reported that Mr. Thos. Ferguson, of Horning Mills, has sold ten acres of land for $15,000. It is on his farm that the silver mine is supposed to be located. We cannot vouch for the correctness of the report. Two weeks ago, we were informed that Mr. Levens had been offered $75,000 for his farm and had refused it, and that he held out for $100,000. If Mr. Levens ever gets such an offer, we would advise him to accept it at once.—[Shelburne Free Press.

The following correspondence from Owen Sound to the Mail will be read with interest:—"OWEN SOUND, April 27.—In educational matters, as well as many other things, our buisy town is rather ahead than behind other towns in Ontario. The Collegiate Institute, visited by Minister Ross to have the best equipped building of the kind in Ontario, has had the largest attendance of any of the cities. The present average attendance is 254 and the staff of six teachers, the principal being Mr. F. N. Mc—, is hardly sufficient and another will be added shortly. Our public schools have an average attendance of 878, and are taught by a staff of 17 teachers. The Separate school with an average attendance of 75 is presided over by the Sisters of Charity. We spent last year over $17,500 in educational matters and this year will probably see the sum increased. The Public schools are badly crowded, and a new West Ward school will probably be built early next summer.

Church Notes.

Rev. Geo. H. Cornish will preach at Dundalk next Sunday and conduct the sacremental service there.

Rev. T. Hall will occupy the pulpit in Markdale Methodist Church next Sunday morning and Mr. Geo. Cornish in the evening.

Divine service was conducted by Rev. Mr. McLeod in Cook's Church on Saturday and on the following Sabbath the Sacrament of the Lords Supper was dispensed by the Pastor. The services were largely attended and were of a very enjoyable character. Twenty three new members were added to the roll.

Markdale Standard

"HEW TO THE LINE, LET THE CHIPS FALL WHERE THEY MAY."

SEVENTH YEAR.—No. 349. MARKDALE, ONT., MAY 12, 1887. C. W. RUTLEDGE, Proprietor.

Local and Other Items.

Notices in these columns intended to benefit any individual or Society will be charged ten cents a line for the first insertion and five cents a line each subsequent insertion.

NOTICE.—Correspondence, communications, Advertisements, &c., must be in this office by noon on Tuesday to insure publication that week.

30 DAYS!

30 DAYS!

For 30 Days Only, there will be a great discount sale of

Watches, Clocks, Jewelry, Silverware, Spex, &c.,

Do not miss it but come early and secure some of the bargains before they are gone, only for 30 days, positively, as we are giving you 25 per cent, off on all cash sales over $1.00. The finest make of Nicol Alarm Clock actually selling at RUSSELL'S NOTED JEWELERY STORE for only $2.00, while they are $2.50 to $2.75 elsewhere and the finest assortment of Fine Plated Chains only $1.60 which are generally sold for $2.25 to $2.50. RUSSELL'S is the place you can get bargains, nobody can compete with us. Come and see for yourselves, we will not pay your millage or give you meals as a catch, but will sell you goods a great deal cheaper than you can get elsewhere and remember the only place to get your Watch repaired properly is at

RUSSELL'S Noted Jewelry Store,

FLESHERTON.

FOR something fresh read R. L. Stephen's new adv.

Awnings and hammocks are now seasonable.

CLOVER & TIMOTHY Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

A comfortable dwelling to rent. Apply at this office.

Garden Seeds at Stephen's Drug Store.

WOOL! WOOL!!—Any quantity wool wanted at S. Hill's.

Get your plow repairs from Jackson. Old metal taken in exchange.

MARKDALES assessment is $7,460 higher than last year.

Fishing Tackle all kinds at the Medical Hall, A. Turner, & Co.

Rejuvenator is a safe and reliable Bitters, in all seasons of the year. Sold by Smith the Barber.

THE weather last week was delightful for seeding operations and some days well up to July heat.

JOHN M. DAVIS has purchased the stables and dwelling on Mill St., formerly known as, Hull's Livery.

A number of good second hand Buggies for sale cheap. Also a good Sulkey at W. Mason's Carriage Works, Markdale.

Forty thousond packages of Rejuvenator Bitters sold in four years by its own merits, sold by Smith the Barber.

EUPHRASIA Township Court of Revision will be held at Rocklyn on Friday the 27th.

Glenelg Council meets as a Court of Revision at the town hall on Saturday the 28th May.

PLOW POINTS.—All the standard makes and patterns for sale at Moffat's foundry, three for $1.00 cash.

WE had a very friendly call from Mrs. J. Lamb, Miss A. Anderson and Miss E. S. Wright on Tuesday last.

THE sound of the saw and hammer and ring of the trowel tell us that building operations are the order.

JACKSON'S new photo gallery is nearly completed and will be occupied in about a week.

1,000,000 dcz., of eggs and 2 tons of butter wanted ot Davis' for which the highest market price will be paid.

SPRING time has suddenly devcloped into summer heat and as a consequence vegetation is very rapid.

PUBLIC VERDICT."—"That for satisfactory watch work, and reliable watches etc.," the place to go is W. A. Brown's finely stocked Jewelly store, Markdale.

MR. ARCHY BUTTER paid Markdale a flying visit this week. He has been to Mexico and Southren California since he left Markdale a few years ago.

R. O. WHITBY has a first class top buggy and a large and beautifully situated park lot for sale at a sacrifice. For particulars apply to John Whitby.

HEAD QUARTERS for Buggie Tops, Milk Waggon Springs, or anything in the Carriage line is at Wm. Mason's carriage works.

Headache, Biliousness, Dyspepsia and Indigestion relieved and cured at once by Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Try it. Sample free.

A fresh stock of meal's have just been opened at Davis' which will be sold at a very small advance on cost as he will not be undersold.

REMEMBER you can get Bran, Shorts, Henfeed the same price at Bensons, as at the mill, it saves you half an honr trouble, give us a call.

OUR BAND were out again last Saturday evening and their music much appreciated by citizens as also a large number of farmers from the surrounding district.

MR. JOHN WHITBY has purchased a lot with large brick residence, on Aristocrat Avenue opposite Dr. Sproule's mansion, Markdale, where he intends moving after harvest.

Davis has constantly on hand a full supply of Ford's and Plewes' flour of the finest quality, if it is not right bring it back and your money will be refunded. Special reduction will be given for large lots.

MR. JOHN MCNEELY of Euphrasia who has been in the employ of Smith the wholesale wood and coal dealer of Toronto moved to the city with his family last week where he has been promoted in the business.

Rejuvenator Bitters assists nature and removes the cause of disease from the system, by keeping the kidneys, liver, stomach and blood pure, and natures channels free, then you have health. Sold by Smith the Barber.

WE understand Mrs. Fox of Toronto is to take part in the Methodist Church Concert on the evening of the 24th. This fact is itself sufficient to insure a full house.

NOTICE.—All persons indebted to me either by note or book account are hereby notified to call and settle the same with A. Turner, Markdale, without delay, thus save trouble and expense, T. S. Sproule.

CASH buyers will find meat in Sarjeant Bro's meat market as cheap as in any other market in Canada. Prime Bacon, Hams and other smoked and dried meats, as well as all kinds of fresh meats in season.

DON'T SPECULATE,—Run no risk in buying medicine, but try the great Kidney and Liver regulator, made by Dr. Chase, author of Chasa's receipts. Try Chase's Kiver Cure for all diseases of the Liver, Kidneys, Stamach and Bowels.

MARKDALE MARKETS.—Fall wheat 75 to 76 cents; spring wheat 75 to 76; barley 30 to 50; peas 48; oats 28; butter 14 to 15; eggs 10; potatoes 75 per bag; pork 5.40; hides 5.50.

"Notice" to Farmers. Those that have to buy their "Flour" this summer. Can buy it at Benson's, the Belfast House, the same price as at the mill, and every lb. guaranteed, both Ford's and Plewes' kept on hand. Liberal inducements made on over one barrel lots.

A stock of hand-made boots, fine and coarse, sewed and pegged, kept on hand so that you can have a good choice; also orders promptly filled, at W. McLeod's.

LOOK out for the village police Inspector; He is to make things interesting for those who neglect to clean up their yard &c., and remove obstructions off the street.

DON'T fail to call at Wm. Mason's Carriage Works and see the style and quality of the rig's he builds; he is making a specialty of the Buffalo Road gear the most stylish and durable Buggie built, and prices as low as any one in the country.

As may be seen by adv. in another column, our neighbors in Euphrasia have determined to protect their fishing grounds and will forthwith prosecute all trespassers. This is perfectly right, and others might fall in line and protect our speckled beauties from wholesale destruction.

MISS SEARLE, Dress and Mantle Maker wishes to inform the ladies of Markdale and yicinity that she is prepared to do all kinds of sewing. Cutting and fitting a specialty; lowest possible prices. Shop, over S. Hills store.

The Shelburne Turf Association will accept thanks for a handsome Press Badge and neat program for their Queen's Birthday celebration on the 24 and 25th May.

W. J. Sproule, Sewing machine, Organ and Piano agent, now occupies part of R, Askin's shop as show room where his machines and musical instruments can be inspected with greater convenience and better advantage than hertofore.

WHAT is the matter with the school section No, 15 Euphrasia. Two meetings have been held to do something about a new school house yet nothing is done. What are the trustees doing? A ratepayer.

Don't use any more nauseous purgatives such as Pills Salts &c., when you can get in Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters a medicine that moves the Bowels gently, cleansing all impurities from the system and rendering the Blood pure and cool. Sold by all Druggists. tf.

THE Ladies of the Methodist Church are making vigorous preparations for their annual Bazaar and Concert on the Queen's Birthday of which further particulars will be given later.

YORK SHRIEVALITY. Our esteemed townsman Mr. R. O. Whitby is to Toronto this week, we understand in connection with the appointment of Sheriff of York county. Mr. Whitby is a staunch supporter of the Reform Government and his claims on the party are not to be sniffed at. We doubt not his chances are good for a lucrative appointment, even though he may not succeed in this. —Since the above was written R. O. W. has returned securing important contracts in painting, and is now preparing to leave Markdale for the city, He reports business booming in the building line. Having been unsuccessful in securing the Government sit of course he does the next best thing.

To the farmers and the public generally—Consult your interests and purchase your Buggies, Democrats &c., from W. Mason's Carriage Works where you can get a first class article with a written guarantee, as cheap as you can buy factory make rigs from Agents. Be loyal and support home industry.

The small boys have lined the saugeen the past week in scores while those of more nature years were not far behind in numbers, and the dear ladies could not resist the temptation to try their luck with pole and line; as a result the speckled beauties suffered sad havock.

I have a few chests of that notorious uncolored japan tea left which I have sold at 30c. per lb and it has been pronounced by those who have used it to be better value than any Tea sold in town for the money—probably you ask why we can sell cheaper than those in trade? the answer is simply because we are satisfied with half the profit. W. L. Davis.

As the season is now opened for the sale of Bacon. Benson of the Belfast house is to the fore with a few cases; remember he will not be undersold by any one in the trade and if there is a cut to be given they are the boys that will give it to you, they are dacent little chaps.

DR. JUG'S Medicine should be used by every one at this season of the year as it is the best blood purifier in the market and will reinvigorate the frame and prepare it to bear the heats of summer. The pills are justly called the "Little Gems" as they operate without causing either griping or pain and are a sure cure for nervousness, biliousness and other affections of the Liver and Kidneys. Buy them and try them and you won't regret your investment. Sold by Turner & Co., Markdale.

OUR sport loving citizens are making vigorous preparations for the Queen's Birthday celebration. The Calithumpians are having new and unique costumes made and will doubtless appear to good advantage.

"Do you think," said a lady to her friend Mrs. S., "that if you were to be taken away your husband would ever marry again?" "O, I suppose he would,' was the reply. "I am his fourth wife, you know."

SERIOUS LOSS.—On Saturday last Mr. Bliss of the Traverston mills left that place with horse and buggy accompanied by Ed. Darcy, mail carrier, and while crossing the bridge near the mill the horse shied at the west end where the railing was off the bridge, going right over into the stream. Both men sprang from the rig and thus narrowly escaped a watery grave but the horse was drowned. It is a severe loss to Mr. Bliss as the animal was valued at $150. We understand Mr. B. will ask the township for damages.

ENTHUSIASTIC preparations are being made for the Queen's Birthday celebration in Markdale and large colored posters aro out announcing the program and prizes. The brass band are to give music during the day while the Calithumpians will add largely to the amusements. Our boys can make things immensely enjoyable when they take the notion, and they have taken the notion strong.

Markdale Cheese Factory opens next Monday with prospects of doing a largely increased business over former years. If there are any who wish to send milk to the factory and who have not signed the agreement to do so, they are request to see the manufacturer, Mr. Elliott, and do so, or authorise him through the milk-hauler to sign for him, as the agreement has been left with Mr. Elliott, for convenience.

A NEW PERODICAL.—The Grip Publishing Company, of Toronto, have commenced the publication of a new monthly periodical, entitled GRIP'S OWN LIBRARY. The first number is made up of "Good Things from GRIP," being comic pictures and comic reading selections from the pages of GRIP. It is printed on the finest calenderer paper and at the price of ten cents is a credit to the publishers, and will no doubt meet with a large sale. The second number will be entitled, "Jubilee Jollities," to be issued June 1st, and a very large edition is being prepared in anticipation of an enormous sale.

When in Markdale on the 24th don't fail to call at Jackson's new photo gallery and leave your measure for a picture.

Lundy and Countes, two citizens had a rabbit hunt on the 1st May. They ought to be prosecuted.

Angling is a gentle pastime; but when two fishermen sit on the same, log and one gets nothing but nibbles while the other pulls in the fish as fast as he can drop his line, it is impossible that there could exist between two anglers a feeling of entire and unrestrained cordiality.

Davis is to the front, with a new brand of oat meal, the steel cut, try it once and you will use no other, also a fine brand of Corn Meal just to hand, in fact anything in the Provision line may be prcoured at Davis' at prices which cannot be beaten, and if the trade mean to cut prices, he aint like a fellow that can't stay with them.

Euphrasia Council.

The Council met pursuant to adjournment on the 29th April 1887.

Members all present.

Minutes of last session of council read and confirmed. The Reeve was authorized to obtain legal advice in reference to money paid Mr. Fawcett supposed to be in error,

The Reeve was instructed to examine the state of the culverts on 24 & 25 side line and get repairs made if necessary,—The Reeve and clerk were instructed to memorialize the railway commission on behalf of this Township.

The council made a grant of $1.00 per week for the remaining part of this year, for the support of W. P. Carson, an indigent and an order issued for $15.00 of said amount.

Messrs Boyd and Erskine, were appointed to meet the committee of Holland Township to repair Town Line.

The Application of Andrew Grier, Esq., and the School Corporation, of Thornbury, asking money for entrance examinations not entertained.

The following named parties were appointed Poundkeepers, Fenceviewrs and Pathmasters, and a by-law passed accordingly.

Poundkeepers, J. B. Soul, J. B. Winter, S. Wiley, W. H. Dodson J. Wilson, J. Stitt, T. Brady, N. Curry, R. Elliott, J. M. Thurston, W. M. Artley.

Fenceviewrs, J. Raby, A. McKewen, N. Hewson, G. Proctor, J. Vickers, H. White, T. Ellis, T. Dines, W. Wiggins, E. Parker, F. Burch, D.R. Ellis, J. J. Perry, J. Cook, R. H. Stinson, J. Nelson, A. Paterson, W. Patton, J. Stinson W. Brady, J. Curry, J, Manary, R. Elliott, R. Halbert, W. M. Artly, W. Daymon.

Pathmasters, J. Rawlings, J. Raby. G. Emery, C. Clark T. Dookes, G. Booth, J. White, J. Henderson, J. McKenzie, D. Bath, C. Fawcett, G. Bath, R. Conn, J. Millar, T. Julian, G. Julian, W. Dales, J. McMorris, J. Gilray, F. Gravatt, J. Dales, J. O'Brien, W. Kinner, W. C. Smith, C. Hill, J. Boyd, J. Conn, Jr. H. White, J. Smith, J. Stewart,, H. White, T. Carnack, T. Dines, H. Reid, F. Burns S. McKnight, J. Owens, E. Boyd, G. Vickers, J. Stafford, T, Ellis, E. Gilbert, W. Lang, W. Eaton, W. McConnel, W. Wiggins, C. Wickens, W. Fawcett, P. Harris, R. Bennett, R. Raker, J. Morwood, J. Knott, E. E. Hicks, T. Donnelly, J. Eaton, J. Falls, S. Gilmour, J. Dunlop, E. Stokes, J. Hutchinson, R. J. McAfee, J. Lougheed J. Key, G. Hutchinson, W. Lewis D. R. Ellis, R. M. Dunlop, J. Abercrombie, J. W. Knott, H. Breadner, S. Black, J. J. Perry, J. Artley, C. Clark, G. Richardson, R. Erskine, J. Boyd, Esq., D. Patton, J. Paterson, Esq., J. Nelson, W. McCutcheon, A. Boles, A. Henning, J. Hawken, Sr., C. Burrill, A. A. McConnel, J. Breadner, H. Patton, J. W. Patton, R. Sparling, W. Marshall J. Struthers, Esq., W. Brown, J. Thompson, T. Muxlow, J. Burchill, J. Myers J. Stinson, Jr. J. Thompson, A. Kirkpatrick, J. McInnis, T. Rennie, A. Mordoch, F. Burton, R. Ellitt, J. Logan. T. King. W. Dayman.

The Treasurer was ordered to remit to T. J. Starrett, $22 75 printing, and J. Farewell, $7.50 printing.

Money orders were issued by the Reeve as follows. viz.

Richard Howell $1.12 work on 4th line; Thos. Ellis $1.75 work on 6 & 7 side line; John Cook $1.25 service in local board of health; Robert Myles $100 salary as Assessor. R. Dunlop $20.00 Transcribing and preparing the minutes for printing; A Clark work on road; W. Eaton, $1.50 repairing culvert; Thos. Hortop, $3.75 repairing valley road.

Council adjourned until Friday the 27th day of May next then to meet as a court of Revision. R. DUNLOP, clerk.

HET.

A Romance of the Bush.

I was on some Government duty last year in New South Wales, that took me into the local Post Offices. In the back parlor, at the Gundaroo Post Office, I had a long chat with the son of the Postmistress; a fine young fellow, perhaps a little over thirty. He was manager to a local sheep king, and rejoiced in the curious Christian name of Het. The following is his account of the circumstances that led to his being so named:

I was there certainly; but I don't remember much about it. I was told. I can vouch for the truth of it, for she and him, too, often and often have told it to me, and others. They've told it apart, each by their two selves, and they often tell it together—she telling about him, making him out to have been the hero, and he telling it all so that she was the hero—heroine, I should say. But I expect each of 'em always told it in about the same words. You see it was an epoch like, and sort of fixed itself in their memories—and what happened after, fixed it firmer yet.

I've been manager on this station, up behind here, eight years; and I was "boy" here [pointing with his pipe stem to the floor] eight years; at school here in Gundaroo till I was fourteen; so I suppose it must have been thirty-four years ago—near enough.

The colony wasn't settled near so much as it is now. The coach from Sydney didn't reach Gundaroo not by three days' ride, and the mails was carried on horseback, once a week, the rest of the way. After the coach road, for a bit—say twenty miles—the track was good enough, and there were stations further than that; but by the end of the first day's ride, you reached the last house or hut you were to see till you sighted Gundaroo.

The first night the mail carrier put up at "Paddy's Shanty," a sort of an inn on the track. The next morning he started—all alone, mind you, with valuable mail bags—across as nasty a piece of bush as you'll find in Australia, and I suppose that says in the world. It was all ti tree scrub. If you know what that is you'll understand. Never see any? Oh, well, its scrub, that is all little trees, with their leaves all on the top. All of 'em alike. Just too slender and weak to bear a man's climbing up one to look round; too far apart for you to swarm up two at once, arms and legs, you know; and yet too close for you to see sun or stars, night or day. That sort of scrub is the cruelest of all. If you know your way, well and good; but if you once get wrong, Lord help you! You're bushed, as sure as you're alive. Unless you chance on a track, or come across a camp, you may lie down and give it up. As long as your water barr'l holds out—so'll you. After that, you may give yourself a day or two to die in: perhaps another two days, if you're a tough sort. Your bones 'll be there years after. Well, that's what he had to ride through for hours and hours, the second day; and at night he ought to be about through it, if he kep' the track, and made out to reach the open again. Then the track was across a fern gully, with a creek at the bottom; and there he camped for the night. Then he had an eighty-mile ride the next day, straight through the Blue-gum forest in Gundaroo.

The chap that rode with the mails then was a splendid fellow. Standard his name was. Too heavy p'raps for a postman, as we understand 'em, but just the man for that work in those days. It wanted a fellow full of pluck, as strong as a horse, and with all his wits about him. Besides the dangers of the track, and creeks to ford, and the heat, and the snakes at night, there was the loneliness. That one fellow, all alone in that great wild district, riding through the hours in the perfect stillness under the sky. No chance of seeing a soul, and probably not wanting to neither, as things was then. If any one did just happen to come across the mail carriers in those days, it wasn't generally for no good.

He used to say: "When a man's got her Majesty's precious mail bags, with her own red seals on 'em, in front of the saddle, and only the usual number of hands for pistols, and reins, and all, he don't care much if he don't see no one all the ride through." Ho wasn't one to boast, wasn't Standard; but he had once to defend the mails, with three to one against him, and tried for manslaughter, too, for the way he done it, and acquitted, and carried out of the court on the chaps' shoulders. They tell that tale still here in Gundaroo.

The time I'm telling you of was in the hot season. The ground was all cracked and dry. There hadn't been a drop of rain for months and months, and lots of the creeks were empty. At Gundaroo it had been very bad, and the district round was terrible in want of water.

On the Saturday after New Year's day, when Standard left "Paddy's Shanty," it was a hot wind, awful to ride in. They thought rain was coming, though.

The boss of the shanty told Standard, as he fixed up his water barr'l behind him on the saddle, that a storekeeper and his wife and child, and his chum, had started the day before for a station where they'd got a berth. They had to follow the Gundaroo track a bit, and then strike across the bush to the station. "It isn't far they've to go," he said, but th're new chums, and the woman looked a bit delicate, as well as having a young baby to carry."

"They've only two horses then," says Standard, looking along the track, "unless the third horse flew."

"No," says the boss; "the woman rode behind one of the men, turn and turn about. A fine young woman she was, too."

"It's to be hoped the chaps hadn't much else to carry, then," says Standard. "I couldn't carry another couple of pounds—let alone a woman and baby—on 'Lady,' without knocking her up."

"Well, you ain't got to," says the boss; and laughs as he watches Standard put "Lady" into a steady canter along the track, where the two sets of hoof marks showed in the sand.

"Lady" was a fine black mare. Very swift, but just a thought too light for Standard and the bags, some said. He wouldn't allow it. He said: "She reaches Gundaroo as fresh as need be on Monday night, and by the time she has to start on Thursday, she's wild to be on the road." He only traveled once a fortnight on her. The other week he road a roan, a bigger brute, but not half so sensible and kindlike as "Lady." She was a born lady—Standard used to say. Her mother was "Duchess," whereas the roan was the son of Milkmaid, although he was called Emperor. She could have gone the whole way alone, if need be, he said; she was so trustworthy.

Well, he used to tell it how he rode through that Saturday in the ti-tree scrub, thinking of the party on in front, in whose tracks he was galloping. It was just near the end of the scrub, he noticed, where they left off, and started on a scarcely visible track to the station away to the left, fifty miles or so.

He used to say he must have ridden a couple of hours, perhaps, when he saw something on the track like a dead person or horse. He had his hand on his pistol as he trotted up to it, he said, thinking of the mails, whan he saw it wasn't a horse, or a man, but a tall slip of a young woman, dead, or perhaps only dying, laid on the ground with her back propped against a tree, and a poor little babyclinging to her breast.

"Lord of all!" muttered Standard, as he jumped off Lady's back and stood over the woman. He raised her as tenderly almost as she would have done her own child. The little one, he used to say, started crying—a kind of wail—and opened its eyes in that sort of way that you know it hadn't long stopped crying, but just woke up, and began again where it had left off. I've two kinds of my own now, and I know—not that they've ever had to lie alongside a mother as good as dead and try to get fed and warmed at a breast as cold as that poor soul's. Thank God, no! But for all that, well fed kids can cry, and cry pitiful, too; so I know how he meant to say this particular kid cried.

Standard hadn't no need to tether Lady to make her stop alongside, she was such a reasonable beast; but he put her bridle over a tree branch, for all that. Certainty is worth a deal of faith, when it's about being left alone in a ti-tree scrub, without your horse and kit.

Then he laid the little one on its mother's shawl and set to work to bring the mother too. He'd seen men exhausted, and laid down to die from thirst and fatigue come round, but he wasn't sure, he said, if a woman had to be done for the same as a man—he was a single chap then. But he set to and got a little water first, and then water with a dash of brandy in it, between her blue lips, and rubbed her forehead and hands well, and laid her so as the blood—once the spirit had started it again—could flow a bit quicker to her brain. A bushman has to be a bit of a doctor, you know. Then the baby started to help by giving a loud shriek, and the young woman opened her eyes and sighed like; and he kep' on giving her water and spirit as she could take it till she could feel herself more comfortable. He didn't start talking to her then, knowing she wanted all her strength to come round; but he put the baby back in her arms, and the mother in her prompted her like to take a good long pull at the drink in the billy—so as the kid might get some in a while, you know.

After a bit she started to cry in a low sort of way, and then Standard, he set by her and cheered her up, and told her not to take on. He told her she was found; and that all the worst of being lost was done with, and not to cry and so on. All the time, poor fellow, though he didn't hurry her, he knew he was loosing time dreadfully and would hardly make the creek to camp by before nightfall. Thinking of that he suddenly remembered the woman had got to go too, or be left to die where she was. Standard was wondering what the deuce he would do with her, when she started and told him how she came there. It seemed she was the wife of the storekeeper, Bannerman, that the boss "Paddy's Shanty" had spoken of, and she says, when they had got part way through the scrub (two days before mind you,) they stopped to change her on to the other horse, and allow 'em to stand about a bit to stretch their legs, the two men. The fools never hitched the horses to anything! All on a sudden a snake slid across the track, right under the woman's feet. She screamed out, and that startled the horses. Off they went—bolted clean into the scrub, carrying every blessed thing they got with them—water, matches, the billy and everything. Her husband and his chum tore after them, telling her to be sure and stop where she was. She sat there all alone, and there she'd set! First, waiting patient, and then a little frightened and nervous as the time went on. Then, when it got dark and into the night, and they didn't come back; and she tells how she stood there, not daring to move, but trying to see over the trees, and shouting till she couldn't speak, and they never come. By and by she got thirsty and faint, and the child was crying for drink and she'd nothing for it. Then she walked on, hoping to get some water; and then she said, the trees seemed all to wave about and close in on her and she sank down exhausted, and must have been in a sort of sleep or swoon, mixed, till Standard found her.

She says to Standard: "They must be killed," and cries awfully.

"Poor fellows," said Standard. He knew that being "killed" would be pleasant to dying of thirst, as they most likely would do once they got lost there. But he tried to comfort her, and to please her he shouts again. Though, as he said, after two days, and she and the baby shouting all they could most of the time, and they not come back it weren't likely they were within hail now! He made her understand this at last. Says he, "Very likely they's got to camp," to comfort her, you understand. Then he started to say how was they and the baby to get out of this? She didn't want to move from where she was, poor woman, in case her husband should come back, but Standard says to her: "You can't do your husband no good by stopping here, and if you get quick to Gundaroo, you could tell 'em to send out a search party, and besides, ma'am, your little one can't manage another night in the bush."

"No, Sir," she says. She was a gentle, docile thing, and see he was right; and then she says to him, helpless and grateful like: "Could we ride behind you, Sir?"

Poor Standard! He felt stumped. He didn't know what to say. He looked at the tall young woman and the baby, and then at himself and the horse already well weighted with his camping kit and the mails. It wasn't possible! and he knew it. There was ten miles or so, to be done that night, before they got to the creek. It was late now, nearly seven. It would be dark as pitch in the scrub before they got there, even if "Lady" could carry all that load so far as that; but as to carrying them all to Gundaroo, eighty miles further on—he knew she couldn't do it. Besides, nothing was allowed to delay the mails. He would be late as it was, for the stop he's made. It must be a couple of days, at best, before he'd get there, carrying all that extra weight.

So Standard stood for a moment or two and thought it all over, while he watched the girl (for she was no more) straighten herself and the child and struggle to stand. Seeing her stagger a bit called him to himself, and he thinks as he gave her his hand to steady her, "Hang her Majesty's mail regulations! I'll take her somehow!"

So he gets his blanket out of his kit and straps it behind the saddle, and then he took and laid the baby on the tree root, while he swung the woman on the blanket behind the saddle. Then he handed her up the child and got carefully into the saddle himself, leaving them all the room he could, she used to say. "Lady" looked round a bit doubtful of the extra weight and the dangling petticoats on one side, but started right enough when Standard told her it had got to be done.

There wasn't much said on the ride. It was rough stepping, and "Lady" 'd to pick her way, and Standard had to help her and steady the poor lass behind with the baby in her right arm and her left hand on his belt; and she was looking and looking on both sides to see if she could see the two men. Except to beg Standard to stop a minute and shout once or twice in case her husband and his chum were near, she never spoke. Standard knew it must be hopeless, and the further they got the more hopeless it must get; but he was a tender-hearted fellow, and he couldn't stand hearing the poor soul crying in a hopeless sort of way behind him, and not do something to please her. But all the way the baby lay there as peaceful and comfortable as we are now this minute.

When they got to the creek it was nearly dark and the woman was swaying in the saddle, though she'd sat straight enough at first. Noticing this, Standard says, suddenly: "Missus, have you ever rode alone?"

She gives a sort of start, and sits up and says: "Oh, yes, I've rode a great deal when I was a girl; but I'm that tired now and so weak that I can't sit up." She thought he was wondering at her leaning against him so heavy. But that wasn't what Standard was thinking. He knew himself what it was to sway, nearly to falling straight out of the saddle, from fatigue and want of food and water. No, he was thinking of a plan for the next day. When they got to the creek he sat the woman down, and hobbles "Lady," and gives her mouth a sponge out and a bit of a rub, to last till he could see to her when she was cool. Then he got some sticks and dry grass (no fear of the wood being wet in a hot season hereabout) together for a fire, and as soon as it burns up puts the billy over it. Then he hunted in his kit for a tin of milk he'd got—not to put into his tea, but to use for butter! He thought it would be just the thing for the woman, seeing she'd to nurse the child. She had a whole pannikin full of warm milk—did her a power of good; and then he'd got her to eat a bit of sopped bread, and had his own tea, he gave her a towel and told her she'd feel better for washing her face and hands and that the creek was safe to do it in. He went off to see to "Lady," and before he went he put his comb and a bit of looking glass he carried where she could see 'em and take them if she liked. He was always a bit of a dandy. But he didn't say nothing to her about the comb and glass, because, being a bachelor, of course he felt delicate about suggesting as her hair was hanging all down her back in two long, fair plaits. Standard used to say it was prettiest so, to his mind, but he thought she'd feel vexed if she knew he noticed it. So he just put the bit of glass handy and took himself off.

When he came back, he says, he found the baby asleep, and smoothed and tidied somehow, and the woman as neat as a pin—women are so clever at straightening themselves—and the pannikin and that washed up, and the fire raked together. The woman sat there with her needle book on her knee—she had it in a pocket, she says—sewing up a tear in her frock, where it had caught in one of the saddle buckles. Standard didn't say nothing much that night, but he had made up his mind, and after making a shelter of branches and fern and seen the mother and baby laid down under it one side of the fire he stretched himself on the other side, with his head on the mail bags, and thought out what he'd decided to do. The woman and child must get to Gundaroo, and before the next night, too; so must the mails. "Lady" could carry them well enough, but she couldn't carry him as well. Very well; then he'd stay behind and walk. "Lady" would go along the track through the forest alone, he knew, and if only the girl would have the pluck to trust herself to the mare and just sit still and hold the reins they'd all get to Gundaroo safe as a church. She could then deliver up the bags at the Post Office and tell them to send out a search party to look after her husband and his chum and a horse to meet him.

He knew he was sure to get into trouble with the authorities for risking it, especially if it failed; and he knew, too, that it was no fun to be left to walk throught the forest in riding boots and breeches and with nothing but a few biscuits and a pistol. The water barr'l he meant to fill and fix in its place behind the saddle, and the rest of the tin of milk and the bread (damper, of course, you know), and the tinned meat. Women needed a deal of feeding, especially when they'd a baby to feed, too, he thought. And she must take one of the pistols.

His chief fear was she'd be too soft-hearted to like to leave him behind, and yet he knew it couldn't be done under a couple of days, or more likely four if they tried to go altogether. Though he said, "Hang her Majesty's mails!" he daren't delay 'em so long, for all that. "Hanging" wouldn't hurt 'em, or him either; but delaying 'em would be the very devil for them, and him, too!

As soon as it was light he set to work separating the things he was going to keep from those he was going to send on with the "Royal She-mail," as he called her in joke to himself. He looked at the two sleeping the other side of the fire under the open sky. The kid was comfortable enough, cradled in soft arms; but the mother was lying just about as uncomfortably as it is possible to lie, so as to shelter the child. Standard, who noticed everything, made a note of this, and thought he'd work on her maternal feelings most to get her to go on in the morning.

After he'd fed "Lady," about five o'clock, he groomed her up in style, for, he used to say, he must have the horse that carried the "Royal 'She-mail" as smart as possible. Later on, when he saw the woman after her night's rest in the fresh early morning and had got her to eat a bit of breakfast he was quite pleased to see how much better she looked.

He'd a great work, he said, to make her go without him, though she wasn't a bit afraid for herself. He had to say he shouldn't be so far behind, and swear he could walk pretty nearly as fast as "Lady" 'd go, and so on. He showed her how to fire the pistol, and told her to let "Lady" choose the way if she felt doubtful about the track among the gum trees. Of course, he cheered her up all he could, though feeling bad at letting a [illegible] baby go alone all that way. You [illegible] were bushrangers to be feared [illegible] was afraid to say much about taking [illegible] the mails for fear of frightening [illegible] just said, there they was, in front [illegible] saddle, and that she must take 'em [illegible] to the office, and not let any one [illegible] people of the office touch them. [illegible] told her about sending the two parties [illegible] to meet him and her husband. He [illegible] he saw her sitting so easily in the [illegible] and the baby lying in her lap, tied [illegible] by her shawl, and her right arm free [illegible] pistol, if need be, his spirit rose a [illegible] looked able to do it. He wanted [illegible] her his mail badge, but she says [illegible] wouldn't have it. She'd be safer [illegible] He didn't quite see what she meant [illegible] when it was all over—but there, if I [illegible] you the story that way you'll know [illegible] ended too soon.

Well, there ain't much more to tell [illegible] all. Mother, she rode straight along [illegible] track into Gundaroo. Ah! I see I've [illegible] you now! Yes, it was my mother, [illegible] was; and I'm the baby!

She said why she wouldn't wear [illegible] badge was for the same reasod as she [illegible] her shawl over the mail bags as soon as [illegible] was out of Standard's sight. No one [illegible] thought, would think a woman and [illegible] worth robbing.

She left him just at the beginning of [illegible] forest. He says he walked by the [illegible] bit to see how she carried her, and [illegible] let her start off at a gentle canter. He [illegible] to say he never felt so dead lonely as [illegible] the brave young creature turned round [illegible] waved her hand and says, "Good-bye, [illegible] God bless you for saving his life!"—[illegible] me in her arms—and then was hid from [illegible] in the trees.

Well, to cut a long story short, [illegible] and me rode into Gundaroo at 9 o'[illegible] two and a half hours after time. All [illegible] place turns out to see who it was. A [illegible] riding along with a baby! They [illegible] so took up with the young woman [illegible] mother was a very personable young [illegible] they never noticed she was on "[illegible] though there must have been lots as [illegible] Standard's mare well enough.

Mother was dead tired; and I was [illegible] as comfortable as I am now by this fire.

She rides straight up to the Post [illegible] and one of the chaps lifts her down; and [illegible] wouldn't let one on 'em touch the mail [illegible] but drags them off herself, and says, [illegible] ing on the doorstep with me in her [illegible] and the mails at her feet; "If you please, gentlemen, I've brought in the mails. [illegible] gentleman lent me his horse. I was [illegible] and will you send a horse to meet him. [illegible] walking from the fern gully. And "La[illegible] is to be seen to, please." And then [illegible] drops down on the steps pretty well [illegible] done.

The chaps set to and cheered her—[illegible] after cheer, till mother was drawn in [illegible] the noise by the Postmaster's wife, [illegible] told 'em they ought to know better than [illegible] a lady so shamed-faced, so tired as she [illegible] too. The old lady was quite as astonished as any of them, for all she said to the [illegible] to hold their noise, and quite proud to [illegible] the first hearing of it all from mother, as [illegible] put her and me to bed in her own [illegible] Well, the end of it was, Standard he [illegible] met right enough and brought in the [illegible] afternoon. But they never found my [illegible] father and his chum—not till months after, [illegible] and then it was bones they found. Mother [illegible] she staid on and helped the Postmistress [illegible] Gundaroo, who was getting oldish.

So that's how a woman brought her [illegible] jesty's mails into Gundaroo, and that's why I'm called Het.

Don't see why? Oh! I forgot to say [illegible] when I was christened, a month or so after [illegible] mother called me after Standard, as he had [illegible] saved us both. Didn't I tell you his name [illegible] was Hector?—Het, for short. Het Standard [illegible] he was—I'm Het Bannerman; but mother [illegible] she is Mrs. Het Standard now, Postmistress [illegible] of Gundaroo. I dessay you guessed as much [illegible]

SCIENTIFIC AND USEFUL.

An excellent brass lacquer consists of eight ounces shellac, two ounces sandarac, two ounces annotto, quarter-ounce dragon's blood resin, one gallon spirits of wine. The article to be lacquered should be heated slightly, and the lacquer applied by means of a soft camel-hair brush.

An ingenious process for giving a silver surface to iron has recently been devised in Austria. The iron is first covered with mercury, and silver is deposited upon the surface electrolytically. The iron is then heated to about 300° C., and the mercury evaporates, leaving the layer of silver on the surface of the iron.

Organ-pipes are made of equal parts by weight of tin and led, which melts at three hundred and seventy degrees rolled into sheets. The solder is made of one and a half parts tin, one part lead by weight, which melts at three hundred and thirty-four degrees. Solder with a copper bit and resin. Some care must be used and a little practice to accomplish the soldering smoothly, so as not to melt the pipe. If the solder should be found not tractable enough, add half a part bismuth.

Persons who are subject to asthma should be extremely careful in their diet. As a rule, bulky foods should be avoided, and not much liquid taken. Toast should be eaten rather than bread, and all raw or underdone vegetables and meats must be refused. Stramonium in the form of cigarettes affords relief. Vegetable stimulants such as pepper, capsicum, and mustard, facilitate digestion, and are teerefore helpful in asthma, but alcohol should be avoided, or taken only on an emergency. Of all alcoholic stimulants whiskey-and-water or brandy-and-water would be most suitable. A great point is to keep the body, and especially the feet, always warm.

Take ten fibres of the filling in any silk, and if on breaking they show a feathery, dry, and lack-lustre condition, discolouring the fingers in handling, you may at once be sure of the presence of dye and artificial weighting. Or take a small portion of the fibres between the thumb and forefinger, and roll them over and over very gently, and you will soon detect the gum, mineral, soap and other ingredients of the one, and the absence of them in the other. A simple but effective test of purity is to burn a small quantity of the fibres. Pure silk will instantly crisp, leaving only a pure charcoal; a heavily dyed silk will smoulder, leaving a yellow, greasy ash. If, on the contrary, you cannot break the ten strands, and they are of a natural lustre and brilliancy, and fail to discolour the fingers at the point of contact, you may be well assured that you have a pure silk that is honest in its make and durable in its wear.

SPORT.

Visitor from the city (who has been missing game all the morning): "DID I HIT ANYTHING THAT TIME?"

Disgusted Host: "YOU HAVE, SIR; A COW IN THE NEXT FIELD, AND THE OWNER IS COMING THIS WAY WITH A COUPLE OF DOGS."

FARM.

RUNTS.—SHALL WE RAISE THEM?

Some animals are born "runts." Does't pay to raise them? Is it not more economii cal to kill them as soon as their runtiness is observed? The runty pigs are usually put in a pen and given to the wife or daughter. She is told that if she gives it the slops from the house, etc., she may have what the hog brings when it is big and fat. The fact that in many cases she does not get the money when the hog is sold, does not deter her from giving the pig all the slops and milk it can drink. It also gets the crusts, refuse vegetables, peelings, etc., from the kitchen; and quite often the zeal of the woman makes the feed of the pig quite expensive. Kept in confinement and fed rich, sloppy food, the pig increases rapidly in size, but gains more in size than in weight. If put out with other swine, on grass and exercise, its pot-belly disappears, it gets pointy, and loses in size, though not so much in weight. As it comes from the pen it is more gnt than bone, more slop than muscle. Its flesh is soft and flabby. When put on harder, drier food, and allowed to take some exercise, both of which are essential to firm, sweet, wholesome flesh, the fact becomes painfully apparent that its growth in the pen has been fictitious to a considerable extent.

It is equally true of the runty lamb or calf. It is put under the care of the wife or children and given extra treatment to "bring it out." When the time comes to fit for market; it is found that this bringing out, by the only methods that would have proven successful, is on the plan of blowing up a silk bag with gas. It may have paid to give the runt all the food and care it has received; but would it not have paid better to have given this food and care to an animal not a runt? If an inferior animal gives a fair return for what it gets, a good animal would make a larger return. And considering the small margin there is in feeding animals, we doubt if a runt ever pays for what it has cost. It is of yet more doubtful propriety to breed such an animal. Its inferiority is an accident, but some so-called accidents are the result of natural laws. A runt may not give birth to runts, but the chances are good that it will. Besides, if fed, as runts usually are, on slops in a small pen, the physical condition unfits it for breeding. A pampered animal, given no exercise, is in no condition to bear profitable offspring. If the animals must be fed to maturity give them to the shambles, not to the breeding pen.

Nor are runts less likely to die of disease than are other animals. It is sometimes remarked that "the runty pig never has the cholera;" "the best animal dies first." This, however, is not the case. When the runt escapes the fact is remembered always, borne in mind, because it is something remarkable and vexatious. When the runt dies, little notice is taken, for the loss is little. This same tendency of our human nature best to remember great misfortunes leads to the remark that disease takes the best first. The runt is more likely to be attacked by disease, and more apt to die, than is the other animal.

We believe that the best thing to do is to kill the runt at once. If a pig or a lamb, its value can be but little. The loss will hardly equal the cost required to bring the animal to a self-supporting basis. In the case of a calf, a longer period of probation may be given; and ordinarily the chances are in favor of bringing a colt through. Yet we are of the opinion that such is the inclination to keep rather than to sacrifice the runt, that the best advice is to kill without delay, provided it is not of a choice breed and worth the cost of the extra care necessary to bring up to a somewhat normal condition, but this is not often profitable.

Transylvania Marriage Customs.

When the young couple go to church the day after the wedding, they are met at the church-door by a group of masked figures who surround them, singing and hooting, and playfully endeavor to separate the young matron from her husband. If they succeed in so doing, then he must win her back in a hand-to-hand fight with his adversaries, or else he must give a piece of money as her ransom. In general it is considered a bad omen for the married life of the young couple if the wife be separated from her husband on this occasion; therefore it is customary for the young husband to take his stand close by the church-door while his wife is praying within, and then he is ready to catch hold of her as soon as she steps outside. For greater precaution, the man often holds her around the waist with both hands during the dance which immediately takes place before the church, and at which they assist merely as spectators, taking no active part, as it is not considered seemly to dance in the church attire.

As commonly several couples are married at the same time, it is usual for each separate wedding-party to bring its own band of music, and dance thus independently of the others. On the occasion of a triple wedding I lately witnessed, it was very amusing to watch the three wedding-parties coming down the street, each accelerating its pace till it came to be a sort of race up to the church-door to secure the best dancing-place. The ground being rough and slanting, there was only one spot where anything like a flat dancing-floor could be obtained, and the winning party at once secured this enviable position, while the others had to put up with an inclined plane or a few hillocks accidenting their ball-room floor. The ten to sixteen couples belonging to each wedding-party are inclosed in a ring of bystanders, each rival band of music playing away with heroic disregard for the scorched ears of the listeners "Polka!" calls out the first group; "Walzer?" roars the second, for it is a point of honor that each party should display a noble independence in taking its own line of action; and if, out of mere coincidence, two of the bands happen to strike up the self-same tune, one of them is sure to change to something totally different as soon as aware of the unfortunate mistake—the caterwauling effect produced by this system baffling all description. "This is nothing at all," said the worthy pastor, from whose garden I was overlooking the scene, laughing at the evident dismay with which I endeavored to stop my ears. "Sometimes we have eight or ten weddings at a time, each with their own fiddlers. That is something worth hearing indeed!" —Popular Science Monthly.

Cornelius Vanderbilt's four sons are the editors, proprietors, printers and publishers of a lively amateur paper called the Comet.

THE LIME-KILN CLUB.

"I would a-bounce to you," said Brother Gardner as the meeting opened, "dat de very, very Honorable Guy Wallingbroke, of New Orleans, am waitin' in de aunty-room to address us on de subjick of "All Sorts of Fits, an' How to Cure 'Em.' De Committee will bring him in, an' let nobody blow his nose while de great man is wrastlin' wid his address."

A TERRIBLE FAILURE.

When the committee returned with the visitor it was seen that he was considerably affected by drink. There was a suspicious weakness in his knees, a sort of looseness to his whole body, and it was only with a great effort that he managed to bow to Elder Toots and to ask Whalebone Howker, as he went up the aisle, if his pa and ma were as well as could be expected under the circumstances. When he reached the platform he bowed so low to the audience that Waydown Bebee had to help straighten him up. Then he began his address:

"Fits. Er Fits. 'S'more fits. Whazzer fits? Mi subjick is er fits. Whozzer g't fits? Eh? Like 'er see 'er nigger who kin 'rest me!"

It was plain that the very, very Honorable Guy Wallingbroke was drunk, and Brother Gardner signalled to the committee to remove him. When the door of the ante-room had closed behind him the President said:

"I doan' know what his cure fur fits er', but I'ze gwine to try one of my own. Brudder Jones, take him down de alley sta'rs an' apply the shoe-leather cure!"

In the course of two or three minutes it became apparent that the remedy was being applied. The windows rattled, the relics in the museum threatened to fall off the shelves, and yells of terror floated up from the alley. When Brother Jones returned and took his seat the President said:

"De meetin' will now go on, de same as if it had not been interrupted by fits. If any of you should meet de very, very Honorable Miss'r Wallingbroke to-morrer or next day, advise him to quit de lectur' field an' l'arn de cooper's trade."

TOO PREVIOUS.

The Secretary announced a communication from Griffin, Ga., signed by sixteen colored residents of the place, offering the Lime-Kiln Club a lot in which to bury the Rev. Penstock at his death. The President was about to instruct the Secretary to return the thanks of the club and accept the kind offer when Penstock sprang to his feet and ex claimed:

"Miss'r President, I protest! I look upon dat communication as a deliberate insult!"

"Shoo! Brudder Penstock, what's de matter?"

"Dat communication are de matter, sah!"

"Doan you want to be buried in Griffin?"

"No, sah!"

"Doan' you want to accept de lot?"

"No, sah!"

"Very well, Brudder Penstock. De offer may hev bin a leetle too previous, but I ar' satisfied dat it was made wid de kindest intenshuns. We will answer dat you can't accept, on account of a previous engagement."

SQUELCHED.

A communication from Greenville, S. C., announced that Prof. Absolute Smith, of that city, would leave for Detroit within a couple of weeks to lay before the Lime Kiln Club his new theory on the movement of the earth from north to south. After convincing the club of its truthfulness he would deliver a series of lectures throughout the State, and any money which he might be obliged to borrow of members of the club would be returned as soon as possible.

"It may be dat de airth ar' movin' from north to south," said Brother Gardner as he thoughtfully contemplated a new crack in the ceiling, but if so we doan' want to know it. De ole and well-known movement from east to west ar' good 'nuff fur us. De Seckretary will write to de Purfessor dat we hev no use fur him heah, an' dat if he shows up mus' run de risks of bein' sent to de Work House as a suspishus character.

NOT ALARMED.

Elder Unsatisfactory Johnson secured the floor to make an inquiry. He had read in the papers that the Adventists had predicted the ending up of the world on the 28th of May. It was a matter which made him a little anxious. He didn't care to live here after the world had ended up. He had some debts to collect in, and he wanted to remove his family across into Canada before the calamity occurred. If the club had any official information to give him he would be greatly obliged.

"Brudder Johnson, do you remember how by-law No. 278 reads?" asked the President.

"No, sah."

"Wall, it reads dat any member of dis club who believes dat de world am gwine to eand up kin be fined all de way from forty cents up to $16,000."

"I—I didn't know it!"

"No, I suppose not. After de meetin' adjourns I want to see you in de cloak room. I want to feel of your head an' try an' find out what has softened it. Meanwhile I kin assure you dat dar am no cause fur alarm. Jist go right ahead haulin' ashes wid dat ole mule o' yours by day and hangin' round de co'ner grocery o' nights, an' doan' let de 28th day of May worry you a bit."

The elder sat down with a sigh of relief, and acting upon the whispered advice of Samuel Shin he slid softly out while the Glee Club were singing and thereby escaped the contemplated "feeling."

To Cure Pain.

The means which may be readily and successfully employed to relieve pain are important and should be known by all. We give you the name of the best remedy in the world for pain, and the information that a 10 cent sample bottle can be purchased at any drug store. Polson's NERVILINE, the new and sure pop pain cure, will never fail you in time of need. Nerviline is a safe and prompt cure of all kinds of pain, neuralgia, cramps, toothache, headache. Sure always. Ten and 25 cent bottles at drug stores.

That is good advice which Bishop Flower, in the New England Southern Methodist Conference, yesterday gave to his young pastors: "You ought to be married. Never have a relation that you would be ashamed to tell your wife of. So conduct yourselves that any man in your parish will be glad to have you call whether he is at home or not." No better sermon was ever compressed into such limited space.

England When the Romans Came There

There.—At the first coming of the Romans by far the larger part of the country was probably covered with wood. During the centuries of Roman occupation some of the less dense parts of the woodland were cleared. In driving their magnificent straight highways through the country the Roman legionaries felled the trees for 70 yards on each side of them to secure them from the arrows of a lurking foe. So stupendous was the labor involved in this task that they gladly avoided forests where that was possible, and sometimes even swung their roads to right or left to keep clear of these formidable obstacles. For many hundreds of years after the departure of the legions vast tracts of primeval forest remained as impenetrable barriers between different tribes. In these natural fastnesses the wolf, brown bear, and wild boar still found a secure retreat. Even as late as the twelfth century the woods to the north of London swarmed with wild boars and wild oxen. Everywhere, too, the broken men of the community betook themselves to these impenetrable retreats, where they lived by the chase, and whence they issued for plunder and bloodshed. The forests were thus from time immemorial a singularly important element in the topography They have now almost entirely disappeared, and their former sites have as yet only been partially determined, though much may doubtless still be done in making our knowledge of them more complete.

Character.

A perfectly-balanced character is seldom found. Each virtue seems to have its offsetting foible. Amiability is apt to be allied with weakness; a vigorous pushing character is often impulsive, harsh, and unjust. A reflective mind is slow to act; a prompt mind is often wrong. So through all the elementary characters. All the qualities that go to make up a perfect moral nature rarely appear in one person. The physical and intellectual do not always evenly balance. There are those possessed of stronger moral than mental nature. They constitute the spasmodic, impulsive element in society. There are others whose intellects so absolutely control their moral nature that nothing is admitted that cannot be reasoned out satisfactorily. There are persons whose strong animal natures dominate all else; both mind and spirit are subservient. To regulate all these parts so as to attain a fair degree of equality is the right step toward securing what may be called balance in character.

He who commits a wrong will himself irevitably see the "writing on the wall," though the world may not count him guilty.

When we have learned to avoid wasting time on the one hand and "crowding" it on the other, we begin to appreciate its true value.

The Ladies' Favorite.

The newest fashion in ladies' hats will boubtless cause a flutter of pleasurable excitement among the fair sex. Ladies are always susceptible to the changes of a fashion plate; and the more startling the depaature, the more earnest the gassip over the new mode. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a positive cure for the ills which afflict females and make their lives miserable. Thia sovereign panacea can be relied on in cases of displacements and all functional derangements. It builds up the poor, haggard and dragged-out victim, and gives her renewed hope and a fresh lease of life. It is the only medicine for woman's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case. or money refunded. Read printed guarantee on bottle wrapper.

Chas. A. Hoyt gets over $30,000 a year from his plays.

The Cutest Little Things.

"Cute!" he echoed. "Well, I don't know as the adjective would have occurred to me in just that connection. But if you mean that they do their work thoroughly, yet make no fuss about it; cause no pain or weakness; and, in short, are everything that a pill ought to be, and nothing that it ought not, then I agree that Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets are about the cutest little things going!

Howard Crosby is said to be writing a book on Prohibition, with the following preface: "If you let me compound the drinks of a people, I don't care who makes its laws."

Mild, soothing, and healing is Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

"Absinthe" is the name of a new color. It is sometimes used in painting French towns red.

LADIES

Who are Weak, Nervous and Exhausted; who feel themselves losing strength; who are pale, delicate and sickly in appearance, suffering from the many complaints peculiar to women—send for and read M. V. LUBON'S Treatise in BOOK FORM on the Diseases of Women. Mailed sealed and secure from observation on receipt of 6c in stamps. UNSEALED FREE. Address, M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. East, Toronto, Ont.

Nature is already having her field sports. The first event is a backward spring.

People who are subject to bad breath, foul coated tongue, or any disorder of the Stomach, can at once be relieved by using Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters, the old and tried remedy. Ask your Druggist.

They are happy whose natures sort with their vocations.

Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Hay Fever.

Sufferers are not generaly aware that these diseases are contagious, or that they are due to the presence of living parasites in the lining membrane of the nose and eustachian tubes Microscopic research, however, has proved this to be a fact, and the result is that a simple remedy has been formulated whereby catarrh, catarrhal deafness and hay fever are cured in from one to three simple applications made at home. A pamphlet explaining this new treatment is sent free on receipt of stamp by A. H. Dixon & Son, 308 King Street West Toronto Canada.

A singer who sang in the choir
Asked the leader a rival to foir,
And when he refused
She so roundly abused
Him he forced her herself to reto'r.

YOUNG MEN suffering from the effects of early evil habits, the result of ignorance and folly, who find themselves weak, nervous and exhausted; also MIDDLE-AGED and OLD MEN who are broken down from the effects of abuse or over-work, and in advanced life feel the consequences of youthful excess, send for and READ M. V. Lubon's Treatise on Diseases of Men. The book will be sent sealed to any address on receipt of two 3c. stamps. Address M. V. LUBON, 47 Wellington St. E. Toronto, Ont.

Sir William Thompson estimates that the light of the sun will disappear in five million years. Unfortunately Sir William will be unable to be present.

Whenever your Stomach or Bowels get out of order, causing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, or Indigestion, and their attendant evils, take at once a dose of Dr. Carson's Stomach Bitters. Best family medicine. All Druggists, 50 cents.

A. P. 332.

FREE FLOWERING PLANTS.

12 for $1.00	ALL FIRST QUALITY, and with every
6 " 50	Dollar order, an Amaryllis, a Chrysanthemum or Monthly Rose, FREE.
3 " 25

THE BEST STRAWBERRY PLANTS, 25c. A DOZEN.

I guarantee Plants to please, and to arrive in good order at any post office in the Dominion, Large plants by freight or express.

Send postal for descriptive list.

J. P. COCKBURN, FLORIST,
(Stamps taken). GRAVENHURST, ONT.

Allan Line Royal Mail Steamships

Sailing during winter from Port and every Thursday and Halifax every Saturday to Liverpool, and in summer from Quebec every Saturday to Liverpool, calling at Londonderry to land mails and passengers for Scotland and Ireland. Also from Baltimore via Halifax and St. John's N. F., to Liverpool fortnightly during summer months. The steamers of the Glasgow lines sail during winter to and from Halifax, Portland Boston and Philadelphia; and during summer between Glasgow and Montreal, weekly, Glasgow and Boston weekly; and Glasgow and Philadelphia, fortnightly

For Freight, passage, or other information apply to A. Schumacher & Co., Baltimore; S. Cunard & Co., Halifax; Shea & Co., St. Jchn's N. F., Wm. Thomson & Co., St. John, N. B.; Allan & Co., Chicago; Love & Alden, New York; H. Bourlier, Toronto; Allans Rae & Co., Quebec; Wm. Brockie, Philadelphia; H. A. Allan Portland Boston Montreal

MERIDEN BRITANNIA CO.

MANUFACTURE ONLY

FINEST

Silver Plated Ware.

Artistic Designs, combined with Unequalled Durability and Finish

HAMILTON, ONT.

THERE IS NOTHING LIKE IT

SPANISH GLYCERINE AND OIL DRESSING

A BEAUTIFUL WATERPROOF.
A PATENT LEATHER POLISH
FOR BOOTS, SHOES & RUBBERS
—SOLD EVERYWHERE—

JUNE 19, 1885.—For two years my wife's health was run down. She was greatly emaciated and too weak to do anything for herself; she was given up by five doctors, they all passed their opinion that she could not live. She commenced using Dr. Jug's Medicine in December, 1884, and after taking six bottles she was so much improved that she could look after her household duties.

J. M. RODDICK, Engineer, C. P. R., West Toronto

THE WHITE THRESHING ENGINE OF LONDON, ONT.

A FULL SUPPLY FOR 1887

Dairy Salt,

FOR BUTTER, ETC.

NEW Importations.—Higgins' Eureka, Washington and Ashton Brands, in large or small sacks. Also Rice's Canadian Salt. Write for prices.

JAMES PARK & SON,
Wholesale Produce Merchants, Toronto.

THE BANK OF TORONTO.

Dividend No. 62

Notice is hereby given that a dividend of (4) four per cent. for the current half year, being at the rate of (8) eight per cent. per annum, and a bonus of (2) two per cent. upon the paid-up capital of the bank, has this day been declared, and that the same will be payable at the bank and its branches, on and after

WEDNESDAY, THE 1ST DAY OF JUNE NEXT.

The transfer books will be closed from the 17th to the 31st day of May—both days included.

The Annual General Meeting of Stockholders will be held at the banking house of the Institution on Wednesday, the 15th day of June next.

The chair to be taken at noon.

By order of the Board.

D COULSON, Cashier.

Bank of Toronto, April 27, 1887.

The Perry Cart

TWO SIZES, SURREY AND PHAETON BODIES.

The shafts are attached to body by the Perry Compensating Springs. The result of the action of these Springs is no horse-motion in the cart, and no cart-motion on the horse.

Descriptive illustration on application. For sale by all carriage makers.

CANADA CARRIAGE PARTS CO.,
TORONTO.
Sole Manufacturers for Canada.
The Trade only supplied.

ONTARIO CANOE COMPANY

Peterboro', Ont.

MANUFACTUR'S OF ALL KINDS OF CANOES

Send 3c. Stamp for Catalogue.

Bicycles!

SEND AT ONCE FOR LIST of Second-Hand Machines,
From $15 Upwards.
New Catalogue Ready 1st April
A. T. LANE MONTREAL

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT,
Branch Office, 37 Yonge St., Toronto.

Lardine.

THIS SPLENDID MACHINE OIL! Has never failed to take the highest awards wherever exhibited.

It Has No Equal. Farmers, Threshers and Millmen Use No Other.

This Oil keeps the Machinery in first-rate working order, thereby lessening the chances of accidents and breakdowns. To be had of all first-class dealers. Beware of imitations!

Try our 600 Fire Test Cylinder Oil. Harness, Bolt Cutting, Wool and Lard Oil, always in stock.

SOLE MANUFACTURERS OF LARDINE.

McCOLL BROS. & CO., - - TORONTO.

CONFEDERATION LIFE ASS'N.

OUR LAST NOTICE

In this paper referred to the Annual Meeting of the Association. This meeting (being the 15th since the Company was organized) took place on Tuesday, the 12th April, when the following gratifying increases were announced:

PREMIUM INCOME INCREASED FOR YEAR, -	$ 96,894.
INTEREST AND RENTS, - - - - -	13,029.
ASSETS. - - $356,375. SURPLUS,	80,234.

$260,420 Were allocated as Profits to Policy Holders. Profits payable on and after May 1st.

J. K. MACDONALD, Managing Director.

ONTARIO PUMP CO., (LIMITED),

TORONTO, ONT.,
MANUFACTURERS OF

Wind Mills,
Feed Grinders,
Haying Tools,
IRON AND WOOD PUMPS,

AND A FULL LINE OF

Railway, Town, Farm and Ornamental Water Supply Material.

Geared Windmills, for driving Machinery, Pumping Water, etc., from 1 to 40 horse power.

Send for Descriptive Catalogue.

Markdale Standard.

C. W. Rutledge, Proprietor.

MARKDALE, MAY. 12, 1887.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

—Seventy-four hotel licences have been cut off in Toronto.

The first Canadian Pacific freight train to leave London will start on Saturday.

—The contract for the extension of the Northern Pacific railway from Dakota to the Canadian boundry has been let.

—The Government telegraph line in the North-West is being built west from Battleford to Edmonton with iron poles.

—Mr. Samuel Platt, ex-M. P. for East Toronto, died suddenly from heart disease early last Thursday morning at his residence in Toronto Mr. Platt only returned from Bermuda on Tuesday, and was at his office on Wednesday in good health.

Mr. J. W. Bell, Conservative M. P. for Addington, has become violently insane, and has been placed in Rockwood Asylum for treatment. The doctors fear his case is almost hopeless.

—The development of the Pacific coast trade, since the completion of the C. P. R. is wonderful, The English consol stationed at Hiogo, Japan reports to the British government that four million pounds of tea were sent last year from that port to the Pacific terminus of the C. P. R. for transportation via Canada.

—The delegates to the colonial Conference are reported to be unanimously in favor of the extension of the Queen's title, subject to her pleasure and have suggested the following be adopted "Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and of the colonies and Dependencies there of." The matter of the Canadian, highroads to the Australian colonies, the C. P. R. postal offer, and the Pacific cable also engaged the attention of the Conference.

—The completion of the Canadian Pacific telegraph from Vancouver B. C., overland to San Francisco, it is stated, will be a great advantage and remunerative to the company, as it opens up a new country which had not been heretofore penetrated by the telegraph. There will be great extensions of the company's lines throughout the Dominion during the summer now approaching. The local business is stated to be steadily increasing.

—The C. P. R. has made a proposal to the British Government to put five steamers on the route between Vancouver and China, and to build them on plans approved of by the Admiralty, so that in case of war they could be converted into armed cruisers. The proposal was discussed in the House of Lords a few days ago, and was received with approval by all who spoke. It is also approved by some of the leading papers, which see the great advantage to the Empire of having five first-class cruisers available on the Pacific in case of war, besides the commercial advantage of the scheme. The Imperial Government have not yet announced what they will do.

—The Toronto Presbytery has dismissed an overture proposed by one of its congregations, declaring that it was embarrassing for the Church to discipline members for drunkenness so long as members sold that which caused drunkenness. The Presbytery of Toronto, therefore, continues to sanction liquors selling Church membership, a thing which it is safe to say the conscience of the Church generally does not do. The Toronto Presbytery might as well have accepted the overtune with a good grace. It is certain that the matter will have to be faced before long, seeing that the Presbyterian Church is now, with one exception, the only important Protestant denomination which fellowships liquor sellers.

—The present year will mark an important era in the history of the higher education in the Province of Ontario. The University Federation Bill has become law. Victoria University Cobourg, under the control of the Methodist Church, will, in consequence shortly remove its headquarters to Toronto, the governing body of that institute have accepted the principle of confederation. Permission has been granted to the Babtist denomination to establish a new university. Important changes have been effected in the construction of the State-endowed institutions, Toronto University, University College and Upper Canada College. It has also been decided to restore to the Provincial University the teaching Faculties in Law and Medicine abolished in 1853. In addition to all this, Queen's University has begun a movement which will undoubtedly mark a new era in her history.

Flesherton.

From our own correspondent.

A large number of farmers were present at the Fair on Monday last, the show of stock was small; a few heads changed hands at good prices.

New Barber Shop.—All those requiring a clean shave or hair cut can now have it done in a most scientific manner by "Tonsorial" Smyth late of Walkerton who has opened out in that line in our town in a very neat and attractive shop next door to the Post Office.

Who are they that have wounds without cause, such as Dental Sutherland and Farmer Richardson who on Friday last got a little to much of the "O be joyful" and commenced hugging each other "half in fun and whole in earnest" until something like "John Gilpin's" horse, the squeeze became a quarrel soon, and as the two pets rolled in the dust the Dentist careful of his delicate hands applied his elbow in a most dexterous manner to poor Henry's face leaving several colored spots.

Our esteemed friend and citizen Mr. W. H. Elder with his family have again returned to our village. They arrived here on Friday evening last from Los Angeles, U. S., and were met at the Station by our Brass Band and a number of our citizens, and by them were escorted to the Munshaw Hotel when a hearty reception was tendered the party.

Public School Inspector Campbell paid his first official visit to the Flesherton Public School on Monday. The pupils were highly pleased and edified with the instructions imparted by the new Inspector.

A sad case of drowning occurred two weeks ago at Sault Ste. Marie; the unfortunate young man being James Connell who formerly resided here and went with his brother out there a few months ago. He was alone at work on the water when the accident occurred; his body was not found for over 24 hours afterward, deceased's brother had the body embalmed and on Monday last arrived with it in Flesherton. The funeral took place from the house of deceased's uncle "Geo. Swanton" on Tuesday last. the remains were interred in the Flesherton Cemetery with Orange honors.

Open Air Concerts.—A sceme is now being agitated here and appears to meet with success and approval to have a handsome band stand erected centrally in the village and that our Band assisted by local talent give open air Concerts free every Saturday evening for the edification and amusement of all who wish to avail themselves of a pleasant evening's entertainment.

Our Band increases in interest and Volume. A New Circle Bass is to be added at an early date.

W. K. Flesher, Esq., is expected to arrive home here this week. We hope he shall appear amongst us alive to the fact that this is an age of progress, and the prosperity of our village lies near to his heart; that it may be evidenced by the adoption and pushing forward enterpizes which lie in his power to curry to successful issue and which would no doubt prove beneficial to himself, to the village, and to the community at large.

Good Advice.

Don't buy Dress Goods until you see McFarland's Immense Assortment.

Don't buy Milinery without consulting Miss Bremner, McFarland's Milliner.

Don't buy Silks, Velvets, Gloves, or Laces, before seeing

McFARLAND'S

Don't select your Carpets, Lace Curtains, Floor Oil Cloth or Cretons, from any other house except

MC FARLAND'S.

Don't let any Young Man, Old Man, Boy or Child, who wants a perfect fitting newest style low priced Suit of clothes pass

McFARLAND'S.

Don't forget, McFarland has the Sweetest, Strongest, Purest and Cheapest, Tea in the County.

Don't neglect to look through McFarland's Immense Establishment crowded with new goods bought for cash down, in the best markets of the world all of which will be sold at a small profit.

Don't think it economy to buy a Shoddy Boot. For it is not, McFarland has received a large addition to his stock of Kid, Goat, Calf and Buff Boots, Women's Men's Boy's Misses' and Child's, all solid leather.

He will be pleased to have you call when in Markdale, and assure you of his best services.

W. J. McFARLAND,

Direct Importer.

MARKDALE CARRIAGE WORKS.

R. McNALLY, Proprietor.

Would hereby announce to the people of Markdale and the public generally that I have moved into my new carriage shop opposite the Markdale House, where I will manufacture every article in the wagon and carriage line, and having long experience in the business, and by using first class material, I can guarantee satisfaction to every one who will favor me with their order.

Repairing, Painting and Trimming promptly attended to.

I also make a first class Stone Machine, which will lift the stone, carry it to any desired place and leave in position on the fence.

A call respectfully solicited

R. McNALLY.

MARKDALE SAsH and DOOR FACTORY.

Having erected and fitted up in every detail a Sash, Door and Plain Factory, containing all the latest and most approved machinery, everything being new, I am now prepared to turn out

Sash, Doors, Blinds, Mouldings, Hollow Battons,

FRAMES, LATH, FENCE PICKETS, &c.,

And everything needed in the building trade, in a manner second to none in Canada, and having engaged superior mechanics in every department, I would now respectfully solicit public patronage.

Every Effort Made to fill Orders Promptly

PINE LUMBER Dressed and Undressed

Direct from North Shore, all sizes, on hand. Plain and Fancy Turning done.

Careful Attention to Orders from a Distance.

303 THOS. McNEA.

IMPORTANT!

TO all users of Machine Oils, don't forget to call on E. S. MABEE. Sign of the Cross-Cut Saw, Markdale, and ask for the CASTOR E. OIL, it is unequalled by any.

The Arora Water White Oil is equal to American for brillance of light.

Empire Oil Co.,

Refiners & Manufacturer's,

349-75 London and Toronto.

CLIPPINGS.

A very important meeting is being held to day, Thursday, at Kimberly to be addressed by our member, Mr. Jos. Rorke, on the Government drainage act. The object of the meeting is to dredge the Beaver river at four places between Kimberly and Heathcote so as to make smooth water between the two places. It is estimated that about 4,000 acres of the best land in Ontario will thus be relcaimed. The four places in the river at which drainage and piling are to be done, are shallow and back the waters up over the land. The celebrated lot over which such a fuss is made about Mr. Fawcett. is in all seasons wholly covered with water so much so that in the dryest times you can paddle a canoe over every acre of it. Money can be had from our excellent Ontario Government for the purpose at 4%, and any benefits accruing to the Government will be deducted from the principal. The apparatus used for the purpose is a portable dredge and pile driver. The dredge is such that it can work in two feet of water. The land. when reclaimed, will be worth abont $20 an acre, and most of it is heavily timbered, and the soil is exceedingly rich. This work will be of great benefit in many other respects.—[Thornbury News.

Passed.—We are pleased this week to congratulate Mr. W. J. Hatton of Messrs Masson & Masson's office, in having passed his first Intermediate or third year examination in law—he having passed first on the list. This is the third time within as many years we have had the pleasure of congratulating studies from the same office on having obtained the highest number of marks in their respective examinations.—[O. S. Times. [Mr. Hatton was formerly a Separate School Teacher in Glenelg and his many friends will be pleased to hear of his success, Ed S.]

Church Notes.

The corner stone of the new English church at Horning's Mills will be laid on the 24th of May.

Rev. T. Hall preached an able sermon in the Methodist church last Sunday to an appreciative audience.

Mr. Madill is expected to preach in the Presbyterian Church here next Sabbath morning and evening.

Froze his feet.—While out skating last winter, G. Varcoe, of Brandon, Man., got his feet badly frozen. He rubbed them with snow, and then applied Hagyard's Yellow Oil, which speedily cured them, and saved him from being a cripple.

the Editor of the STANDARD.

SIR.—Will you permit me to occupy portion of your space, in referring the vagaries of T. L. M.

In his first letter, he insists that Scripture Readings," contains the d chapter of 1st Peter from the 12th the 20th verse inclusive. Mr. eighton, only a few days ago, stated, the floor of Parliament, that this ction of Scripture was omitted; d no one had sufficient cheek to conadict him, but, T. L. M. was not resent.

His second effusion contains the tatement, that the "Selections" was t intended to supersede the Bible. ow he could arrive at this conclusion to put it mild, enigmatical, at least, he ever saw the book, read the Reations, and understands plain nglish.

No's. 2 & 6 of the Regulations' "aproved by His Honor the Lieutenant overnor in Council on the 16th day of ecember, 1884, are subjoined. No. —"The portion of Scripture used hall be taken from the selections auhorized for that purpose, by the Department of Education, and shall be ead without comment or explanation.' o. 6,—"Trustees shall place a copy f the authorized Readings in each deartment of the Public and High chools under their jurisdiction, with one year from the date hereafter."

These Regulations are quite definite aving no option. All schools, not usg the "Selections"—exclusively too on account of non-compliance, were liable to loose the Government Grant. This the Government acknowledged, effect, by changing the Regulations uring the Session just closed, and making the use of the Bible optional before the change, its use in school was legal.

The Government violated the letter f the Regulation, in supplying Inspecors with the "Selections," and order*ng them* to place the book in the chools, unknown to Trustees—thus troducing it secretly.

T, L. M. has Cacoethus Scribendi ad; he resembles the young lawyer hom his opponent described as drawng on his imaginations for his facts, nd on his memory. for his wit; and is fondness of argument brings to ind the schoolmaster, alluded to by Goldsmith in the "Deserted Village."

At argument, even the minister wned his skill

For, when beaten, he could argue still.

Having no desire to prolong this ontroversy,—the "Ross Bible" being ractically, withdrawn from schools, here objected to. Therefore, with manythanks to you for the privilege ccorded—Making public my opinions allow me to close this correspondnce by emulating Mr. Moffat.

Yours truly,

WM. GORSLINE.

A FAIR OFFER.—For many years the roprietors of Hagyard's Yellow Oil have offered to refund the money to all purchasers of the medicine where it failed to give relief in case of pain or painful affections, such as rheumatism, neuralgia, sore throat, deafness, burns, bruises, sprains, stiff joints and cords, and internal or external inflammation.

Rev. Dr. Talmage, stated after his recent trip through the Western States: —"I interviewed all the reporters and all the clergymen, and all the doctors and all the merchants, and all the mechanics and all the farmers whom I met, and unanimous testimony is that in Kansas and Iowa prohibition pohibits. The only way to get a drink of rum in those States to-day is through perjury."

CRITICISM.—A lady in Brockville states "I was induced to try Nasal Balm for a long standing cold in my head that was pronounced Catarrh. The Balm gave immediate relief and permanently cured me. It was so pleasent and agreeable to use that I at first thought it "no good." I now use it with my children for colds and stoppage of the nasal passages.

With some men life is simply meet and drink.

ASTHMA.—Persons who have suffered for years with Asthma will find a quick relief and cure in the double treatment of Southern Asthma Cure.

The man who sows taffy seldom reaps sugar cane.

A HAMILTON ITEM.—"My wife has been a suffer from liver complaint for many years. I am glad to be able to testify to the benefit received from Burdock Blood Bitters, as well as in the case of my little boy who had glandular swellings." J. S. Miller, 77 Victoria Ave. North Hamilton, Ont. B. B. B. regulates the entire grandular system.

The bluntest men generally make the most cutting remarks.

Mrs. Cleveland is quoted as saying that so many babies have been named for the President that he says he is afraid that in twenty years the penitentiaries will be full of Grover Clevelands.

The claims of the brewers and distillers of Georgia for compensation for property impared by the prohibatory law have been summarily disposed of by the supreme Court of that State. The court says:—"The law does not take or damage the property for the use of the public, but only prevents them from taking or damaging the public for their use."

A MATTER OF FACT.—One of the preparations that seldom disappoints on trial, is that old standard throat and lung medicine, Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, for coughs, colds, bronchitis, asthma, sore throat and other diseases of the air passages.

Many men are said to make fools of themselves when nature is really the responsible party.—[Pittsburg Dispatch.

MANY PERSONS SUFFER.—From impure Breath and suppose it comes from a disordcrdered stamach. In many cases the actual cause is Catarrh. Nasal Balm will remove the cause, and cure.

My Love is not an angel,
With thoughts of heavenly scenes
She's just a common Markdale girl.
And dotes on pork and beans.

WIND THE CLOCK.—The best clock needs regulating and winding when the mainspring runs down. So too, when the main machinery gives out, it needs regulating and the main spring (pure blood) needs toning. Burdock Blood Bitters will regulate and tone all broken down conditions of the system. In purchasing B. B. B. beware of counterfeits.

Ask thy purse what thou should buy.

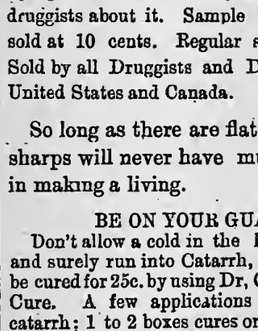
"What is your name. little girl?" "Minnie." "Minnie what?" "Minnie don't," mamma always calls me."

IN A BAD CONDITION.—"I was so bad with dyspepsia that I could not take food of any kind without distress, and could not take a drink of water for a month at a time. I have been a great sufferer with liver complaint and dyspepsia for many years," says Mrs. Nelson W, Whitehead, of Nixon, Ont., whom two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters cured.

Men are geese; women are ducks, and birds of a feather flock together.

The better a men knows himself the more indulgent he is to the faults of others.

ASTONISHING SUCCESS.



It is the duty of every person who has used Boschee's German Syrup to let its wonderful qualities be known to their friends in curing Consumption, severe Coughs, Croup, Asthma, Pneumonia, and in fact all throat and lung diseases. No person can use it without immediate relief. Three doses will relieve any case, and we consider it the duty of all druggists to recommend it to the poor, dying consumptive, at least to try one bottle, as 80,000 dozen bottles were sold last year, and no one case where it failed was reported. Such a medicine as the German Syrup cannct be too widely known. Ask your druggists about it. Sample bottles to try, sold at 10 cents. Regular size, 75 cents. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. in the United States and Canada.

So long as there are flats in the world sharps will never have much difficulty in making a living.

BE ON YOUR GUARD

Don't allow a cold in the head to slowly and surely run into Catarrh, when you can be cured for 25c. by using Dr, Chase's Catarrh Cure. A few applications cure insipient catarrh; 1 to 2 boxes cures ordinary catarrh; 1 to 5 boxes is guaranteed to cure chronic catarrh. Try it. Only 25c. and sure cure. Sold by all druggists. 333-83

JOGGING HER HUSBAND'S MEMORY.—A husband was sitting in his store in Markdale when a letter in a familiar hand-writing was handed to him. It was from his wife, whom he had left at home that morning with every assurance of affection and devotion. But the very first sentance startled him, and as he read on the most horrible suspicion seized him:—"I am forced to tell you something that I know will trouble you, but it is my duty to do so. I am determined you shall know it, let the result be what it may. I have known for a week that this trial was coming, but kept it to myself until to-day, when it has reached a crisis and I can keep it no longer. You must not censure me too harshly, for you must reap the reward as well as myself. I do hope it won't crush you. The flour is all out. Please send me some this afternoon. I thought by this method you would not forget it." She was right. He didn't.

EASY TO USE. SCOTHING, CLEANSING, HEALING. It Cures CATARRH, Cold in Head, HAY FEVER. STOPS Droppings from Nasal passages into the throat and excessive expectoration caused by Catarrh. Sent pre-paid on receipt of price, 50c. and $1. Address FULFORD & CO., Brockville, Ont.

"Profitable -:- Reading."

To intending purchasers of American Watches, Clocks, Jewellery and Silverware, also Engagement or Wedding Rings.

I have the only complete stock of above lines in "Central Grey." It will pay to inspect my stock; get my prices, find out how I do business, learn what my 1, 2 & 3, years warrants mean; then if not square in every particular, I shall not expect you to buy. Over 200 pair of fine Specks in stock 25c. to $3.00.

☞ Fine Watch repairing a specialty.

W. A. BROWN,
MARKDALE.

HEAD QUARTERS
—FOR—
Books, Stationery, Fancy Goods, Toys, Wall Paper, &c.

Toronto St. next Door to the Mansion House, Markdale.

A. Dinsmore returns his sincere thanks for the very liberal support accorded him since commencing as above, and hopes by strict attention to business and moderate prices to merit a continuance of public appreciation and patronage. Those requiring would consult their own interest by examining his stock, consisting of over Three Thousand pieces at from 5 to 75c. per Roll. Sunday Schools requiring Liberary Books will find Hundreds to select from and at such FAVORABLE TERMS as are sure to satisfy.

WALL PAPERS

☞ Note the fact.—That until I commenced business there was no such thing as a special discount allowed to Sunday Schools, or if you wanted Books could not get them unless by sending to Toronto or elsewhere, now your wants can be supplied at your Door and at lower prices than Toronto. I therefore with confdence appeal for public support. A full line of School Books, Stationary, &c., always on hand, also agent for the DOMESTIC PAPER PATTERNS. Agent also for The Harden Star Hand Grenade for Extinguishing Fires. ☞ NOTE THE ADDRESS,

A. Dinsmore.

New Tailor.

Will Stoddart:—Late of England and Jersy City, U. S. begs to inform the citizens of MARKDALE and surrounding community, that he has opened a TAILORING SHOP over Mr. W. J. McFarlaud's Store, where he is prepared to do all work entrusted to him in the Latest and Nobbiest Styles; as I will inspect all work before leaving the Shop, customers may rely on having work turned out first-class in every particular; trusting that I may receive a fair share of the public patronage

I remain,
Faithfully your's,
WILL STODDART.
Markdale, March 14th, 1887.

New General Provision Store

THE undersigned would hereby respectfully intimate to the inhabitants of Markdale and surrounding country that I've opened up a general Provision store where I intend to keep on hand a general supply of all kinds of provisions such as:—
FLOUR, OATMEAL, CORNMEAL INDIAN CORN, GRASS SEED, OATS, BRAN, SHORTS, CHOPP, SCREENINGS, also a quantity of SEED GRAIN, HAMS, BACON, LARD, &c., in fact everything people want in this line.

Shop one door west of Joe Lamb's Blacksmith shop.

Soliciting a share of public patronage I am respectfully yours,

Jas Miller
MARKDALE.

COME!
To Stephen's
FOR
Your Carrots, Mangels, and Turnip Seeds, we have the best variety in the market, REMEMBER. Our Seeds are FRESH
Oil Cake! Oil Cake!
—OIL—
CAKE!
—AT—
Stephen's
DRUG STORE.
Your's Respectfully,
R. L. Stephen.

R. S. Rae,  Tailor.
REMOVED.

In returning thanks to my numerous customers for liberal patronage during the past 14 years in which I have done business in Markdale, and soliciting a continuance of the same, I would also intimate that I have re-moved to my premises on Mill Street, next door to Stephen's Drug Store, and opposite to the Post Office, where I shall be happy to meet all my customers.

Respectfully Yours,
R. S. RAE,
Markdale

Stock Taking
SALE
At the Toronto House,
Markdale.
SLAUGHTER PRICES
FOR CASH.
Wm. Brown.

BE SURE & GET YOUR PUMPS,
—FROM—
J. T. QUINN,
MARKDALE,

He makes as good a pump as there is in the market, and at the lowest possible prices, besides it is so convenient for getting repairs besides when buying from a distance.

Have some style about you and support home enterprise by buying from Quinn.

OWEN SOUND
MARBLE WORKS
H. B. HARRISON,
MANUFACTURER OF
MARBLE AND GRAITE
MONUMENTS & HEADSTONES,
Mantles, Furniture Marble, &c.

JUST RECEIVED
3 Carloads Finest Variegated Marble

☞ Largest stock in the Dominion to select from. Personally selected at the quarries in Vermont. Will be sold at prices which defy competition.

SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

N. B.—Beware of Monuments and Headstones of Tin, Spelter, or Zinc, soldered together, and oiled and Sandblasted to hide the imperfections, and called White Bronze.

H. B. HARRISON

ROBT. ASKIN,
UNDERTAKER,
MARKDALE.
FUNERAL FURNISHINGS
supplied on the shortes notice.

A Splendid Hearse
for hire at moderate rates.

—All kinds of—
FURNITURE
In Stock at bottom prices.
PICTURE FRAMING
Done on short notice.
ROBT. ASKIN.

WM. BREADNER.
Carpender and Builder
GEORGE ST., MARKDALE.
ALL kinds of building and house carpenter work done in the village or country. Call early before the rush comes. 339-52

FOR SALE.

A Thorough bred trotting stallion with Pedigree, in good condition nine years old, color dark dapple bay. also his Harness, Cutter and Bulkey, for further particulars apply to.

THOMAS GAWLEY,
338-84 Holland Centre P

CARD OF THANKS.

In thanking my customers for their liberal patronage in the past. I have much pleasure in being still able to supply them with the following celebrated machines viz.

The Watson all-steel two-horse twine Binder.
The Watson Deering Binder.
The Watson Improved Lion Reaper.
The New Humming Mower.
The Humming bird Mower.
The Watson Daisy Rake.
The Mann Davy Rake
The Tolten Pea Harvester.
The Mann Broad-cast Seeder and Harrows Combined.
The Champion Combined Drill, Colter & Scott, Oshawa.
The best Plow's and Harrows in the market.
Root Cutters, Grain Crushers, Farming mills. Land Rollers.
Agent for the Waterson's Co's Machinery and Steam Threshers.
Horse Powers, Wagon s Buggies, Democrats, and every implement a farmer requires. Parties reqiring anything in above lines will find it to their advantage to call at my new implement house opposite R. McNally's Carriage works, where Mr. R, Robertson will be pleased to wait on customers in my absence.

J. H. ALSON, Agent
148 61 Markdale.

THE KEY TO HEALTH.
BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS

Unlocks all the clogged avenues of the Bowels, Kidneys and Liver, carrying off gradually without weakening the system, all the impurities and foul humors of the secretions; at the same time Correcting Acidity of the Stomach, curing Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Headaches, Dizziness, Heartburn, Constipation, Dryness of the Skin, Dropsy, Dimness of Vision, Jaundice, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Scrofula, Fluttering of the Heart, Nervousness and General Debility; all these and many other similar Complaints yield to the happy influence of BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Sample Bottles 10c; Regular size $1.

HEALTH.

Gall-Stones.

The bile aids in promoting the peristaltic or worm-like motions of the intestines, and the digestibility of fat. It flows constantly from the liver, where it is secreted, into the duodenum,—the first portion of the intestines, about six inches long,—and also into the gall bladder, to be poured out as wanted upon the half-digested food in its passage from the stomach. A large part of the bile is re-absorbed from the intestines into the system.

About seven-eights of it is water. Of the rest, some five-sevenths are salts of different kinds, one-fifth mucus and pigment, or coloring matter, one-fourteenth fats; and about one part in fifty-four is what is called cholesterine, and is supposed to be the waste of nerve tissue.

Insignificant as this cholesterine is in quantity,—less than three parts in one thousand of the bile,—it forms the greater part of most gall-stones. Mixing with the pigment, or coloring matter, it hardens around casts thrown from the finer ducts of the liver.

They are formed in the liver, where some remain, enlarge, and give rise to abscesses. Others are carried into the gall bladder, where they may grow by constant accretion.

They may occur either singly, or in small or large numbers in the bladder. When they are numerous, they vary in size, from the fraction of a grain to ten or twelve grains; most of them, however, are of nearly uniform size, between two or three grains.

The solitary gall-stone is supposed to be one that has been left after the smaller ones have been expelled. Continuing to enlarge, it may fully block up the passage, and cause the gall bladder to be greatly distended with mucus. Such cases require the surgeon's knife, and the operation is a sure one and exceedingly safe.

Sometimes the stone, causing inflammation and suppuration, works its own way out, either through the side, or into the intestines, or into the cavity of the abdomen. In the last case it is fatal.

It is generally the smaller stones which cause the intense pain of biliary colic. The duct becomes acutely inflamed by the passage of the first, and then by others following through the inflamed passage in rapid succession. Powerful opiates are necessary during their passage.

It is believed that certain waters prevent their formation. Of this, however, there is no satisfactory proof.

Common Salt.

The power of the soda used in cooking to relieve the pain of burns is now extensively known. Its usefulness is enhanced by its being so common as to be usually within reach. Somewhat akin to this is the efficacy of table-salt in certain forms of inflammation. It is a remedy that finds a place in nearly all countries and households.

But the very fact that these articles are so familiar in domestic use makes it difficult to regard them as powerful remedies. It would be quite otherwise if they were rare, and conld be obtained only of the druggist. It may not be amiss, therefore, to refer to what is marvellous in their chemical composition.

The base, or fundamental element, in each is the same,—a most wonderful metal, which burns with an intense flame when heated to a temperature twenty-two degrees less than that of boiling water. This metal is sodium. Combine it in the proper proportion with carbonic acid,—the gas thrown off from burning coal,—and "soda," or, more properly, bicarbonate of soda, is produced. Let it combine with chlorine, which forms, in chemical union with lime, one of our most powerful disinfectants, and we have the familiar salt of our tables.

It should be impressed on the minds of our readers that there is the highest medical authority for the statement that there is nothing better than common salt for any ordinary inflammation of the throat, mouth, or nasal passages. Dissolve a dessert spoonful in a coffee cup, and gargle the solution, or snuff it up the nose until it comes out into the back-mouth. Repeats two or three times a day until cured.

Dr. Thackery, of Philadelphia, has found that salt is effective in the most violent attacks of erpsipelas, and, moreover, leaves no unsightly scars behind. He uses a saturated solution,—that is as strong as it can be made,—and simply keeps the parts covered with a cloth wet with it. At the same time he cools the system with a dose of Epsom salts, mixed with lemon juice, and orders a light farinaceous diet.

As erysipelas is so sudden in its attacks, and so speedy in its action, those located at a distance from doctors would do well to make a tpecial note of this.

Infection.

With regard to the channels through which the contagious organisms are spread a few words will suffice to state what is known on this point, which is intimately connected with the subject of disinfection. Air and water are the chief media for the propagation of infectious disease. In the case of scarlet fever, which has been taken as the type, the scales detached from the skin and similar tissues from the throat contain the germs of the disease, and these find their way into the atmosphere and are received into the lunge. They attach themselves also to articles of clothing and furniture, and are thus often carried to long distances. In the cases of cholera and typhoid fever, the discharges from the patient find their way into water, which thus becomes the channel by which the diseases are propagated. Food, too, may become similarly contaminated. Milk, fer instance' has been often known to convey the poisons of typhoid fever, of scarlet fever, and of diphtheria. In the case of the first, the contamination has been probably due to adulterating milk with foul water containing the disease germs, but it may have arisen in some cases from the typhoid emanations having been absorded by the milk. The poisons of scarlet fever and diphtheria were propably transmitted to the milk from the skins and throats of persons employed in the dairy and recently convalescent or scarcely recovered from attacks of these diseases. The germs of certain other infectious diseases find their way into the system through abraded surfaces of the body.

What is the Proper Time to Take Medicines.

The question whether a prescribed medicine should be taken before or after a meal is often put to the physician, and occasionally requires some special consideration. The medicines which act as local irritants, such as the salts of copper, iron, zinc, and arsenic, in large doses, are to be taken after a meal when the stomach is full, while small doses of medicines acting on the gastric terminations of the vagues, ought to be taken before a meal. In some instances we have to consider chemical changes. Oxide and nitrate of silver, if intended to act locally on the gastric mucous membrane, must likewise be administered when the stomach is empty. Is it not generally known, or at least observed, that iodine and its salts are to be administered on an empty stomach, as the presence of starch and acids, modifying or decomposing the preparations of iodine, would reduce or prevent their effect. The acids intended to affect the gastric juices are to be taken before a meal, in order to provoke an ample secretion of the gastric glands. If alkalies are to modify the gastric juices, they must be given during the meal: but if their absorption into the blood is desired, they ought to be ingested on an empty stomach, in order not to hinder the process of chymification by weakening the acids. Metalic salts, especially corrosive sublimate, likewise tannic acid, alcohol, and other drugs, modify or destroy the digestive power of pepsine, and are hence to be administered solely before meals. Small quantities of alcohol, as contained in the ordinary and medical wines, do not injuriously affect pepsine like the liquors rich in alcohol. Iron, phosphates, cod-liver-oil, and similar medicines may be taken during mealtime.

HOME AND GENERAL NEWS.

A Brantford youth was recently fined $2 for fishing on Sunday.

Dominion Parliament will take a recess of a week from the 18th to the 25th inst.

There is said to be disgraceful destruction of moose going on in the Nipissing district.

Mr. John Lang of Prince Albert, while in a fit of despondency recently, hanged himself in his stable.

Right Rev. Hibbert Binney, Bishop of Nova Scotia, died in New York the other morning, aged 67 years.

The Italian Government denies the recently reported defeat of Italian troops by the Abyssinians at Massowah.

Some Toronto capitalists are asking for a subsidy to build a railway from Medicine Hat to Medicine Hat coal mines.

Capt. Hart, of St. John, N. B., is to be adjutant of the Wimbledon team. A commandant has not yet been appointed.

A Statistical publication just issued at Paris calculates that their are about 350,000 Frenchmen in the Western Hemisphere.

Between November and April last $136,669 was spent in the distribution of seed to the suffering settlers in the North-West.

A coroner's jury at Peterboro' has found Mary and Edward Holbrock, brother and sister guilty of the wilful murder of her illegitimate child.

The Marquis of Hartington has written to the Liberal-Unionists advising them to organize as a party for the purpose of maintaining their position.

The quarantine service in the Gulf will go into effect immediately, and the precautions against the introduction of cholera will be very stringent this year.

The St. James' Gazette says the Canadian National park in the Rocky Mountains may become a favourite health and pleasure resort for English people of leisure.

The Toronto City Council at a special meeting recently decided to submit a by-law to the ratepayers for $100,000 towards the cost of the harbour improvements.

The London Globe says England must afford effectual protection to her intrests in the Pacific by supporting the Canadian transcontinental railway.

The amount of seed grain applied for by farmers at Regina and distributed by the President of the Agricultural Society, was:—Wheat, 5,016 bushels; barley, 565 bushels; oats, 1,045 bushels.

An Ottawa correspondent advances the opinion, and gives reasons for it, that the present session of Parliament will be a short one and that the House will probably adjourn before July 1.

The Vatican has notified France that Gen Boulanger's military law, which refuses to exempt clerical atudents from service, is an infringemeut of the concordat, and has demanded its withdrawal.

Pleuro-pneumonia is reported to be more prevalent among cattle in Chicago and its vicinity than ever before. Stringent measures for stamping out the plague have been adopted, as many as two hundred diseased animals being slaughtered in one day.

The London Times, Chronicle, Globe and St. James Gazette speak in every eulogistic terms of the Canadian Pacific Railway Companys offer for conveying the mail between England and China and Japan, and hope that no narrow economic reasons will prevent the acceptance of a magnificent offer.

The gross earnings of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company for March were $719,255, showing a net profit over the working expenses of $51,934, as compared with a net profit of $134,204 for March, 1886. For the three months ending March there was a net profit of $3.998, as compared with a net profit of $250,302 for the first three months of last year.

The reports of experts on the Canadian products shown at the Colonial Exhibition are generally satisfactory. Ontario cheese is spoken highly of; butter, on the other hand, is not well thought of; fruit, especially apples, comes in for praise, as does also honey; the wheat of Ontario is generally of a superior quality, though somewhat lacking in strength, but the tobacco is declared to be off colour and coarse in flavour.

The latest swindle on farmers is worked by rascals in couples. They study the local papers and take note of adyertisements of animals astray. One fellow calls to see the beast and decides it is not his. He goes back to his pal and gives a minute description of it. The latter goes to the farmer and by his description convinces him that he is the real owner. He pretends, however, that he cannot conveniently take it away and offers to sell it at a bargain. The farmer buys, and in a few days the rightful owner comes along and claims it.

They are trying a physician down in Pennsylvania because he has acted as an agent for a patent hair oil. And yet they probably wouldn't have molested him if he had written a recommendation for some brand of baking powder. It is a queer world.

HOUSEHOLD.

Home Etiquette.

A writer gives some very sensible and trite remarks, which perhaps the mothers who read this column do not need as advice, but which will interest them as something which some one they know will do well to heed. In advice to young married people the writer says: "No two people living together can by any possibility preserve their own happiness, to say nothing of their friends', without something of reserve; enough to keep at least their self-respect, enough to make both as polite to each as in the days of their wooing."

The quick action of a true gentleman to save a woman, whether wife, acquaintance or stranger, an extra step, an opening of the door when hands or arms are full, or the restoration of some article which has been dropped, is something which every one admires, and for which, unconsciously respects the person who has performed the deed, trivial though it be. There are many who are farmers, and farmers' wives and daughters and sons, who think their farm life makes them exempt from all the courtesies which are indispensible among city or town dwellers; in fact they entertain a supreme contempt for what they call "fine airs," which are in reality nothing but ordinary courtesy. A mother should insist that her sons make some recognition of her at her table by appearing with some semblance of tidiness even after disagreeable farm work; if this is too much trouble for them to take, she should prepare the food for their eating at a table where the odors of stable or barn-yard cannot give offence to the remainder of the family.

The writer remarks further: "Why is it so many people keep all their fine manners for the outer world and have none left for home? Why do mothers train their little ones in every way but by example to be always courteous and then wonder that they are sometimes rude? If you fail to say as surely as to their elders, 'thank you,' 'I beg your pardon' or 'if you please' to a child, so certainly will that ready little wit take on the conviction that politeness is not for every day use nor for home consumption. No parent has a right to give away a child's playthings without that child's consent. A parent cannot implant a high sense of delicacy and honor more surely than by a respect for each child's individuality as profound as for an equal.

"Why should we show our love by our impoliteness? I remember once when my sister and I were taking our departure after a call upon two other sisters, we jostled against one another at the door. Upon our mingled apologies one of the girls broke in with a laugh: "Do you do that to each other?" she cried. "I should never think of begging Lily's pardon." Yet they were well-mannered young persons, too; truly gentlewomen in their relations to the world. Some one says:

"'We have careful thoughts for the stranger,
And smiles for the sometimes guest,
Yet we vex our own with look and tone
Though we love our own the best."

"There is no relation, in the household, whether of mistress or maid, husband and wife, child and parent, hostess and guest, but will be made more comfortable by the exercise of a little formal etiquette.

Useful Recipes.

Baked Rice Pudding.—Boil a quarter of a pound of rice in a quart of sweet milk. When it begins to thicken take it off, let it stand till cool, then stir in a lump of butter and sweeten to taste, one-half teaspoon of grated nutmeg; butter the dish, pour in and bake.

Cottage Pudding—One egg, cream with one cup of white sugar and a quarter of a cup of butter, mix with two cups of prepared flour and one cup of milk, add the juice of half a lemon, stir briskly for five minutes, put into a cake pan, bake in a moderate oven and eat hot with lemon sauce.

Rice Waffles.—Boil half a pint of rice and let it get cold, mix with it one-fourth pound of butter and a little salt; stir in one and one-half pints of flour, beat five eggs separately, add yolks together with one quart of milk, lastly the well beaten whites. Beat well and bake at once in waffle irons.

Beef Fritters.—Chop pieces of steak or cold roast very fine; make a batter of milk, flour and an egg, and mix the meat with it. Put a lump of butter in a saucepan, let it melt, then drop the batter into it from a large spoon. Fry until brown; season with pepper and salt and a little parsley.

Pound Cake—Take of flour, butter and powdered sugar each one pound, eight yolks and four whites of eggs; first beat up the butter to a cream—keep beating it, one way—then gradually beat in the eggs, sugar and flour, Bake in a warm oven for an hour and a quarter. Cover the sides and the bottom of the baking-tin with buttered paper.

Tea Biscuit.—Beat very light one egg, pour it over a pint of flour, add a glass of milk, and chop in one tablespoonful of lard and butter, mixed. Work thoroughly together; break up pieces the size of marbles, which must be rolled as thin as your nail. Sprinkle with dry flour as you roll them out to make them crisp; stick with a fork and bake quickly.

Jumbles.—One and a quarter pounds of flour, one pound of sugar, three-quarters of a pound of butter, five eggs, a gill of milk, a teaspoonful of baking powder; bake one-half of this in small tins in a quick oven; in the remainder put a quarter of a pound of currants and bake the same. Frost or not at pleasure by leaving out the whites of one or two eggs.

Sago Pudding.—Boil five tablespoonfuls of sago, well picked and washed, in one quart of milk till quite soft, with a stick of cinnamon; stir in one teacup of butter and two of white sugar; when cold add six eggs well beaten and nutmeg to taste. Mix all well together and bake in a buttered dish three-quarters of an hour.

Potato Lemon Pudding.—Three ounces of potatoes, the grated rind and juice of two fine lemons, three ounces of white sugar, two ounces of butter; grate off the lemon peel with lumps of sugar, beat them and add to the other ingredients; boil the potatoes and peel them, mixing all together with the lemon juice and two beaten eggs; bake it slightly.

Raised Cake.—One pint of melted butter, two pounds white sugar, one quarter-ounce of mace, a teacupful of yeast, one quart of milk, flour enough to make a stiff batter; beat and set in a warm place to rise; mix it at night and let it rise until morning, then add one pound of stoned raisins, work well through and half fill your cake moulds. Bake in a hot oven for half an hour.

Boiled Custard—Put two tablespoonfuls of water in the kettle first, to keep the custard from sticking. Then add one quart of milk, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two eggs (the eggs and sugar beaten together) and two slices of bread. If hard, dry bread is used, it should be soaked in water awhile before making the custard. After putting it on the stove, watch it closely, for as soon as it boils it is done.

Sponge Cake.—Beat the yolks of three eggs well, and the whites until they pile up in a snowy mass; put these with one heaping cup of fine sugar; beat five minutes at least. Thoroughly mix one heaping teaspoonful of baking powder in one cup of sifted flour and beat ten minutes, add one half cup of cold water, beat in evenly, add one cup more flour beat again, and bake in a deep pan in a quick oven.

Yeast Dumplings.—Make a light dough, as for bread, with flour, water, salt and yeast; cover with a cloth and set before the fire for half an hour; then have a saucepan of boiling water, make the dough into round balls, the size of a hen's egg and put them in. Ten minutes will boil them. Be sure to keep the water boiling all the time or they will sink and be heavy. When they are done enough, which they will be in rather less than ten minutes, take them out and put into a hot dish and serve with sweet sauce.

Household Notes.

To Remove Paint from Glass.—It frequently happens that painters splash the plate or other glass windows when they are painting the sashes. When such is the case, melt some soda in very hot water, and wash them with it, using a soft flannel. It will entirely remove the paint.

Chinese gloss starch is made of two tablespoonfuls of raw starch, one teaspoonful of borax, dissolved in a cup and a half of water. Dip the thoroughly dry, unstarched cuffs, collars, and bosoms of shirts in this, then roll them up tight and let them remain a few hours in a dry cloth, then rub off and iron.

Paint for Kitchen Walls.—Paint on the walls of a kitchen is much better than kalsomine or whitewash. Any woman who can whitewash can paint her own kitchen. The wall needs first to be washed with soapsuds, then covered with a coat of dissolved glue; this must be allowed to dry thoroughly, and then covered with paint. A broad, flat brush does the work quickly.

Sight and Smell of Birds.

